START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

July 1994

Camera Operator:
John Sullivan

MASTER NEGATIVE NUMBER: BSO-56-050

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library (August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks (Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: (IA) IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 14x

FILM STOCK:

REEL 50

Volume 86

Tanglewood

1953-1954

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

1.0

1.1

1.25

1.4

1.6

1.8

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS AND OVERLAPPING MATERIAL

VOLUME 86

Tanglewood

1953 - 1954

TANGLEWOOD

1953

1954

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER

Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
1032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10¼
1033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
1034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
1036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
1038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
1039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
→ 1041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
1042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

ADDITIONAL 1953 CLIPPINGS
TANGLEWOOD

SYMPHONY and OPERA

International Musician - June 1953

TOURS The New York Philharmonc-Symphony Orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos will make its first American tour in five years in the Spring of 1954. The regular season will be increased by two weeks next year in order to allow the orchestra to play fourteen concerts between March 29th and April 11th . . . The Virginia Symphony Orchestra, with William Haaker conducting, has just completed its nine-week Spring tour, which included approximately one hundred concerts in adjoining States . . . The Boston Symphony Orchestra's first transcontinental tour carried the orchestra 7,000 miles through the South and Southwest to California, and, on the return trip, through the Middle West into Canada. It ended May 22nd, in Burlington, Vermont . . .

Thor Johnson, conductor of the Ojai Festivals in California this summer.

CONDUCTORS Thor Johnson will return this year to California for his annual assignment as music director of the Ojai Festivals . . . Ernst Gebert has been reengaged as conductor of the Inglewood (California) Symphony for a fifth season. Next year the orchestra's series is being increased from nine to twelve concerts . . . Henry Denecke has been named full-time musical director and conductor of the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Denecke will continue to direct the Northwest Sinfonietta . . . Gail Kubik conducted his composition, Thunderbird Overture, written especially for the concert of American music on Radio Italiana April 4th, in Rome.

SUMMER This Continent is having its share of music festivals this summer. The Ojai Festival (California) May 21st-24th included a performance of Lukas Foss' A Parable of Death with the composer conducting, and the first professional performance in the United States of This Way to the Tomb, poetic drama by Ronald Duncan with incidental music by Benjamin Britten. . . . The Festival of the Creative Arts at Brandeis University (Waltham, Massachusetts) which is being held June 10th-14th, focuses attention on the expression of the "Comic Spirit" and features a performance of Morton Gould's "Concerto for Tap Dancer and Orchestra" . . . In early June the Los Angeles Music Festival (Franz Waxman, founder and musical director) included the West Coast premiere of Nicolai Berezowsky's Babar the Elephant. Opening dates follow thick thereafter: June 27th for the Central City Opera Festival in Colorado with Carmen and The Merry Wives of Windsor alternating for four weeks; June 29th for the Aspen Festival (also Colorado); July 11th for the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood; July 20th, for the Bach Festival (Carmel, California), directed by Gastone Usigli; August 7th for the Brevard Festival in North Carolina. This latter festival will be launched by Joseph Szigeti as soloist and will conclude August 23rd with James Christian Pfohl conducting Beethoven's Ninth Symphony . . . The Montecito Festival will begin its career this year in Santa Barbara, California, on July 25th and will run through August 1st . . . Charles Munch will conduct for the six week-end concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall and in the Music Shed, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, for the Berkshire Festival. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on August 1st, and Leonard Bernstein on August 8th and 15th . . . June 22nd is the starting date for both the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in New York City and the Robin Hood Dell concerts in Philadelphia; June 24th for both the Grant Park and Ravinia series in Chicago . . . Via the new "charge-your-concerts" plan, charge customers of Lord and Taylor's department store in New York may now enjoy the convenience of ordering a subscription to the New York Stadium concerts by telephone or mail and having it billed to their account . . . Hermann Herz, director of the Duluth Orchestra, will conduct eight weeks of the New Orleans pop concerts this summer . . . William Walton will conduct the American premiere of his new Coronation March, Orb and Sceptre, at the Hollywood Bowl on August 13th. It is dedicated to Queen Elizabeth II.

AWARDS The Phoenix Symphony Guild is sponsoring a six hundred dollar award competition among resident United States composers for a symphonic composition approximately twenty minutes in length, suitable for use by standard symphony orchestras. The winning composition will be performed during the 1953-54 season by the Phoenix Symphony under Dr. Leslie Hodge. The competition will close August 30th. For further information write the Phoenix Symphony Guild, 19 East Coronado, Phoenix, Arizona . . . One thousand dollars and an appearance with the 1954 Ravinia Festival is the goal of the applicants for the Michaels Memorial Award. On June 28th, around four from among the thirty-three competitors (chosen from a large number of applicants) will be selected as the winners . . . The University of Miami this year is offering up to sixty scholarships for musicians equipped to become members of the University of Miami Symphony. The scholarships cover all tuition fees in any academic branch of study . . . The University of Tulsa has a plan, dissimilar but equally welcome. Students of the University who qualify may become members of the Tulsa Philharmonic Orchestra. (Its conductor, H. Arthur Brown, has announced several vacancies in various sections.) Thus students may earn enough during the concert season to pay all or part of their expenses. The season of this eighty-piece Tulsa Philharmonic consists of a minimum of twelve subscription concerts, eight youth concerts and five "pop" concerts.

CURTAIN CALLS A presentation of Puccini's Madame Butterfly opened the Robin Hood Dell season June 22nd . . . Blossom Time, at this writing playing at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn, is so saturated with the melodies of Schubert that audiences sit bound by a spell as old as the hills—the charm of the simple and the natural . . . Alfredo Salmaggi's sixth opera season at Randall's Island Stadium, New York, will open July 11th with a performance of Verdi's La Traviata . . . July 7th is the date of the first New York performance of George Antheil's new comic opera, Volpone; the place, the Cherry Lane Theatre; the company, the Punch Opera . . . The Summer School of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto includes an Opera Workshop, under the direction of Ernesto Barbini, formerly a conductor and coach with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York . . . Joseph Rosenstock, director of the New York City Opera, will direct Rossini's La Cenerentola this summer at Aspen, Colorado . . . The Civic Light Opera, a firmly entrenched institution in Los Angeles, included in its Spring schedule a performance of Carousel, which was praised particularly by local critics for its musical contributions. Louis Adrian and his orchestra and the singers in the cast were all outstanding. This was all as it should be, since this score is perhaps the most ambitious and original composed by Richard Rodgers in the course of his collaborations with Oscar Hammerstein 2nd . . . , New York's Lemonade Opera will present the American premiere of Francis Poulenc's Les Mamelles de Tiresias, conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Tanaquil LeClercq and Nicholas Magallanes in "La Valse," the Balanchine-Ravel ballet being presented in New York City Center by the New York City Ballet Company, May 5th to June 14th.

PASTE OVER

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUN 13 1953

Berkshire Music Center To Have Gretry Opera

"RICHARD Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted), an opera in three acts written shortly before the French Revolution by the prolific French composer, Andre-Ernest-Modeste Gretry, will be the major production of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this Summer.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Summer school of music run as an adjunct to the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch July 11-Aug. 1 The Gretry opera, which will be given in English, the J. M. Sedaine text translated by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, had its premiere in Paris Oct. 21, 1784, was given its first American performance in Boston in 1797, and was subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800.

Two performances staged by students of the Berkshire Music Center, performed by student casts, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra, will be performed in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11.

* * *

LEO VAN WITSEN will design the costumes and John Blankenchip the scenery, which will employ the Paul Planer GKP projections, a slide mechanism which is used in the larger opera houses of Europe and which was introduced to the U. S. in the Tanglewood production last Summer of the Mozart opera "Titus."

Mr. Goldovsky also announces an evening of three rarely-heard one-act operas, to be similarly performed on one bill Monday, Aug. 3.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer Inc. is publishing. Originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Claude Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), which had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, Feb. 28, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand, was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production in 1910 in French.

"Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education), of Emmanuel Chabrier, hitherto heard in the U.S. only with piano accompaniment, will be sung in English, in the translation of Henry Reese. The Chabrier one-act opera, with a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment May 1, 1879; given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913.

* * *

LIKE ALL student performances at Tanglewood, the two performances of "Richard Coeur-de-lion" and the evening of one-act operas planned for the last weeks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school are not sold publicly, but are open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help the school. Gifts to the Berkshire Music Center are deductible under the Federal Income Tax laws, and entitle the donor to membership in the Friends.

Contributions may be mailed to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. and details of the operas, chamber music, student concerts and other programs and events open to members will be furnished on request.

This Clipping From
Springfield Mass
Press
JUN 25 1953

At Tanglewood

JORGE BOLET

Jorge Bolet, pianist, is soloist in Tchaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No.1 in B-flat minor," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform in the Sunday afternoon, Aug. 2, concert of the Berkshire Festival. The program will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., beginning at 2:30.

MUSIC FOR EVERYBODY

Music Moves Outdoors With Coming Of Summer

By SIGMUND SPAETH

This is the time of year that music moves outdoors. Fortunately there is also a tradition that Summer music must be lighter and more popular than that heard indoors during the regular concert season.

There is no real reason why musical performances of the Fall and Winter should not also have their share of lightness and popularity. Perhaps the warm weather is merely used as an excuse to give the public what it secretly would enjoy at almost any time.

The impression has also been created that music sounds better when unconfined by the walls of an auditorium. Acoustically this is of course a fallacy. But it must be admitted that the atmosphere of informality, not having to dress up or to behave with dull propriety, may well add to the enjoyment of a concert or an opera that is actually handicapped.

"Music under the stars" inevitably has an intriguing sound. But instrumental balance is not always satisfactorily attained outdoors. The combination of microphones on stage and airplanes overhead can produce some weird effects. Strings "al fresco" generally have to be amplified, while the wind-instruments consistently cut through any volume of orchestral sound. A final hazard is the ever-present possibility of sudden rain, bad for instruments and listeners alike.

Good Record

All things considered, the current record of Summer music in America is remarkably good, with the climate co-operating in a majority of cases. New York's annual Stadium concerts have been perhaps the most frequently affected by weather conditions, but the indefatigable Minnie Guggenheimer knows no such word as fail. This year she has worked out a plan for partial sponsorship, with various industrial firms contributing $1,000 each and receiving 1,000 tickets to distribute among their employes.

The famous Hollywood Bowl has fewer problems of a meteorological nature and more opportunities for spectacular effects. The Aspen Festival in Colorado, the Bevard in North Carolina, Central City, the Zoo Opera in Cincinnati, even Phil Maxwell's Chicagoland, Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell and the historic Chautauqua series may all easily turn geographical advantages into musical ones.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., has had a consistent record of success, and the youthful Brandeis University at Waltham, Mass., has just completed another Festival of the Creative Arts, fittingly directed by the prodigious Leonard Bernstein. Boston's traditional "Pops," conducted by Arthur Fiedler, have the spirit of recreation and relaxation, even though they are technically indoor concerts.

"Summer is i-cumen in," as it did with that first part-song of the 13th century, and music loudly sings, not necessarily with the voice of the cuckoo.

The Edward MacDowell Association and the National Federation of Music Clubs have issued an interesting report on the practical celebration of Mrs. MacDowell's 95th birthday. Approximately 2,500 music lovers contributed a total of nearly $38,000 for the continued support of the MacDowell Colony in Peterborough, N. H.

The great majority gave less than $5 apiece, the minimum was 95 cents, representing the age of the composer's widow. The largest single gift came from the federation itself, along with the services of its executive secretary, Helen Havener, and her assistant, Helen Lindsay.

The underground reports that Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" will be presented at the Metropolitan Opera House November 27, with Theodore Uppman imported for the male title role opposite Nadine Conner.

This Clipping From
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
PRESS
JUN 28 1953

This Week in MUSIC

by William McMahon

RICHARD COEUR-DE-LION," an opera in three acts written shortly before the French Revolution by Andre-Ernest-Modeste Gretry, is announced by Boris Goldovsky as the major production of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in Tenglewood this summer. The Berkshire center is a summer school of music run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 11-Aug. 16. The opera will be given in English.

• • •

PIANIST ALEC TEMPLETON, who was a great favorite with local audiences at his appearance in the Senior High School auditorium, will open the second week of Robin Hood Dell tomorrow night. Andre Kostelanetz will conduct a program of popular symphonic classics on Tuesday with Jan Peerce, Metropolitan star, scheduled for a "repeat" performance on Thursday.

• • •

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," Anita Loos' tribute to the flappers of the 1920's, is going to be seen on local picture screens shortly, and at the same time is going under the tent at Lambertville's Music Circus, this week, for the first time. Doesie Hollingsworth, who played Lorelei on Broadway, will be in the lead. It opens Tuesday.

• • •

AD LIB—Alex Bartha, the musician-banker furnished the music—(and who else would?) at the Boardwalk Bank's get-together last week . . . ACHS music director John Jaquish has taken off for his upstate summer cottage, far, far from schools. Those who would like a preview of Eugene Conley scheduled for the Ventnor Music Festival series this summer, can do so tomorrow night by tuning in the Harvest of Stars on which he will be featured . . . Zola Mae Schulis of Bridgeton, the 10-year-old piano wizard, is booked for Ocean City this year.

LAWRENCE MITCHELL
. . . in star role

• • •

STRAW HAT CIRCUIT

Quarterdeck Theatre (Atlantic City) starting tomorrow, "Angel Street."

Gateway Theatre (Somers Point) starting Tuesday, "Carousel."

Mill Playhouse (Pleasant Mills) starting Wednesday, "See How They Run."

Cape Theatre (Cape May City) starting Tuesday, "The Moon is Blue."

Music Circus (Lambertville) starting Tuesday, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Robin Hood Dell (Philadelphia) tomorrow, Alec Templeton; Tuesday, Andre Kostelanetz.

...ries of the Ventnor Festival slated ...r August. The committee on the ...tter is already hard at work on as...ring a capacity crowd for the ...ntnor Pier for the four scheduled ...oncerts. It is felt that the change ...m a Sunday to a Tuesday night

РУССКОЕ ОБОЗРЕНИЕ.

церкви.

Петь будет смешанный хор под управлением матушки А. С. Манчук, которая трудится безвозмездно на пользу церкви в Арго вот уже 15 лет.

После богослужения в зале «Сокол» состоится банкет с речами и поздравлениями. В 4 часа начнутся танцы под хорошую музыку. Милости просим всех пожаловать к нам на торжество.

Комитет

ПО НЬЮ ЙОРКУ

В популярном кинематографе Стэнлей демонстрируется фильм из жизни знаменитого русского композитора Глинки. В главной роли выступает известный актер сов. экрана Борис Смирнов.

В музыкальном центре Тангглвуд открытие летнего сезона состоится в июне. Концерты Бостонского Симфонического оркестра будут управляться известными дирижерами.

Недалеко от Тангглвуда в «Джейкобс пилоу» (Подушка Якова) будут даваться вечера балета и характерных танцев. Главой этого центра является известный танцор Тэд Шоун.

Анна Гордон.

ПОКУПАЙТЕ БАНДЫ США
ДЕЛАЙТЕ СБЕРЕЖЕНИЯ.

[3]

PASTE OVER

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUN 13 1953

Berkshire Music Center To Have Gretry Opera

"RICHARD Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted), an opera in three acts written shortly before the French Revolution by the prolific French composer, Andre-Ernest-Modeste Gretry, will be the major production of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this Summer.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Summer school of music run as an adjunct to the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch July 11-Aug. 1. The Gretry opera, which will be given in English, the J. M. Sedaine text translated by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, had its premiere in Paris Oct. 21, 1784, was given its first American performance in Boston in 1797, and was subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800.

Two performances staged by students of the Berkshire Music Center, performed by student casts, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra, will be performed in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11.

* * *

LEO VAN WITSEN will design the costumes and John Blankenchip the scenery, which will employ the Paul Planer GKP projections, a slide mechanism which is used in the larger opera houses of Europe and which was introduced to the U. S. in the Tanglewood production last Summer of the Mozart opera "Titus."

Mr. Goldovsky also announces an evening of three rarely-heard one-act operas, to be similarly performed on one bill Monday, Aug. 3.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer Inc. is publishing. Originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Claude Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), which had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, Feb. 26, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand, was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production in 1910 in French.

"Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education), of Emmanuel Chabrier, hitherto heard in the U. S. only with piano accompaniment, will be sung in English, in the translation of Henry Reese. The Chabrier one-act opera, with a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment May 1, 1879; given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913.

* * *

LIKE ALL student performances at Tanglewood, the two performances of "Richard Coeur-de-lion" and the evening of one-act operas planned for the last weeks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school are not sold publicly, but are open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help the school. Gifts to the Berkshire Music Center are deductible under the Federal Income Tax laws, and entitle the donor to membership in the Friends.

Contributions may be mailed to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. and details of the operas, chamber music, student concerts and other programs and events open to members will be furnished on request.

This Clipping From
Springfield Mass
Press
JUN 28 1953

At Tanglewood

JORGE BOLET

Jorge Bolet, pianist, is soloist in Tchaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No.1 in B-flat minor," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform in the Sunday afternoon, Aug. 2, [illegible] cert of the Berkshire F[illegible] The program will [illegible] the Music Shed at T[illegible] Lenox, Mass., be[illegible] 2:30.

This Clipping From
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
PRESS
JUN 28 1953

This Week in Music

by William McMahon

RICHARD COEUR-DE-LION," an opera in three acts written shortly before the French Revolution by Andre-Ernest-Modeste Gretry, is announced by Boris Goldovsky as the major production of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer. The Berkshire center is a summer school of music run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 11-Aug. 16. The opera will be given in English.

* * *

PIANIST ALEC TEMPLETON, who was a great favorite with local audiences at his appearance in the Senior High School auditorium, will open the second week of Robin Hood Dell tomorrow night. Andre Kostelanetz will conduct a program of popular symphonic classics on Tuesday with Jan Peerce, Metropolitan star, scheduled for a "repeat" performance on Thursday.

* * *

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," Anita Loos' tribute to the flappers of the 1920's, is going to be seen on local picture screens shortly, and at the same time is going under the tent at Lambertville's Music Circus, this week, for the first time. Dossie Hollingsworth, who played Lorelei on Broadway, will be in the lead. It opens Tuesday.

* * *

AD LIB—Alex Bevins, the musician-banker furnished the music—(and who else would?)—at the Boardwalk Bankers get-together last week . . . ACHS music director John Jaquish has taken off for his upstate summer cottage, far, far from schools. Those who would like a preview of Eugene Conley scheduled for the Ventnor Music Festival series this summer, can do so tomorrow night by tuning in the Hayrack of Stars on which he will be featured . . . Zola Mae Schmidt music, especially in the Handel-ward large choral-orchestra pres-the masters to extend themselves ne age of Italian opera followed orical presentations were left to f Bridgeton, the 10-year-old piano izard, is booked for Ocean City his year.

LAWRENCE MITCHELL
. . . in star role

* * *

STRAW HAT CIRCUIT

Quarterdeck Theatre (Atlantic ity) starting tomorrow, "Angel treet."

Gateway Theatre (Somers Point) tarting Tuesday, "Carousel."

Mill Playhouse (Pleasant Mills) tarting Wednesday, "See How They Run."

Cape Theatre (Cape May City) tarting Tuesday, "The Moon is Blue."

Music Circus (Lambertville) tarting Tuesday, "'Gentlemen Pre-er Blondes."

Robin Hood Dell (Philadelphia) omorrow, Alec Templeton; Tues-day, Andre Kostelanetz.

ries of the Ventnor Festival slated r August. The committee on the tter is already hard at work on as-ring a capacity crowd for the entnor Pier for the four scheduled oncerts. It is felt that the change om a Sunday to a Tuesday night

PUBLIC FOR EVERYBODY

All Register Jun 21

Music Moves Outdoors With Coming Of Summer

By SIGMUND SPAETH

This is the time of year that music moves outdoors. Fortunately, there is also a tradition that Summer music must be lighter and more popular than that heard indoors during the regular concert season.

There is no real reason why musical performances of the Fall and Winter should not also have their share of lightness and popularity. Perhaps the warm weather is merely used as an excuse to give the public what it secretly would enjoy at almost any time.

The impression has also been created that music sounds better when unconfined by the walls of an auditorium. Acoustically this is of course a fallacy. But it must be admitted that the atmosphere of informality, not having to dress up or to behave with dull propriety, may well add to the enjoyment of a concert or an opera that is actually handicapped.

"Music under the stars" inevitably has an intriguing sound. But instrumental balance is not always satisfactorily attained outdoors. The combination of microphones on stage and airplanes overhead can produce some weird effects. Strings "al fresco" generally have to be amplified, while the wind-instruments consistently cut through any volume of orchestral sound. A final hazard is the ever-present possibility of sudden rain, bad for instruments and listeners alike.

Good Record

All things considered, the current record of Summer music in America is remarkably good, with the climate co-operating in a majority of cases. New York's annual Stadium concerts have been perhaps the most frequently affected by weather conditions, but the indefatigable Minnie Guggenheimer knows no such word as fail. This year she has worked out a plan for partial sponsorship, with various industrial firms contributing $1,000 each and receiving 1,000 tickets to distribute among their employes.

The famous Hollywood Bowl has newer problems of a meteorological nature and more opportunities for spectacular effects. The Aspen Festival in Colorado, the Blowing Rock Festival in North Carolina, Central City, the Zoo Opera in Cincinnati, even Phil Maxwell's Chicagoland, Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell and the historic Chautauqua series may all easily turn geographical advantages into musical ones.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., has had a consistent record of success, and the youthful Brandeis University at Waltham, Mass., has just completed another Festival of the Creative Arts, fittingly directed by the prodigious Leonard Bernstein. Boston's traditional "Pops," conducted by Arthur Fiedler, have the spirit of recreation and relaxation, even though they are technically indoor concerts.

"Summer is i-cumen in," as it did with that first part-song of the 13th century, and music loudly sings, not necessarily with the voice of the cuckoo.

The Edward MacDowell Association and the National Federation of Music Clubs have issued an interesting report on the practical celebration of Mrs. MacDowell's 95th birthday. Approximately 2,500 music lovers contributed a total of nearly $38,000 for the continued support of the MacDowell Colony in Peterborough, N. H.

The great majority gave less than $5 apiece, the minimum was 85 cents, representing the age of the composer's widow. The largest single gift came from the federation itself, along with the services of its executive secretary, Helen Havener, and her assistant, Helen Lindsay.

The underground reports that Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" will be presented at the Metropolitan Opera House November 27, with Theodore Uppman imported for the male title role opposite Nadine Conner.

RUSSIAN REVIEW, CHICAGO
5/11

РУССКОЕ ОБОЗРЕНИЕ.

церкви.

Петь будет смешанный хор под управлением матушки А. С. Манчук, которая трудится безвозмездно на пользу церкви в Арго вот уже 15 лет.

После богослужения в зале «Сокол» состоится банкет с речами и поздравлениями. В 4 часа начнутся танцы под хорошую музыку. Милости просим всех пожаловать к нам на торжество.

Комитет

ПО НЬЮ ЙОРКУ

В популярном кинематографе Стэнлей демонстрируется фильм из жизни знаменитого русского композитора Глинки. В главной роли выступает известный актер сов. экрана Борис Смирнов.

В музыкальном центре Танглвуд открытие летнего сезона состоится в июне. Концерты Бостонского Симфонического оркестра будут управляться известными дирижерами.

Недалеко от Танглвуда в «Джейкобс пилоу» (Подушка Якова) будут даваться вечера балета и характерных танцев. Главой этого центра является известный танцор Тэд Шоун.

Анна Гордон.

ПОКУПАЙТЕ БАНДЫ США

ДЕЛАЙТЕ СБЕРЕЖЕНИЯ.

[3]

Clr. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 18 1953

'Porgy and Bess' Stars Coming To Tanglewood Parade Aug. 13

Tanglewood will be on parade Aug. 13. Soloists for the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be William Warfield and Leontyne Price, stars of the Broadway production of "Porgy and Bess," and Isaac Stern, violinist.

Charles Munch, the school's director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Concerto in D major in the first half of the evening's program. Leonard Bernstein, head of the school's conducting classes who studied at Tanglewood under Serge Koussevitzky, its founder and first director, will conduct the second half.

Ticket holders will be invited to demonstrations by the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music group, opera department and Tanglewood study group. Between the late afternoon performances and the evening concert in the Music Shed the audience is invited to picnic on the lawn. Tickets will be available July 17 at the Tanglewood box office and England Brothers. A local committee will be announced.

Clr. (D 3,999)
This Clipping From HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER
JUL 13 1953

Planning For Art Show

Members of the Kinderhook Chapter of the Columbia Memorial Hospital Auxiliary meet to plan the benefit art exhibit and tea to be held Saturday afternoon, July 18, at 3 o'clock at the Gables, Route 9, Kinderhook. Committee members are, seated left to right, Mrs. William Nitke, Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. Norman Stansfield, Mrs. William Mitchell president of the Kinderhook branch, and Mrs. James Wilkins; standing, Mrs. James Courtice, Miss Cathryn Manning and Mrs. John Warren.

Local Artists Have Display At Tanglewood

Second in a series of week[illegible] ing and sculpture exhibition[illegible] given during the Berkshire F[illegible]al concerts, July 11- August [illegible] the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, [illegible] through the cooperation of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, is a group showing of paintings of local artists. It will be on display [illegible] and visitors to Tanglewood at the reception hall at the main entrance from Sunday, July 12 through Saturday, July 18.

The group show has been assembled by Harry Lane, of West Stockbridge, Mass., and represents the following artists: Stanley Bate, Claverack; John Carroll, East Chatham; E. Arnold Clark, Great Barrington; Homer Gunn, West Stockbridge, Mass; June Kimball, New Ashford, Mass., and Mr. Lane.

It is hoped the exhibition will also include works of Stuart Henry, Pittsfield; George L. K. Morris, Lenox, and Suzy Frelinghuysen, Lenox.

From July 19 to July 25, Tanglewood will have a showing of a collection by Mr. Lane, which will include "Shadows of the House," a Berkshire scene showing a group of barns against the ominous leaden sky of an approaching storm. A resident of West Stockbridge, Mr. Lane has been a year-roud resident of the Berkshires since 1949. He was casting director of the Berkshire Art Center in Canaan last summer, and has been instrumental in assembling group shows of local artists, including one recently at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. A native of New York, Mr. Lane trained in Munich and Paris, and is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, New York; the Worchester, [illegible]n, Worcester, Mass.; with murals in the U. S. Post Office in Port Washington, N. Y., and Oakdale, La.; in the collection of Standard Oil of N. J. and in many private homes.

Clr. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 13 1953

Boston Symphony Presents Exciting Concert Opening Annual Berkshire Festival

By MARTHA deB. BEAVER

One of the most exciting concerts ever to open the Berkshire Festival series in the theater concert hall was given Saturday night by members of the Boston Symphony under the inspired direction of Charles Munch.

A record crowd of 4200 heard the unique program comprising five of the six famous Brandenburg concertos by Johann Sebastian Bach.

Each concerto, employing different combinations of instruments, is remarkable for its ingenious variety and orchestral contrasts. Their glorious melodies and rotund polyphony were controlled and performed with the most careful attention to style, nuance and color by Mr. Munch and the various artists. At times one could almost feel the silken texture of the music and sit breathless at the sheer beauty of the pianissimos and then again feel replete with its solid vigor.

The attentive audienc was unrestrained in its applause of the second concerto, particularly for Roger Voisin's deft playing of his especially made trumpet, necessary for the extremely high pitched score.

Again the audience prolonged its applause at the conclusion of the fifth concerto, for orchestra with piano predominant, flute and violin. The smooth, swift and unemotional playing of Lukas Foss, young pianist composer and conductor, and the sympathetic performance of the young flutist, Doriot Anthony, with Richard Burgin the concert master and the orchestra, under the delicate direction of Charles Munch, closed a program that the sincere musician and the truly fundamental lover of music will not soon forget.

Sunday's all Bach program opened with the Cantata No. 28 one of joyous praise to God. Considering the few rehearsals and an almost new festival chorus, Hugh Ross, the conductor, gave a pleasant performance with the assistance of Sarah Mae Endich, a mellow voiced soprano, Betty Allen, a capable contralto, John McCollum, a richly resonant tenor, and Mac Morgan, a wonderfully smooth bass.

The charming overture of Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings was unerringly performed by Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony since last autumn. The audience was so demanding in its applause that Mr. Munch graciously repeated the lively Badinerie, Suite No. 3, for orchestra alone, and containing the poppuar Air for G string, completed the second all Bach program, having given a musical picture of the charming but vanished society of the rococo period in which Bach lived.

Martha deB. Beaver.

[4]

Clr. (D 30,663)
This Clipping From QUINCY, MASS.
PATRIOT LEDGER
JUL 17 1953

Great Blue Hill Probable Site For TV Facility

BOSTON, July 17—The antenna for New England's first very high frequency educational TV station probably will be erected atop 635-foot high Great Blue Hill in Milton.

The WGBH Educational Foundation, which operates radio station WGBH (FM), yesterday was granted a permit to operate the new TV station. It hopes to be operating by Oct. 1, 1954 on Boston Channel 2.

The radio station has transmitting facilities at Great Blue Hill and derives its call letters from that name.

A permit to erect a 214-foot television tower—biggest in the state—on top of Great Blue Hill has been given to the non-profit foundation.

The new TV station will cost an estimated $500,000 to build and $200,000 a year to run. At first it will operate 24 hours a week but the number of hours will be increased as soon as more money becomes available.

Eastern Massachusetts as far west as Worcester and including Cape Cod, parts of southern New Hampshire and Maine, most all of Rhode Island and some of Connecticut will be covered by the new TV station from the start.

The new TV station will be operating at the beginning on a 55-kilowatt effective radius. This means that the area of coverage can be figured pretty well by drawing a circle with a 60-mile radius centered on the Great Blue Hill.

WGBH's radio broadcasts are conducted with the advice and cooperation of the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council, a non-profit educational organization.

The council is comprised of Boston College, Boston University Harvard College, Lowell Institute Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northeastern University Tufts College, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the New England Conservatory of Music.

JUL 17 1953

BSO Manager To Speak at Kiwanis

George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will speak at the Kiwanis Club luncheon meeting Wednesday, July 29, at the Sheraton Hotel. His topic will be the Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 17 1953

Tanglewood Concerts Will Feature Mozart Works This Week-End

Cooncerts devoted to the works of Mozart tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon will comprise the second week-end series of the 1953 Berkshire Symphonic festival at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch to Direct

Tomorrow evening at 8.30 o'clock, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music center, will conduct selected members of the orchestra in Mozart's Divertimento in D for strings (K.136), the Concerto for violin in G (K-216), with Isaac Stern as soloist; the Serenade for 13 winds (K.361), and the Symphony in D, the "Prague" symphony (K.504).

The program Sunday afternoon at 2.30 will include the overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," the Sinfonia Concertante for violin and viola (K.364) with Mr. Stern and Joseph DePasquale as soloists; the Eine kleine Nachtmusik (K.525), and the Symphony in D major, the "Jupiter" symphony (K.551).

Both concerts will be presented in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, the setting for all three of the week-end series of two concerts each, preliminary to the nine major festival concerts in the music shed by the entire Boston orchestra under Dr. Munch's direction on three successive Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons starting July 31.

Increase Concerts

With the Music center, the advanced school for serious students of music, at Tanglewood, nearing the end of its second week, an increasing number of concerts by its members now is being scheduled. These concerts are open to Friends of the Music Center, those who have contributed to the support of the school. A student orchestra will present a concert at 8.30 this evening in the shed, another group will perform chamber music Sunday morning at 10, theater department pupils will present opera scenes in the theater Tuesday evening at 8.30, a small choir will sing in the theater Thursday evening at 8.30 and a student orchestra will perform in the shed a week from this evening at 8.30.

On Wednesday evening of next week, the second of the three Coolidge concerts, programs of intimate music made available by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, will be given in the Tanglewood theater. It will be a sonata recital by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Gary Graffman, piano, performing sonatas by Hindemith, Faure, J. S. Bach and Prokofieff.

Clr. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 17 1953

Tanglewood Soloists To Sing Sundays At First Church

Three Tanglewood soloists will sing at Sunday morning worship in the First Church of Christ in Pittsfield, Congregational, for the next five Sundays.

Miss Beatrice Krebs, contralto soloist of the Riverside (N.Y.) Church, will sing at the 11 AM worship on Sunday. Miss Krebs will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at a Mozart concert at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 25. She will also sing again at First Church on Sunday, Aug. 9.

On July 26, Miss Susanne Derian, soprano soloist with the Rutgers (N.Y.) Collegiate Church, will sing, and on Aug. 2, Miss Lee Goebel, contralto of California, will appear at the church service. Miss Goebel, who is now doing oratorio work in New York City, will appear again on Sunday, Aug. 16.

Mrs. William S. Kent Jr., organist and director of music at the First Church, will accompany the soloists on Sunday morning and on Sunday, Aug. 16.

JUL 18 1953

'Porgy and Bess' Stars Coming To Tanglewood Parade Aug. 13

Tanglewood will be on parade Aug. 13. Soloists for the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be [redacted] Warfield and Leontyne Price, stars of the Broadway production of "Porgy and Bess," and Isaac Stern, violinist.

Charles Munch, the school's director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Concerto in D major in the first half of the evening's program. Leonard Bernstein, head of the school's conducting classes who studied at Tanglewood under Serge Koussevitzky, its founder and first director, will conduct the second half.

Ticket holders will be invited to demonstrations by the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music group, opera department and Tanglewood study group. Between the late afternoon performances and the evening concert in the Music Shed the audience is invited to picnic on the lawn. Tickets will be available July 17 at the Tanglewood box office and England Brothers. A local committee will be announced

Cl. (D 3,999)
This Clipping From HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER
JUL 13 1953

Planning For Art Show

Members of the Kinderhook Chapter of the Columbia Memorial Hospital Auxiliary meet to plan the benefit art exhibit and tea to be held Saturday afternoon, July 18, at 3 o'clock at the Gables, Route 9, Kinderhook. Committee members and, seated left to right, Mrs. William Nitke, Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. Norman Stansfield, Mrs. William Mitchell president of the Kinderhook branch, and Mrs. James Wilkins; standing, Mrs. James Courtice, Miss Cathryn Manning and Mrs. John Warren.

Cl. (D 12,500)
This Clipping From QUINCY, MASS.
PATRIOT LEDGER
JUL 17 1953

Great Blue Hill Probable Site For TV Facility

BOSTON, July 17—The antenna for New England's first very high frequency educational TV station probably will be erected atop 635-foot high Great Blue Hill in Milton.

The WGBH Educational Foundation, which operates radio station WGBH (FM), yesterday was granted a permit to operate the new TV station. It hopes to be operating by Oct. 1, 1954 on Boston Channel 2.

The radio station has transmitting facilities at Great Blue Hill and derives its call letters from that name.

A permit to erect a 214-foot television tower—biggest in the state—on top of Great Blue Hill has been given to the non-profit foundation.

The new TV station will cost an estimated $500,000 to build and $200,000 a year to run. At first it will operate 24 hours a week but the number of hours will be increased as soon as more money becomes available.

Eastern Massachusetts as far west as Worcester and including Cape Cod, parts of southern New Hampshire and Maine, most all of Rhode Island and some of Connecticut will be covered by the new TV station from the start.

The new TV station will be operating at the beginning on a 55-kilowatt effective radius. This means that the area of coverage can be figured pretty well by drawing a circle with a 60-mile radius centered on the Great Blue Hill.

WGBH's radio broadcasts are conducted with the advice and cooperation of the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council, a non-profit educational organization.

The council is comprised of Boston College, Boston University, Harvard College, Lowell Institute, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northeastern University, Tufts College, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the New England Conservatory of Music.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 17 1953

Tanglewood Concerts Will Feature Mozart Works This Week-End

Cooncerts devoted to the works of Mozart tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon will comprise the second week-end series of the 1953 Berkshire Symphonic festival at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch to Direct

Tomorrow evening at 8.30 o'clock, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music center, will conduct selected members of the orchestra in Mozart's Divertimento in D for strings (K.136), the Concerto for violin in G (K.216), with Isaac Stern as soloist; the Serenade for 13 winds (K.361), and the Symphony in D, the "Prague" symphony (K.504).

The program Sunday afternoon at 2.30 will include the overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," the Sinfonia Concertante for violin and viola (K.364) with Mr. Stern and Joseph DePasquale as soloists; the Eine kleine Nachtmusik (K.525), and the Symphony in D major, the "Jupiter" symphony (K.551).

Both concerts will be presented in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, the setting for all three of the week-end series of two concerts each, preliminary to the nine major festival concerts in the music shed by the entire Boston orchestra under Dr. Munch's direction on three successive Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons starting July 31.

Increase Concerts

With the Music center, the advanced school for serious students of music, at Tanglewood, nearing the end of its second week, an increasing number of concerts by its members now is being scheduled. These concerts are open to Friends of the Music Center, those who have contributed to the support of the school. A student orchestra will present a concert at 8.30 this evening in the shed, another group will perform chamber music Sunday morning at 10, theater department pupils will present opera scenes in the theater Tuesday evening at 8.30, a small choir will sing in the theater Thursday evening at 8.30 and a student orchestra will perform in the shed a week from this evening at 8.30.

On Wednesday evening of next week, the second of the three Coolidge concerts, programs of intimate music made available by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, will be given in the Tanglewood theater. It will be a sonata recital by Ruth Posselt, violin, and Gary Graffman, piano, performing sonatas by Hindemith, Faure, J. Bach and Prokofieff.

Local Artists Have Display At Tanglewood

Second in a series of weekly painting and sculpture exhibitions to be given during the Berkshire Festival concerts, July 11- August 18 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. through the cooperation of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, is a group showing of paintings of local artists. It will be on display [illegible] and visitors to Tanglewood at the reception hall at the main entrance from Sunday, July 12, through Saturday, July 18.

The group show has been assembled by Harry Lane, of West Stockbridge, Mass., and represents the following artists: Stanley Bate, Claverack; John Carroll, East Chatham; E. Arnold Clark, Great Barington; Homer Gunn, West Stockbridge, Mass.; June Kimball, New Ashford, Mass., and Mr. Lane.

It is hoped the exhibition will also include works of Stuart Henry, Pittsfield; George L. K. Morris, Lenox, and Suzy Frelinghuysen, Lenox.

From July 19 to July 25, Tanglewood will have a showing of a collection by Mr. Lane, which will include "Shadows of the House," a Berkshire scene showing a group of barns against the ominous leaden sky of an approaching storm. A resident of West Stockbridge, Mr. Lane has been a year-roud resident of the Berkshires since 1949. He was casting director of the Berkshire Art Center in Canaan last summer, and has been instrumental in assembling group shows of local artists, including one recently at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. A native of New York, Mr. Lane trained in Munich and Paris, and is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, New York; the Worcester, Mass., Worcester, Mass.; with murals in the U. S. Post Office in Port Washington, N. Y., and Oakdale, La.; in the collection of Standard Oil of N. J. and in many private homes.

Cl. (D 12,500)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 13 1953

Boston Symphony Presents Exciting Concert Opening Annual Berkshire Festival

By MARTHA deB. BEAVER

One of the most exciting concerts ever to open the Berkshire Festival series in the theater concert hall was given Saturday night by members of the Boston Symphony under the inspired direction of Charles Munch.

A record crowd of 4200 heard the unique program comprising five of the six famous Brandenburg concertos by Johann Sebastian Bach.

Each concerto, employing different combinations of instruments, is remarkable for its ingenious variety and orchestral contrasts. Their glorious melodies and rotund polyphony were controlled and performed with the most careful attention to style, nuance and color by Mr. Munch and the various artists. At times one could almost feel the silken texture of the music and sit breathless at the sheer beauty of the pianissimos and then again feel replete with its solid vigor.

The attentive audienc was unrestrained in its applause of the second concerto, particularly for Roger Voisin's deft playing of his especially made trumpet, necessary for the extremely high pitched score.

Again the audience prolonged its applause at the conclusion of the fifth concerto for orchestra with piano predominant, flute and violin. The smooth, swift and unemotional playing of Lukas Foss, young pianist composer and conductor, and the sympathetic performance of the young flutist, Doriot Anthony with Richard Burgin the concert master and the orchestra, under the delicate direction of Charles Munch, closed a program that the sincere musician and the truly fundamental lover of music will not soon forget.

Sunday's all Bach program opened with the Cantata No. 28 one of joyous praise to God. Considering the few rehearsals and an almost new festival chorus, Hugh Ross, the conductor, gave a pleasant performance with the assistance of Sarah Mae Endich, a mellow voiced soprano, Betty Allen, a capable contralto, John McCollum, a richly resonant tenor, and Mac Morgan, a wonderfully smooth bass.

The charming overture of Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings was unerringly performed by Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony since last autumn. The audience was so demanding in its applause that Mr. Munch graciously repeated the lively Badinerie, Suite No. 3, for orchestra alone, and containing the poppuar Air for G string, completed the second all Bach program, having given a musical picture of the charming but vanished society of the rococo period in which Bach lived.

Martha deB. Beaver.

JUL 17 1953

BSO Manager To Speak at Kiwanis

George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will speak at the Kiwanis Club luncheon meeting Wednesday, July 29, at the Sheraton Hotel. His topic will be the Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 17 1953

Tanglewood Soloists To Sing Sundays At First Church

Three Tanglewood soloists will sing at Sunday morning worship in the First Church of Christ in Pittsfield, Congregational, for the next five Sundays.

Miss Beatrice Krebs, contralto soloist of the Riverside (N.Y.) Church, will sing at the 11 AM worship on Sunday. Miss Krebs will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at a Mozart concert at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 25. She will also sing again at First Church on Sunday, Aug. 9.

On July 26, Miss Susanne Derian, soprano soloist with the Rutgers (N.Y.) Collegiate Church, will sing, and on Aug. 2, Miss Lee Goebel, contralto of California, will appear at the church service. Miss Goebel, who is now doing oratorio work in New York City, will appear again on Sunday, Aug. 16.

Mrs. William S. Kent Jr., organist and director of music at the First Church, will accompany the soloists on Sunday mornings, and on Sunday, Aug. 16.

[4]

MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
7/23/53

Haydn, Modern Composers To Be Featured At Tanglewood In Lenox

The music of Haydn will be played this Saturday evening at 8:30 P.M. and works of Richard Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss will be performed this Sunday afternoon promptly at 2:30 P.M. in the Music Shed instead of the Theatre-Concert Hall as previously scheduled.

Broadcast exigencies which make the change of location necessary will necessitate a prompt start of the program at 2:30 P.M.; also will preclude any interruption of the opening orchestral selection on each of the Sunday programs to seat late-comers. Seatholders are cautioned they cannot be seated until after the conclusion of the entire opening number.

The July 26 concert will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4:00 P.M., EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

The first Music Shed concerts by the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra take place July 31 and August 1 evenings and August 2 afternoon, with Charles Munch conducting the first pair and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor for the final one. Soloists are Zino Francescatti, violinist (July 31); Lukas Foss, pianist (August 1); Jorge Bolet, pianist (August 2).

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Shed concerts. Programs and a calendar of concerts by Berkshire Music Center students with information on how to join the Friends Society will be mailed on request.

Cir. (D 25,858)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 24 1953

Sunday Concert At Tanglewood To Be Broadcast

Because Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, it will be given in the Music Shed instead of in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Sunday afternoon concert by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be heard on the air, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4:00 p.m. EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

On Saturday evening an all-Haydn concert will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the last of a series to be given there this season. The programs follow:

Saturday evening, — Charles Munch . . . . . Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists (conducted by Hugh Ross); Symphony in C minor, No. 95; Symphony in G ("Military"), No. 100.

Sunday afternoon, — Charles Munch; Strauss . . . . . Divertimento (after Couperin), Op. 86; Ravel . . . . . "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Suite; Prokofieff . . . . . 'Classical" Symphony, Op. 25; Milhaud . . . . . "La Creation du Monde"; Foss . . . . . "A Parable of Death"; (Narrator: Vera Zorina), (Conducted by the Composer).

WESTPORT, CONN
HERALD
7/23/53

Westporter-Herald photo—Hamann

WESTPORTERS attending the school of music at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are Gretel Shanley (left, above, with other Connecticut students) and Elizabeth Neuberg (right, above). Miss Shanley, who resides on Riverside Avenue, recently graduated from the Eastman School of Music with a Bachelor of Music degree in flute, and at Tanglewood she is a flutist in the Student Orchestra. She is a member of the NBC broadcast Orchestra. Miss Neuberg, who lives on 11 O'Clock Road, is a student at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y., and is working in orchestra and chamber music work at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 103,308)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 24 1953

Haydn, Modern Music at Weekend

An evening of the music of Haydn Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and a program of modern music Sunday at 2:30 p. m. will close the opening series of concerts at Tanglewood, outside of Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch, will perform Haydn's Symphony in C Minor No. 95 and the Military Symphony in G No. 100 on Saturday.

Hugh Ross will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus on Saturday in Haydn's St. Theresa Mass.

* * *

ON SUNDAY, the orchestra, under Mr. Munch, will perform Richard Strauss' Divertimento after Couperin, Opus 86; Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony, Opus 25; Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" ballet suite and the New England premiere of Lukas Foss's cantata for narrator, tenor, orchestra and chorus "A Parable of Death."

The first four numbers on the program will be broadcast nationally over the CBS Radio Network, and because of this, the concert will be given in the Music Shed rather than in the Theater Concert Hall. The Haydn program Saturday will be in the Theater Concert Hall.

* * *

MR. FOSS, himself, will conduct his "Parable of Death" with Vera Zorina, the ballerina and actress, as narrator, John McCollum, tenor, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 26,528)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

JUL 29 1953

Tanglewood

Week-end guests of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were Paul Feigay, director of the Ford Foundation's Television Workshop, New York, and his assistants, who produce the "Omnibus" program Sunday afternoons.

Two new students at the Berkshire Music Center are from Oslo, Norway. Arnold Johnstad is an organ builder, choir conductor and teacher at the Oslo Conservatory. His wife, Karen, teaches piano and organ at the conservatory and is assistant organist at the Oslo Cathedral. Both are studying organ under the Boston Symphony Orchestra's organist, E. Power Biggs.

Cir. (D 25,858)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 29 1953

Big Series Start At Tanglewood Friday Evening

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and at 8:30 and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until August 16.

Concertgoers who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert and picnic on the grounds, which open on concert eventings at 6 and on Sundays at 12:30.

Three innovations mark the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music-lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 instead of the former 3 o'clock; and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally from Tanglewood as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program 2:30 to 4:00, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett as commentator.

The weekend will introduce to Tanglewood audiences the noted violinist Zino Francescatti, soloist on Friday evening; and the first Eastern performance in its revised form of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist. Jorge Bolet will be soloist on Sunday afternoon.

The Series A programs are:

Friday—Charles Munch; Beethoven, Overture to "Leonore," No. 3; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerto in E minor (soloist Zino Francescatti); Copeland, "Appalachian Spring"; Ravel, "Bolero."

Saturday—Charles Munch; Schumann, Overture to "Manfred"; Foss, Piano Concerto No. 2 (the composer as soloist); Mendelssohn, Symphony No. 4, "Italian"; Hindemith, Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday—Pierre Monteux; Tchaikovsky, Serenade for Strings; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 5, in E minor; Tchaikovsky, Piano Concerto No. 1, in F-flat minor (soloist Jorge Bolet).

Cir. (D 39,146) (S 21,101)

This Clipping From LOWELL, MASS.
SUN

JUL 30 1953

Local Musician at Berkshire Center

LENOX — Norman Bernstein of 182 Howard street, Lowell, is among 400 students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries who are today attending the Berkshire Festival Music center at Tanglewood. The summer music school, in its 11th annual session, will continue through Aug. 16.

The student body includes advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians as well as amateur music lovers spending their vacations in a musical rustic retreat.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Weatleigh, a nearby estate. A lake which borders along the edge of the musical retreat provides swimming and boating recreation between music sessions.

Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Music Center offers studies in orchestra playing, conducting, chamber music and opera under a distinguished faculty headed by Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony, and including Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Boris Goldovsky and other noted musicians.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/30/53

Munch, Soloists Highlight Music Series, August 7-9

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts will continue in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist, and John McCollum of Tuckahoe, N.Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor, and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitsky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1, on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/30/53

TANGLEWOOD SOLOIST

Theresa Green, soprano, will be one of the featured soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday, August 8 (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist in this work conducted by Leonard Bernstein as a part of the Koussevitzky memorial concert.

MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
7/23/53

Haydn, Modern Composers To Be Featured At Tanglewood In Lenox

The music of Haydn will be played this Saturday evening at 8:30 P.M. and works of Richard Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Milhaud and Lukas Foss will be performed this Sunday afternoon promptly at 2:30 P.M. in the Music Shed instead of the Theatre-Concert Hall as previously scheduled.

Broadcast exigencies which make the change of location necessary will necessitate a prompt start of the program at 2:30 P.M.; also will preclude any interruption of the opening orchestral selection on each of the Sunday programs to seat late-comers. Seatholders are cautioned they cannot be seated until after the conclusion of the entire opening number.

The July 26 concert will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio from Tanglewood, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4:00 P.M., EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

The first Music Shed concerts by the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra take place July 31 and August 1 evenings and August 2 afternoon, with Charles Munch conducting the first pair and Pierre Monteux as guest conducter for the final one. Soloists are Zino Francescatti, violinist (July 31); Lukas Foss, pianist (August 1); Jorge Bolet, pianist (August 2).

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Shed concerts. Programs and a calendar of concerts by Berkshire Music Center students with information on how to join the Friends Society will be mailed on request.

Cir. (D 25,858)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 24 1953

Sunday Concert At Tanglewood To Be Broadcast

Because Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, it will be given in the Music Shed instead of in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Sunday afternoon concert by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be heard on the air, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4:00 p.m. EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS Radio Director of Music, as commentator.

On Saturday evening an all-Haydn concert will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the last of a series to be given there this season. The programs follow:

Saturday evening, — Charles Munch . . . . Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists (conducted by Hugh Ross); Symphony in C minor, No. 95; Symphony in G ("Military"), No. 100.

Sunday afternoon, — Charles Munch; Strauss . . . . . Divertimento (after Couperin), Op. 86; Ravel . . . . . "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Suite; Prokofieff . . . . . "Classical" Symphony, Op. 25; Milhaud . . . . . "La Creation du Monde"; Foss . . . . . "A Parable of Death"; (Narrator: Vera Zorina), (Conducted by the Composer).

WESTPORT, CONN
HERALD
7/23/53

Westporter-Herald photo—Hamann

WESTPORTERS attending the school of music at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are Grebel Shanley (left, above, with other Connecticut students) and Elizabeth Neuberg (right, above). Miss Shanley, who resides on Riverside Avenue, recently graduated from the Eastman School of Music with a Bachelor of Music degree in flute, and at Tanglewood she is a flutist in the Student Orchestra. She is a member of the NBC broadcast Orchestra. Miss Neuberg, who lives on 11 O'Clock Road, is a student at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y., and is working in orchestra and chamber music work at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 103,308)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 24 1953

Haydn, Modern Music at Weekend

An evening of the music of Haydn Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and a program of modern music Sunday at 2:30 p. m. will close the opening series of concerts at Tanglewood, outside of Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch, will perform Haydn's Symphony in C Minor No. 95 and the Military Symphony in G No. 100 on Saturday.

Hugh Ross will conduct the Berkshire Festival Chorus on Saturday in Haydn's St. Theresa Mass.

* * *

ON SUNDAY, the orchestra, under Mr. Munch, will perform Richard Strauss' Divertimento after Couperin, Opus 86; Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony, Opus 25; Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" ballet suite and the New England premiere of Lukas Foss's cantata for narrator, tenor, orchestra and chorus "A Parable of Death."

The first four numbers on the program will be broadcast nationally over the CBS Radio Network, and because of this the concert will be given in the Music Shed rather than in the Theater Concert Hall. The Haydn program Saturday will be in the Theater Concert Hall.

* * *

MR. FOSS, himself, will conduct his "Parable of Death" with Vera Zorina, the ballerina and actress, as narrator, John McCollum, tenor, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

The Haydn Mass on Saturday will have as soloists Lois McCauley, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, alto; Mr. McCollum as tenor, and Lee Cass, bass.

...vonstad is an organ builder, choir conductor and teacher at the Oslo Conservatory. His wife, Karen, teaches piano and organ at the conservatory and is assistant organist at the Oslo Cathedral. Both are studying organ under the Boston Symphony Orchestra's organist, E. Power Biggs.

[5]

Cir. (D 25,858)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 29 1953

Big Series Start At Tanglewood Friday Evening

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and at 8:30 and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens this week in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Nine concerts will be given over three weekends, until August 16.

Concertgoers who do not have reserved seats may purchase general admission on the day of the concert and picnic on the grounds, which open on concert eventings at 6 and on Sundays at 12:30.

Three innovations mark the Shed series this season: the concerts commence on Friday evenings instead of the previous Thursdays, thus making it possible for music-lovers who travel some distance to concentrate the complete series in their weekend; the Sunday afternoon programs commence at 2:30 instead of the former 3 o'clock; and the first hour-and-a-half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally from Tanglewood as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the Sunday program 2:30 to 4:00, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett as commentator.

The weekend will introduce to Tanglewood audiences the noted violinist Zino Francescatti, soloist on Friday evening; and the first Eastern performance in its revised form of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist. Jorge Bolet will be soloist on Sunday afternoon.

The Series A programs are:

Friday—Charles Munch; Beethoven, Overture to "Leonore," No. 3; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerto in E minor (soloist Zino Francescatti); Copeland, "Appalachian Spring"; Ravel, "Bolero."

Saturday—Charles Munch; Schumann, Overture to "Manfred"; Foss, Piano Concerto No. 2 (the composer as soloist); Mendelssohn, Symphony No. 4, "Italian"; Hindemith, Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday—Pierre Monteux; Tchaikovsky, Serenade for Strings; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 5, in E minor; Tchaikovsky, Piano Concerto No. 1, in F-flat minor (soloist Jorge Bolet).

Cir. (D 25,858)

This Clipping From LOWELL, MASS.
SUN

JUL 30 1953

Local Musician at Berkshire Center

LENOX — Norman Bernstein of 182 Howard street, Lowell, is among 400 students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries who are today attending the Berkshire Festival Music center at Tanglewood. The summer music school, in its 11th annual session, will continue through Aug. 16.

The student body includes advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians as well as amateur music lovers spending their vacations in a musical rustic retreat.

Ranging in age from 17 to 65, most of the students live at the Lenox Preparatory school and Weatleigh, a nearby estate. A lake which borders along the edge of the musical retreat provides swimming and boating recreation between music sessions.

Established by the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Music Center offers studies in orchestra playing, conducting, chamber music and opera under a distinguished faculty headed by Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony, and including Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Boris Goldovsky and other noted musicians.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/30/53

Munch, Soloists Highlight Music Series, August 7-9

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts will continue in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist, and John McCollum of Tuckahoe, N.Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor, and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitsky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1, on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio with the network's director of music James Fassett, as commentator.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/30/53

TANGLEWOOD SOLOIST

Theresa Green, soprano, will be one of the featured soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday, August 8 (8:30 p.m.) in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Jennie Tourel will be the contralto soloist [illegible]

Cir. (D 9,928)

This Clipping From
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD

JUL 30 1953

Berkshire Festival To Produce Short Operas in English

LENOX, Mass. — Three rarely-heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by students of Department IV, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday, August third at 8:30 p. m. in the theatre-concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), written in 1760, will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., from the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) composed in 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

Lively Plots

The stories of these operas are lively. In Gluck's "Drunkard Reformed" a drunkard's wife and daughter decide to cure him of his fondness for liquor. While he is intoxicated in company with his friend, the innkeeper, they put the two men through an ordeal in which they are made to believe they are in Hell and up for judgment before Pluto and his Furies.

Debussy's "Prodigal Son" is a simple presentation of the Biblical episode.

In "An Incomplete Education" by Chabrier, a young husband brings his bride home on their wedding night. The title of the opera is thus explained.

Cir. (D 90,282)

This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER

JUL 31 1953

Tanglewood Festival Opens Tonight For Weekend Of Music

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire Festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evening as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concert goers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this weekend.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

Violinist Zino Francescatti will be soloist tonight, his first appearance at Tanglewood. Tomorrow's concert will bring to Tanglewood audiences the first Eastern performance of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 in its revised form, with the composer as soloist.

Monteux will conduct an all-Tschaikovsky program Sunday afternoon, with pianist Jorge Bolet as soloist. The first hour and a half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationaly by CBS radio from Tanglewood, as the only American evening in the network's

Cir. (D 142,658)

This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
BULLETIN

JUL 31 1953

TANGLEWOOD OPENS NIGHT

Lenox, Mass.—(AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire Festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons. The concerts were put over so that concertgoers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS

JUL 31 1953

THREE OPERAS NEXT WEEK AT MUSIC CENTER

Cir. (D 13,075)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

JUL 29 1953

Three Rarely Heard One-Act Operas At Tanglewood Monday

Three rarely heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by Students of Department IV, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood Monday at 8.30 p. m., in the Theater-Concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed) of 1760 will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., of the libretto of L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

DeBussy's L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) of 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

The three one-acters all Tanglewood premiers, are produced by Boris Goldovsky head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Scenery is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas on the piano, and an orchestra of the school's Department I students, —Samuel Krachmalnick, conductor—will accompany the Debussy. Leo Kharibian has devised choreography for 10 dancers in "Le Fils Prodigue."

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, Mr. Goldovsky's opera department will perform Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted), composed in 1784, given its first American performance in Boston in 1797, subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800 Alternating student casts will perform, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra. The J. M. Sedaine text will be sung in the English translation of Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen and scenery by John Blankenchip, employing the Paul Planer GKP projections. Like the evening of one-act operas these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and all seats are reserved.

Cir. (12,800)

This Clipping From
THE ART DIGEST
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG - 1953

In the Massachusetts part of the Berkshires, at Tanglewood, Lenox, an exhibition of stone and metal sculpture by John Rood of Minneapolis is being held in the gardens of the Tanglewood estate as a feature of the 1953 Berkshire Festival. Rood is showing five large new works in the estate's garden and three smaller works in its reception room through August 16.

[6]

Cir. (D 24,512)

This Clipping From
NEW BRITAIN, CONN.
HERALD

JUL 31 1953

Tanglewood Tailors For All Music-Lovers

Cir. (D 37,475)

This Clipping From
NEWTUCKET, R. I.
TIMES

JUL 31 1953

Boston Symphony Tailors Schedule To Aid Commuters

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concertgoers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their week end," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the Podium this week end.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

Cir. (D 19,304)

This Clipping From
NEWBURGH, N. Y.
NEWS

JUL 31 1953

Tanglewood Music Now Available in Records at Library

Music lovers who plan to visit the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood may like to know that recorded works of the composers featured at the Lenox summer concerts may be borrowed from the phonograph record collection at the Newburgh Free Library.

In addition to compositions by Mahler, Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Mozart and Bach, the library has also added to its recorded music section two new operas: Rigoletto, by Verdi and Manon - Lescaut, by Puccini. Also recently acquired are three volumes of American Folk Music, a new series produced by Folkways Records.

New additions in the popular vein are Rhapsody in Blue, Tonight We Sing and a Kostelanetz Program.

Patrons who hold an adult library card may obtain their phonograph records either from the Main Library, 100 Grand St., or from the Branch Library which is located in West St. School.

—o—

Cir. (D 29,136)

This Clipping From
WOONSOCKET, R. I.
CALL

JUL 31 1953

Commuters Given Break By Boston Symphony

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concert goers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this weekend.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/30/53

Bernstein To Conduct Boston Symphony Concert

Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestral conducting classes of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the festival concerts of Saturday evening, August 8 and for Saturday evening, August 15.

The August 8 program, a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, includes: Moussorgcky: Prelude to "Khovanstchina"; Haydn: Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; Mahler: Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with chorus and soloist including Jennie Tourel. The August 15 program includes: Sibelius: Symphony No. 4 in A minor; Chavez; Sinfonia India; Brahms: Symphony No. 2 in D major.

Cir. (D 11,500)

This Clipping From TAUNTON, MASS.
GAZETTE

JUL 31 1953

Music Festival Opens Tonight

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concert goers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this weekend.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

s58so wyyfryyr es1120aed 31

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM

AUG 1 - 1953

10,300 Hear Concert

LENOX, Saturday (AP) — A record 10,300 music lovers turned out last night for the opening concert in the first series of the 16th annual Berkshire Music Festival.

The three-week festival opened last night instead of the usual Thursday so that concert-goers traveling long distances could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend."

Charles Munch conducted the 104-piece Boston symphony through a program of Beethoven, Ravel, Mendelssohn and Copland. Munch returns to the podium tonight with Pierre Monteux taking over the baton for the Sunday afternoon concert.

The second series of the festival will begin next Friday with the third series carded for opening Aug. 14.

Cir. (D 9,928)
This Clipping From
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
JUL 30 1953

Berkshire Festival To Produce Short Operas in English

LENOX, Mass. — Three rarely-heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by students of Department IV, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday, August third at 8:30 p. m. in the theatre-concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), written in 1760, will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., from the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) composed in 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

Lively Plots

The stories of these operas are lively. In Gluck's "Drunkard Reformed" a drunkard's wife and daughter decide to cure him of his fondness for liquor. While he is intoxicated in company with his friend, the innkeeper, they put the two men through an ordeal in which they are made to believe they are in Hell and up for judgment before Pluto and his Furies.

Debussy's "Prodigal Son" is a simple presentation of the Biblical episode.

In "An Incomplete Education" by Chabrier, a young husband brings his bride home on their wedding night. The title of the opera is thus explained.

Cir. (D 90,282)
This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
JUL 31 1953

Tanglewood Festival Opens Tonight For Weekend Of Music

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire Festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evening as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concert goers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this weekend.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

Violinist Zino Francescatti will be soloist tonight, his first appearance at Tanglewood. Tomorrow's concert will bring to Tanglewood audiences the first Eastern performance of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 in its revised form, with the composer as soloist.

Monteux will conduct an all-Tschaikovsky program Sunday afternoon, with pianist Jorge Bolet as soloist. The first hour and a half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationaly by CBS radio from Tanglewood, as the only American evening in the network's "World Music Festivals."

JUL 31 1953

TANGLEWOOD OPENS NIGHT

Lenox, Mass.—(AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire Festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons. The concerts were put over so that concertgoers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

One-Act Works Will Be Performed by Boris Goldovsky Students

Three rarely-heard, one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by students of Dept. IV, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, on Monday at 8.30 p. m. in the theater-concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed) of 1760 will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., of the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) of 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

The three one-acters, all Tanglewood premieres, are produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Scenery is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas on the piano, and an orchestra of the school's Department I students, Samuel Krachmalnick, conductor, will accompany the Debussy. Leo Kharibian has devised choreography for 10 dancers in "Le Fils Prodigue." The program follows:—

L'Yvrogne Corrige by Gluck (1760)
The wife and daughter of Jean decide to cure him of his fondness for liquor. While he is intoxicated in company with his friend the innkeeper they put the two men through an ordeal in which they are made to believe they are in Hell and up for judgment before Pluto and his Furies.

Jean ..... Alvin Edmonson
Jasper ..... Robert Rue
Jeannie ..... Beatrice Krebs
Julie ..... Theresa Green
Jules ..... Paul Huddleston
Furies ..... Betty Allen Christina Cardillo and chorus

L'Enfant Prodigue by Debussy (1884)
The opera is a simple presentation of the Biblical episode of the Prodigal son.

Lia ..... Anne English
Azael ..... Robert Simpson
Simeon ..... Lee Cass and chorus of dancers

Une Education Manquee by Chabrier (1879)
A young husband brings his bride home on their wedding night. The title of the opera is thus explained.

Pausanias ..... Lee Cass
Gontran de Bois Massif ..... John McCollum
Helene ..... Sara Mae Endich

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, Mr. Goldovsky's opera department will perform Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted,) composed in 1784, given its first American performance in Boston in 1797, subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800. Alternating student casts will perform, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra. The J. M. Sedaine text will be sung in the English translation of Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen and scenery by John Blankenchip, employing the Paul Blaner GKP projections. Like the evening of one-act operas these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and all seats are reserved.

Cir. (12,800)
This Clipping From
THE ART DIGEST
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG - 1953

In the Massachusetts part of the Berkshires, at Tanglewood, Lenox, an exhibition of stone and metal sculpture by John Rood of Minneapolis is being held in the gardens of the Tanglewood estate as a feature of the 1953 Berkshire Festival. Rood is showing five large new works in the estate's garden and three smaller works in its reception room through August 16.

[6]

LENOX, MASS.—(AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire Festival week-end concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concertgoers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their week-end," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this week-end.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

Violinist Zino Francescatti will be soloist tonight, his first appearance at Tanglewood. Tomorrow's concert will bring to Tanglewood Shed audiences the first Eastern performance of Lukas Foss' piano concerto No. 2 in its revised form, with the composer as soloist.

Monteux will conduct an all-Tchaikovsky program Sunday afternoon, with pianist Jorge Bolet as soloist. The first hour and a half of the Sunday program will be broadcast nationally by CBS radio from Tanglewood, as the only American evening in the network's "world music festivals."

Cir. (D 19,394)
This Clipping From
NEWBURGH, N. Y.
NEWS
JUL 31 1953

Tanglewood Music Now Available in Records at Library

Music lovers who plan to visit the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood may like to know that recorded works of the composers featured at the Lenox summer concerts may be borrowed from the phonograph record collection at the Newburgh Free Library.

In addition to compositions by Mahler, Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff, Mozart and Bach, the library has also added to its recorded music section two new operas: Rigoletto, by Verdi and Manon - Lescaut, by Puccini. Also recently acquired are three volumes of American Folk Music, a new series produced by Folkways Records.

New additions in the popular vein are Rhapsody in Blue, Tonight We Sing and a Kostelanetz Program.

Patrons who hold an adult library card may obtain their phonograph records either from the Main Library, 100 Grand St., or from the Branch Library which is located in West St. School.

—o—

Cir. (D 29,158)
This Clipping From
WOONSOCKET, R. I.
JUL 31 1953

Commuters Given Break By Boston Symphony

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concert goers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this weekend.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/30/53

Bernstein To Conduct Boston Symphony Concert

Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestral conducting classes of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the festival concerts of Saturday evening, August 8 and for Saturday evening, August 15.

The August 8 program, a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, includes: Moussorgcky: Prelude to "Khovanstchina"; Haydn: Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; Mahler: Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with chorus and soloist including Jennie Tourel. The August 15 program includes: Sibelius: Symphony No. 4 in A minor; Chavez; Sinfonia India; Brahms: Symphony No. 2 in D major.

Cir. (D 11,500)
This Clipping From TAUNTON, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 31 1953

Music Festival Opens Tonight

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire festival weekend concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

The concerts were put over so that concert goers traveling some distance could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend," officials said.

The symphony's conductor, Charles Munch, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will share the podium this weekend.

Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony tonight and tomorrow night. Monteux will take over the baton Sunday afternoon.

s58so wyyfryyr es1120aed 31

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 1 - 1953

10,300 Hear Concert

LENOX, Saturday (AP) — A record 10,300 music lovers turned out last night for the opening concert in the first series of the 16th annual Berkshire Music Festival.

The three-week festival opened last night instead of the usual Thursday so that concert-goers traveling long distances could "concentrate the complete series in their weekend."

Charles Munch conducted the 104-piece Boston symphony through a program of Beethoven, Ravel, Mendelssohn and Copland. Munch returns to the podium tonight with Pierre Monteux taking over the baton for the Sunday afternoon concert.

The second series of the festival will begin next Friday with the third series carded for opening Aug. 14.

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
JUL 29 1953

3 Programs to Launch Major Festival Series

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its major concert series of the Berkshire Festival this weekend with three programs in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece Symphony Orchestra in concerts at 8:30 p. m. Friday and Saturday and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday's program at 2:30 p. m.

Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist, will be introduced to Tanglewood audiences Friday night. He will be soloist in Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto in E Minor" to be performed by the orchestra. The orchestra also will play works by Beethoven, Copland and Ravel.

The first eastern performance of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 in its revised form will be given Saturday night, with the composer as soloist. The program will include numbers by Schumann, Mendelssohn and Hindemith.

PIERRE MONTEUX

Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program Sunday afternoon. Jorge Bolet, pianist, will be soloist in "Piano Concerto No. 1 in F-flat Minor." The program also will include "Serenade for Strings" and "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor."

Nine concerts will be given in the shed series in successive weekends through Aug. 16.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been set for Aug. 13.

It will include festivities by every department of the summer school, a lawn supper and concert by the orchestra lasting until 11 p. m. The concert will be followed by dancing on the lawn.

William Warfield, baritone, and his wife, Leontyne Price, soprano, will appear as soloists and Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's "Concerto in D" with the orchestra.

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
JUL 27 1953

Modern Works Played By Chamber Orchestra

Musical Director Charles Mu... program of modern works for the series yesterday at Tanglewood. ... the use of chorus, and the netw... held in the Shed. Works by R... Serge Prokofieff, Darius Milhaud

Strauss' Divertimento, based on harpsichord pieces of the classic French composer Couperin, gave the advantage of modern orchestration to eight short ballet sections varying from the "Dreamer" to "Hobgoblins." The original content was preserved in the main, but extensive use of the instruments including organ and harpsichord, made the texture cloudy at times.

Ravel's "Couperin's Tomb," originally written for piano, proved refreshing. It is written in the spirit of the 18th Century composer Ravel so admired. The piquant, quiet charm of "Forlane," with the winsome, poignant, "Minuet," were especially effective in the conception of the sympathetic French conductor.

The Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" has long been a concert favorite. Each hearing heightens the feeling that it will remain as one of the enduring works of the century. Having heard the full Boston Symphony Orchestra play the work previously, however, convinces one that certain sections demand a large string group, even though it was written for classic chamber orchestra.

"La Creation du Monde," of Milhaud, brought amusement to every listener and might have startled some of the Berkshire conservatives. This is a jazz potpourri by the flamboyant Milhaud of the Roaring Twenties. After opening with lazy, lanquid syncopation, Harlem broke loose to finish in a Dixieland version that included a hangover as well as a tailgate brass band. With wailing saxaphone, trombone smears, flutter-tonguing flutes, and the hot licks trumpet of Roger Voisin (in amazing contrast with his Brandenburg concerto at the opening concert this summer) some of the classic jazz period styles came to life. Munch, delighted with his joke, drove his forces to blaring realism that found the audience most receptive.

In solemn mood Foss con-

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 29 1953

One-Act Operas To Be Presented At Music Center

Three rarely heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by students of Dept. 4, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood next Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed) of 1760 will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., of the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) of 1879 will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

The three one-acters, all Tanglewood premiers, are produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Sceneray is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas on the piano, and an orchestra of the School's Dept. 1 students—Samued Krachmalnick, conductor—will accompany the Debussy. Leo Kharibian has devised choreography for 10 dancers in "Le Fils Prodigue."

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, Mr. Goldovsky's opera department will perform Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted), composed in 1784, given its first performance in Boston in 1797, subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800.

Cir. (D 335,491)
This Clipping From
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
HERALD & EXPRESS
27 1953

Cobina Wright Society as I Find It

By Cobina Wright

Paramount Studio has a heart-tugging, wonderful movie in the Perlberg-Seaton production "Little Boy Lost," which is the picture they made in Paris with Bing Crosby and a French cast.

Cobina Wright

Mr. Crosby, who has always been a favorite of mine, gives a touching performance as an American father in search of his small son, who had been placed in an orphanage in Paris when the mother was killed there during the war. Claude Dauphin is excellent as his friend.

The Little Boy is portrayed by 9-year-old Christian Fourcade, a French recording, radio and film star, who gives a moving and fine performance.

Gabrielle Dorziat, who at 66 makes her Hollywood debut, is an impressive Mother Superior, and other outstanding personalities include Georgette Anys, Colette Dereal and Nicole Maurey, the latter beautifully playing Bing's wife.

Johnny Burke and James Van Heusen have written three charming songs for Bing. This picture is a must!

A note from Lex Barker states that everywhere he goes in Europe he is recognized as "Tarzan," but that the eager fans ply him with questions about Maureen O'Sullivan.

Though there have been five Janes in the Tarzan series since Maureen played the part, the Europeans refuse to recognize this and it is quite a testimonial to the lovely Maureen's popularity.

The London critics have become quite lyrical about Diana Lynn, who is appearing there in "The Moon is Blue," and one of the most important compared her to Maude Adams in glowing terms.

Diana, incidentally, was invited to view the Queen's Review of the Royal Air Force last week from the Royal Enclosure.

John Walsh, who has so many friends in Hollywood, writes that he is singing at the Cafe de Paris in London where he has been held over for three weeks and will go on to Venice for a vacation at the close of the engagement.

Wendell Corey, who has been in New York doing TV and radio appearances, will be greeted with the news here on Aug. 3 that he must fly immediately to Hawaii for "Hell's Half Acre," in which he co-stars with Evelyn Keyes for Republic; and will miss out on having a New England summer at the Corey family place in the Berkshires, above Pittsfield, Mass. (site of the Tanglewood Music Festival).

Wendell's family (wife Alice and four children) are loyal New Englanders, and no wonder; ancestors on both sides of the family were officers in Washington's Continental Army, and his paternal grandmother, an Adams, was a descendant of John and John Quincy Adams, second and sixth Chief Executives of the United States.

Handsome and athletic John Gifford, who was brought to Hollywood after his Broadway success in "The Dark of the Moon" and became Victor Mature's double at 20th Century-Fox Studio, is now giving Vic competition in his featured role in "Hell and High Water."

John Woolf opened the doors of his newest architectural masterpiece at a cocktail party to introduce his $175,000 contemporary Regency structure.

Woolf, who has designed dream houses for such personalities as Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton, Ronald Colman, Janet Gaynor, Irene Dunne, Clifton Webb and Judy Garland, played host to all of Beverly Hills.

Unusual features of the house include a recessed living room the size of a tennis court with walls of bleached Honduras mahogany, floor-to-ceiling windows of curved glass, black teakwood flooring imported from the Orient, Italian marble fireplaces and magnificent marble and mirrored dressing rooms.

BOSTON, MASS.
JUL 27 1953

Music in Review

BY TUCKER KEISER

Symphony, at Lenox

LENOX, July 25—This afternoon the program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, given in the shed to accommodate the large audience estimated at 8850 and to facilitate a coast-to-coast broadcast, moved from the era of knee breeches to that of trousers.

Last night's concert was the last series devoted to 18th century composers; today's performance listed compositions by contemporary composers imitating their betters.

The first part of the concert, made up of imitations of the 18th century as studies in orchestration, was conducted by Charles Munch. Lukas Foss conducted the New England premiere of his own composition, "A Parable of Death."

In "Le Tombeau Du Couperin," Maurice Ravel resurrected the mannered elegance of a musical era that wore lace ruffles at its wrists. These technical tours d'addresse, which the French manage with a Gaelic dexterity, are not handled with quite the same ease by the Teutonic mind. Richard Strauss' "Divertimento (after Couperin") has the detailed authenticity but lacks the spirited delicacy with which Ravel evokes that bygone era.

Mr. Munch conducts Ravel as if Munch existed to conduct Ravel; he conducts Strauss as if Strauss existed to be conducted by Munch.

Again working in an idiom not essentially his own, Prokofieff produced the "Classical" symphony, classical to be sure in form but modernistic in vocabulary; Prokofieff speaks the classical language with a cosmopolitan lack of accent. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's reading of this score yesterday was marked by aristocratic dignity.

Ballet Score

After a visit to the United States in 1922, Darius Milhaud returned to France to compose a ballet score entitled "La Creation Du Monde." This composition reflected the composer's enthusiasm for "Le Jazz Hot," which he heard in New York's Harlem. Comparisons with Kurt Weil's "Three-Penny Opera" are inevitable.

Though the Weil score was composed some years later. Both are the works of European composers, although with different training and traditions, and their conceptions of American jazz sound rather strange to 1953 ears.

Milhaud makes much use of piano, drums and saxaphone to give the jazz flavor. Though the work is sectionalized, much of it evokes the atmosphere of smoke-filled dives. While "jazz at the Philharmonic" audiences would never mistake this for the real thing, this Gallicized Gershwin is a reasonable facsimile of the original.

Lukas Foss, who has been composer-in-residence with the orchestra for a number of years, has given us a great new composition in his "A Parable of Death." Using a text by Rainer Maria Rilke, Mr. Foss has cast his work in the form of an oratorio.

The part of the narrator, who tells the story of a man and a woman of love, and death, was thrillingly declaimed by Vera Zorina, whose training as a ballerina has given her a commanding stage presence which adds to her outstanding dramatic ability.

There is a tenor solo, this afternoon sung by John McCollum (a singer unique among tenors in that he sings musically from the bottom to the top of his range). This musically underlines the emotional highpoints of the declamation.

The chorus has an integral part in the development of the work by commenting on the action in the classic Greek manner. Mr. Foss' music can be considered his finest composition so far. There is not one note too much and not one note is false in mood. The form is determined by the text, though a sort of leitmotif technique is employed.

From a purely audience standpoint this was by far the most noble music-making of the afternoon. The ecstatic applause was fully justified.

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
JUL 29 1953

3 Programs to

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its major concert series of the Berkshire Festival this weekend with three programs in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece Symphony Orchestra in concerts at 8:30 p. m. Friday and Saturday and Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday's program at 2:30 p. m.

Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist, will be introduced to Tanglewood audiences Friday night. He will be soloist in Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto in E Minor" to be performed by the orchestra. The orchestra also will play works by Beethoven, Copland and Ravel.

The first eastern performance of Lukas Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2 in its revised form will be given Saturday night, with the composer as soloist. The program will include num-

Children's POLO
KNIT Manufacturer:
Brand New
1/2 P
JERSEY BLOUSES ... Reg. 2.00 Girls' 7 to 1
BATH TOWELS ..... Just 60 Reg. to .75
POLO SHIRTS, were to Over 100 Girls' & Boy
1.39
2 for $1. .....
1.00
1.65
Beautiful Group of W

r Festival Series

ra in an all-Tchaikov-gram Sunday afternoon. Bolet, pianist, will be in "Piano Concerto No. -flat Minor." The pro- also will include "Sere- for Strings" and "Sym- No. 5 in E Minor."

concerts will be given shed series in succes- weekends through Aug.

nglewood on Parade," the l benefit for the Berk- Music Center, the sum- school of music main- d by the Boston Sym- Orchestra, has been set ug. 13.

will include festivities by department of the sum- school, a lawn supper and ert by the orchestra last- until 11 p. m. The concert will be followed by dancing on the lawn.

William Warfield, baritone, and his wife, Leontyne Price, soprano, will appear as soloists and Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's "Concerto in D" with the orchestra.

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
JUL 27 1953

Modern Work
By Chamber

Musical Director Charles Munch planned a most interesting program of modern works for the last of the chamber orchestra series yesterday at Tanglewood. Because of the orchestrations, the use of chorus, and the network broadcast, the concert was held in the Shed. Works by Richard Strauss, Maurice Ravel, Serge Prokofieff, Darius Milhaud and Lucas Foss were presented.

Strauss' Divertimento, based on harpsichord pieces of the classic French composer Couperin, gave the advantage of modern orchestration to eight short ballet sections varying from the "Dreamer" to "Hobgoblins." The original content was preserved in the main, but extensive use of the instruments, including organ and harpsichord, made the texture cloudy at times.

Ravel's "Couperin's Tomb," originally written for piano, proved refreshing. It is written in the spirit of the 18th Century composer Ravel so admired. The piquant, quiet charm of "Forlane," with the winsome, poignant, "Minuet," were especially effective in the conception of the sympathetic French conductor.

The Prokofieff "Classical Symphony" has long been a concert favorite. Each hearing heightens the feeling that it will remain as one of the enduring works of the century. Having heard the full Boston Symphony Orchestra play the work previously, however, convinces one that certain sections demand a large string group, even though it was written for classic chamber orchestra.

"La Creation du Monde," of Milhaud, brought amusement to every listener and might have startled some of the Berkshire conservatives. This is a jazz potpourri by the flamboyant Milhaud of the Roaring Twenties. After opening with lazy, lanquid syncopation, Harlem broke loose to finish in a Dixieland version that included a hangover as well as a tailgate brass band. With wailing saxaphone, trombone smears, flutter-tonguing flutes, and the hot licks trumpet of Roger Voisin (in amazing contrast with his Brandenburg concerto at the opening concert this summer) some of the classic jazz period styles came to life. Munch, delighted with his joke, drove his forces to blaring realism that found the audience most receptive.

In solemn mood Foss conducted his "A Parable of Death" for narrator, tenor, chorus and orchestra. Based on "Stories of God" by the Austrian writer Rainer Maria Rilke, the narrator tells an old legend about a man, a woman and death. The well-prepared chorus and solo tenor, beautifully sung by John McCollum, commented on the story with frequent orchestral interplay.

Vera Zorina's clear narration, with restraint in the use of gesture, brought an impressive continuity to the combined effort.

The style is conservatively modern with carefully developed thematic material. From a first hearing the work shows the musical skill of a sincere composer at home with his craft.

The full Boston Symphony Orchestra plays the first of nine concerts in the Shed this Friday with Charles Munch as conductor.—C. F. S.

Cir. (D 335,491)
This Clipping From
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
HERALD & EXPRESS
JUL 27 1953

Cobina Wright
Society as I Find It

By Cobina Wright

Paramount Studio has a heart-tugging, wonderful movie in the Perlberg-Seaton production "Little Boy Lost," which is the picture they made in Paris with Bing Crosby and a French cast.

Cobina Wright

Mr. Crosby, who has always been a favorite of mine, gives a touching performance as an American father in search of his small son, who had been placed in an orphanage in Paris when the mother was killed there during the war. Claude Dauphin is excellent as his friend.

The Little Boy is portrayed by 9-year-old Christian Fourcade, a French recording, radio and film star, who gives a moving and fine performance.

Gabrielle Dorziat, who at 66 makes her Hollywood debut, is an impressive Mother Superior, and other outstanding personalities include Georgette Anys, Colette Dereal and Nicole Maurey, the latter beautifully playing Bing's wife.

Johnny Burke and James Van Heusen have written three charming songs for Bing. This picture is a must!

A note from Lex Barker states that everywhere he goes in Europe he is recognized as "Tarzan," but that the eager fans ply him with questions about Maureen O'Sullivan.

Though there have been five Janes in the Tarzan series since Maureen played the part, the Europeans refuse to recognize this and it is quite a testimonial to the lovely Maureen's popularity.

The London critics have become quite lyrical about Diana Lynn, who is appearing there in "The Moon is Blue," and one of the most important compared her to Maude Adams in glowing terms.

Diana, incidentally, was invited to view the Queen's Review of the Royal Air Force last week from the Royal Enclosure.

John Walsh, who has so many friends in Hollywood, writes that he is singing at the Cafe de Paris in London where he has been held over for three weeks and will go on to Venice for a vacation at the close of the engagement.

Wendell Corey, who has been in New York doing TV and radio appearances, will be greeted with the news here on Aug. 3 that he must fly immediately to Hawaii for "Hell's Half Acre," in which he co-stars with Evelyn Keyes for Republic; and will miss out on having a New England summer at the Corey family place in the Berkshires, above Pittsfield, Mass. (site of the Tanglewood Music Festival).

Wendell's family (wife Alice and four children) are loyal New Englanders, and no wonder; ancestors on both sides of the family were officers in Washington's Continental Army, and his paternal grandmother, an Adams, was a descendant of John and John Quincy Adams, second and sixth Chief Executives of the United States.

Handsome and athletic John Gifford, who was brought to Hollywood after his Broadway success in "The Dark of the Moon" and became Victor Mature's double at 20th Century-Fox Studio, is now giving Vic competition in his featured role in "Hell and High Water."

John Woolf opened the doors of his newest architectural masterpiece at a cocktail party to introduce his $175,000 contemporary Regency structure.

Woolf, who has designed dream houses for such personalities as Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton, Ronald Colman, Janet Gaynor, Irene Dunne, Clifton Webb and Judy Garland, played host to all of Beverly Hills.

Unusual features of the house include a recessed living room the size of a tennis court with walls of bleached Honduras mahogany, floor-to-ceiling windows of curved glass, black sealwood flooring imported from the Orient, Italian marble fireplaces and magnificent marble and mirrored dressing rooms.

BOSTON, MASS.
JUL 27 1953

Music in Review

BY TUCKER KEISER

Symphony, at Lenox

LENOX, July 25—This afternoon the program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, given in the shed to accommodate the large audience estimated at 8850 and to facilitate a coast-to-coast broadcast, moved from the era of knee breeches to that of trousers.

Last night's concert was the last series devoted to 18th century composers; today's performance listed compositions by contemporary composers imitating their betters.

The first part of the concert, made up of imitations of the 18th century as studies in orchestration, was conducted by Charles Munch. Lukas Foss conducted the New England premiere of his own composition, "A Parable of Death."

In "Le Tombeau Du Couperin," Maurice Ravel resurrected the mannered elegance of a musical era that wore lace ruffles at its wrists. These technical tours d'addresse, which the French manage with a Gaelic dexterity, are not handled with quite the same ease by the Teutonic mind. Richard Strauss' "Divertimento (after Couperin") has the detailed authenticity but lacks the spirited delicacy with which Ravel evokes that bygone era.

Mr. Munch conducts Ravel as if Munch existed to conduct Ravel; he conducts Strauss as if Strauss existed to be conducted by Munch.

Again working in an idiom not essentially his own, Prokofieff produced the "Classical" symphony, classical to be sure in form but modernistic in vocabulary; Prokofieff speaks the classical language with a cosmopolitan lack of accent. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's reading of this score yesterday was marked by aristocratic dignity.

Ballet Score

After a visit to the United States in 1922, Darius Milhaud returned to France to compose a ballet score entitled "La Creation Du Monde." This composition reflected the composer's enthusiasm for "Le Jazz Hot," which he heard in New York's Harlem. Comparisons with Kurt Weil's "Three-Penny Opera" are inevitable.

Though the Weil score was composed some years later. Both are the works of European composers, although with different training and traditions, and their conceptions of American jazz sound rather strange to 1953 ears.

Milhaud makes much use of piano, drums and saxaphone to give the jazz flavor. Though the work is sectionalized, much of it evokes the atmosphere of smoke-filled dives. While "jazz at the Philharmonic" audiences would never mistake this for the real thing, this Gallicized Gershwin is a reasonable facsimile of the original.

Lukas Foss, who has been composer-in-residence with the orchestra for a number of years, has given us a great new composition in his "A Parable of Death." Using a text by Rainer Maria Rilke, Mr. Foss has cast his work in the form of an oratorio.

The part of the narrator, who tells the story of a man and a woman of love, and death, was thrillingly declaimed by Vera Zorina, whose training as a ballerina has given her a commanding stage presence which adds to her outstanding dramatic ability.

There is a tenor solo, this afternoon sung by John McCollum (a singer unique among tenors in that he sings musically from the bottom to the top of his range). This musically underlines the emotional highpoints of the declamation.

The chorus has an integral part in the development of the work by commenting on the action in the classic Greek manner. Mr. Foss' music can be considered his finest composition so far. There is not one note too much and not one note is false in mood. The form is determined by the text, though a sort of leitmotif technique is employed.

From a purely audience standpoint this was by far the most noble music-making of the afternoon. The ecstatic applause was fully justified.

[7]

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 27 195

Blanc's Tanglewood Concert All Too Short

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Not all of the orchestral feast which is provided by the Boston Symphony orchestra over at Tanglewood these days and nights is attributable to Charles Munch, the conductor, and his famous group of symphonists.

The most exciting music is often provided by one of the smaller student orchestras, the members of which are still dewey-eyed and enthusiastic, since much of the music is new, fresh and vital to them. Such was the case Friday night when some 3,000 music lovers gathered in the great Music Shed to hear three works conducted by as many baton-wielders.

Harold Blumenfeld offered a dynamic reading of Hindemith's "Kinezrtmusik" for Strings; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Bostonians, the only veteran on the podium, led his neophytss through the rugged scoring of Sibelius' Symphony, No. 1. But the piece de resistance of the all too short program was the playing of the Allergo movement of the Brahms' Concerto in D-major with the young French violinist Serge Blanc, whom the eminent columnist, Dr. Ruth Alexander in her syndicated column Sunday describes as "A Violin Virtuoso, a Goodwill Envoy," being recalled to the front of the stage four times by an audience which became more enthusiastically vocal at each return.

Mr. Blanc, in his short span of life has annexed many of the cherished prizes and scholarships available to unusual talents in Europe and America, has a prodigious musical and intellectual foundation, inborn and instinctive. Age has nothing to do with genius except it allows for expansion and development. Serge Blanc, at 24 is essentially what he will always be and that is, a great artist.

TAILORED GIFTS

The movement from the Brahms Concerto which Mr. Blanc elected to play was particularly tailored to his gifts. The bold clarity of his attack, the virility of his tone and the utter absence of a sense of the technical aspects of his art, in addition to his boyish charm, contributed facets to his playing not always present when a seasoned concert artist presents a similar performance of the Brahms violin show piece.

Although it is difficult to judge an entire piece of cloth by it's small sample, Serge Blanc practically explored the entire vocabularly of the violin with his playing of the Kreisler cadenza. This brought out a rush of brillant double-stopping, impeccable in their relationship one tone to the other; a line of great tonal beauty to which he added his own touch of musical introspection.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 31 1953

First of Major Series Opens At Tanglewood This Evening

The first of the three major concert series at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood gets underway tonight, with a new schedule tailored to fit neds of commuting music lovers. Charles Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony orchestra in a program of works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland and Ravel.

Change for Commuters

The concert series this year are beginning on Friday nights instead of Thursdays, as has been the custom. It was explained that the change was made so that concert goers traveling some distance "could concentrate the complete series in their week end."

The concert tonight and tomorrow night will get underway at 8.30 o'clock in the shed, while the final program on Sunday will start at 2.30 in the afternoon.

Tonight's concert will open with Beethoven's "Overture to "Leonore, No. 3," followed by Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto in E Minor," with Zino Francescatti as soloist. The program will conclude with Copland's "Appalachian Spring," and Ravel's "Bolero,"

Guest Sunday on Podium

Mr. Munch, the orchestra's present director, will conduct tomorrow night also, and a predecessor, Pierre Monteux, will be on the podium on Sunday.

A record crowd of 26,150 attended the six preliminary concerts, most of which were held in theater-concert hall. And officials are looking forward to additional attendance records in the main series, to be held for the coming three week-ends.

Cir. (D 39,808)
This Clipping From
FALL RIVER, MASS.
HERALD NEWS
JUL 29 1953

Opera Students at Tanglewood Have Busy Schedule

Opera students at the Tanglewood Music Festival in Lenox have a busy schedule of lectures, singing, classes and rehearsals according to A. Edmond Furgiuele of this city.

Director of the Sacred Hearts Academy Glee Club, Mr. Furgiuele was among those chosen to study opera as the result of a Carnegie Hall audition. At Tanglewood, he appeared as Rodolfo in the first act of "La Boheme" and, last week took the role of Tamino in the first act of "The Magic Flute," presented by the Opera Department.

Members of the Opera Department begin their program at 9 A. M. with a lecture on operatic staging. The remainder of the morning is devoted to duet, trio and other group singing.

After luncheon on the grounds, students attend another lecture on styles and history of opera given by Boris Goldofsky, opera director. A song repetoire class and chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York, follows.

Mr. Ross is preparing the students to sing Hadyn's Mass of St. Theresa with the Boston Symphony. The students are also rehearsing the music of "Richard the Lion-Hearted," which is the main production of the opera department.

At night, Mr. Furgiuele says, students study and sing the operatic scenes for the performance to be presented that particular week.

Orchestral students, who are divided into chamber music groups, are supervised by the Boston Symphony players. They and the young composers' group give weekly concerts. Also studying at Tanglewood are choral and orchestral conductors.

Students sit on the stage with the Boston Symphony when the orchestra gives concerts, with famous artists on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Mr. Furgiuele points out that students thereby have the opportunity to learn a great deal from close observation.

Each week, the opera department presents scenes, in costume, of the assignments studied. Most of the performances are in English which, Mr. Furgiuele declares, "makes Tanglewood one of the leaders in the promotion of 'Opera in English' movement now growing in our country."

Cir. (D 78,153)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 29 1953

Three Evenings of Opera Scheduled at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 28—Three rarely-heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by Students of Department 4, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige," (The 1760 w tion of lished librett as is Ameri Debu (The P poser's 1884. It the lib

Emm ucation

plete sung i Henry

The wood premiers, are produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Scenery is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas at the piano, and an orchestra of the school's department 1 students,—Samuel Krachmalnick, conductor—will accompany the Debussy. Leo Kharibian has devised choreography for 10 dancers in "Le Fils Prodigue.' The program follows:

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, Mr. Goldovsky's opera department will perform Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted), composed in 1784, given its first American performance in Boston in 1797, subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800. Alternating student casts will perform, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra. The J. M. Sedaine text will be sung in the English translation of Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen and scenery by John Blankenchip, employing the Paul Planer GKP projections. Like the evening of one-act operas these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and all seats are reserved.

Cir. (D 25,858)
This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 1 - 1953

Opening Night At Tanglewood Was Thrilling

There has been every indication that all records for attendance at the opening of the shed series of concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox would be broken this year.

Tanglewood has been setting new highs for public interest this year in the various smaller musical events that are held there during July. So when the big series opened last evening, with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Zino Francescatti playing the Mendelssohn violin concerto, people figured that another first night record would be made.

They were not disappointed. Some 10,300 people moved in on Tanglewood. There were many music lovers from the Holyoke area there. The weather setting was perfect and every factor seemed to conspire to make it a memorable event.

[8]

WESTPORT, CONN.
TOWN CRIER
7/30/53

"OTHELLO" RECRUITS: Basil Burwell of Westport, director of the Silvermine Guild Players, announces that several local residents have been added to the cast of Othello featuring Stefan Schnabel, which will be given August 7, 8, 9 and 14, 15 and 16 at the Silvermine Guild of Artists, Silvermine avenue, Norwalk.

Westporters include Bryant Fitch as the Duke, Ed Boyd, Jr. as Lodovico, Paul Duling as a Cyprian Officer, Gil Miller as a Cyprian Girl, and Ann Poor, who will be stage manager.

Norwalk residents newly participating are Dr. Ben Lyon, Ann Greaves and Abbie Mason.

Others recently cast are Roberta Keil of Stamford and Shelly Trubowitz of Cos Cob.

Reservations for the play may be made by calling the Silvermine Guild office, Norwalk 8-5453. Tickets are $1.00.

16-year-
. Dray-
e road, ring on "Open y and m 5 to fifteen-st year, on the sing to nament ly with Wallie Dunlap, now head of the television operation, and Bob Crane.

TANGLEWOOD BENEFIT: On Thursday, August 13 (rain or shine), a program titled "Tanglewood on Parade" will be held at Lenox, Mass., for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Starting t 5:45 with a welcome by Boris Goldovsky, it will offer: Simultaneous sessions of the orchestral, operatic, and chamber music departments of the Berkshire Music Center in operation; a Lawn Party and Picnic Supper; a concert in the shed, with the Boston Symphony, soloists Isaac Stern, William Warfield, and Leontyne Price, and the Festival Chorus in "Porgy ar ! Bess"; and waltzing on the lawn after the concert.

Uureserved sections, $2.50; front sections (reserved), $3 and $4; and box seats, $5. Holders of boxes and r served seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the Formal Gardens at 4 o'clock.

Three rarely-heard, one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy, and Chabrier will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center for a single performance at Tanglewood on Monday, August 3, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. All seats are reserved, and the performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

NEW HAVEN POPS: Gershwin Night will be presented as the season's fifth Pops Concert on Tuesday night, August 11, starting at 8:15 in the Yale Bowl.

All the widely-loved songs and music of George Gershwin, who died early in July, 1937, while still a young man, have been scheduled, and a trio of guest artists will appear with the New Haven Symphony Orchestra to make the program a memorable one.

The guest artists will be Leo Rewinski, resident of Meriden, widely-known pianist, and member of the faculty of Choate school in Wallingford; Lawrence Winters, famous baritone who has sung many outstanding operatic roles for the last two or three seasons at New York's City Center Opera; and Adele Addison, young New England soprano who has given concerts in many cities and appeared with leading orchestras.

Harry Berman will be back from vacation to conduct his 48th Pops since the New Haven series began in 1945. Richard C. Lee again will be master of ceremonies. Joseph F. Lenihan is general chairman of the Pops committee and Bowl personnel will be drawn from the local Junior Chamber of Commerce which manages the summer series.

Music will include Rhapsody in Blue, American in Paris, Concerto in F, Music from Porgy and Bess and a number of Gershwin's best-loved popular songs from his numerous musical comedies of the 1920's and early 1930's.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 27 1953

Blanc's Tanglewood Concert All Too Short

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Not all of the orchestral feast which is provided by the Boston Symphony orchestra over at Tanglewood these days and nights is attributable to Charles Munch, the conductor, and his famous group of symphonists.

The most exciting music is often provided by one of the smaller student orchestras, the members of which are still dewey-eyed and enthusiastic, since much of the music is new, fresh and vital to them. Such was the case Friday night when some 3,000 music lovers gathered in the great Music Shed to hear three works conducted by as many baton-wielders.

Harold Blumenfeld offered a dynamic reading of Hindemith's "Kinezrtmusik" for Strings; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Bostonians, the only veteran on the podium, led his neophytss through the rugged scoring of Sibelius' Symphony, No. 1. But the piece de resistance of the all too short program was the playing of the Allergo movement of the Brahms' Concerto in D-major with the young French violinist Serge Blanc, whom the eminent columnist, Dr. Ruth Alexander in her syndicated column Sunday describes as "A Violin Virtuoso, a Goodwill Envoy," being recalled to the front of the stage four times by an audience which became more enthusiastically vocal at each return.

Mr. Blanc, in his short span of life has annexed many of the cherished prizes and scholarships available to unusual talents in Europe and America, has a prodigious musical and intellectual foundation, inborn and instinctive. Age has nothing to do with genius except it allows for expansion and development. Serge Blanc, at 24 is essentially what he will always be and that is, a great artist.

TAILORED GIFTS

The movement from the Brahms Concerto which Mr. Blanc elected to play was particularly tailored to his gifts. The bold clarity of his attack, the virility of his tone and the utter absence of a sense of the technical aspects of his art, in addition to his boyish charm, contributed facets to his playing not always present when a seasoned concert artist presents a similar performance of the Brahms violin show piece.

Although it is difficult to judge an entire piece of cloth by it's small sample, Serge Blanc practically explored the entire vocabularly of the violin with his playing of the Kreisler cadenza. This brought out a rush of brillant double-stopping, impeccable in their relationship one tone to the other; a line of great tonal beauty to which he added his own touch of musical introspection.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 31 1953

First of Major Series Opens At Tanglewood This Evening

The first of the three major concert series at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood gets underway tonight, with a new schedule tailored to fit neds of commuting music lovers. Charles Munch will conduct the entire 104-piece symphony orchestra in a program of works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland and Ravel.

Change for Commuters

The concert series this year are beginning on Friday nights instead of Thursdays, as has been the custom. It was explained that the change was made so that concert goers traveling some distance "could concentrate the complete series in their week end."

The concert tonight and tomorrow night will get underway at 8.30 o'clock in the shed, while the final program on Sunday will start at 2.30 in the afternoon.

Tonight's concert will ope... Beethoven's "Overture to ...nore, No. 3," followed by ...delssohn's "Violin Concerto ...Minor," with Zino Francesca... soloist. The program will ...clude with Copland's "Ap... ...chian Spring," and Ravel's ...lero,"

Guest Sunday on Podium

Mr. Munch, the orchestra's p... ...ent director, will conduct tom... ...row night also, and a predecess... Pierre Monteux, will be on t... podium on Sunday.

A record crowd of 26,150 a... ...tended the six preliminary con... ...certs, most of which were held in... theater-concert hall. And officials ... are looking forward to additional attendance records in the main series, to be held for the coming three week-ends.

Cir. (D 39,808)
This Clipping From
FALL RIVER, MASS.
HERALD NEWS
JUL 29 1953

Cir. (D 78,153)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 29 1953

Three Evenings of Opera Scheduled at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 28—Three rarely-heard one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier will be performed by Students of Department 4, Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall. All seats are reserved. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige," (The Drunkard Reformed); of 1760 will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli, just published by G. Schirmer, Inc., of the libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known, this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) uses the composer's Prix de Rome score of 1884. It will be sung in French, to the libretto of E. Guinard.

Emmanuel Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee," (An Incomplete Education), of 1879, will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese.

The three one-acters, all Tanglewood premiers, are produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. Scenery is by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. They will be performed with student casts. Mr. Goldovsky will accompany the Gluck and Chabrier operas at the piano, and an orchestra of the school's department 1 students,—Samuel Krachmalnick, conductor—will accompany the Debussy. Leo Kharibian has devised choreography for 10 dancers in "Le Fils Prodigue.' The program follows:

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, Mr. Goldovsky's opera department will perform Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Richard the Lion-Hearted), composed in 1784, given its first American performance in Boston in 1797, subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800. Alternating student casts will perform, with Mr. Goldovsky conducting a student orchestra. The J. M. Sedaine text will be sung in the English translation of Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen and scenery by John Blankenchip, employing the Paul Planer GKP projections. Like the evening of one-act operas these performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and all seats are reserved.

Cir. (D 25,858)
This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 1 - 1953

Opening Night At Tanglewood Was Thrilling

There has been every indication that all records for attendance at the opening of the shed series of concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox would be broken this year.

Tanglewood has been setting new highs for public interest this year in the various smaller musical events that are held there during July. So when the big series opened last evening, with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Zino Francescatti playing the Mendelssohn violin concerto, people figured that another first night record would be made.

They were not disappointed. Some 10,300 people moved in on Tanglewood. There were many music lovers from the Holyoke area there. The weather setting was perfect and every factor seemed to conspire to make it a memorable event.

[8]

WESTPORT, CONN
TOWN CRIER
7/30/53

NEW "OTHELLO" RECRUITS: Bain Burwell of Westport, director of the Silvermine Guild Players, announces that several local residents have been added to the cast of Othello featuring Stefan Schnabel, which will be given August 7, 8, 9 and 14, 15 and 16 at the Silvermine Guild of Artists, Silvermine avenue, Norwalk.

Westporters include Bryant Fitch as the Duke, Ed Boyd, Jr. as Lodovico, Paul Duling as a Cyprian Officer, Gil Miller as a Cyprian Girl, and Ann Poor, who will be stage manager.

Norwalk residents newly participating are Dr. Ben Lyon, Ann Greaves and Abbie Mason.

Others recently cast are Roberta Keil of Stamford and Shelly Trubowitz of Cos Cob.

Reservations for the play may be made by calling the Silvermine Guild office, Norwalk 8-5453. Tickets are $1.00.

Charlie Cochrane, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Drayton Cochrane, of Shore road, Green's Farms, is appearing on the WICC-TV program, "Open House" every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 5 to 5:45.

As he did on his fifteen-minute radio program last year, which ran for 20 weeks on the same station, he will sing to his own piano accompaniment and will talk informally with Wallie Dunlap, now head of the television operation, and Bob Crane.

TANGLEWOOD BENEFIT: On Thursday, August 13 (rain or shine), a program titled "Tanglewood on Parade" will be held at Lenox, Mass., for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Starting at 5:45 with a welcome by Boris Goldovsky, it will offer: Simultaneous sessions of the orchestral, operatic, and chamber music departments of the Berkshire Music Center in operation; a Lawn Party and Picnic Supper; a concert in the shed, with the Boston Symphony, soloists Isaac Stern, William Warfield, and Leontyne Price, and the Festival Chorus in "Porgy and Bess"; and waltzing on the lawn after the concert.

Uureserved sections, $2.50; front sections (reserved), $3 and $4; and box seats, $5. Holders of boxes and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the Formal Gardens at 4 o'clock.

Three rarely-heard, one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy, and Chabrier will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center for a single performance at Tanglewood on Monday, August 3, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. All seats are reserved, and the performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the BMC.

NEW HAVEN POPS: Gershwin Night will be presented as the season's fifth Pops Concert on Tuesday night, August 11, starting at 8:15 in the Yale Bowl.

All the widely-loved songs and music of George Gershwin, who died early in July, 1937, while still a young man, have been scheduled, and a trio of guest artists will appear with the New Haven Symphony Orchestra to make the program a memorable one.

The guest artists will be Leo Rewinski, resident of Meriden, widely-known pianist, and member of the faculty of Choate school in Wallingford; Lawrence Winters, famous baritone who has sung many outstanding operatic roles for the last two or three seasons at New York's City Center Opera; and Adele Addison, young New England soprano who has given concerts in many cities and appeared with leading orchestras.

Harry Berman will be back from vacation to conduct his 48th Pops since the New Haven series began in 1945. Richard C. Lee again will be master of ceremonies. Joseph F. Lenihan is general chairman of the Pops committee and Bowl personnel will be drawn from the local Junior Chamber of Commerce which manages the summer series.

Music will include Rhapsody in Blue, American in Paris, Concerto in F, Music from Porgy and Bess and a number of Gershwin's best-loved popular songs from his numerous musical comedies of the 1920's and early 1930's.

Clr. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 1 - 1953

Festival Concerts Shatter Records

The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, has shattered all attendance records midway through its 1953 series.

Six concerts have been given, during the period July 11-July 26, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, built in 1941 and in which public concerts have been performed since 1943, when Serge Koussevitzky conducted the first-chair men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in four Mozart concerts. The late Eliel Saarinen's beautiful theatre, which was completely re-roofed before the start of the current season, accommodates 1,152 persons, and this season's six concerts of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and 20th Century composers have averaged an attendance of 4,360 persons. This means that more than 3,000 persons per concert have sat on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or under the sun to listen to music that, until only a few years ago, could have been classified as only for special tastes.

So popular, indeed, have these "small" concerts proven, (preliminary to the major Shed series, which run from Friday (July 31) through Sunday, August 16) that the Boston Symphony Orchestra management is faced with the problem of whether or not to move them next season entirely to the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Threatening thunder storms and humid sun dictated a move of the Mozart concert of Sunday afternoon, July 19, to the Shed, where 4,300 persons found shelter and listened to the music, and were able to see it performed, without incident. Again, last Sunday exigencies of radio broadcasting dictated that the 20th century program planned for the Theatre-Concert Hall be given in the Shed, and 4,450 persons were present.

Total attendance at the six

Clr. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 2 - 1953

"Tanglewood on Parade" to Be Held Aug. 13

"Tanglewood On Parade," the Berkshire Music Festival's annual fiesta for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday, Aug. 13, rain or shine.

Boris Goldovsky will deliver a welcome at 5:45 p. m. From 6 to 7 the various departments of the Music Center will be shown in operation. The Orchestra will play short symphonic works; opera scenes will be shown in the Theatre-Concert Hall; the chamber music department will offer a program in the Chamber Music Hall.

Visitors are invited to bring picnic suppers for the lawn party at 7 o'clock.

Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein will conduct a gala concert in the Shed at 8:15. The program will feature Isaac Stern in Beethoven's Violin Concerto; baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price, and the Festival Chorus in scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

The concert will be followed by waltzing on the lawn for all.

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 1 - 1953

Art

Annual Sculpture Show Opens In Garden of Lenox Library

By JUNE KIMBALL

PAINTING EXHIBITS are an old story these days in practically any part of the country where there is even a trickle of summer tourists. But no so with sculpture shows; even in art colonies they remain rare events.

Here, however, we have an annual sculpture exhibition. It's of sustained high quality, and it's largely home-grown. The 1953 show was opened to the public today in the Lenox Library garden, and will run through Aug. 10. It is the third annual exhibition arranged by Miss Franc Epping's Sculpture Workshop.

It seems appropriate that an area where Daniel Chester French and Sir Henry Hudson Kitson lived and worked should continue a lively interest in sculpture. Though the Lenox show may not bring in masters like them, it is now established as an affair with county-wide participation and as a Berkshire summer feature.

* * *

ON DISPLAY this year are 30 pieces, ranging from a delicate terra-cotta head no bigger than your hand to a full-size woman forcefully done in plaster. Increasing the interest of the exhibit is the large variety of materials used. One entirely new technique has been tried; it involves a base of Foamglas and a veneer of plastic metal similar to the dent-filler used to patch auto bodies and fenders.

The sculptures represented include eight from Lenox, four from Pittsfield, two from Stockbridge, and one each from West Stockbridge, Great Barrington, Monterey, Lee, Williamstown and Putney, Vt.

This is a Berkshire show, but stretching the county's northern border in artistic fashion permitted inclusion one of the group's best pieces—a flowing and rhythmic small marble work by Robin Spry-Campbell, instructress at the Putney School. It is a portrait of two sisters, subtle and simple.

* * *

C. TORNO SPEYER of Stockbridge, noting her family's interest in music, in one of the smallest works in the show has beautifully given a three-dimension illustration of a flutist. The figure is about 10 inches high, in mahogany carved without detail and lovingly polished.

Miss Epping, in a figure titled "Martyr," presents an evocative piece dramatizing its tortured mood with a crucifixion-like posture; it is in hornbeam wood. She also is showing other skillful pieces, "Maia," in cherry, and a seated girl in bronze.

Another Lenox sculpture showing a professional touch is Pym Lee Lucas, who offers a taut face portrait, "Don Quixote." It is done in a yellowish cherry with careful attention so that every irregularity in the wood contributes to the Don's woe-begone expression.

In a lighter vein are a slim dancer, done full-height by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge in twisted strips of metal, and "Little Girl Running to a Party," modeled by Gwen Homer of Great Barrington in metal.

* * *

TWO EXPERIMENTS in the Foamglas-and-metal technique are shown. One is an angular turtle by Marth Poncy of Lenox and the other is a pair of goslings by Rose Heller of Lenox.

The Foamglas, which has an airy cellular structure and a consistency similar to dried toast, comes in blocks which are very light. It can be shaped so readily with a knife or other tool that it is described as ideal for teaching the elements of carving.

Pieces of it can be nailed together, as on the turtle's feet. When covered with the plastic metal, which dries hard, the model shows no sign of its sections and the metal strengthens it into a sculptured whole.

Franc Epping's Sculpture Work At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Miss Franc Epping of Lenox next week will display her sculpture in the reception room at the main gate. In the showing, her first at Tanglewood, will be examples of her work in bronze, marble, sheet brass and woodcarving, as well as sculptor's drawings. The exhibit will open tomorrow and continue through Saturday, Aug. 8.

A private teacher and director of the Sculpture Workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox Library gardens, which opened today. Trained at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and the Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington, D.C., she received advanced training in sculpture in Munich, Germany from Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle.

American public buildings containing examples of her work include the post offices of Oakmont, Pa., Alexander City, Ala.; and the Institute of Science, Jackson Park, Chicago, Ill. Exhibitions in various sculptural media have been on view at the Metropolitan Museum, New York, the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia, and the New York World's Fair. Included in the display will be "The Swimmer," a 42-inch figure, and "The Musician," both in walnut.

The exhibitions, changed weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the cooperation of Stuart C. Henry, Berkshire Museum director.

Clr. (D 71,577)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

SPECIAL MUSIC CENTER EVENT NEXT WEEK END

Bernstein to Conduct Koussevitzky Memorial Concert Saturday

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon the 7th and 9th, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening the 8th, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this week end in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Ressurection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The Series B programs are:—

Friday, 8.30 p. m.—Charles Munch
"Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony ..... Berlioz
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus

Saturday, 8.30 p. m.—Leonard Bernstein
Koussevitzky Memorial Concert
Prelude to "Khovanstchina" ..... Moussorgsky
"Sheherazade" for soprano and orchestra ..... Ravel
Soloist: Jennie Tourel
Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") ..... Mahler
Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus

Sunday, 2.30 p. m.—Charles Munch
Symphony No. 5 in B-flat ..... Schubert
Adagio for Strings ..... Barber
"Don Quixote" (with cello and violin solo) ..... Strauss
Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph de Pasquale

Clr. (D 74,995) (S 59,910)
This Clipping From BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 2 - 1953

The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated at Tanglewood in the hills of western Massachusetts in 1934, the 14th since the Boston Symphony orchestra participated, has shattered all attendance records midway through its 1953 series . . . Six concerts have been given, during the period, July 11 to July 26, in the Theater-Concert Hall, built in 1941 and in which public concerts have been performed since 1943, when Serge Koussevitsky conducted the first . . . The late Eliel Saarinen's beautiful theater, which was completely reroofed before the start of the current season, accommodates 1,152 persons, and this season's six concerts of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and 20th Century composers have drawn a total attendance of 26,150. The previous record was 23,500 set in 1950.

Clr. (D 23,602) (S 24,091)
This Clipping From
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
AUG 1 - 1953

Berkshire Concerts Continuing Next Week

Concerts of the Berkshire festival in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be continued next weekend with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra on Friday night and Sunday afternoon and with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor, Saturday night.

A special performance of opera also is being planned in the formal gardens at Tanglewood for 4 o'clock Thursday, Aug. 13. Those invited to attend. Also on that day, a program, "Tanglewood on Parade," will be presented from 6 to 11 o'clock for the benefit of the Berkshire Music center.

The Friday night program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood.

Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist and John McCollum, Tuckahoe, a student at the Berkshire Music center, will be the tenor soloist. The Festival chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Sunday night, will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities.

The program will open with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade," and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter, will be sung by Theresa Green of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be the soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello No. 1, on the Sunday afternoon program and will team with Joseph dePasquale, violinist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote."

Other programs next week will include an informal Chamber Music concert by students of department one in Chamber Music hall at 4:30 o'clock Monday and three one-act operas in the theater concert hall at 8:30 o'clock Monday night; a small choir concert of students of department two in the theater concert hall at 8:30 o'clock, Tuesday night; opera scenes by students of the Associate division, department four, 4:30 o'clock Wednesday in the theater concert hall, and a Composers' forum by students of department three in Chamber Music hall at 8:30 o'clock; an orchestra concert by students of department one in the Music shed at 8:30 o'clock, Thursday night.

Also at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, there will be an organ recital in the Music shed by E. Power Biggs.

Cir. (D 69,863) (S 76,452)
This Clipping From
SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
AUG 2 - 1953

Boston Symphony Performs Works Of Tchaikovsky

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS Radio's "Summer Music Festival" today at 1:30 P.M. over KWKH.

Mr. Monteux will open the program with the Tchaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tchaikovsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.

Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony will close the program with the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 in E minor. A recent discovery of some Tchaikovsky notebooks has disclosed the beginnings of an outline for this symphony. The composer described the introduction to the first movement as "complete resignation before fate." In a corner of the same page, he noted "A wonderful, program, if I could only carry it out."

Cir. (D 62,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 2 - 1953

PLAN BERKSHIRE BROADCASTS

Charles Munch (right) conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and James Fassett, producer and commentator for "World Music Festivals," plan the final three broadcasts of the famed Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, the only American festival in the history-making series, to be heard today and Aug. 9 and 16.

Monteux to Conduct Tschaikovsky Program

An all-Tschaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on WTAG-CBS' "World Music Festivals" today at 2.30.

Mr. Monteux will open the program with the Tschaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tschaikowsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.

Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony will close the program with the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 in E minor. A recent discovery of some Tschaikovsky notebooks has disclosed the beginninggs of an outline for this symphony.

The composer described the introduction to the first movement as "complete resignation before fate." In a corner of the same page, he noted "A wonderful program, if I could only carry it out."

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

Soloists at Tanglewood

Jennie Tourel, left, will be the alto soloist and Theresa Green, right, will be the soprano soloist in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with the Festival Chorus and soloists at the Music Shed at Tanglewood Saturday evening, Aug. 8.

Cir. (D 364,315) (S 377,514)
This Clipping From KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
AUG 2 - 1953

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on World Music Festivals (KMBC) at 1:30 today. Selections will include "Serenade for String Orchestra in C Major" and "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor."

The 8-day courtship of an

Cir. (D 7,106) (S 7,124)
This Clipping From
WESTERLY, R. I.
SUN
AUG 2 - 1953

Music Festival Opens

Lenox, Mass. (AP) — Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire festival week-end concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

Cir. (D 74,895) (S 59,910)
This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 2 - 1953

'Don Quixote'

Gregor Piatrigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, in a broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS radio's "World Music Festivals" today at 2:30 p.m.

Mr. Munch will open the festival program with the "Symphony No. 5 in B Flat Major" by Franz Schubert.

This is one of those remarkable products of genius, written in four weeks when Schubert was only 19 years old, for private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra. The symphony will be followed by the "Adagio for Strings," by Samuel Barber, the contemporary American composer.

Strauss' "Don Quixote," based upon the Cervantes character, is subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character" and is in the form of an introduction, a theme with 10 rather free variations and finale, all played without pause. The two principal characters are the Don, portrayed by the solo cello, and his faithful squire, Sancho Panza, first heard in the bass clarinet and tenor tuba but thereafter in the solo viola.

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

Miss Epping to Exhibit Sculptures at Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 1—For the weekly art exhibition in the reception room of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Franc Epping of Lenox will display examples of her sculpture in bronze, marble, sheet brass and woodcarving as well as sculptor's drawings. The exhibit, opening today and extending through Saturday, will be Miss Epping's first show at Tanglewood. Included in this display will be "The Swimmer" a 42-inch length figure in walnut and, also in walnut, the carving "The Musician."

Miss Epping, a private teacher in Lenox and director of the Sculpture Workshop, received her training at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D. C. In Munich, Germany, Miss Epping received advance training in sculpture from Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerlé.

The Tanglewood exhibitions, changing weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the co-operation of Stuart Henry, Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, of which Miss Epping is a member.

This Clipping From
WASHINGTON, D. C.
POST
AUG 2 - 1953

Tanglewood's School Hailed

By Paul Hume

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL is entering its final two weeks. And the programs remaining are listed herein for the benefit of the rather substantial number of Washingtonians who have long planned to visit Tanglewood between now and August 16.

But the vital fact about Tanglewood is not its public festival programs but the six-week music school that takes place there. The amount and variety of music rehearsed and performed, studied and read through, and in still other ways introduced to the several hundred students gathering there, is impressive.

The formal concerts comprise only a small percentage of the musical activity of the school. In addition to the weekend concerts, there are chamber music recitals which this year have brought to Tanglewood the Baroque Trio of harpsichord, flute and cello; a sonata recital by Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Gary Graffman, pianist; an orgran program by E. Power Biggs, and frequent chamber and choral concerts.

THE OPERA DEPARTMENT under Boris Goldowsky has programs of opera scenes, and performances of the one-act operas, L'Ivrogne corrige by Gluck, Debussy's L'enfant prodique, and Chabrier's L'education manquee. They are also presenting two evenings of Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted," which visitors can see on August 10 and 11.

Composers' forums have been almost weekly affairs at the school, sessions in which music students can examine verbally, before, during, and after a performance of new music, the composers who have created these new works. Few meetings are more effective in the way they tend to bring out some concrete expression of the way the creative processes work in different musicians.

The gala programs of the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Shed have tended to become more and more composed of standard repertoire, music played by the orchestra in its winter season recorded by them, and of a largely popular nature. This afternoon's program, to be broadcast over WTOP-CBS at 2:30, is an all-Tschaikowsky concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

NEXT FRIDAY evening, however, will be a great occasion, for it will bring forth for its all-too infrequent hearings the entire "Romeo and Juliet" symphony of Berlioz, with chorus and soloists, including Jennie Tourel.

Saturday night Leonard Bernstein will conduct a memorial program honoring Koussevitsky. He has chosen Moussorgsky's Khovantchina Prelude, the Symphony No. 102 of Haydn, the Mahler's 2d Syhphony, the "Resurrection."

Next Sunday afternoon Muench will conduct Schubert's 5th Symphony, the Barber Adagio, Don Quixote, by Strauss, the Milhaud Cello Concerto, and Wagner's Tannhauser Overture.

The final week promises the Brahms Requiem, on Friday, and a Saturday night of three symphonies: No. 4 by Sibelius, No. 2 of Brahms, and the Sinfonia India, by Carlos Chavez, who is teaching composition at Tanglewood this summer.

THE LAST CONCERT, on Sunday afternoon, August 16, holds Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, the Chabrier Bourree, Wagner's Tristan Prelude and Love-Death, Siegfried Idyll, and Meistersinger excerpts, and the Ravel Left-hand concerto and La Valse.

The broadcasting of the three Sunday afternoon concerts, even though the programs are chopped at 4 p.m., requiring the omission of the final number, brings the Tanglewood Festival touch to the entire country.

But the effects of the center will reach the country as a whole during the winter months, when the hundreds of musicians, young and not so young, return to their own communities to put into practice some of the music they worked on for six weeks in the Berkshires.

This Clipping From
SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
AUG 2 - 1953

Boston Symphony Performs Works Of Tchaikovsky

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS Radio's "Summer Music Festival" today at 1:30 P.M. over KWKH.

Mr. Monteux will open the program with the Tchaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tchaikovsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.

Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony will close the program with the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 in E minor. A recent discovery of some Tchaikovsky notebooks has disclosed the beginnings of an outline for this symphony. The composer described the introduction to the first movement as "complete resignation before fate." In a corner of the same page, he noted "A wonderful, program, if I could only carry it out."

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 2 - 1953

PLAN BERKSHIRE BROADCASTS

Charles Munch (right) conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and James Fassett, producer and commentator for "World Music Festivals," plan the final three broadcasts of the famed Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, the only American festival in the history-making series, to be heard today and Aug. 9 and 16.

Monteux to Conduct Tschaikovsky Program

An all-Tschaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on WTAG-CBS' "World Music Festivals" today at 2.30.

Mr. Monteux will open the program with the Tschaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tschaikowsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.

Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony will close the program with the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5 in E minor. A recent discovery of some Tschaikovsky notebooks has disclosed the beginninggs of an outline for this symphony.

The composer described the introduction to the first movement as "complete resignation before fate." In a corner of the same page, he noted "A wonderful program, if I could only carry it out."

This Clipping From
WASHINGTON, D. C.
POST
AUG 2 - 1953

Tanglewood's School Hailed

By Paul Hume

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL is entering its final two weeks. And the programs remaining are listed herein for the benefit of the rather substantial number of Washingtonians who have long planned to visit Tanglewood between now and August 16.

But the vital fact about Tanglewood is not its public festival programs but the six-week music school that takes place there. The amount and variety of music rehearsed and performed, studied and read through, and in still other ways introduced to the several hundred students gathering there, is impressive.

The formal concerts comprise only a small percentage of the musical activity of the school. In addition to the weekend concerts, there are chamber music recitals which this year have brought to Tanglewood the Baroque Trio of harpsichord, flute and cello; a sonata recital by Ruth Posselt, violinist, and Gary Graffman, pianist; an orgran program by E. Power Biggs, and frequent chamber and choral concerts.

THE OPERA DEPARTMENT under Boris Goldowsky has programs of opera scenes, and performances of the one-act operas, L'Ivrogne corrige by Gluck, Debussy's L'enfant prodique, and Chabrier's L'education manquee. They are also presenting two evenings of Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted," which visitors can see on August 10 and 11.

Composers' forums have been almost weekly affairs at the school, sessions in which music students can examine verbally, before, during, and after a performance of new music, the composers who have created these new works. Few meetings are more effective in the way they tend to bring out some concrete expression of the way the creative processes work in different musicians.

The gala programs of the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Shed have tended to become more and more composed of standard repertoire, music played by the orchestra in its winter season, recorded by them, and of a largely popular nature. This afternoon's program, to be broadcast over WTOP-CBS at 2:30, is an all-Tschaikowsky concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

NEXT FRIDAY evening, however, will be a great occasion, for it will bring forth for its all-too infrequent hearings the entire "Romeo and Juliet" symphony of Berlioz, with chorus and soloists, including Jennie Tourel.

Saturday night Leonard Bernstein will conduct a memorial program honoring Koussevitsky. He has chosen Moussorgsky's Khovantchina Prelude, the Symphony No. 102 of Haydn, the Mahler's 2d Syhphony, the "Resurrection."

Next Sunday afternoon Muench will conduct Schubert's 5th Symphony, the Barber Adagio, Don Quixote, by Strauss, the Milhaud Cello Concerto, and Wagner's Tannhauser Overture.

The final week promises the Brahms Requiem, on Friday, and a Saturday night of three symphonies: No. 4 by Sibelius, No. 2 of Brahms, and the Sinfonia India, by Carlos Chavez, who is teaching composition at Tanglewood this summer.

THE LAST CONCERT, on Sunday afternoon, August 16, holds Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, the Chabrier Bourree, Wagner's Tristan Prelude and Love-Death, Siegfried Idyll, and Meistersinger excerpts, and the Ravel Left-hand concerto and La Valse.

The broadcasting of the three Sunday afternoon concerts, even though the programs are chopped at 4 p. m., requiring the omission of the final number, brings the Tanglewood Festival touch to the entire country.

But the effects of the center will reach the country as a whole during the winter months, when the hundreds of musicians, young and not so young, return to their own communities to put into practice some of the music they worked on for six weeks in the Berkshires.

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

Soloists at Tanglewood

Jennie Tourel, left, will be the alto soloist and Theresa Green, right, will be the soprano soloist in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with the Festival Chorus and soloists at the Music Shed at Tanglewood Saturday evening, Aug. 8.

Cir. (D 7,106) (S 7,124)
This Clipping From
WESTERLY, R. I.
SUN
AUG 2 - 1953

Music Festival Opens

Lenox, Mass. (AP) — Tailored to commuting music-lovers, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its Berkshire Festival week-end concerts tonight instead of Thursday evenings as in previous seasons.

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

Miss Epping to Exhibit Sculptures at Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 1—For the weekly art exhibition in the reception room of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Franc Epping of Lenox will display examples of her sculpture in bronze, marble, sheet brass and woodcarving as well as sculptor's drawings. The exhibit, opening today and extending through Saturday, will be Miss Epping's first show at Tanglewood. Included in this display will be "The Swimmer" a 42-inch length figure in walnut and, also in walnut, the carving "The Musician."

Miss Epping, a private teacher in Lenox and director of the Sculpture Workshop, received her training at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D. C. In Munich, Germany, Miss Epping received advance training in sculpture from Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle.

The Tanglewood exhibitions, changing weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the co-operation of Stuart Henry, Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, of which Miss Epping is a member.

Cir. (D 364,316) (S 377,814)
This Clipping From KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
AUG 2 - 1953

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on World Music Festivals (KMBC) at 1:30 today. Selections will include "Serenade for String Orchestra in C Major" and "Symphony No. 5 in E Minor."

Cir. (D 7,125) (S 87,910)
This Clipping From BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 2 - 1953

'Don Quixote'

Gregor Piatrigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, in a broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS radio's "World Music Festivals" today at 2:30 p.m.

Mr. Munch will open the festival program with the "Symphony No. 5 in B Flat Major" by Franz Schubert.

This is one of those remarkable products of genius, written in four weeks when Schubert was only 19 years old, for private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra. The symphony will be followed by the "Adagio for Strings," by Samuel Barber, the contemporary American composer.

Strauss' "Don Quixote," based upon the Cervantes character, is subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character" and is in the form of an introduction, a theme with 10 rather free variations and finale, all played without pause. The two principal characters are the Don, portrayed by the solo cello, and his faithful squire, Sancho Panza, first heard in the bass clarinet and tenor tuba but thereafter in the solo viola.

Cir. (S 97,038)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

Tanglewood Offers a Big Week's Program of Music

Almost Continuous Series of Events Arranged; Dr. Munch to Conduct 'Romeo and Juliet' On Friday; Bernstein to Lead Koussevitzky Memorial Program On Saturday

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7 and 9, and with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood.

"Romeo and Juliet"

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimere, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

One-Act Operas

Of special interest during the coming week is the three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier announced for a single hearing tomorrow at 8.30 p. m. These rarely-heard works, produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department, are open to those who help support the school by joining the Society of Friends, all seats reserved. Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer, Inc. is publishing; originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), to be given in French, had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, February 28, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand: it was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production, in 1910 in French. Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese. With a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, it was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment on May 1, 1879, given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913. For their presentation in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall the three one-acters will be staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, performed by student casts with a student orchestra. Scenery will be by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

The week at Tanglewood offers almost continuous music, with all departments: student orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group in full operation. Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to: informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Monday afternoon (Aug. 3), Chamber Music Hall; three one-act operas (Department IV students), Monday evening (Aug. 3), Theater-Concert Hall; small choir concert (Department II students), Tuesday evening (Aug. 4), Theater-Concert Hall; opera scenes by the Associate Division (Department IV students), Wednesday afternoon (Aug. 5,) Theater-Concert Hall; composer's forum (Department III students), Wednesday evening (Aug. 5), Chamber Music Hall; student symphony orchestra (Department I students), Thursday evening (Aug. 6), Music Shed; organ recital by E. Power Biggs, Saturday afternoon (Aug. 8), Music Shed; chamber music concert (Department I students), Sunday morning (Aug. 9), Chamber Music Hall.

Public Rehearsal

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning (Aug. 8) in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

This weekend's opening of the Shed series A the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Aug. 2 afternoon. Zino Francescatti, violinist; Lukas Foss and Jorge Bolet, pianists, are soloists. For series C, which concludes the 1953 Berkshire Festival (Aug. 14-15-16) the podium will be shared by Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with Lois Marshall, William Warfield, Seymour Lipkin as soloists.

Two events of note in the final week of the Festival are performances Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, of August Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Boris Goldovsky's opera department; and the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday, Aug. 13, which features a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the all-Beethoven portion conducted by Charles Munch, Isaac Stern will perform the Violin Concerto. The second half, which Leonard Bernstein conducts, will consist of Act II, scenes I and 2 of the Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price, the Bess of the current Broadway production, and her husband William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus.

Week's Program

The program for the week follows:

Monday, Aug. 3 4.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Informal Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I: 8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall (All seats reserved), three one-act operas by Students of Department IV "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Reformed Drunkard) by Gluck "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) by Debussy, "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) by Chabrier.

Tuesday, Aug. 4—8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Small Choir Concert, Students of Department II.

Wednesday, Aug. 5—4.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Opera Scenes by Students of Associate Division, Department IV; 8.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Composers' Forum, by students of Department III.

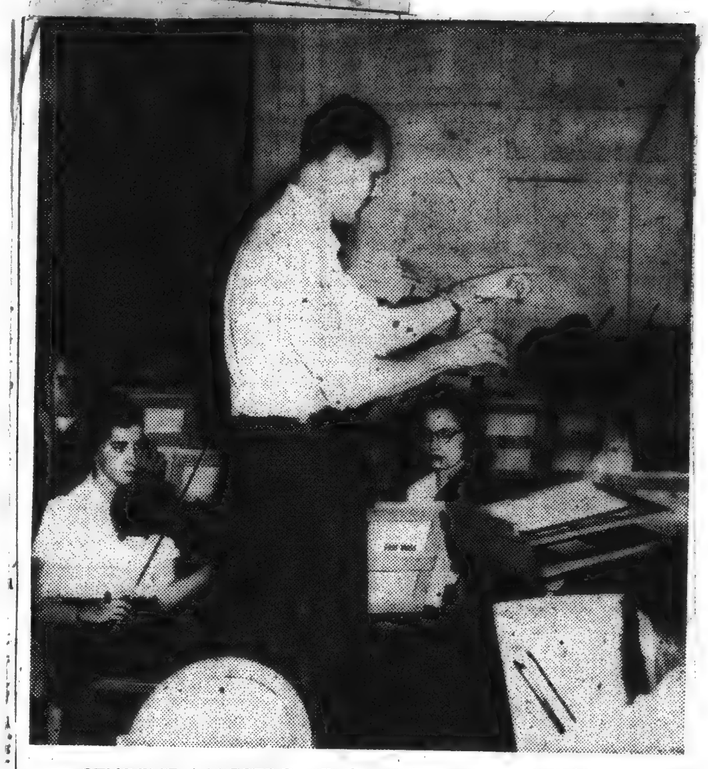
Thursday, Aug. 6—8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Orchestra Concert by Students of Department I.

Friday, Aug. 7—8.30—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-1—Charles Munch, conductor; Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony, with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor.

Saturday, Aug. 8—10 a. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Munch, conductor, Public Rehearsal (Benefit, Pension Fund); 3 p. m.—Music Shed, organ recital—E. Power Biggs; 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-2—Leonard Bernstein; (Koussevitzky Memorial Concert), Moussorgsky, Prelude to "Khovanstchina;" Ravel, "Sheherazade," for Soprano and Orchestra, Soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano.

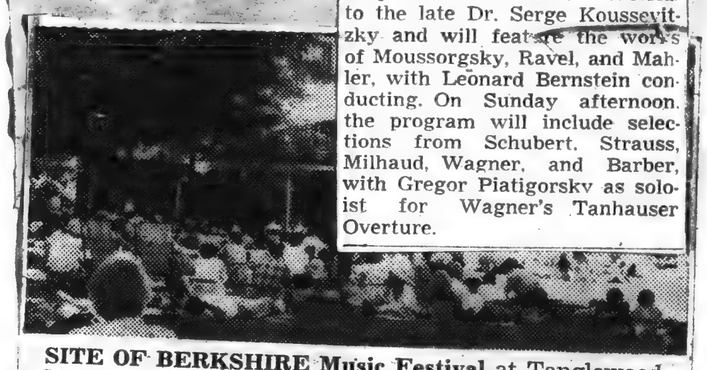
Sunday, Aug. 9—10 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I, 2.30 p. m.—Music Shed; Berkshire Festival Concert B-3—Charles Munch, conductor; Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B-flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, "Don Quixote" with Cello and Viola Solo; (Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello; Joseph De Pasquale, viola;; Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio, James Fassett, commentator); Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2.

Cir. (D 101,621) (S 99,086)
This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
AUG 2 - 1953



STUDENT MAESTRO—Endel Kalam, native of Estonia and member of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, here conducts the student orchestra at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival. This year's enrolment of 400 students now are in the midst of the 11th annual six-week session, which will conclude with the end of the Berkshire Festival Aug. 16.

Cir. (D 69,863) (S 76,452)
This Clipping From
SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
AUG 2 - 1953



SITE OF BERKSHIRE Music Festival at Tanglewood Mass., from where Pierre Monteaux will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program to be heard on today's broadcast of CBS Radio's series of Summer Music Festivals.

Cir. (D 46,046) (S 173,079)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 2 - 1953

Koussevitsky Memorial Concert Next Saturday

A MEMORIAL program to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky next Saturday night will feature in the second series of festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, will be the principal soloists of the series.

The series will open Friday night with a performance of the Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with chorus and soloists. Charles Munch will conduct. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Koussevitzky memorial program which will consist of the Prelude to "Khovanstchina," Moussorgsky; Symphony No. 2, Haydn; Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Mahler, with chorus and soloists.

Conducted by Munch, with cellist Piatigorsky as soloist, the final concert of the series will be given Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The first part will be broadcast. The program: Symphony No. 5, in B-flat, Schubert; Adagio For Strings, Barber; "Don Quixote" (with cello and viola solo), Strauss; Concerto For Cello, No. 1, Milhaud; Overture to "Tannhauser," Wagner.

Tomorrow night students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present three rarely heard one-act operas in the Theater-Concert Hall. Directed by Boris Goldovsky, the operas are Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige," Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee." Like all student performances at Tanglewood, tickets for the evening of opera are not on public sale but is open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center who help support the school.

Jennie Tourel
Soloist at Tanglewood

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 3 - 1953

Three Tanglewood Concerts Draw Record Crowd of 30,700

All previous week-end attendance records at Tanglewood were shattered yesterday when 9,900 music-lovers were on hand for the afternoon concert at the music shed in Lenox, bringing the week-end attendance total for the Series A concerts to 30,700, a new mark for the Berkshire Music Festival.

Two Night Records

Friday night's performance had attracted a throng of 10,300, a first-night record, and Saturday night's attendance of 10,800 also established a new mark. Only the overcast skies and occasional rain prevented yesterday's attendance from being even larger, in the opinion of Tanglewood officials.

Pierre Monteux was guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra in yesterday's performance, which featured the works of Tchaikovsky, including his Serenade for Strings, Symphony No. 5 in E minor, and Piano concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor, with Jorge Bolet as soloist. Charles Munch, music director of the festival, conducted the orchestra Saturday night in a program that included Schumann's Overture to Manfred, the Piano concerto No. 2 by Lucas Foss, with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn's Italian symphony No. 4, and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes.

The first concert in Series B will be presented next Friday night at 8.30 o'clock, when Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra, with chorus and soloists, in a performance of the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," by Berlioz. The Saturday evening concert will be a memorial to the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and will feature the works of Moussorgsky, Ravel, and Mahler, with Leonard Bernstein conducting. On Sunday afternoon, the program will include selections from Schubert, Strauss, Milhaud, Wagner, and Barber, with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist for Wagner's Tanhauser Overture.

Earlier activities this week will revolve around concerts to be given by students of the Berkshire Music center, which are open only to members of Friends of the Music Center whose contributions help to support the school. Three one-act operas, "The Reformed Drunkard," by Gluck, Debussy's "The Prodigal Son," and "An Incomplete Education" by Chabrier will be given tonight at 8.30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall, while a small choir concert will be presented tomorrow night. On Wednesday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock the students will give a program of opera scenes and will take part in a composers' forum in the evening at 8.30 o'clock. Other students will give an orchestra concert in the shed. Thursday night at 8.30 o'clock.

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 1 - 1953

Record Crowd Of 10,000 at Tanglewood

A record-breaking audience of 10,300 music lovers was on hand last evening at Tanglewood for the first of three major concert series at the Berkshire Music festival. Charles Munch directed the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra and Zino Francescatti played the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

The symphony concert tonight, which will get underway at 8.30 o'clock in the shed, will include Schumann's Overture to "Manfred;" Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, "Italian;" and the Hindemith "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes" by Weber.

The Sunday afternoon concert, which will be held at 2.30 o'clock, will be directed by Pierre Monteux. The program will include Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings," Symphony No. 5, in E minor; and Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor with Jorge Bolet as soloist. This program will conclude the first series.

Cir. (S 99,830)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

Tanglewood Offers a Big Week's Program of Music

Almost Continuous Series of Events Arranged; Dr. Munch to Conduct 'Romeo and Juliet' On Friday; Bernstein to Lead Koussevitzky Memorial Program On Saturday

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7 and 9, and with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6000-seat Shed at Tanglewood.

"Romeo and Juliet"

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Berkshire Music Center student.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

One-Act Operas

Of special interest during the coming week is the three one-act operas by Gluck, Debussy and Chabrier announced for a single hearing tomorrow at 8.30 p. m. These rarely-heard works, produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department, are open to those who help support the school by joining the Society of Friends, all seats reserved. Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), will have the English translation of Giovanni Cardelli which G. Schirmer, Inc. is publishing; originally in two acts when it had its Vienna premiere in April, 1760, it has a libretto by L. Anseaume. So far as is known this will be its first American production.

Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son), to be given in French, had its premiere in operatic form at Covent Garden, London, February 28, 1910, with a libretto by E. Guinand: it was the composer's Prix de Rome cantata, published in 1884. Boston had the first American production, in 1910 in French. Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) will be sung in the English translation of Henry Reese. With a text by Eugene Leterrier and Albert Vanloo, it was originally privately produced at the Cercle de la Presse, Paris, with piano accompaniment on May 1, 1879, given first with orchestra in the French capital in 1913. For their presentation in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall the three one-acters will be staged by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, performed by student casts with a student orchestra. Scenery will be by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

The week at Tanglewood offers almost continuous music, with all departments: student orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group in full operation. Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to: informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Monday afternoon (Aug. 3), Chamber Music Hall; three one-act operas (Department IV students), Monday evening (Aug. 3), Theater-Concert Hall; small choir concert (Department II students), Tuesday evening (Aug. 4), Theater-Concert Hall; opera scenes by the Associate Division (Department IV students), Wednesday afternoon (Aug. 5,) Theater-Concert Hall; composer's forum (Department III students), Wednesday evening (Aug. 5), Chamber Music Hall; student symphony orchestra (Department I students), Thursday evening (Aug. 6), Music Shed; organ recital by E. Power Biggs, Saturday afternoon (Aug. 8), Music Shed; chamber music concert (Department I students), Sunday morning (Aug. 9), Chamber Music Hall.

Public Rehearsal

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning (Aug. 8) in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

This weekend's opening of the Shed series A the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Aug. 2 afternoon. Zino Francescatti, violinist; Lukas Foss and Jorge Bolet, pianists, are soloists. For series C, which concludes the 1953 Berkshire Festival (Aug. 14-15-16) the podium will be shared by Mr. Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with Lois Marshall, William Warfield, Seymour Lipkin as soloists.

Two events of note in the final week of the Festival are performances Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 10 and 11, of August Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Boris Goldovsky's opera department; and the annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday, Aug. 13, which features a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the all-Beethoven portion conducted by Charles Munch, Isaac Stern will perform the Violin Concerto. The second half, which Leonard Bernstein conducts, will consist of Act II, scenes I and 2 of the Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price, the Bess of the current Broadway production, and her husband William Warfield as soloists, and the Festival Chorus.

Week's Program

The program for the week follows:

Monday, Aug. 3 4.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Informal Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I; 8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall (All seats reserved), three one-act operas by Students of Department IV: "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Reformed Drunkard) by Gluck; "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) by Debussy, "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education) by Chabrier.

Tuesday, Aug. 4—8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Small Choir Concert, Students of Department II.

Wednesday, Aug. 5—4.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Opera Scenes by Students of Associate Division, Department IV; 8.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Composers' Forum, by students of Department III.

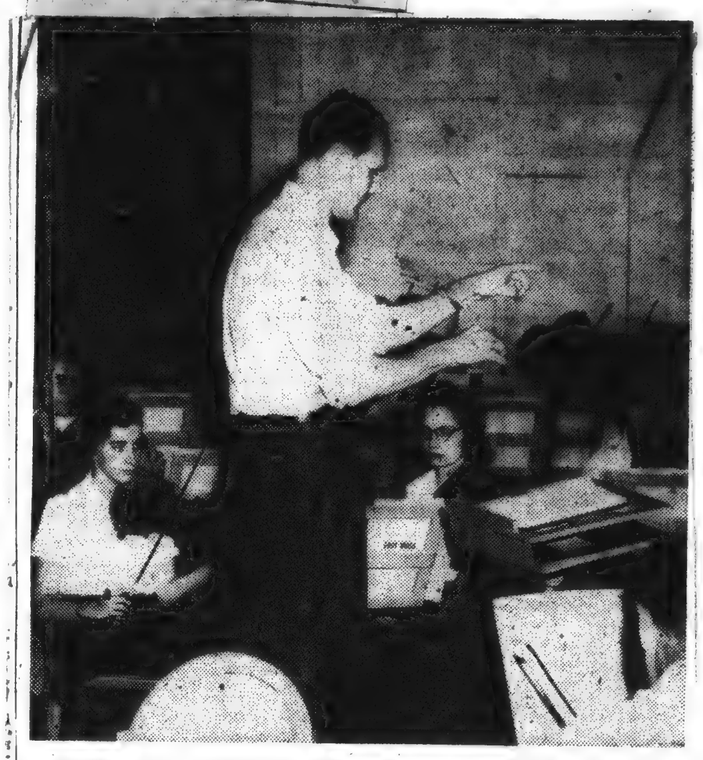
Thursday, Aug. 6—8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Orchestra Concert by Students of Department I.

Friday, Aug. 7—8.30—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-1—Charles Munch, conductor; Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony, with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor.

Saturday, Aug. 8—10 a. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Munch, conductor, Public Rehearsal (Benefit, Pension Fund); 3 p. m.—Music Shed, organ recital—E. Power Biggs; 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Berkshire Festival Concert B-2—Leonard Bernstein; (Koussevitzky Memorial Concert), Moussorgsky, Prelude to "Khovanstchina;" Ravel, "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Soloist: Jennie Tourel; Mahler, Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Jennie Tourel, alto; Theresa Green, soprano.

Sunday, Aug. 9—10 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall, Chamber Music Concert by Students of Department I, 2.30 p. m.—Music Shed; Berkshire Festival Concert B-3—Charles Munch, conductor; Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B-flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, "Don Quixote" with Cello and Viola Solo; (Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello; Joseph De Pasquale, viola; Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio, James Fassett, commentator); Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky; Roussel, "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2.

Cir. (D 101,621) (S 99,086)
This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
TIMES
AUG 2 - 1953



STUDENT MAESTRO—Endel Kalam, native of Estonia and member of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, here conducts the student orchestra at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival. This year's enrolment of 400 students now are in the midst of the 11th annual six-week session, which will conclude with the end of the Berkshire Festival Aug. 16.

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 3 - 1953

Three Tanglewood Concerts Draw Record Crowd of 30,700

All previous week-end attendance records at Tanglewood were shattered yesterday when 9,900 music-lovers were on hand for the afternoon concert at the music shed in Lenox, bringing the week-end attendance total for the Series A concerts to 30,700, a new mark for the Berkshire Music Festival.

Two Night Records

Friday night's performance had attracted a throng of 10,300, a first-night record, and Saturday night's attendance of 10,800 also established a new mark. Only the overcast skies and occasional rain prevented yesterday's attendance from being even larger, in the opinion of Tanglewood officials.

[illegible] of Moussorgsky, Ravel, and Mahler, with Leonard Bernstein conducting. On Sunday afternoon, the program will include selections from Schubert, Strauss, Milhaud, Wagner, and Barber, with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist for Wagner's Tanhauser Overture.

Earlier activities this week will revolve around concerts to be given by students of the Berkshire Music center, which are open only to members of Friends of the Music Center whose contributions help to support the school. Three one-act operas, "The Reformed Drunkard," by Gluck, Debussy's "The Prodigal Son," and "An Incomplete Education" by Chabrier will be given tonight at 8.30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall, while a small choir concert will be presented tomorrow night. On Wednesday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock the students will give a program of opera scenes and will take part in a composers' forum in the evening at 8.30 o'clock. Other students will give an orchestra concert in the shed Thursday night at 8.30 o'clock.

TAFT'S BODY LIES IN STATE—Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Senate Lights in the long corridor n

Cir. (D 69,863) (S 76,452)
This Clipping From
SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
AUG 2 - 1953

SITE OF BERKSHIRE Music Festival at Tanglewood Mass., from where Pierre Monteaux will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program to be heard on today's broadcast of CBS Radio's series of Summer Music Festivals.

Cir. (D 46,046) (S 173,079)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 2 - 1953

Koussevitsky Memorial Concert Next Saturday

A MEMORIAL program to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky next Saturday night will feature in the second series of festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, will be the principal soloists of the series.

The series will open Friday night with a performance of the Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with chorus and soloists. Charles Munch will conduct. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Koussevitzky memorial program which will consist of the Prelude to "Khovanstchina," Moussorgsky; Symphony No. 2, Haydn; Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Mahler, with chorus and soloists.

Conducted by Munch, with cellist Piatigorsky as soloist, the final concert of the series will be given Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The first part will be broadcast. The program: Symphony No. 5, in B-flat, Schubert; Adagio For Strings, Barber; "Don Quixote" (with cello and viola solo), Strauss; Concerto For Cello, No. 1, Milhaud; Overture to "Tannhauser," Wagner.

Tomorrow night students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present three rarely heard one-act operas in the Theater-Concert Hall. Directed by Boris Goldovsky, the operas are Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige," Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee." Like all student performances at Tanglewood, tickets for the evening of opera are not on public sale but is open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center who help support the school.

Jennie Tourel
Soloist at Tanglewood

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 1 - 1953

Record Crowd Of 10,000 at Tanglewood

A record-breaking audience of 10,300 music lovers was on hand last evening at Tanglewood for the first of three major concert series at the Berkshire Music festival. Charles Munch directed the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra and Zino Francescatti played the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

The symphony concert tonight, which will get underway at 8.30 o'clock in the shed, will include Schumann's Overture to "Manfred;" Foss' Piano Concerto No. 2, with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, "Italian;" and the Hindemith "Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes" by Weber.

The Sunday afternoon concert, which will be held at 2.30 o'clock, will be directed by Pierre Monteux. The program will include Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings," Symphony No. 5, in E minor; and Piano Concerto No. 1, in B-flat minor with Jorge Bolet as soloist. This program will conclude the first series.

Cir. (D 90,282)
This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
AUG 2 - 1953

USIC

usic Soothes Savage Beast nd Unnerved Humans, Too

BY GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

A Boston University professor recently had some in- resting remarks on the magical powers of music. Plato ade the classic remark that "Music soothes the savage ast" and Alan B. Sostek, a psychologist by vocation and musician by avocation, makes the same claim for music's ffect on the human animal. Just as music can arouse or acify animals, so it can create various moods in men, ac- rding to this faculty member of Boston University's ollege of Music.

"The idea of music calming people or pepping them up isn't new," ys Professor Sostek. "David knew all about it when he brought Saul lcase with his music. The story of the Pied Piper of Hamelin whose ting melody carried away both mice and children in the 'Never- ever Land' is another sample."

Relaxing music usually consists of the string or woodwind variety nd is most soothing when it stays in the lower ranges. Music in the igher ranges, particularly if played by brasses, is exciting and peps up. The bright, high tones stimulate the nervous system by vibrat- g faster on the ear drum.

While the professor doesn't specifically mention tempo, the music hich he suggests for inducing various moods indicates that this is ost important. For instance, pieces which he recommends for re- xing (insomniacs take notice!) such as the Brahms "Cradle Song" nd Debussy's "Claire de Lune," are of the slow variety. Pieces such s Tico-Tico, Siboney, and the Dance of the Hours, from "La Giaconda," hich are suggested for making one gay and light-hearted, are played n a bright tempo. Marches, of course, are in the category of stim- lating music.

"However, don't make the mistake of confusing a somber, de- ressing piece with a quiet, relaxing piece," says the psychologist- usician. "For instance, 'Ase's Tod,' a German song about Ase's death, nd some of the blues songs are very sad and they stimulate by de- ressing people and upsetting their equilibrium so they cannot sleep." n the other hand, the professor suggests a snappy march or the "One 'Clock Jump" if you want to get out of the right side of the bed in a urry. "Songs can put you to sleep or wake you up," he says.

Uses For Music Are Unlimited

The uses for music seem to be unlimited, according to Sostek. In estaurants, it serves to keep patrons from getting irritable when the ervice is slow and music also promotes appetite and aids digestion. n manufacturing plants, music increases production and helps to eep workers from getting bored with their work. Here, brighter usic is used in the later hours of the day when workers reach a ower ebb.

Music is provided in many chain stores these days but grocery tore owners who have not yet installed music would do well to heed hese words of the professor. "If my wife sends me to get a quart f milk or a loaf of bread in a super-market which plays music, I gen- rally bring home a lot more than I meant to bring. I find it pleasant o linger and look around at the wares. I'm apt to pick up anchovies nd crackers, fruits or some canned item I find appealing." On leasant afternoons, store owners would do well to keep "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" out of the repertoire for friend hubby might get deas and forget all about the dog food!

The Star Spangled Banner is an example of the way that "mood" usic may be used to pacify men as well as arouse them. Reportedly, ur national anthem has been played to quell riots in various places. Brawlers and rioters usually calm down at the strains of the Star Spangled Banner which appeals to their better instincts and generates feeling of respect.

The professor relates how a German philosopher once used a spider n a musical experiment. The spider was weaving a web in a concert all before the start of a symphonic performance. When the music egan, the spider reacted very definitely to the moods of the music. n soft passages where the strings and woodwinds were playing, the spider lowered itself and swung peacefully on its ladder. However, when the brasses spoke out and the tympani thundered, the spider eemed terrified and scurried up into the web in an effort to get as ar away as possible.

Three Types Of Listeners

Professor Sostek gives three classifications of listeners to music. Which one of the latter do you fit into?

Active—Those who listen to the form and harmony of music with ll their critical faculties—sort of sitting on the chair's edge, cocking their ears for flaws or perfection.

Passive—Those who "listen" to music but don't "hear" it. This s like the man who goes to a concert to please his wife. His ears are blocked; he squirms and studies the ceiling; the effect of the music on him is zero.

Esthetic—Those who listen to music for the pure pleasure of the eeling that hearing it gives them. They do not use any critical facul- ies; many of them could not criticize for while they enjoy music, they do not understand it—not being trained in it.

15,000 Hear Iturbi In Yale Bowl

As previously reported, the fourth Pop concert last Tuesday eve- ning in the Bowl had the largest attendance in several years. Well over 15,000 listeners were present to hear the piano magic of Jose Iturbi, the guest artist of the occasion who made an auspicious debut in the Bowl. Attendance figures were exceeded, I believe, by only one other concert in the entire nine year Pop series. This was an all- Gershwin program in the 1946 series when almost 18,000 people crowded into the Bowl. Last Tuesday's attendance represented a capacity audi- ence for numbers are now limited so that all may see and hear the proceedings. Many were turned away at this fourth program.

The fifth concert on August 11 should attract another large audience for, like its record breaking predecessor of the 1946 series, it is to be a Gershwin-Night. Harry Berman will be back to conduct the concert which is to feature three very capable guest artists. They are Adele Addison, seven time soloist with the Boston Symphony and leading soprano with the New England Opera Company; Lawrence Winters, celebrated baritone with an international reputation in opera and musical comedy; Leo Rewinski, head of the piano department at the Choate School in Wallingford. The latter will have a busy evening for he will be the soloist in two of the program's major offerings—the Concerto in F and the Rhapsody in Blue.

This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
TIMES-PICAYUNE-STATES
AUG 2 - 1953

TWO OF AMERICA'S FOREMOST music-makers, Alexander Hilsberg (left), conductor and director of the New Orleans' Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, discuss current trends in American music at the Berkshire music center, Tanglewood, Mass. Hilsberg journeyed to the music colony on Munch's invitation to hold auditions for positions with the New Orleans orchestra. Munch is director of the Berkshire school.

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

'Tanglewood on Parade'

This date in music: 1923, First Festival, International Society for Contemporary Music opens in Salzburg with chamber music by Alban Berg, Bela Bartok and Arnold Schonberg.

By E. V. W.

AUGUST MUSIC PROGRAMS here and elsewhere are of wide interest. In Crouse College auditorium this week, several programs are scheduled by Syracuse University School of Music. The Lyric Circus will present Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time" all week, starting Tuesday night. The first week-end of concerts in The Shed, "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., closes this afternoon with an all-Tschaikowsky program by the Boston Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

THREE RARELY heard operas by Gluck, Debussy and Charbrier will be performed by Students of Department IV; Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., tomorrow night in the Theater-Concert Hall. These operas, all first performances in the Center, are produced by Boris Goldovsky.

"TANGLEWOOD ON Parade," the annual program arranged for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center, is announced for Thursday, Aug. 13 from 6 to 11 P.M. There will be simultaneous sessions of each department in the Center, a program of short symphonic works in The Shed; opera scenes in the Theater-Concert Hall and a chamber music program in the Chamber Music Hall. A picnic supper is arranged on the grounds with all invited to make use of the buffet and refreshments carts in addition to their own supper menu.

A concert on the porch of the Main House at 7 o'clock will be followed by a Gala Concert in The Shed at 8:15. The Boston Symphony will be conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein. Violinist Isaac Stern

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 2 - 1953

LEONARD BERNSTEIN will conduct the Boston Symphony in the Serge Koussevitzky Memorial concert at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

[12]

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 2 - 1953

Monteux Conducts at Tanglewood Today: Munch and Bernstein Next Week-End

Pierre Monteaux conducts this afternoon's Berkshire Music Festival Concert at 2:30, the last of this week-end's series of three. He will devote the entire program to music of Tchaikovsky, playing the Serenade for Strings; the Fifth Symphony and the First Piano Concerto with Jorge Bolet as soloist.

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue next week-end at Tanglewood.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum will be the tenor. The Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1, on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote."

Friday at 8:30—(Charles Munch, conducting):
Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony. Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday at 8:30—(Leonard Bernstein, conducting):
Moussorgsky, Prelude to "Khovanschina"; Ravel, "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra (Soloist, Jennie Tourel); Mahler, Symphony No. 4 (Soloists, Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus).

Sunday at 2:30 p. m.—(Charles Munch, conducting):
Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B-flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, "Don Quixote" (with Cello and Violin Solo); (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale); Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1 (Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky); Roussel, Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane."

Tomorrow evening at 8:30 Boris Goldovsky and the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will present three one-act operas: "L'Yvrogne Corrige" by Gluck, Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee." There will be student concerts during the week.

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

At Tanglewood last evening Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second of the series of concerts in the Shed the soloist was Lukas Foss, and the complete program was as follows:
Schumann, Overture to Byron's "Manfred"
Foss, Piano Concerto No. 2
Mendelssohn, Symphony, No. 4 in A Major ("Italian") Op. 90.
Hindemith, Symphony Metamorphosis of Themes by Carl Maria Von Weber.

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX—It hardly seemed possible, but the opening night record attendance for the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in The Shed at Tanglewood, was exceeded last night by 500 for a new record.

The size and enthusiasm of the audience was a tribute to the musical curiosity of the public, since the main feature on the program was the first performance in the East of Lukas Foss' revised version of his Piano Concerto No. 2.

This work, first heard at Symphony Hall in Boston in November of 1951 and later recipient of the Horblitt Award, has been worked over extensively by Mr. Foss and was played in its new form at the Ojai festival in California last May. Its performance last evening coincides, within a few days, with the composer's 31st birthday.

The concerto, which drew sustained applause and even bravos from the appreciative audience, is a lively and entertaining work that should enjoy substantial popularity. There is an abundanc of melody, lively passages of musical recitative between piano and orchestra, with the lyric line of the strings and woodwinds contrasting with the sharp percussive chords of the solo instrument.

Mr. Foss' has set himself an exacting assignment at the piano, and he played with great fire and fervor. The work, as a whole, emerged as a truly enjoyable and refreshing blend of harmony and dissonance, the sweet and the salt setting off each other's qualities in clever proportion.

ROMANTIC OVERTURE

Mr. Munch opened the concert with a moving but never oversentimentalibed interpretation of Schumann's unashamedly romantic overture to Byron's "Manfred," a composition which is far easier to enjoy in performance than the lengthy and turgid epic of Byron's is to read.

Mendelssohn's familiar, but always lovely, "Italian" Symphony opened the second half of the performance which concluded with an admirable rendition of Hindemith's acid musical comments on the lesser works of Von Weber, the "Symphonic Metamorphosis."

This afternoon's all-Tchaikovosky program, which will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, will include the Serenade for String Orchestra, the Symphony No. 5 and the Concerto No. 1 in B Minor for piano and orchestra, with Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Boston Herald Aug 2 '53

Cir. (D 98,282)
This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
AUG 2 - 1953

MUSIC

usic Soothes Savage Beast nd Unnerved Humans, Too

BY GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

A Boston University professor recently had some interesting remarks on the magical powers of music. Plato de the classic remark that "Music soothes the savage ast" and Alan B. Sostek, a psychologist by vocation and musician by avocation, makes the same claim for music's ect on the human animal. Just as music can arouse or cify animals, so it can create various moods in men, according to this faculty member of Boston University's llege of Music.

"The idea of music calming people or pepping them up isn't new," s Professor Sostek. "David knew all about it when he brought Saul ase with his music. The story of the Pied Piper of Hamelin whose ing melody carried away both mice and children in the 'Never-ver Land' is another sample."

Relaxing music usually consists of the string or woodwind variety d is most soothing when it stays in the lower ranges. Music in the gher ranges, particularly if played by brasses, is exciting and peps up. The bright, high tones stimulate the nervous system by vibrating faster on the ear drum.

While the professor doesn't specifically mention tempo, the music hich he suggests for inducing various moods indicates that this is ost important. For instance, pieces which he recommends for relaxing (insomniacs take notice!) such as the Brahms "Cradle Song" nd Debussy's "Claire de Lune," are of the slow variety. Pieces such s Tico-Tico, Siboney, and the Dance of the Hours, from "La Giaconda," hich are suggested for making one gay and light-hearted, are played n a bright tempo. Marches, of course, are in the category of stimulating music.

"However, don't make the mistake of confusing a somber, depressing piece with a quiet, relaxing piece," says the psychologist-musician. "For instance, 'Ase's Tod,' a German song about Ase's death, nd some of the blues songs are very sad and they stimulate by depressing people and upsetting their equilibrium so they cannot sleep." On the other hand, the professor suggests a snappy march or the "One O'Clock Jump" if you want to get out of the right side of the bed in a urry. "Songs can put you to sleep or wake you up," he says.

Uses For Music Are Unlimited

The uses for music seem to be unlimited, according to Sostek. In restaurants, it serves to keep patrons from getting irritable when the ervice is slow and music also promotes appetite and aids digestion. In manufacturing plants, music increases production and helps to keep workers from getting bored with their work. Here, brighter music is used in the later hours of the day when workers reach a ower ebb.

Music is provided in many chain stores these days but grocery tore owners who have not yet installed music would do well to heed hese words of the professor. "If my wife sends me to get a quart f milk or a loaf of bread in a super-market which plays music, I generally bring home a lot more than I meant to bring. I find it pleasant o linger and look around at the wares. I'm apt to pick up anchovies nd crackers, fruits or some canned item I find appealing." On leasant afternoons, store owners would do well to keep "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" out of the repertoire for friend hubby might get deas and forget all about the dog food!

The Star Spangled Banner is an example of the way that "mood" music may be used to pacify men as well as arouse them. Reportedly, our national anthem has been played to quell riots in various places. Brawlers and rioters usually calm down at the strains of the Star Spangled Banner which appeals to their better instincts and generates a feeling of respect.

The professor relates how a German philosopher once used a spider n a musical experiment. The spider was weaving a web in a concert hall before the start of a symphonic performance. When the music egan, the spider reacted very definitely to the moods of the music. In soft passages where the strings and woodwinds were playing, the spider lowered itself and swung peacefully on its ladder. However, when the brasses spoke out and the tympani thundered, the spider seemed terrified and scurried up into the web in an effort to get as far away as possible.

Three Types Of Listeners

Professor Sostek gives three classifications of listeners to music. Which one of the latter do you fit into?

Active—Those who listen to the form and harmony of music with all their critical faculties—sort of sitting on the chair's edge, cocking their ears for flaws or perfection.

Passive—Those who "listen" to music but don't "hear" it. This is like the man who goes to a concert to please his wife. His ears are blocked; he squirms and studies the ceiling; the effect of the music on him is zero.

Esthetic—Those who listen to music for the pure pleasure of the feeling that hearing it gives them. They do not use any critical faculties; many of them could not criticize for while they enjoy music, they do not understand it—not being trained in it.

15,000 Hear Iturbi In Yale Bowl

As previously reported, the fourth Pop concert last Tuesday evening in the Bowl had the largest attendance in several years. Well over 15,000 listeners were present to hear the piano magic of Jose Iturbi, the guest artist of the occasion who made an auspicious debut in the Bowl. Attendance figures were exceeded, I believe, by only one other concert in the entire nine year Pop series. This was an all-Gershwin program in the 1946 series when almost 18,000 people crowded into the Bowl. Last Tuesday's attendance represented a capacity audience for numbers are now limited so that all may see and hear the proceedings. Many were turned away at this fourth program.

The fifth concert on August 11 should attract another large audience for, like its record breaking predecessor of the 1946 series, it is to be a Gershwin-Night. Harry Berman will be back to conduct the concert which is to feature three very capable guest artists. They are Adele Addison, seven time soloist with the Boston Symphony and leading soprano with the New England Opera Company; Lawrence Winters, celebrated baritone with an international reputation in opera and musical comedy; Leo Rewinski, head of the piano department at the Choate School in Wallingford. The latter will have a busy evening for he will be the soloist in two of the program's major offerings—the Concerto in F and the Rhapsody in Blue.

Cir. (D 272,693)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
TIMES-PICAYUNE-STATES
AUG 2 - 1953

TWO OF AMERICA'S FOREMOST music-makers, Alexander Hilsberg (left), conductor and director of the New Orleans' Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, discuss current trends in American music at the Berkshire music center, Tanglewood, Mass. Hilsberg journeyed to the music colony on Munch's invitation to hold auditions for positions with the New Orleans orchestra. Munch is director of the Berkshire school.

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
AUG 2 - 1953

'Tanglewood on Parade'

This date in music: 1923, First Festival, International Society for Contemporary Music opens in Salzburg with chamber music by Alban Berg, Bela Bartok and Arnold Schonberg.

By E. V. W.

AUGUST MUSIC PROGRAMS here and elsewhere are of wide interest. In Crouse College auditorium this week, several programs are scheduled by Syracuse University School of Music. The Lyric Circus will present Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "Blossom Time" all week, starting Tuesday night. The first week-end of concerts in The Shed, "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., closes this afternoon with an all-Tschaikowsky program by the Boston Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

THREE RARELY heard operas by Gluck, Debussy and Charbrier will be performed by Students of Department IV; Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., tomorrow night in the Theater-Concert Hall. These operas, all first performances in the Center, are produced by Boris Goldovsky.

"TANGLEWOOD ON Parade," the annual program arranged for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center, is announced for Thursday, Aug. 13 from 6 to 11 P.M. There will be simultaneous sessions of each department in the Center, a program of short symphonic works in The Shed; opera scenes in the Theater-Concert Hall and a chamber music program in the Chamber Music Hall. A picnic supper is arranged on the grounds with all invited to make use of the buffet and refreshments carts in addition to their own supper menu.

A concert on the porch of the Main House at 7 o'clock will be followed by a Gala Concert in The Shed at 8:15. The Boston Symphony will be conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein. Violinist Isaac Stern; Baritone William Warfield and Soprano Leontyne Price and the Festival Chorus will participate.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN will conduct the Boston Symphony in the Serge Koussevitzky Memorial concert at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

Cir. (D 126,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 2 - 1953

Monteux Conducts at Tanglewood Today: Munch and Bernstein Next Week-End

Pierre Monteaux conducts this afternoon's Berkshire Music Festival Concert at 2:30, the last of this week-end's series of three. He will devote the entire program to music of Tchaikovsky, playing the Serenade for Strings; the Fifth Symphony and the First Piano Concerto with Jorge Bolet as soloist.

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue next week-end at Tanglewood.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet." Jennie Tourel will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum will be the tenor. The Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1, on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote."

Friday at 8:30—(Charles Munch, conducting):
Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," Dramatic Symphony. Soloists: Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday at 8:30—(Leonard Bernstein, conducting):
Moussorgsky, Prelude to "Khovanstchina." Ravel, "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra (Soloist, Jennie Tourel); Mahler, Symphony No. 2 (Soloists, Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus).

Sunday at 2:30 p. m.—(Charles Munch, conducting):
Schubert, Symphony No. 5, in B-flat; Barber, Adagio for Strings; Strauss, "Don Quixote" (with Cello and Violin Solo); (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale); Milhaud, Concerto for Cello, No. 1, (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky); Roussel, Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane."

Tomorrow evening at 8:30 Boris Goldovsky and the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will present three one-act operas: "L'Yvrogne Corrige" by Gluck, Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee." There will be student concerts during the week.

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

At Tanglewood last evening Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second of the series of concerts in the Shed the soloist was Lukas Foss, and the complete program was as follows:
Schumann, Overture to Byron's "Manfred"
Foss, Piano Concerto No. 2
Mendelssohn, Symphony, No. 4 in A Major ("Italian") Op. 90.
Hindemith, Symphony Metamorphosis of Themes by Carl Maria Von Weber.

By ELINOR HUGHES

LENOX—It hardly seemed possible, but the opening night record attendance for the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in The Shed at Tanglewood, was exceeded last night by 500 for a new record.

The size and enthusiasm of the audience was a tribute to the musical curiosity of the public, since the main feature on the program was the first performance in the East of Lukas Foss' revised version of his Piano Concerto No. 2.

This work, first heard at Symphony Hall in Boston in November of 1951 and later recipient of the Horblitt Award, has been worked over extensively by Mr. Foss and was played in its new form at the Ojai festival in California last May. Its performance last evening coincides, within a few days, with the composer's 31st birthday.

The concerto, which drew sustained applause and even bravos from the appreciative audience, is a lively and entertaining work that should enjoy substantial popularity. There is an abundance of melody, lively passages of musical recitative between piano and orchestra, with the lyric line of the strings and woodwinds contrasting with the sharp percussive chords of the solo instrument.

Mr. Foss has set himself an exacting assignment at the piano, and he played with great fire and fervor. The work, as a whole, emerged as a truly enjoyable and refreshing blend of harmony and dissonance, the sweet and the salt setting off each other's qualities in clever proportion.

ROMANTIC OVERTURE

Mr. Munch opened the concert with a moving but never oversentimentalibed interpretation of Schumann's unashamedly romantic overture to Byron's "Manfred," a composition which is far easier to enjoy in performance than the lengthy and turgid epic of Byron's is to read.

Mendelssohn's familiar, but always lovely, "Italian" Symphony opened the second half of the performance which concluded with an admirable rendition of Hindemith's acid musical comments on the lesser works of Von Weber, the "Symphonic Metamorphosis."

This afternoon's all-Tchaikovosky program, which will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, will include the Serenade for String Orchestra, the Symphony No. 5 and the Concerto No. 1 in B Minor for piano and orchestra, with Jorge Bolet as soloist.

Boston Herald Aug 3 '53

[12]

This Clipping From MILWAUKEE, WIS.
SENTINEL
AUG 3 - 1953

GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Can We Duplicate Era That Produced Mozart?

THE OTHER NIGHT, during the intermission of a Mozart concert, up at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, I could not help remarking that Mozart had performed such wonders by the age of 16. A friend commented that genius comes in cycles and we are outside the cycle. It was one of those remarks that sticks in one's craw until something is done about it. Is it true that there is a cycle of genius and a cycle of the commonplace?

Let us start with Johann Sebastian Bach and we have "Gott Ist Mein Koenig" in 1707, when he was 22 years old. Fourteen years later, he produced the "Brandenburg Concertos," which, in a way, are the beginning of the modern orchestra. Bach died in 1750, nine years before Haydn produced his first symphony and 14 years before Mozart wrote his "Sonates Pour le Clavecin." Mozart died in 1791. He was alive when Beethoven began to write.

So, we have 120 years, from 1707, when Bach's first composition was written, to 1827, when Beethoven died. In music, this is the golden age of genius.

IT WAS an extraordinarily rich period in all fields, in innovation and discovery, in the beginning of modern science. Isaac Newton published his "Universal Arithmetic" the year that Handel wrote his "Rodrigo"; Leeuwenhoek produced his microscope a year later. Alexander Pope wrote his "Pastorals" the year that Gusmao made the first ascent in a balloon at Lisbon and the following year Sir Christopher Wren completed the magnificent St. Paul's in London.

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 4 - 1953

ving as I go through this ne can be of such a year his philosophy; Bach his his "Considerations on e Romans"; Voltaire, his of the stimulation of the , new countries, new dech revolutions stirred the

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 3 - 1953

Boston's Precision, Tone Stand Out in Weekend Program

By EVANS CLINCHY
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — When dapper, mustachioed Pierre Monteux sauntered out onto the podium Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, the massed crowd of almost 10,000 knew that it was in for an afternoon of brilliant music making.

Mr. Monteux raised his baton in a very calm and collected manner. The orchestra raised its bows and its trumpets, and the first beat of Tchaikowsky's Serenade for String Orchestra wafted its way out to the throngs hanging on every note and the microphones placed on the front of the stage.

The microphones were there because the first portion of the program, as is the case with all these Sunday afternoon Music Shed concerts, was being broadcast nationally over the CBS radio network.

When Mr. Monteux gave the beat in his firm but unexcited way, the orchestra, since it was the Boston Symphony, responded with its usual sure precision and gleaming tone.

After the Serenade came the redoubtable Fifth Symphony, and if the Serenade, which was done exquisitely, could be classed as slightly unusual programming, the Fifth was something of an inevitability on an noon.

SS LADY ece's con-ver heard that was nother in state of her praise l the perperformux led the l the incleanly. and uninand both made it d uncon-d without texture.

he Cuban Monteux nclude the ormance of erto. The eably with on as the first strains of the concerto got under way. It is, after all, rather thrice familiar piece of music, and Mr. Bolet played it with plenty of dash. Everyone seemed to love it.

Saturday evening's program was actually of more interest than Sunday's. Saturday was a very cool evening, far cooler than Friday night which was quite like a refrigerator. But the people still piled in, well over 10,000 of them, thus setting another record, as the front office delights in pointing out.

The music Saturday was also more adventurous than that on Sunday. It included Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphoses of Themese by Weber and the premiere of a revised version of Lukas Foss' Second Piano Concerto with the composer as soloist as well as Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Schumann's Overture to Manfred.

* * *

MR. FOSS'S CONCERTO is an acrid, melodically fragmented work in the accepted modern manner. It abounds in smashing drum beats and occasionally exciting harmonics, and the piano part is both difficult and sometimes interesting. Mr. Foss gave a brilliant account of himself at the keyboard, swooping from one end of his instrument to the other, crouching down and attacking the bass for all he was worth.

Even so, he couldn't make the piece overpowering, though a more than cursory hearing might reveal unsuspected depths.

Dr. Charles Munch was the conductor on this very cold night, and as usual he led the orchestra with sustained brilliance through the Schumann, the delightful Mendelssohn and the rousing Hindemith. None of the performances quite equaled the Ravel Bolero of Friday night, but they were all quite pleasing.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TELEGRAPH
AUG 3 - 1953

Tanglewood Sets Record

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, has shattered all attendance records midway through its 1953 series.

Six concerts have been given, during the period July 11—July 26, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, built in 1941 and in which public concerts have been performed since 1943, when Serge Koussevitzky conducted the first-chairmen of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in four Mozart concerts. The late Eliel Saarinen's theatre, which was completely re-roofed before the start of the current season, accommodates 1,152 persons, and this season's six concerts of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and 20th Century composers have averaged an attendance of 4,360 persons.

So popular have these "small" concerts proven, (preliminary to the major Shed series, which run through Sunday, August 16) that the Boston Symphony Orchestra management is faced with the problem of whether to move them next season entirely to the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Total attendance at the six "small" concerts this season has been 26,150, thus establishing an all-time record, surpassing the previous record of 23,500 set in 1950, when announcement of Dr. Koussevitzky's farewell appearances at Tanglewood brought in one wek-end the record attendance of 11,700 persons. The pair of Bach concerts on July 11-12 saw an attendance of 7,200, the largest opening week-end crowd on record. The brace of Mozart concerts were long sold out in advance, and have proven over the years the most attractive of the programs.

Box office receipts for the six preliminary concerts total $52,224, which is an increase of 35 per cent. compared to those of 1952.

Music Center's Opera Department Stages 3 Operas

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The Berkshire Music Center did itself no favors last night. Boris Goldovsky's opera department produced three operas which did not even faintly allude to the tradition which in previous years brought forth "Albert Heering," "Titus" and Benjamin Britten's saga of seafolk. The shade of Dr. Koussevitzky stirred uneasily in his ensconcement on the churchyard hill in Lenox.

At the outset Mr. Goldovsky did some explaining, as he usually does. Opera in English, he declared, was an accomplished fact. It had won so completely that, while Gluck's "The Drunkard Reformed" and Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education" were to be heard in the vernacular, the company could afford to yield up Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue in its original French.

He said furthermore, with no trace of apology, that while the Center had no ballet department there were just enough "violists and cellist and oboe players and —guides" who has once "taken dancing" to manage the terpsichorean implications of Debussy's Scene Lyrique on a "volunteer" basis. To dispose of that factor now, it can be adequately said that this willing and good-looking volunteer corps danced precisely like violists, cellists and oboe players sadly in need of a choreographic guide.

This was too bad because it was only the Debussy work that began to produce operatic illusions in the form of moving song by Anne English as Lia, Lee Cass and Robert Simpson as Simeon and Azael respectively, a rather pretty, if garishly lighted set, and had the convincing ministrations of a capable orchestra conducted by Samuel Krachmalnick.

The other opuses were supported only by piano accompaniment that was unidentified, but, my reports have it, was the work of Mr. Goldovsky who had nothing to blush for in that respect.

* * *

IT'S A PITY that unworthy scores by great composers can't be permitted to lie in their graves. There was no good reason for reviving Gluck's L'Ivrogne Corrige. The plot is that an actor wins the hand of his lady love and weans her father from his bottle by having his company play a scene in hell. That is all there is to it. This was played with all the awkwardness and self-delusion of class-night play at Hotchkiss Corners.

The Chabrier piffle was cut from like cloth which wasn't improved any by being skillfully done. A young nobleman has been educated in all branches of learning except in the recondite art of taking his bride to bed. Since this was chiefly in spoken dialogue it was understood by the audience and hilariously enjoyed. Mr. Goldovsky had warned in the beginning: "You may find it risque, but I doubt it."

The doubt was enormous.

* * *

MUSIC CENTER is known the country over. Earnest students of great talent—and there was exceptional vocal talent last night—go to Tanglewood for graduate work. The superficiality and ineptness manifested far into Monday evening tarnished not slightly the illustrious name of the place.—C.E.L.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 3 - 1953

'Porgy and Bess'

Scenes From Musical Comedy To Feature Tanglewood Show

TANGLEWOOD — The complete program was announced today for Tanglewood on Parade, the benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Aug. 13.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch in Beethoven's Concerto in D major, with Isaac Stern as soloist. The program will open with Handel's "Water Music."

Scenes 1 and 2 from the second act of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will occupy the second half of the program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, with William Warfield and his wife, Leontyne Price in the title roles. They will sing "It Ain't Necessarily So," "What You Want With Bess," "The Street Cries," and "I Love You, Porgy."

After the concert in the Music Shed, Anna Russell, concert comedienne, will award 40 door prizes.

After fanfare at 5.45, Boris Goldovsky, head of the school's opera department, will welcome the audience. From 6 to 7.15 the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center will give simultaneous demonstrations in the various Tanglewood buildings. The chorus will sing during the supper hour, when the audience is invited to picnic on the lawn. The evening will conclude with dancing on the lawn near the main house, accompanied by two pianos.

For holders of reserved and box seats a special opera performance will be presented at 4 in the formal gardens of the estate.

Tickets are on sale at the box office.

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 3 - 1953

French Conductor Wins Plaudits At Tanglewood

The shed concert series at Tanglewood in Lenox opened up last weekend with a stunning success. More than 31,000 people attended the three events, on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon.

The Sunday concert, featuring Pierre Monteux, eminent French conductor, leading the Boston Symphony orchestra, was devoted to the music of Tschaikowsky. It was regarded by critics as one of the most distinguished performances in the brilliant annals of Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,[illegible])
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 2 - 1953

MUSIC THIS WEEK

Guggenheim Concerts

Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor, Central and Prospect Parks.

Today, Central Park, 8:30. Grand March, Tannhauser, Wagner; Overture, Romeo and Juliet, Tchaikovsky; Kammenoi Ostrow, Reve Angelique, Rubinstein; Columbian Fantasie (James Burke, cornetist); Rogers; Russian Sailor's Dance, Gliere; Shepherd's Hey, Grainger; March, Illinois, Goldman; March, Manhattan Beach; March, El Capitan; Liberty Bell; Semper Fidelis; Waltz; the Flashing Eyes of Andalusia; March, Our Flirtations; March, The Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa.

Monday, Central Park, 8:30. Grand March, University, Goldman; Overture, Halka, Moniuszko; Procession of Knights, from Parsifal, Wagner; Second Swedish Rhapsody, Leidsen; Favorite Melodies; A Kiss in the Dark (James Burke, cornetist); Punchinello; Pan Americana; Excerpt from Babes in Toyland; Excerpt, The Gold Bug; Excerpts, The Fortune Teller, Herbert.

Wednesday, Central Park, 8:30. Huldigungsmarsch, Wagner; Overture, Youth Triumphant, Hadley; Introduction and Tarantella (James Burke, cornetist), Goldman. Novelette, MacDowell; March, Happy-Go-Lucky, Goldman; Overture, William Tell, Rossini.

Thursday, Prospect Park, 8:30. Overture, Catel; A Curtain Raiser and Country Dance, Goldman; Eight Russian Folksongs, Liadov; Czech Rhapsody, Weinberger; Concert Waltz (James Burke cornetist), Goldman; Symphony No. 1; Polonaise; Ecassaise; Contra Dance; Overture, Egmont, Beethoven.

Friday, Central Park, 8:30. Overture, Catel; A Curtain Raiser and Country Dance, Goldman; Eight Russian Folksongs, Liadov; Czech Rhapsody, Weinberger; Concert Waltz (James Burke, cornetist), Goldman; Symphony No. 1; Polonaise; Ecossaise; Contro Dance; Overture, Egmont, Beethoven.

Saturday, Prospect Park, 8:30. Marche Slave; Andante Cantabile Fifth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Kammenoi Ostrow, Reve Angelique, Rubinstein; Pictures at an Exhibition, Moussorgsky; Overture, Romeo and Juliet, Tchaikovsky; Elli, Elli (James Burke, cornetist), Shallitt; March for Band, Op. 99, Prokofiev; Finale, A Life for the Tsar, Glinka; Russian Sailor's Dance, Gliere.

Other Concerts

Pauline Phelps, mezzo-soprano; Joy McLean, soprano; George Hill, bass; Carl Fischer Hall, today 3.

Ernest Wallfisch, violinist; and Lory Wallfisch, pianist; Brooklyn Museum, today, 2.

Marilyn Mason, organist; St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, Tuesday, noon.

Thomas Richner, organist; St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, Thursday, noon.

Works by Bach, Couperin, Maldingreau, Messiaen, Vierne, Alain, Franck.

New York Public Library Concerts, Bryant Park. (Recorded Music).

Monday, noon. Recordings of Singing by Caruso.

Tuesday, noon. Prelude from "Lohengrin," Wagner; Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished"), Schubert; Contrasts for violin, clarinet and piano, Bartok; Mondnacht, Op. 39, No. 5; Die beiden Grenadier, Op. 49, No. 1, Schumann; Concerto in D for cello and orchestra, Haydn; Billy the Kid Ballet Suite, Copland.

Wednesday, noon. Overture, "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; Concerto No. 2 in D minor, Op. 23 for piano and orchestra, MacDowell; Queen's Aria from "The Magic Flute"; Der Hoelle Rache, Mozart; Symphony of Psalms, Stravinsky; Cantatas, Erhoere mich, wenn ich rufe; Der Pharisaeer under der Zoellner, Schuetz; Mathis der Maler, Hindemith.

Thursday, noon. Symphony No. 8 in F, Op. 93, Beethoven; Staendchen Das Fischermaedchen; Der Erlkoenig, Op. 1, Schubert; Concerto grosso for string orchestra and piano, Bloch; Concerto No. 1 in D minor, Op. 15, for piano and orchestra, Brahms.

Friday, noon. Overture, "Cosi fan tutte," Mozart; Symphony No. 2 in D minor, Op. 70, Dvorak; La fanciulla del West: Ch 'ella mi creda libero, Puccini; Four impromptus, Op. 142, Schubert; Symphony for strings, Schuman; 1812 Overture, Op. 49, Tchaikovsky.

Opera

Punch Opera, Cherry Lane Theater, 38 Commerce St., Antheil's "Volpone," Wednesday through Sunday, 8:30.

Lemonade Opera, 141 W. 13th St., Mozart's "Don Pedro," today, 8:30.

Salmaggi Opera, Triborough Stadium, Randall's Island, Verdi's "Aida," Saturday, 8:45.

Amato Opera Theater, 159 Bleecker St., Puccini's "La Boheme," Friday and Saturday, 8:30. (Reservations by advance application GR 7-2844).

Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Tchaikovsky program (Pierre Monteux conducting); soloist, Jorge Bolet, pianist; James Fassett, commentator). Seranade for Strings; Symphony No. 5 in E minor; Piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor.

Friday, 8:30 (Soloists, Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.) "Romeo and Juliet" (dramatic symphony), Berlioz.

Saturday, 8:30. (Leonard Bernstein conducting); soloists, Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Prelude to "Khovanstchina," Moussorgsky; "Sheherasade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Ravel; Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Mahler.

Sunday, Aug. 9, 2:30. (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Joseph De Pasquale, violist; James Fassett, commentator.) Symphony No. 5 in B flat, Schubert; Adagio for Strings, Barber; "Don Quixote" with cello and viola solo, Strauss; Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Milhaud; "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2, Roussel.

Berkshire Music Center, Opera Dept., Monday 8:30.

"L'Yvrogne Corrige," (The Reformed Drunkard), Gluck; "L'Enfant Prodigue," (The Prodigal Son"), Debussy; "Une Education Manquee," (An Incomplete Education) Chabrier.

[13]

This Clipping From MILWAUKEE, WIS.
SENTINEL
AUG 3 - 1953

GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Can We Duplicate Era That Produced Mozart?

THE OTHER NIGHT, during the intermission of a Mozart concert, up at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, I could not help remarking that Mozart had performed such wonders by the age of 16. A friend commented that genius comes in cycles and we are outside the cycle. It was one of those remarks that sticks in one's craw until something is done about it. Is it true that there is a cycle of genius and a cycle of the commonplace?

Let us start with Johann Sebastian Bach and we have "Gott Ist Mein Koenig" in 1707, when he was 22 years old. Fourteen years later, he produced the "Brandenburg Concertos," which, in a way, are the beginning of the modern orchestra. Bach died in 1750, nine years before Haydn produced his first symphony and 14 years before Mozart wrote his "Sonates Pour le Clavecin." Mozart died in 1791. He was alive when Beethoven began to write.

So, we have 120 years, from 1707, when Bach's first composition was written, to 1827, when Beethoven died. In music, this is the golden age of genius.

IT WAS an extraordinarily rich period in all fields, in innovation and discovery, in the beginning of modern science. Isaac Newton published his "Universal Arithmetic" the year that Handel wrote his "Rodrigo"; Leeuwenhoek produced his microscope a year later. Alexander Pope wrote his "Pastorals" the year that Gusmao made the first ascent in a balloon at Lisbon and the following year Sir Christopher Wren completed the magnificent St. Paul's in London.

What a wonderful time I am having as I go through this period of 120 years! How envious one can be of such a year as 1734 when Swedenborg published his philosophy; Bach his "Christmas Oratorio"; Montesquieu his "Considerations on the Grandeur and Decadence of the Romans"; Voltaire, his "Lettres Philosophiques."

This is the period of revolution, of the stimulation of the imagination of youth by new ideas, new countries, new developments. The American and French revolutions stirred the world and Napoleon moved across continents.

CAN WE DRAW any conclusions from all this? Does it help us to understand why this period of 120 years is an age of genius? Does it aid us to understand our own times when on the cultural side of life so little is produced in any country?

Perhaps the explanation is that our great minds have turned to science, to chemistry and physics and engineering. Have we become so bogged down in facts and in the business of earning a living that the beauty of life escapes us? Are we so full of statistics that there is no room for poetry?

And yet, as one moves among the pines of lovely Tanglewood, watching young people in their interminable arguments about music and life, it is impossible not to be sensitive to a great stirring, like the cold wind that precedes an electric storm. Here is a sampling of the cultured youth of America, from every state, who give their summers to composition and performance and to endless talk. It may be the dawn of another era of genius.

Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 3 - 1953

Boston's Precision, Tone Stand Out in Weekend Program

By EVANS CLINCHY
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — When dapper, mustachioed Pierre Monteux sauntered out onto the podium Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, the massed crowd of almost 10,000 knew that it was in for an afternoon of brilliant music making.

Mr. Monteux raised his baton in a very calm and collected manner. The orchestra raised its bows and its trumpets, and the first beat of Tchaikowsky's Serenade for String Orchestra wafted its way out to the throngs hanging on every note and the microphones placed on the front of the stage.

The microphones were there because the first portion of the program, as is the case with all these Sunday afternoon Music Shed concerts, was being broadcast nationally over the CBS radio network.

When Mr. Monteux gave the beat in his firm but unexcited way, the orchestra, since it was the Boston Symphony, responded with its usual sure precision and gleaming tone.

After the Serenade came the redoubtable Fifth Symphony, and if the Serenade, which was done exquisitely, could be classed as slightly unusual programming, the Fifth was something of an inevitability on an all-Tchaikowsky afternoon.

* * *

A RATHER RESTLESS LADY near me said at the piece's conclusion that she had never heard any piece of music that was quite so boring. Another in front sighed in a state of ecstasy, wordless in her praise of both the music and the performance.

And it was a fine a performance, too. Mr. Monteux led the orchestra through all the intricacies of the piece cleanly.

It is a rather wild and uninhibited piece anyway, and both he and the orchestra made it just as exciting and uncontrolled as they could without damaging the work's texture.

* * *

JORGE BOLET, the Cuban pianist, helped Mr. Monteux and the orchestra conclude the program with a performance of the First Piano Concerto. The audience sighed noticeably with delight and recognition as the first strains of the concerto got under way. It is, after all, rather thrice familiar piece of music, and Mr. Bolet played it with plenty of dash. Everyone seemed to love it.

Saturday evening's program was actually of more interest than Sunday's. Saturday was a very cool evening, far cooler than Friday night which was quite like a refrigerator. But the people still piled in, well over 10,000 of them, thus setting another record, as the front office delights in pointing out.

The music Saturday was also more adventurous than that on Sunday. It included Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphoses of Themese by Weber and the premiere of a revised version of Lukas Foss' Second Piano Concerto with the composer as soloist as well as Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Schumann's Overture to Manfred.

* * *

MR. FOSS'S CONCERTO is an acrid, melodically fragmented work in the accepted modern manner. It abounds in smashing drum beats and occasionally exciting harmonics, and the piano part is both difficult and sometimes interesting. Mr. Foss gave a brilliant account of himself at the keyboard, swooping from one end of his instrument to the other, crouching down and attacking the bass for all he was worth.

Even so, he couldn't make the piece overpowering, though a more than cursory hearing might reveal unsuspected depths.

Dr. Charles Munch was the conductor on this very cold night, and as usual he led the orchestra with sustained brilliance through the Schumann, the delightful Mendelssohn and the rousing Hindemith. None of the performances quite equaled the Ravel Bolero of Friday night, but they were all quite pleasing.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TELEGRAPH
AUG 3 - 1953

Tanglewood Sets Record

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—The 16th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, has shattered all attendance records midway through its 1953 series.

Six concerts have been given, during the period July 11—July 26, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, built in 1941 and in which public concerts have been performed since 1943, when Serge Koussevitzky conducted the first-chair men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in four Mozart concerts. The late Eliel Saarinen's theatre, which was completely re-roofed before the start of the current season, accommodates 1,152 persons, and this season's six concerts of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and 20th Century composers have averaged an attendance of 4,360 persons.

So popular have these "small" concerts proven, (preliminary to the major Shed series, which run through Sunday, August 16) that the Boston Symphony Orchestra management is faced with the problem of whether to move them next season entirely to the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Total attendance at the six "small" concerts this season has been 26,150, thus establishing an all-time record, surpassing the previous record of 23,500 set in 1950, when announcement of Dr. Koussevitzky's farewell appearances at Tanglewood brought in one wek-end the record attendance of 11,700 persons. The pair of Bach concerts on July 11-12 saw an attendance of 7,200, the largest opening week-end crowd on record. The brace of Mozart concerts were long sold out in advance, and have proven over the years the most attractive of the programs.

Box office receipts for the six preliminary concerts total $52,224, which is an increase of 35 per cent. compared to those of 1952.

Scenes From Musical Comedy To Feature Tanglewood Show

TANGLEWOOD — The complete program was announced today for Tanglewood on Parade, the benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Aug. 13.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Charles Munch in Beethoven's Concerto in D major, with Isaac Stern as soloist. The program will open with Handel's "Water Music."

Scenes 1 and 2 from the second act of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will occupy the second half of the program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, with William Warfield and his wife, Leontyne Price in the title roles. They will sing "It Ain't Necessarily So," "What You Want With Bess," "The Street Cries," and "I Love You, Porgy."

After the concert in the Music Shed, Anna Russell, concert comedienne, will award 40 door prizes.

After fanfare at 5.45, Boris Goldovsky, head of the school's opera department, will welcome the audience. From 6 to 7.15 the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center will give simultaneous demonstrations in the various Tanglewood buildings. The chorus will sing during the supper hour, when the audience is invited to picnic on the lawn. The evening will conclude with dancing on the lawn near the main house, accompanied by two pianos.

For holders of reserved and box seats a special opera performance will be presented at 4 in the formal gardens of the estate.

Tickets are on sale at the box office.

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 3 - 1953

French Conductor Wins Plaudits At Tanglewood

The shed concert series at Tanglewood in Lenox opened up last weekend with a stunning success. More than 31,000 people attended the three events, on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoon.

The Sunday concert, featuring Pierre Monteux, eminent French conductor, leading the Boston Symphony orchestra, was devoted to the music of Tschaikowsky. It was regarded by critics as one of the most distinguished performances in the brilliant annals of Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,[illegible])
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 2 - 1953

MUSIC THIS WEEK

Guggenheim Concerts

Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor, Central and Prospect Parks.

Today, Central Park, 8:30. Grand March, Tannhauser, Wagner; Overture, Romeo and Juliet, Tchaikovsky; Kammenoi Ostrow, Reve Angelique, Rubinstein; Columbian Fantasie (James Burke, cornetist); Rogers; Ruselan Sailor's Dance, Gliere; Shepherd's Hey, Grainger; March, Illinois, Goldman; March, Manhattan Beach; March, El Capitan; Liberty Bell; Semper Fidelis; Waltz, the Flashing Eyes of Andalusia; March, Our Flirtations: March, The Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa.

Monday, Central Park, 8:30. Grand March, University, Goldman; Overture, Halka, Moniuszko; Procession of Knights, from Parsifal, Wagner; Second Swedish Rhapsody, Leidzen; Favorite Melodies; A Kiss in the Dark (James Burke, cornetist); Punchinello; Pan Americana; Excerpt from Babes in Toyland; Excerpt, The Gold Bug; Excerpts, The Fortune Teller, Herbert.

Wednesday, Central Park, 8:30. Huldigungsmarsch, Wagner; Overture, Youth Triumphant, Hadley; Introduction and Tarantella, (James Burke, cornetist), Goldman. Novelette, MacDowell; March, Happy-Go-Lucky, Goldman; Overture, William Tell, Rossini.

Thursday, Prospect Park, 8:30. Overture, Catel; A Curtain Raiser and Country Dance, Goldman; Eight Russian Folksongs, Liadov; Czech Rhapsody, Weinberger; Concert Waltz (James Burke cornetist), Goldman; Symphony No. 1; Polonaise; Ecassaise; Contra Dance; Overture, Egmont, Beethoven.

Friday, Central Park, 8:30. Overture, Catel; A Curtain Raiser and Country Dance, Goldman; Eight Russian Folksongs, Liadov; Czech Rhapsody, Weinberger; Concert Waltz (James Burke, cornetist), Goldman; Symphony No. 1; Polonaise; Ecossaise; Contro Dance; Overture, Egmont, Beethoven.

Saturday, Prospect Park, 8:30. Marche Slave; Andante Cantabile Fifth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Kammenoi Ostrow, Reve Angelique, Rubinstein; Pictures at an Exhibition, Moussorgsky; Overture, Romeo and Juliet, Tchaikovsky; Eili, Eili (James Burke, cornetist), Shallitt; March for Band, Op. 99, Prokofiev; Finale, A Life for the Tsar, Glinka; Russian Sailor's Dance, Gliere.

Other Concerts

Pauline Phelps, mezzo-soprano; Joy McLean, soprano; George Hill, bass; Carl Fischer Hall, today 3.

Ernest Wallfisch, violinist; and Lory Wallfisch, pianist; Brooklyn Museum, today, 2.

Marilyn Mason, organist; St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, Tuesday, noon.

Thomas Richner, organist; St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, Thursday, noon.

Works by Bach, Couperin, Maleingreau, Messiaen, Vierne, Alain, Franck.

New York Public Library Concerts, Bryant Park. (Recorded Music).

Monday, noon. Recordings of Singing by Caruso.

Tuesday, noon. Prelude from "Lohengrin," Wagner; Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished"), Schubert; Contrasts for violin, clarinet and piano, Bartok; Mondnacht, Op. 39, No. 5; Die beiden Grenadier, Op. 49, No. 1, Schumann; Concerto in D for cello and orchestra, Haydn; Billy the Kid Ballet Suite, Copland.

Wednesday, noon. Overture, "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; Concerto No. 2 in D minor, Op. 23 for piano and orchestra, MacDowell; Queen's Aria from "The Magic Flute"; Der Hoelle Rache, Mozart; Symphony of Psalms, Stravinsky; Cantatas, Erhoere mich, wenn ich rufe; Der Pharisaeer und der Zoellner, Schuetz; Mathis der Maler, Hindemith.

Thursday, noon. Symphony No. 8 in F, Op. 93, Beethoven; Staendchen Das Fischermaedchen; Der Erlkoenig, Op. 1, Schubert; Concerto grosso for string orchestra and piano, Bloch; Concerto No. 1 in D minor, Op. 15, for piano and orchestra, Brahms.

Friday, noon. Overture, "Cosi fan tutte," Mozart; Symphony No. 2 in D minor, Op. 70, Dvorak; La fanciulla del West: Ch 'ella mi creda libero, Puccini; Four impromptus, Op. 142, Schubert; Symphony for strings, Schuman; 1812 Overture, Op. 49, Tchaikovsky.

Opera

Punch Opera, Cherry Lane Theater, 38 Commerce St., Antheil's "Volpone," Wednesday through Sunday, 8:30.

Lemonade Opera, 141 W. 13th St., Mozart's "Don Pedro," today, 8:30.

Salmaggi Opera, Triborough Stadium, Randall's Island, Verdi's "Aida," Saturday, 8:45.

Amato Opera Theater, 159 Bleecker St., Puccini's "La Boheme," Friday and Saturday, 8:30. (Reservations by advance application GR 7-2844).

Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Tchaikovsky program (Pierre Monteux conducting); soloist, Jorge Bolet, pianist; James Fassett, commentator). Serenade for Strings; Symphony No. 5 in E minor; Piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor.

Friday, 8:30 (Soloists, Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.) "Romeo and Juliet" (dramatic symphony), Berlioz.

Saturday, 8:30. (Leonard Bernstein conducting); soloists, Jennie Tourel and Theresa Green and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Prelude to "Khovanstchina," Moussorgsky; "Sheherazade" for Soprano and Orchestra, Ravel; Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Mahler.

Sunday, Aug. 9, 2:30. (Soloists, Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Joseph De Pasquale, violist; James Fassett, commentator.) Symphony No. 8 in B flat, Schubert; Adagio for Strings, Barber; "Don Quixote" with cello and viola solo, Strauss; Concerto for Cello, No. 1, Milhaud; "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2, Roussel.

Berkshire Music Center, Opera Dept., Monday 8:30.

"L'Ivrogne Corrige," (The Reformed Drunkard), Gluck; "L'Enfant Prodigue," (The Prodigal Son"), Debussy; "Une Education Manquee," (An Incomplete Education), Chabrier.

Circ. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Notes and Footnotes

INTERVIEWING Mrs. Florence Warner is somewhat like laying hold of an amiable tornado. She has been busy the past few weeks launching Philco's de luxe radio-phonograph the Phonorama for which she engaged the Curtis Hotel music room, bought a box at Tanglewood, and presently will introduce one of the instruments into the Glass Room at Tanglewood, stronghold of RCA, by donating a Phonorama as a prize for Tanglewood on Parade.

But we're getting ahead of our story. Mrs. Warner, a striking blonde, was born in Troy, N.Y., grew up in the Midwest, worked as newspaper reporter, radio script writer, writes publicity for "Philco TV Playhouse" (seen here Sundays on WRGB at 10 PM), and bears the title of director of publicity and public relations for the Hutchins Advertising Company of New York. Hutchins carries the Philco account, and appears to be a wonderfully happy, free-wheeling concern, real gone and able to take a national promotion like Phonorama in its stride.

—o—

MRS. WARNER'S gusty good humor carries all before it. She started Phonorama by engaging a suite in New York at the Savoy Plaza, throwing a luxurious tea to which musical figures were invited, and presto, she had endorsements from Milton Cross, James Melton, Risë Stevens, George Szell and Paul Whiteman. Tanglewood and its musical prestige was selected for Phonorama's first open public showing.

—o—

MRS. W. is one to strike when the iron is hot. When the Korean peace was about to be signed, she routed out Sammy Vincent (Philco dealer) that Sunday so she could select some appropriate records from his store. She came up with "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and "The Lord's Prayer," to play on Phonorama.

In the organization she is affectionately called "Grandma," which is true, though she doesn't look it. She has two small grandchildren, and a son age 18 ready for college. They are, of course, her dearest possessions, followed closely by the Carnegie Medal awarded to her for diving into stormy, shark infested waters off the Florida keys to rescue a drowning man, swept off a fishing boat in 1950. She is one of the few women ever to receive this award.

—o—

AS WE OBSERVED, the Hutchins Company is a real gone outfit, and surely a joy to work for. Soon after she opened her Lenox project there came a large manila envelope, special delivery, from headquarters. Inside was a facsimile front page of a newspaper, The Daily Tribune, on which had been dubbed in tremendous headlines: "Warner Does It Again as Nation Flocks to Lenox!" Next day came another, "Militia Called To Quell Phonorama Enthusiasts!" and another "Phonorama Unfair to Live Musicians!" and finally, "Boston Symphony Quits: Phonorama Takes Over." It was their way of showing they were rooting for her all out.

She was so carried away she went and bought a beautiful Siamese cat and named him 'Rama. He's friendly but not very musical.

Circ. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Kiwanis To See Film

Harold Brunton will show the film "Lightning Mass" at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club at 12.15 tomorrow noon at the Sheraton Hotel.

The speaker last week was George E. Judd, who gave a word picture of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and of Tanglewood operations.

Circ. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 4 - 1953

400 Students Enrolled At Music Center

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox. This country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its music director, and is now in its 11th six-week session, through the end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 16.

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, opera, under a distinguished faculty of 36, which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston orchestra. The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Study Group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, 38 of whom are spending the full six weeks, 12 for four weeks, and 55 for two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first transcontinental tour last spring, enrollment from California increased to 10 students; from Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal, where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Caveth is Tossi Ichiyanagi, of Tokyo.

Cir. (D 175,149) (S 182,397)
This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
AUG 4 1953

French Honors Given

NEW YORK (UP).—S. Hurok, the well-known impressario, and George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony, have been made chevaliers of the Legion of Honor by the French Government.

Cir. (D 64,021) (S 69,057)
This Clipping From CANTON, OHIO
REPOSITORY
AUG 4 - 1953

MUSICAL TRUCK FLEET

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood from Cincinnati.

Cir. (D 40,097) (S 112,417)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 4 - 1953

Tanglewood Opening Sets All-Time Record

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

The first of a series of three week-end concerts in the large music shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch established an all-time record for attendance at Tanglewood with an audience of 10,000 for Sunday afternoon's all-Tchaikowsky program, with the eminent French guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, directing the 104-piece orchestra.

The paid aattendance for the Series A concerts of 1953 which was presented Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon was the largest in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival since it was established in 1934, a grand total of 31,000.

Friday and Saturday night's programs included works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Schumann, Foss and Hindemith. Zino Francescatti, was the guest soloist Friday night with the orchestra, with a magnificent performance of the Mendelssohn violin concerto. Saturday night's soloist was the young pianist-composer, Lukas Foss in an exciting and provocative rendition of his own piano Concerto, No. 2.

BOLET IS SOLOIST

Sunday afternoon's concert, directed by Pierre Monteux included Serenade for Strings, Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto [illegible]

let. Mr. Bolet was recalled to the front of the stage for six bows at the conclusion of the concerto, the usual staid New England audience so far forgetting its stoney decorum as to indulge in vociferous cheering, puncutated by whistles of approval from the younger members of the audience.

Cir. (D 25,858)
This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 3 - 1953

Tanglewood On Parade Benefit Event Aug. 13

Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday, Aug. 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which includes afternoon festivities by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, a lawn supper and an evening concert by the orchestra, will last from 6 to 11, followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert. Mr. Stern made a highly successful film debut in "Tonight We Sing."

The second half of the concert program, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes, will offer as soloists baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price. The occasion will be the first public appearance of the couple since their enormous personal success last season in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris in the title roles of the Blevins Davis revival of the George Gershwin opera, which Robert Breen staged. Miss Price, who was a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is currently singing Bess on Broadway, at the Ziegfeld Theatre, and will appear on "Tanglewood on Parade" thru the courtesy of the producers. Mr. Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloists, with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem.

"Tanglewood on Parade" is held in aid of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its eleventh season and box seats, at $5.00, and front section of the great Music Shed, all of which are reserved at $4.00, Tanglewood box office. General admission tickets, on sale now at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear section. All ticket-holders will be invited to attend demonstrations by the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music, opera department and Tanglewood Study Group.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Top Editors Of Europe Coming Here

Week-end Guests To Visit Tanglewood And Jacob's Pillow

Fourteen editors of prominent newspapers in European countries belonging to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will spend the coming week end in the Berkshires. They will be escorted by two representatives of the U.S. Department of State and one of the Defense Department, and will be guests in Pittsfield homes.

Their visit, sponsored also by the Mutual Security Agency, will follow two weeks of viewing recent industrial, military, agricultural and general developments. They will arrive Saturday [illegible]

Cir. (D 9,928)
This Clipping From
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
AUG 4 - 1953

Informal Benefit At Tanglewood to Be Held Thursday

LENOX, Mass. — A benefit for the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, entitled "Tanglewood on Parade", will be given by students of the school on Thursday from six to 11 p.m.

Simultaneous sessions of each department of the school will be held at six o'clock, with the orchestra performing short symphonic works in the Shed, opera students giving opera scenes in the theatre-concert hall, and the chamber music department holding a recital in the chamber music hall. At seven, picnickers on the lawn will have as background a concert by the chorus on the porch of the main house. A gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be performed in the Shed at 9:15 p.m., followed by waltzing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will be soloist in Beethoven's violin concerto with the orchestra, and William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing Scenes One and Two from Act II of "Porgy and Bess" by George Gershwin. The Festival chorus will asist.

A special performance of opera in the formal gardens will be given at four o'clock for holders of boxes and reserved seats.

Boris Goldovsky, director of the opera school, will give an address of welcome at 5:45 o'clock.

Cir. (D 261,218)
This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS
AUG 4 - 1953

Berkshire Festival Shattering Records For Its Attendance

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS Music Critic

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4. — Still four years away from its 20th birthday, the Berkshire Music Festival, at the midway point of its 1953 series, has surpassed all previous attendance records. This is no surprise to the increasing number of music-loving persons who put the festival in the beautiful Western Massachusetts hills at the top of their list of preferred summer activities.

The opening concert, Friday evening, of the "big" festival series drew 10,300 persons—6000 filling the famous Music Shed to capacity, the remainder scattered on the broad surrounding lawns.

This allowed those officials of the festival who had changed the opening concert night of each of the three "big" week-end series from Thursday to Friday the cosy pleasure of saying "I told you so."

It long has been felt that such a change should be made, because many music-lovers come up from New York City or Connecticut or down from Boston or Bangor who can more easily start their musical week-ends Friday than Thursday.

* * *

EVEN THE ATTENDANCE at the "little" series of six chamber concerts, between July 11 and 26, has established a new record for these concerts, begun in 1943, and held in the Theater-Concert Hall, which, like the shed, was designed by the late Eliel Saarinen—who designed our own Kleinhans Music Hall.

This season the attendance at these six concerts reached 26,150, well ahead of the 1950 record of 23,500.

As a result, officials already are discussing the feasibility of moving these concerts to the Music Shed, since the theater seats only 1152 persons, and bad weather necessarily becomes an unhappy hazard for those who hear the concerts from outside the building.

* * *

THE OPENING FESTIVAL CONCERT Friday evening was conducted brilliantly by Charles Munch, regular director of the Bostonians. From the first lovely measures of the Third "Leonore" Overture of Beethoven to the final climax of Ravel's "Bolero," the program gave wonderful opportunities to the conductor to display his exceptional orchestral talents and also to indulge in the personal involvement which is so strongly a part of his musical temperament.

It was an inspiration to include Copland's "Appalachian Spring" on the program. The score is ideal for outdoor music-making, because it speaks eloquently of a particular part of our countryside.

The elegance of Zino Francescatti's playing of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto and the shining clarity of his silken tone were set off by the accompaniment much as a beautiful gem is enhanced by its setting.

* * *

THE HIGHLIGHT of Saturday evening's program, also directed by Mr. Munch, was Lukas Foss' revised Second Piano Concerto, for which the composer was the soloist. Also on the program were Schumann's Overture to "Manfred," the ineffable "Italian" Symphony of Mendelssohn and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday afternoon quiet, imperturbable, little Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, presided over an all-Tchaikovsky program—the Serenade for Strings, the Fifth Symphony, and, with Jorge Bolet at the piano, the B Flat Piano Concerto.

It was a concert of quality rather than impact, of serenity rather than individuality, but patrician and gently moving for "a' that," nevertheless.

* * *

MONDAY EVENING the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center under Boris Goldovsky presented three rarely-heard one-act operas—Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education).

The second concert series of the festival opens Friday evening with another rarely-heard work, the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," by Berlioz, with Mr. Munch conducting. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday evening and Mr. Munch next Sunday afternoon.

Next Monday evening the three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion," not presented within living memory, will be performed by the Opera Department under Mr. Goldovsky. With the symphony concerts of Aug. 14, 15 and 16, the 1953 Berkshire Music Festival will close.

It was extremely pleasant for this writer to meet and talk with a goodly number of persons from Buffalo and vicinity, and to learn that each year more Western New Yorkers are among the festival audiences.

Cir. (D 24,824)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Notes and Footnotes

INTERVIEWING Mrs. Florence Warner is somewhat like laying hold of an amiable tornado. She has been busy the past few weeks launching Philco's de luxe radio-phonograph the Phonorama for which she engaged the Curtis Hotel music room, bought a box at Tanglewood, and presently will introduce one of the instruments into the Glass Room at Tanglewood, stronghold of RCA, by donating a Phonorama as a prize for Tanglewood on Parade.

But we're getting ahead of our story. Mrs. Warner, a striking blonde, was born in Troy, N.Y., grew up in the Midwest, worked as newspaper reporter, radio script writer, writes publicity for "Philco TV Playhouse" (seen here Sundays on WRGB at 10 PM), and bears the title of director of publicity and public relations for the Hutchins Advertising Company of New York. Hutchins carries the Philco account, and appears to be a wonderfully happy, free-wheeling concern, real gone and able to take a national promotion like Phonorama in its stride.

—o—

MRS. WARNER'S gusty good humor carries all before it. She started Phonorama by engaging a suite in New York at the Savoy Plaza, throwing a luxurious tea to which musical figures were invited, and presto, she had endorsements from Milton Cross, James Melton, Risë Stevens, George Szell and Paul Whiteman. Tanglewood and its musical prestige was selected for Phonorama's first open public showing.

—o—

MRS. W. is one to strike when the iron is hot. When the Korean peace was about to be signed, she routed out Sammy Vincent (Philco dealer) that Sunday so she could select some appropriate records from his store. She came up with "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and "The Lord's Prayer," to play on Phonorama.

In the organization she is affectionately called "Grandma," which is true, though she doesn't look it. She has two small grandchildren, and a son age 18 ready for college. They are, of course, her dearest possessions, followed closely by the Carnegie Medal awarded to her for diving into stormy, shark infested waters off the Florida keys to rescue a drowning man, swept off a fishing boat in 1950. She is one of the few women ever to receive this award.

—o—

AS WE OBSERVED, the Hutchins Company is a real gone outfit, and surely a joy to work for. Soon after she opened her Lenox project there came a large manila envelope, special delivery, from headquarters. Inside was a facsimile front page of a newspaper, The Daily Tribune, on which had been dubbed in tremendous headlines: "Warner Does It Again as Nation Flocks to Lenox!" Next day came another, "Militia Called To Quell Phonorama Enthusiasts!" and another "Phonorama Unfair to Live Musicians!" and finally, "Boston Symphony Quits: Phonorama Takes Over." It was their way of showing they were rooting for her all out.

She was so carried away she went and bought a beautiful Siamese cat and named him 'Rama. He's friendly but not very musical.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Kiwanis To See Film

Harold Brunton will show the film "Lightning Mass" at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club at 12.15 tomorrow noon at the Sheraton Hotel.

The speaker last week was George E. Judd, who gave a word picture of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and of Tanglewood operations.

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 4 - 1953

400 Students Enrolled At Music Center

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox. This country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its music director, and is now in its 11th six-week session, through the end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 16.

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, opera, under a distinguished faculty of 36, which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston orchestra. The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Study Group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, 38 of whom are spending the full six weeks, 12 for four weeks, and 55 for two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first transcontinental tour last spring, enrollment from California increased to 10 students; from Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal, where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Caveth is Tossi Ichiyanagi, of Tokyo.

Cir. (D 175,149) (S 182,397)
This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
AUG 4 1953

French Honors Given

NEW YORK (UP).—S. Hurok, the well-known impressario, and George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony, have been made chevaliers of the Legion of Honor by the French Government.

Cir. (D 64,021) (S 69,057)
This Clipping From CANTON, OHIO
REPOSITORY
AUG 4 - 1953

MUSICAL TRUCK FLEET

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood from Cincinnati.

Cir. (D 40,097) (S 112,417)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 4 - 1953

Tanglewood Opening Sets All-Time Record

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

The first of a series of three week-end concerts in the large music shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch established an all-time record for attendance at Tanglewood with an audience of 10,000 for Sunday afternoon's all-Tchaikowsky program, with the eminent French guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, directing the 104-piece orchestra.

The paid aattendance for the Series A concerts of 1953 which was presented Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon was the largest in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival since it was established in 1934, a grand total of 31,000.

Friday and Saturday night's programs included works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Schumann, Foss and Hindemith. Zino Francescatti, was the guest soloist Friday night with the orchestra, with a magnificent performance of the Mendelssohn violin concerto. Saturday night's soloist was the young pianist-composer, Lukas Foss in an exciting and provocative rendition of his own piano Concerto, No. 2.

BOLET IS SOLOIST

Sunday afternoon's concert, directed by Pierre Monteux included Serenade for Strings, Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 by Tchaikowsky, magnificently played by the French pianist, Jorge Bolet. Mr. Bolet was recalled to the front of the stage for six bows at the conclusion of the concerto, the usual staid New England audience so far forgetting its customary decorum as to indulge in vociferous cheering, puncutated by whistles of approval from the younger members of the audience.

...chestra Event Aug. 13

Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday, Aug. 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which includes afternoon festivities by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, a lawn supper and an evening concert by the orchestra, will last from 6 to 11, followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert. Mr. Stern made a highly successful film debut in "Tonight We Sing."

The second half of the concert program, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes, will offer as soloists baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price. The occasion will be the first public appearance of the couple since their enormous personal success last season in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris in the title roles of the Blevins Davis revival of the George Gershwin opera, which Robert Breen staged. Miss Price, who was a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is currently singing Bess on Broadway, at the Ziegfeld Theatre, and will appear on "Tanglewood on Parade" thru the courtesy of the producers. Mr. Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloists, with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem.

"Tanglewood on Parade" is held in aid of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its eleventh season and box seats, at $5.00, and front section of the great Music Shed, all of which are reserved at $4.00, Tanglewood box office. General admission tickets, on sale now at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear section. All ticket-holders will be invited to attend demonstrations by the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music, opera department and Tanglewood Study Group.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Top Editors Of Europe Coming Here

Week-end Guests To Visit Tanglewood And Jacob's Pillow

Fourteen editors of prominent newspapers in European countries belonging to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will spend the coming week end in the Berkshires. They will be escorted by two representatives of the U.S. Department of State and one of the Defense Department, and will be guests in Pittsfield homes.

Their visit, sponsored also by the Mutual Security Agency, will follow two weeks of viewing recent industrial, military, agricultural and general developments. They will arrive Saturday afternoon from Fort Knox, Ky., by military aircraft at the Pittsfield Airport. After supper at the Richmond home of Donald B. Miller, publisher of The Eagle, the editors will attend the Berkshire Festival concert as guests of the management. They will picnic on the Tanglewood lawn before the Sunday concert, and following it, will have dinner in private homes.

Monday they will watch dance rehearsals at Jacob's Pillow, where they will be guests at lunch. They will be taken on a tour of Berkshire County Monday afternoon by the Berkshire Hills Conference, and will dine at the Crane Inn, Dalton, before leaving by plane for Washington Monday evening.

The guests will include editors-in-chief and foreign editors from newspapers in Liege, Belgium; Slagelse, Denmark; Paris, Amiens, Moselle and Limoges, France; Naples, Genoa and Verona, Italy; Groningen and The Hague, Holland; Aelesund, Norway; Lisbon, Portugal; and Manchester, England.

The visit will follow a schedule similar to last season, which resulted in many articles in European papers about the Berkshire week end, when the editors were given an opportunity "to see beautiful country, hear beautiful music and meet friendly people."

Cir. (D 281,218)
This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS
AUG 4 - 1953

Berkshire Festival Shattering Records For Its Attendance

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS
Buffalo Evening News Music Critic

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4. — Still four years away from its 20th birthday, the Berkshire Music Festival, at the midway point of its 1953 series, has surpassed all previous attendance records. This is no surprise to the increasing number of music-loving persons who put the festival in the beautiful Western Massachusetts hills at the top of their list of preferred summer activities.

The opening concert, Friday evening, of the "big" festival series drew 10,300 persons—6000 filling the famous Music Shed to capacity, the remainder scattered on the broad surrounding lawns.

This allowed those officials of the festival who had changed the opening concert night of each of the three "big" week-end series from Thursday to Friday the cosy pleasure of saying "I told you so."

It long has been felt that such a change should be made, because many music-lovers come up from New York City or Connecticut or down from Boston or Bangor who can more easily start their musical week-ends Friday than Thursday.

* * *

EVEN THE ATTENDANCE at the "little" series of six chamber concerts, between July 11 and 26, has established a new record for these concerts, begun in 1943, and held in the Theater-Concert Hall, which, like the shed, was designed by the late Eliel Saarinen—who designed our own Kleinhans Music Hall.

This season the attendance at these six concerts reached 26,150, well ahead of the 1950 record of 23,500.

As a result, officials already are discussing the feasibility of moving these concerts to the Music Shed, since the theater seats only 1152 persons, and bad weather necessarily becomes an unhappy hazard for those who hear the concerts from outside the building.

* * *

THE OPENING FESTIVAL CONCERT Friday evening was conducted brilliantly by Charles Munch, regular director of the Bostonians. From the first lovely measures of the Third "Leonore" Overture of Beethoven to the final climax of Ravel's "Bolero," the program gave wonderful opportunities to the conductor to display his exceptional orchestral talents and also to indulge in the personal involvement which is so strongly a part of his musical temperament.

It was an inspiration to include Copland's "Appalachian Spring" on the program. The score is ideal for outdoor music-making, because it speaks eloquently of a particular part of our countryside.

The elegance of Zino Francescatti's playing of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto and the shining clarity of his silken tone were set off by the accompaniment much as a beautiful gem is enhanced by its setting.

* * *

THE HIGHLIGHT of Saturday evening's program, also directed by Mr. Munch, was Lukas Foss' revised Second Piano Concerto, for which the composer was the soloist. Also on the program were Schumann's Overture to "Manfred," the ineffable "Italian" Symphony of Mendelssohn and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday afternoon quiet, imperturbable, little Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, presided over an all-Tchaikovsky program—the Serenade for Strings, the Fifth Symphony, and, with Jorge Bolet at the piano, the B Flat Piano Concerto.

It was a concert of quality rather than impact, of serenity rather than individuality, but patrician and gently moving for "a' that," nevertheless.

* * *

MONDAY EVENING the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center under Boris Goldovsky presented three rarely-heard one-act operas—Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education).

The second concert series of the festival opens Friday evening with another rarely-heard work, the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," by Berlioz, with Mr. Munch conducting. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday evening and Mr. Munch next Sunday afternoon.

Next Monday evening the three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion," not presented within living memory, will be performed by the Opera Department under Mr. Goldovsky. With the symphony concerts of Aug. 14, 15 and 16, the 1953 Berkshire Music Festival will close.

It was extremely pleasant for this writer to meet and talk with a goodly number of persons from Buffalo and vicinity, and to learn that each year more Western New Yorkers are among the festival audiences.

Cir. (D 24,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Notes and Footnotes

INTERVIEWING Mrs. Florence Warner is somewhat like laying hold of an amiable tornado. She has been busy the past few weeks launching Philco's de luxe radio-phonograph the Phonorama for which she engaged the Curtis Hotel music room, bought a box at Tanglewood, and presently will introduce one of the instruments into the Glass Room at Tanglewood, stronghold of RCA, by donating a Phonorama as a prize for Tanglewood on Parade.

But we're getting ahead of our story. Mrs. Warner, a striking blonde, was born in Troy, N.Y., grew up in the Midwest, worked as newspaper reporter, radio script writer, writes publicity for "Philco TV Playhouse" (seen here Sundays on WRGB at 10 PM), and bears the title of director of publicity and public relations for the Hutchins Advertising Company of New York. Hutchins carries the Philco account, and appears to be a wonderfully happy, free-wheeling concern, real gone and able to take a national promotion like Phonorama in its stride.

—o—

MRS. WARNER'S gusty good humor carries all before it. She started Phonorama by engaging a suite in New York at the Savoy Plaza, throwing a luxurious tea to which musical figures were invited, and presto, she had endorsements from Milton Cross, James Melton, Risé Stevens, George Szell and Paul Whiteman. Tanglewood and its musical prestige was selected for Phonorama's first open public showing.

—o—

MRS. W. is one to strike when the iron is hot. When the Korean peace was about to be signed, she routed out Sammy Vincent (Philco dealer) that Sunday so she could select some appropriate records from his store. She came up with "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and "The Lord's Prayer," to play on Phonorama.

In the organization she is affectionately called "Grandma," which is true, though she doesn't look it. She has two small grandchildren, and a son age 18 ready for college. They are, of course, her dearest possessions, followed closely by the Carnegie Medal awarded to her for diving into stormy, shark infested waters off the Florida keys to rescue a drowning man, swept off a fishing boat in 1950. She is one of the few women ever to receive this award.

—o—

AS WE OBSERVED, the Hutchins Company is a real gone outfit, and surely a joy to work for. Soon after she opened her Lenox project there came a large manila envelope, special delivery, from headquarters. Inside was a facsimile front page of a newspaper, The Daily Tribune, on which had been dubbed in tremendous headlines: "Warner Does It Again as Nation Flocks to Lenox!" Next day came another, "Militia Called To Quell Phonorama Enthusiasts!" and another "Phonorama Unfair to Live Musicians!" and finally, "Boston Symphony Quits: Phonorama Tanglewood." It was their way of showing they were rooting for her all out.

She was so carried away she went and bought a beautiful Siamese cat and named him 'Rama. He's friendly but not very musical.

Cir. (D 24,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Kiwanis To See Film

Harold Brunton will show the film "Lightning Mass" at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club at 12.15 tomorrow noon at the Sheraton Hotel.

The speaker last week was George E. Judd, who gave a word picture of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and of Tanglewood operations.

This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 4 - 1953

400 Students Enrolled At Music Center

Students from 41 states and 11 foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox. This country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, when Serge Koussevitzky was its music director, and is now in its 11th six-week session, through the end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 16.

The enrollment of 400 students represents a true cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music, opera, under a distinguished faculty of 36, which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston orchestra. The symphony's music director, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. A special department, the Tanglewood Study Group, set up last year for amateurs of music who wish to spend their vacations in the absorption of music, continues this year under the leadership of Ingolf Dahl, with an enrollment of 105, 38 of whom are spending the full six weeks, 12 for four weeks, and 55 for two weeks.

New York state leads the registration, with more than 100 students. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio are represented by 90 students. Nineteen each come from Connecticut and New Jersey; 18 each from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C. As a result of the Boston Symphony orchestra's first transcontinental tour last spring, enrollment from California increased to 10 students; from Salt Lake City and Provo, Utah, have come five pupils. Nine Canadians are studying at Tanglewood this summer, mostly from Toronto and Montreal, where the symphony played. The New Orleans orchestral auditions produced seven students now on the Berkshire campus, and five from Florida.

Nineteen foreign students are enrolled. Besides the Canadians, Mexico, France, Israel, Sweden, Japan, Korea, Holland, Bolivia, Latvia and China have representatives. Serge Blanc, of Paris, is concertmaster of the student orchestra. From Pusan, South Korea, is John Kim, who is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. A composition pupil with Mexico's composer-conductor Carlos Caveth is Tossi Ichiyanagi, of Tokyo.

Cir. (D 175,149) (S 182,397)
This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
AUG 4 1953

French Honors Given

NEW YORK (UP).—S. Hurok, the well-known impressario, and George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony, have been made chevaliers of the Legion of Honor by the French Government.

Cir. (D 64,021) (S 69,057)
This Clipping From CANTON, OHIO
REPOSITORY
AUG 4 - 1953

MUSICAL TRUCK FLEET

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood from Cincinnati.

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 4 - 1953

Tanglewood Opening Sets All-Time Record

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

The first of a series of three week-end concerts in the large music shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch established an all-time record for attendance at Tanglewood with an audience of 10,000 for Sunday afternoon's all-Tchaikowsky program, with the eminent French guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, directing the 104-piece orchestra.

The paid attendance for the Series A concerts of 1953 which was presented Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon was the largest in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival since it was established in 1934, a grand total of 31,000.

Friday and Saturday night's programs included works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Schumann, Foss and Hindemith. Zino Francescatti, was the guest soloist Friday night with the orchestra, with a magnificent performance of the Mendelssohn violin concerto. Saturday night's soloist was the young pianist-composer, Lukas Foss in an exciting and provocative rendition of his own piano Concerto, No. 2.

BOLET IS SOLOIST

Sunday afternoon's concert, directed by Pierre Monteux included Serenade for Strings, Symphony, No. 5 and the Piano Concerto, No. 1 by Tchaikowsky, magnificently played by the French pianist, Jorge Bolet. Mr. Bolet was recalled to the front of the stage for six bows at the conclusion of the concerto, the usual staid New England audience so far forget[illegible] decorum as to indulge in vociferous cheering, puncutated by whistles of approval from the younger members of the audience.

[illegible] Event Aug. 13

Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday, Aug. 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which includes afternoon festivities by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, a lawn supper and an evening concert by the orchestra, will last from 6 to 11, followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert. Mr. Stern made a highly successful film debut in "Tonight We Sing."

The second half of the concert program, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes, will offer as soloists baritone William Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price. The occasion will be the first public appearance of the couple since their enormous personal success last season in Vienna, Berlin, London and Paris in the title roles of the Blevins Davis revival of the George Gershwin opera, which Robert Breen staged. Miss Price, who was a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is currently singing Bess on Broadway, at the Ziegfeld Theatre, and will appear on "Tanglewood on Parade" thru the courtesy of the producers. Mr Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloists, with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem.

"Tanglewood on Parade" is held in aid of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its eleventh season and box seats, at $5.00, and front section of the great Music Shed, all of which are reserved at $4.00, Tanglewood box office. General admission tickets, on sale now at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear section. All ticket-holders will be invited to attend demonstrations by the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music, opera department and Tanglewood Study Group.

Cir. (D 24,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1953

Top Editors Of Europe Coming Here

Week-end Guests To Visit Tanglewood And Jacob's Pillow

Fourteen editors of prominent newspapers in European countries belonging to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will spend the coming week end in the Berkshires. They will be escorted by two representatives of the U.S. Department of State and one of the Defense Department, and will be guests in Pittsfield homes.

Their visit, sponsored also by the Mutual Security Agency, will follow two weeks of viewing recent industrial, military, agricultural and general developments. They will arrive Saturday afternoon from Fort Knox, Ky., by military aircraft at the Pittsfield Airport. After supper at the Richmond home of Donald B. Miller, publisher of The Eagle, the editors will attend the Berkshire Festival concert as guests of the management. They will picnic on the Tanglewood lawn before the Sunday concert, and following it, will have dinner in private homes.

Monday they will watch dance rehearsals at Jacob's Pillow, where they will be guests at lunch. They will be taken on a tour of Berkshire County Monday afternoon by the Berkshire Hills Conference, and will dine at the Crane Inn, Dalton, before leaving by plane for Washington Monday evening.

The guests will include editors-in-chief and foreign editors from newspapers in Liege, Belgium; Slagelse, Denmark; Paris, Amiens, Moselle and Limoges, France; Naples, Genoa and Verona, Italy; Groningen and The Hague, Holland; Aelesund, Norway; Lisbon, Portugal; and Manchester, England.

The visit will follow a schedule similar to last season, which resulted in many articles in European papers about the Berkshire week end, when the editors were given an opportunity "to see beautiful country, hear beautiful music and meet friendly people."

BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS
AUG 4 - 1953

Berkshire Festival Shattering Records For Its Attendance

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS
Buffalo Evening News Music Critic

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4. — Still four years away from its 20th birthday, the Berkshire Music Festival at the midway point of its 1953 series, has surpassed all previous attendance records. This is no surprise to the increasing number of music-loving persons who put the festival in the beautiful Western Massachusetts hills at the top of their list of preferred summer activities.

The opening concert, Friday evening, of the "big" festival series drew 10,300 persons—6000 filling the famous Music Shed to capacity, the remainder scattered on the broad surrounding lawns.

This allowed those officials of the festival who had changed the opening concert night of each of the three "big" week-end series from Thursday to Friday the cosy pleasure of saying "I told you so."

It long has been felt that such a change should be made, because many music-lovers come up from New York City or Connecticut or down from Boston or Bangor who can more easily start their musical week-ends Friday than Thursday.

* * *

EVEN THE ATTENDANCE at the "little" series of six chamber concerts, between July 11 and 26, has established a new record for these concerts, begun in 1943, and held in the Theater-Concert Hall, which, like the shed, was designed by the late Eliel Saarinen—who designed our own Kleinhans Music Hall.

This season the attendance at these six concerts reached 26,150, well ahead of the 1950 record of 23,500.

As a result, officials already are discussing the feasibility of moving these concerts to the Music Shed, since the theater seats only 1152 persons, and bad weather necessarily becomes an unhappy hazard for those who hear the concerts from outside the building.

* * *

THE OPENING FESTIVAL CONCERT Friday evening was conducted brilliantly by Charles Munch, regular director of the Bostonians. From the first lovely measures of the Third "Leonore" Overture of Beethoven to the final climax of Ravel's "Bolero," the program gave wonderful opportunities to the conductor to display his exceptional orchestral talents and also to indulge in the personal involvement which is so strongly a part of his musical temperament.

It was an inspiration to include Copland's "Appalachian Spring" on the program. The score is ideal for outdoor music-making, because it speaks eloquently of a particular part of our countryside.

The elegance of Zino Francescatti's playing of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto and the shining clarity of his silken tone were set off by the accompaniment much as a beautiful gem is enhanced by its setting.

* * *

THE HIGHLIGHT of Saturday evening's program, also directed by Mr. Munch, was Lukas Foss' revised Second Piano Concerto, for which the composer was the soloist. Also on the program were Schumann's Overture to "Manfred," the ineffable "Italian" Symphony of Mendelssohn and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Sunday afternoon quiet, imperturbable, little Pierre Monteux, guest conductor, presided over an all-Tchaikovsky program—the Serenade for Strings, the Fifth Symphony, and, with Jorge Bolet at the piano, the B Flat Piano Concerto.

It was a concert of quality rather than impact, of serenity rather than individuality, but patrician and gently moving for "a' that," nevertheless.

* * *

MONDAY EVENING the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center under Boris Goldovsky presented three rarely-heard one-act operas—Gluck's "L'Yvrogne Corrige" (The Drunkard Reformed), Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue" (The Prodigal Son) and Chabrier's "Une Education Manquee" (An Incomplete Education).

The second concert series of the festival opens Friday evening with another rarely-heard work, the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," by Berlioz, with Mr. Munch conducting. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday evening and Mr. Munch next Sunday afternoon.

Next Monday evening the three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion," not presented within living memory, will be performed by the Opera Department under Mr. Goldovsky. With the symphony concerts of Aug. 14, 15 and 16, the 1953 Berkshire Music Festival will close.

It was extremely pleasant for this writer to meet and talk with a goodly number of persons from Buffalo and vicinity, and to learn that each year more Western New Yorkers are among the festival audiences.

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 5 - 1953

Literature From Tanglewood Put In Bank Window

A display of literature on the Berkshire Music Center and pictures of the artists who will be featured at the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, to be presented a week from tomorrow, Aug. 13, at Tanglewood in Lenox, has been set up in the North Adams Savings bank insurance department's community window.

The special program, given annually for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, shows the Center in operation with simultaneous sessions in the departments, beginning at 6 o'clock. The Boston Symphony orchestra will present a program of short symphonic works in the shed, opera scenes will be presented in the theater-concert hall, and a program by students in the chamber music department will be given in the music hall. Persons attending have been invited to take picnic suppers for the lawn party that will be held at 7 o'clock, when the chorus will present a concert on the porch of the main house.

The main concert in the shed at 8.15 will feature the Boston Symphony orchestra, directed by Charles Munch and Leonard Berstein, with Isaac Stern as soloist for Beethoven's violin concerto. William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing the principal roles for the presentation by the Festival Chorus of Scenes 1 and 2 of the second act of "Porgy and Bess."

Waltzing on the lawn will follow the concert and the program is scheduled to end at 11 o'clock. will be held rain or shine.

Cir. (D 56,872)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
AUG 5 - 1953

Program Set For Festival Concerts

The second weekend program of the major Shed series of Berkshire Festival concerts will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in the concerts Friday night and Sunday and Leonard Bernstein will be guest conductor Saturday night.

The Friday night program will be given in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony presented in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time.

The Saturday night concert will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony.

On the Sunday afternoon program Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello No. 1, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote."

Cir. (D 389,011) (S 288,545)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
AUG 5 - 1953

Berkshire Festival Continues Friday

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

With two more weekends to go for the Berkshire Festival currently operating at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the next concert in the Music Shed, Friday night, will feature Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet." This work, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, will also employ the Festival Chorus and following soloists: Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Muscona, bass, and John McCollum, tenor. Rarely given in its entirety, the symphony will be presented on this occasion in its complete form and will comprise the entire program.

Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium Saturday night for a memorial concert to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Bostonians. This program will have as its major composition, Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony, also with Miss Tourel, and with soprano Theresa Green as soloists. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina" to be followed by Ravel's "Sheherazade" utilizing again the talents of Miss Tourel.

Sunday's afternoon concert, to be broadcast from 2:30 to 4 over CBS, will have as its major work Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and Joseph De Pasquale, violinist, as soloists.

Brahms 'Requiem' Aug. 14

The final week-end opens Friday, Aug. 14, with a performance of the Brahms' "Requiem" with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists, the Festival Chorus assisting. Munch will conduct this event but Bernstein again will be on hand to lead the Saturday concert, Aug. 15, in an all-orchestral program as follows: Sibelius Fourth Symphony; "Sinfonia India" by Chavez; Symphony No. 2 by Brahms. The concluding concert, Sunday, Aug. 16, at 2:30, will be a miscellaneous program including Seymour Lipkin, pianist, as soloist in the Piano Concerto for the left hand by Ravel.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the special annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, takes place Thursday, Aug. 13. Various events comprise the all-day program to be climaxed by a gala concert in the Music Shed at 8:15. Participants will be Warfield and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price, in excerpts from "Porgy and Bess"; and Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Handel's "Water Music" completes the program. For further information write the Berkshire Festival Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 6 - 1953

2nd Weekend Series Set at Tanglewood

The second weekend series of concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will open Friday at 8:30 p. m. with a performance of Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony and a chorus with soloists.

Jennie Tourel, the famed mezzo-soprano, will be leading soloist in the Berlioz work, assisted by Nicola Mascona, bass-baritone, and John McCollum, tenor.

On Saturday at 8:30 p. m. the orchestra under Leonard Bernstein will perform Moussorgsky's prelude to "Kovanstchina," Ravel's "Scheherazade" and Mahler's Second Symphony. Miss Tourel will be soloist in the Ravel and Mahler works.

On Sunday at 2:30 p. m. Dr. Munch and the Orchestra will perform Schubert's Fifth Symphony, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, Strauss' "Don Quivote" with Gregor Piatigorsky as cello soloist and Joseph De Pasquale as viola soloist, Milhaud's First Cello Concerto with Mr. Piatigorsky and Roussel's "Bacchus and Ariane" Suite No. 2.

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 5 - 1953

One-Act Operas Given At Berkshire Music Festival

On Monday night the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, assisted by the orchestra of Department 1, presented three one-act operas in the theatre concert hall, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. Staged by Sarah Caldwell, with settings andlightings by John Blankenchip, using the Paul Planer GKP projections, costumes by Leo Van Witsen, choreography by Leo Kharibian, they were variably pleasing to the eye and ear.

The first, an amusing fantastic opera called "The Drunkard Reformed," was the least integrated of the three. It could have have been more enjoyable with a small ensemble playing the buoyant music of Gluck, since the piano, trying to make up for the lack of musical color, at times was much too loud for the small but pleasing voices of the student cast.

The second opera, Debussy's "Prodigal Son," was the first departure of the opera department from its original aim to produce operas in English, enabling both listeners and performers to better understand; but since the subject matter was so well-known, it seemed justifiable to to dispense with a translation. Here the student orchestra was inspired to exceptionally beautiful playing through the superb direction of Samuel Krachmalnick, while the cast of three singers, Anne English, Lee Cass and Robert Simpson in the title role, gave a very moving, both dramatic and vocal, portrayal of this favorite Bible story. The dancers, volunteers from the various departments, were graceful and almost too modest in their movements.

A delectable setting with its suggestion of walls and window introduced the last and most harmonious opera, "An Incomplete Education." It tells the story of a bride and bridegroom whose education has been woefully neglected in, to them at this time, the most important part of their lives. When the tutor, titillatingly portrayed by Lee Cass, is at last ready to impart the necessary knowledge, the machinations of a thunder storm have made it needless, and the three of them decide that "it really was for the best." Here the piano seemed adequate for Chabrier's music, so suggestive of the best sophisticated musical comedy, and even at times, of Noel Coward.

Next Monday and Tuesday, the opera department will present "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" by Andre Gretry. These performances are open to the "Friends of Music," as are all student productions, and performances throughout the week and the duration of the season. A small fee enables one to become a member at any time, and is more than repaid by the various musical treats.—Martha deB. Beaver.

Cir. (D 24,512)
This Clipping From
NEW BRITAIN, CONN.
HERALD
AUG 6 - 1953

TRIP TO TANGLEWOOD

A visit to Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., to hear a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be sponsored by the YWCA and YMCA on Sunday. The group will leave the YWCA on Glen Street at 10 a. m., have a picnic lunch at Tanglewood, and return to New Britain after the concert. Reservations for the trip will close Friday noon at the YWCA.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 5 - 1953

Boston Symphony to Play Berlioz' 'Romeo, Juliet'

Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" will be performed at Tanglewood in the Berkshires Friday evening in the opening program of the second week's concerts in the Shed. Charles Munch will direct the 104-piece Boston Symphony, which presented the complete version of the symphony last winter in Boston for the first time.

* * *

SOLOISTS FRIDAY evening will be Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, in the title role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; and John McCollum, tenor. The Festival Chorus, composed of students at the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct a memorial program to Serge Koussevitzky Saturday evening and Mr. Munch will direct the Sunday afternoon program. Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, and Joseph De Pasquale, violist, will be the featured soloists Sunday afternoon.

The Saturday evening program wil linclude the Moussorgsky "Prelude to Khovanstchina"; Ravel's "Sheherazade" for soprano and orchestra with Miss Tourel as soloist; and the Mahler "Resurrection" symphony with Miss Tourel and Theresa Green as soloists assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

* * *

THE SUNDAY AFTERNOON program will include the Schubert "Symphony number 5 in B flat"; the Barber "Adagio for Strings"; Strauss' "Don Quixote" with 'cello and viola solos; Darius Milhaud's "Concerto for 'Cello" with Piatigorsky as soloist; and the Roussel "Bacchus et Ariane" suite.

The Friday and Saturday programs begin at 8:30 p.m. and the Sunday program at 2:30 p.m.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Golden Age News

100 To Attend Event Tomorrow At Tanglewood

By GEORGINE ALCOMBRIGHT

One hundred members in three buses will attend the student symphony orchestra concert in the Tanglewood Music Shed tomorrow evening. They will leave the YMCA at 5.30 and have supper on the Tanglewood grounds. Admission will be by presentation of club membership cards.

Robert Ayers reported that the field day, scheduled for Aug. 13, will be postponed until 1954. Plans for a picnic on Aug. 13 will be discussed at a meeting of the steering committee tomorrow Mr. Ayers reported on the "blue box" contributions.

The 200 members present were entertained by accordionist Richard Lamke, grandson of Golden Ager Mrs. M. C. Lamke, accompanied by Mrs. Martha Waterman; William M. Liebau, Miss Katherine Gerard and Mrs. Jane Rennie, dancing; and John Cone telling a story of his youth. John S. Ross read a newspaper article written in the year he was born. Mrs. Gertrude Whalen recited a poem and the Girls' Choir sang, followed by the Boys' Choir, under direction of Michael Dowd.

Mrs. Marie Wilkinson introduced Mr. and Mrs. Walter Park of St. Albans, L.I., Mrs. Elizabeth Hammond of Albany and Mrs. Hattie Gribbon of Pittsfield, visitors. Mrs. Minnie Richmond and Mrs. Anna Plankey were welcomed back. The birthday cake was given to Mrs. Charles Chester and Mrs. Catherine Blake. Mrs. Mae Maddon at Hillcrest Hospital and Albert Wargler were reported sick.

Mr. Ross announced that a 10-member nominating committee would be appointed Tuesday.

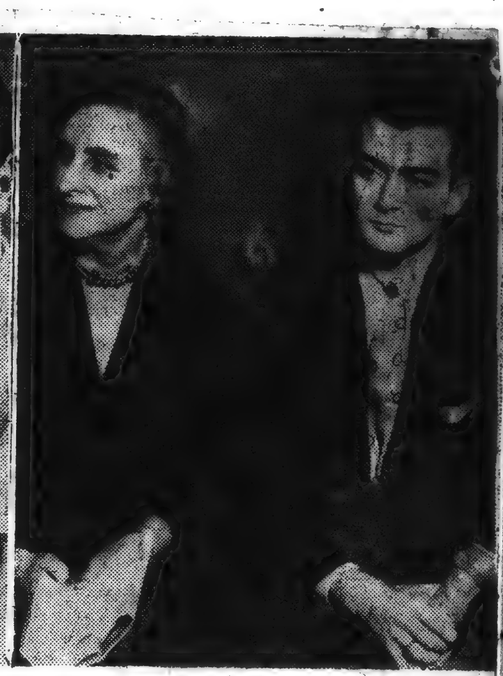
Cir. (D 60,097) (S [illegible])
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 6 - 1953

Among Those Present

AT TANGLEWOOD—Samuel B. Weiss and his daughter, Dorothy, of 32 Brookline Ave., listened enthralled by the Boston Symphony's interpretation of a Tchaikovsky composition at the Tanglewood concert Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteux was conductor.

SUNSHINE AND MUSIC—Miss Susan McMahon of New Lebanon Center, a staff writer for The Times-Union, attended the Tanglewood concert with Brian Lobdell of Canaan. They chose seats on the sunny grounds.

TROY LISTENERS — Miss Isle Bunemann and her escort, Henry Vergi, were among the numerous Troy residents at the Sunday afternoon concert.



CONCERT REGULARS—Mrs. Isador Fallek and her son, Max, of Edgecomb Ave., regularly attend the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood. They made a striking picture as they listened to the Tchaikovsky music.

Cir. (D 9,928)
This Clipping From
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
AUG 6 - 1953

Memorial Concert For Koussevitzky Set for Saturday

LENOX, Mass. — With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this weekend in the 6,000-seat shed at Tanglewood.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony and the guiding spirit behind the annual Tanglewood festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina", which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a music center student.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet", which the Boston Symphony gave in its complete version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood.

Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role and Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone will be bass soloist. John McCollum of Tuckahoe, a student at the Berkshire Music Center will sing tenor, and the Festival Chorus, composed of other students at the center will assist.

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto No. One for cello on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote". A portion of the Sunday concert will be broadcast nationally by CBS radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Next Monday and Tuesday evenings the opera department will perform Gretry's seldom heard three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" ("Richard the Lion Hearted"), which was composed in 1784. Alternating student casts will perform, accompanied by a student orchestra, and the text will be sung in an English translation by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. The performances are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and all seats are reserved.

Cir. (D 43,294) (S 40,887)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
AUG 6 - 1953

A Berkshire Tale

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

WHEN I STOPPED in Tanglewood a few weeks ago it was my pleasure to talk with George Judd. Mr. Judd is the manager of the Boston Orchestra, has been in fact, since 1936.

Before I met Mr. Judd I had walked around the grounds, talked to some of the staff and marvelled—as I have done many times before—at the smoothness with which this very big business functions. The grass, in spite of the dry summer and the hordes of feet that had been pressing it down, was soft and rich and a singular green. The hedges were meticulously trimmed but one was impressed by no artificiality in their shape and grooming. The varied structures maintained a dignity of their own and impinged not at all the peace and serenity of the Berkshire evening. The paths were raked and spotless; in fact their neatness caused one to wonder if the small stones which formed their surface were not perhaps fastened in some manner so that they could not be kicked loose. Indeed, in the lull before the evening's audience began to arrive, the whole place had the appearance of an impeccably cared for but never used park; as if it had never been burdened by the careless hands and feet and habits that most visitors bring with them.

But that, of course, is not the fact. Tanglewood has been used, intensely and enormously. How much, you might ask. Well when I first visited the territory in search of the Boston Orchestra there was no Tanglewood as it is presently constituted. The orchestra was housed in a tent. Koussevitzky was conducting a sparkling concert when the elements concocted a more exciting one. The tent was blown approximately from its moorings. For the life of me I can't remember whether the concert was ever concluded or not. There was a lot of frantic scurrying about, an abundance of lightning and thunder. And all in all Koussevitzky and his orchestra were rather badly beaten in the battle of sounds. I do remember that when I hiked back from Lenox the next morning to rescue my car, which had been drowned out in the deluge, I found several hundred other cars which had suffered the same fate. Even in those days the Boston Orchestra's summer season was beginning to be a very big thing.

WHEN I CAME again to Tanglewood I was a solid married citizen. Tanglewood as it is now was beginning to take shape. The big shed was completed and ready for use and the school which is known as the Berkshire Music Center was in its first year.

School and summer festival prospered majestically until the whole undertaking was suspended during the war years. Activities were resumed in 1946 and since that date there seems to be no easily perceptible saturation point.

The school enrollment has remained around 400. There have been some 36 teachers on the staff each summer. And the students in late years have been coming from far off places. For example, there is in the school this summer a John Kim from Pusan, South Korea. When he is at home Mr. Kim is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. Mr. Kim has come quite a distance.

The audiences for the nine shed concerts which are played every summer reached up to a 10,000 average in the year when they were resumed after the war years cessation and they have been that large or larger each year since.

The Theater Concert Hall Series was initiated in 1949, six additional concerts each summer. This year's six attracted an audience of more than 26,000. In 1949 upwards of 180,000 heard the fifteen concerts which make up the two series. And this is very, very big business.

* * *

THERE is perhaps no musical undertaking anywhere that is so thoroughly a memorial to one man as is Tanglewood. Koussevitzky dreamed about it, planned for it, labored on it, and pressured it into a kind of rock ribbed permanence. Had Koussevitzky been only a conductor his name would probably be consigned in due time to the musty and unsought annals of men who played or sung and men who conducted orchestras. But, in the case of Tanglewood at least, he was also an architect and a builder. And the monument which he left behind him is not one that will easily be lost sight of.

But Koussevitzky is dead. Tanglewood is alive. And it is not alive simply in schools and concerts. There are buildings and grounds. There are, I suppose, a good hundred appendages of this music business that must be staffed and directed. And all these matters, so far as I know, constitute the vacation which George Judd takes every summer.

Mr. Judd is no longer a man young in years. It was in 1914 that he became secretary to Henry Lee Higginson, the founder of the Boston Orchestra. He assumed the post of assistant manager of the orchestra in 1918. And he has been, as I have previously noted, its manager since 1936.

BLANKET GROUP—Blankets are practical accessories at Tanglewood when the grounds are damp, as they were Sunday. Miss Caryle Goodman, right, shared a blanket with Miss Constance Billen and her father, Albert L. Billen of Worcester, Mass. Attendance broke previous records.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
8/6/53

TANGLEWOOD BENEFIT PLANNED FOR THURSDAY

Tanglewood will be on parade next Thursday. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which includes afternoon festivities by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., a lawn supper and an evening concert by the Orchestra, will last from 6 P.M. to 11 P.M., followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern, the celebrated violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert.

The second half of the concert program, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes,

[16]

Cir. (D 14,470)

This Clipping From
DANBURY, CONN.
NEWS-TIMES
AUG 6 - 1953

BARN-STUDIO CONCERTS

Miss Fisher's First Chamber Music Event August 22.

For the eighth consecutive season Miss Margaret Fisher, pianist, is sponsoring two Saturday afternoon concerts of chamber music to be held at her barn-studio on Lonetown road, Redding, August 22 and September 12.

Miss Fisher will be at the piano assisting performers from the Boston Symphony orchestra, of whom, two, Louis Speyer, oboe, and English horn, and Emil Kornsand, violin and viola, will be making return appearances in Miss Fisher's series. It will be Mr. Speyer's third season and Mr. Kornsand's fourth in the Redding concerts. A third member of the Boston Symphony, Martin Hoherman, cellist, will be making his initial appearance in this series.

Miss Fisher has just returned from Lenox, Mass., where she has been rehearsing with these instrumentalists at the famous Tanglewood music center for the coming concerts.

The program announced for the first event will include Charles Martin Loeffler's Two Rhapsodies for oboe, viola and piano, a work which was performed by the same artists at a concert of chamber music given last spring at Wellesley college as the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, well known patron of chamber music in this country. Mrs. Coolidge, who attended one of last year's concerts here, plans to be on hand for both events this year, Miss Fisher said.

Two other works rarely heard and like the Loeffler Rhapsodies, new to the Redding chamber music events, are Bohuslav Martinu's Oboe Quartet, for oboe, violin, cello and piano, and Paul Hindemith's Sonata for English horn and piano, also scheduled for performance on August 22. The Hindemith work is dedicated by the composer to Mr. Speyer. The fourth number on the program will be Beethoven's Trio ("Archduke") in B flat major, op.97., for piano, violin and cello.

In Mr. Speyer, Mr. Kornsand and Mr. Hoherman, Miss Fisher has assembled three long-time members of the Boston Symphony orchestra who have had distinguished musical careers as individuals as well. Mr. Speyer, native of Paris, has been with the Boston orchestra since the early 1920's, and has been designated a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the government of France. Mr. Kornsand is a native of Berlin and Mr. Hoherman of Warsaw, Poland. Mr. Hoherman's most recent activity, aside from his orchestral playing, is a three years' experience in Ceylon conducting an orchestra and directing music under the auspices of the British government.

Miss Fisher has called attention to the fact that the seating capacity at her barn-studio is limited and that tickets marked "indoors" will be mailed in the order in which applications are received. As in past years, the studio overflow will be seated outdoors and those who prefer outdoor seats may indicate that preference when making application for tickets. Miss Fisher expects the usual following of music lovers from New York and has made arrangements to have those arriving on the 1:05 train out of Grand Central met in Bethel.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN
PRESS
8/6/53

Summer Entertainment

Westport

This Week

Wally Cox, TV's "Mr. Peepers", has proved to be such a draw in the summer stock production of "Three Men on a Horse", this week's attraction at the Playhouse, that a move is afoot to bring him to Broadway in the John Cecil Holm-George Abbott comedy at the end of his summer tour. Mr. Cox broke all records at Richard Aldrich Falmouth Playhouse at Coonamessett, Mass. last week and word from the Cape has it that Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Richard Meyers, his partner, have been talking to the comedian about a Broadway engagement.

This week's issue of the threatrical trade-paper "Variety", has this to say of the "Three Men on a Horse" performance seen at Falmouth, Mass.: "Wally Cox, TV's bespectacled, bedevilled "Mr. Peepers", has chosen an ideal vehicle for his current strawhat tour. The comedy, which has become a sort of American classic, has been staged by co-author John Cecil Holm and the results are some rollicking hot-weather entertainment. Slight, sandy-haired Cox has two valuable assets in his acting equipment: he can speak dialogue as though he is actually thinking and saying lines for the first time, and he is a first-rate pantominist. But aside from Cox the cast is also uniformly excellent, with Teddy Hart scoring in his original Broadway role as the neurotic worry-wart Frankie; Walter Matthau good as the fast-talking Patsy, and Fred Gwynne laughingly dense as the moronic Charlie. There are good bits, too, by Andrew Sabilia as the helpful bartender and Edwin Jerome as Erwin's grumpy employer. It's obvious that for his devoted fans, "Mr. Peeper" can do no wrong."

"Three Men on a Horse", starring Wally Cox, will play through Saturday evening, with matinee scheduled for Friday at 2:40 p.m.

Road to Rome Next

Arlene Francis stars in "The Road to Rome", Robert E Sherwood's comedy of the Roman matron who defies Hannibal's march on Rome with her feminine charm at the playhouse opening Monday night. Featured with Miss Francis is John Baragrey others in the cast include Ann Sheridan will play. Wagner's March of the Nobles from "Tannhauser", Anatol Liadoff's "Russian Folksongs, Op. 58", Jan Sibelius' "Valse Triste", (Sad Waltz) Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" overture, Op. 9; and a medley of Richard Rodgers waltzes, arranged by John Worley.

Tanglewood

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess", and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass. on Thursday (August 13). Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting at the evening concrt, which commences at 8:15 p.m. in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music", arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess", Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes.

Festival Conclusion

Charles Munch conducts the concluding concerts on Friday night (August 14) and Sunday afternoon (August 16), and Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert of Saturday night (August 15).

The Friday evening program will be given over to Brahms' "German Requiem", for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting.

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fanasque (Sunday afternoon).

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Tanglewood Plays "Romeo & Juliet"

Litchfield Enquirer 8/6

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this week-end in the 6,000 seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lonox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave it its complet version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, Mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to

Jennie Tourel

Serge Koussevitzky for twenty-five years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Bershire Music Center student.

Theresa Green

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 P. M. will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

play opposite Miss Jordan as George Henderson, senator and diplomat. The past two seasons Mr. Clarke has been featured in New York and on tour in "The Shrike," winner of a Pulitzer Prize. The cast of "Affairs of State" will also include Eleanor Wilson, J. W. Austin and Stuart Germain.

"The Three-Toed Pony," Sidney Michaels unusual new comedy, that stars Fay Bainter and features Romney Brent, will have its last two performances on Saturday, August 8th.

Tanglewood Plans Gala Program

Scenes from opera, short symphonic pieces, chamber music, a violin concerto and a gala concert which includes portions of "Porgy and Bess," with soloists and the Festival Chorus, are some of the highlights of "Tanglewood on Parade," which will be held, rain or shine, at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, August 13, from 6 to 11 P.M.

The full program follows: Fanfare: Welcome by Boris Goldovsky at 5:45; The Berkshire Music Center in Operation, 6:00, with simultaneous sessions of each department; short symphonic works by the orchestra in the Shed, opera scenes in the Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music in the Chamber Music Hall

At 7:00, Lawn Party and picnic supper. Everyone is invited to bring a picnic supper and to make use of the buffet and refreshment carts. There will be a concert by the Chorus on the

Cir. (D 39,146) (S 21,101)

This Clipping From LOWELL, MASS.
SUN

AUG 6 - 1953

MUSIC

LOWELL — Miss Rosalind Elias, operatic and concert contralto of this city, has been cast as Antonio in the opera "Richard Coeur-de-Lion," which will be the major operatic work of the Berkshire Festival. The opera, written by the prolific French composer, Andre-Ernest-Modeste Grety, will be presented Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week.

This will mark the second appearance of the gifted young singer at the world famous music festival. She was selected to sing in this production by Boris Goldovsky, director of the department of opera at Tanglewood.

She was offered the role as early as last spring, while singing at the La Scala Opera house in Italy.

For the premier festival production of the opera Mr. Goldovsky has been assisted by Miss Sarah Caldwell in preparing an acceptable English text of the work This necessitated a reading of the original score. This was made possible through the museum in Brussels where the original score is kept. The manuscript was secured through the efforts of the French composer, Darius Milhaud and P. Collaer, head of the Belgian NRB Insti-

Cir. (D 19,394)

This Clipping From
NEWBURGH, N. Y.
NEWS

AUG 7 - 1953

Warfield To Sing at Tanglewood

"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Festival version of a "country fair," will be held on Thursday, Aug. 13.

Stars who will take a musical part include the noted violinist Isaac Stern, the soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, who made such a success in "Porgy and Bess," the baritone William Warfield.

Warfield, a big fellow with a big voice, received a tremendous ovation upon his first London and Paris appearances recently.

Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the Summer School of Music, including some unusual opera scenes, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dancing will follow.

Tanglewood is located at Lenox, Mass., a small village in the rolling Berkshires of eastern Massachusetts. The program on Aug. 13 will begin at 5:45 p.m. A note to would-be Festival fans: make sure to arrive early and leave late and you'll have no traffic woes. The reason for this advice follows: this year the Festival is drawing an average of 9,000 fans per concert. The 2:30 p.m. concert on Sunday is: Schubert Symphony No. 5; Barber, Adagio; Strauss, Don Quixote with Gregor Piatigorsky; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello and Roussel Bacchus et Ariane Suite.

Clr. (D 14,470)
This Clipping From
DANBURY, CONN.
NEWS-TIMES
AUG 6 - 1953

BARN-STUDIO CONCERTS

Miss Fisher's First Chamber Music Event August 22.

For the eighth consecutive season Miss Margaret Fisher, pianist, is sponsoring two Saturday afternoon concerts of chamber music to be held at her barn-studio on Lonetown road, Redding, August 22 and September 12.

Miss Fisher will be at the piano assisting performers from the Boston Symphony orchestra, of whom two, Louis Speyer, oboe, and English horn, and Emil Kornsand, violin and viola, will be making return appearances in Miss Fisher's series. It will be Mr. Speyer's third season and Mr. Kornsand's fourth in the Redding concerts. A third member of the Boston Symphony, Martin Hoherman, cellist, will be making his initial appearance in this series.

Miss Fisher has just returned from Lenox, Mass., where she has been rehearsing with these instrumentalists at the famous Tanglewood music center for the coming concerts.

The program announced for the first event will include Charles Martin Loeffler's Two Rhapsodies for oboe, viola and piano, a work which was performed by the same artists at a concert of chamber music given last spring at Wellesley college as the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, well known patron of chamber music in this country. Mrs. Coolidge, who attended one of last year's concerts here, plans to be on hand for both events this year, Miss Fisher said.

Two other works rarely heard and like the Loeffler Rhapsodies, new to the Redding chamber music events, are Bohuslav Martinu's Oboe Quartet, for oboe, violin, cello and piano, and Paul Hindemith's Sonata for English horn and piano, also scheduled for performance on August 22. The Hindemith work is dedicated by the composer to Mr. Speyer. The fourth number on the program will be Beethoven's Trio ("Archduke") in B flat major, op.97., for piano, violin and cello.

In Mr. Speyer, Mr. Kornsand and Mr. Hoherman, Miss Fisher has assembled three long-time members of the Boston Symphony orchestra who have had distinguished musical careers as individuals as well. Mr. Speyer, native of Paris, has been with the Boston orchestra since the early 1920's, and has been designated a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the government of France. Mr. Kornsand is a native of Berlin and Mr. Hoherman of Warsaw, Poland. Mr. Hoherman's most recent activity, aside from his orchestral playing, is a three years' experience in Ceylon conducting an orchestra and directing music under the auspices of the British government.

Miss Fisher has called attention to the fact that the seating capacity at her barn-studio is limited and that tickets marked "indoors" will be mailed in the order in which applications are received. As in past years, the studio overflow will be seated outdoors and those who prefer outdoor seats may indicate that preference when making application for tickets. Miss Fisher expects the usual following of music lovers from New York and has made arrangements to have those arriving on the 1:05 train out of Grand Central met in Bethel.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN
PRESS
8/6/53

Summer Entertainment

Westport

This Week

Wally Cox, TV's "Mr. Peepers", has proved to be such a draw in the summer stock production of "Three Men on a Horse", this week's attraction at the Playhouse, that a move is afoot to bring him to Broadway in the John Cecil Holm-George Abbott comedy at the end of his summer tour. Mr. Cox broke all records at Richard Aldrich Falmouth Playhouse at Coonamessett, Mass. last week and word from the Cape has it that Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Richard Meyers, his partner, have been talking to the comedian about a Broadway engagement.

This week's issue of the theatrical trade-paper "Variety", has this to say of the "Three Men on a Horse" performance seen at Falmouth, Mass.: "Wally Cox, TV's bespectacled, bedevilled "Mr. Peepers", has chosen an ideal vehicle for his current strawhat tour. The comedy, which has become a sort of American classic, has been staged by co-author John Cecil Holm and the results are some rollicking hot-weather entertainment. Slight, sandy-haired Cox has two valuable assets in his acting equipment: he can speak dialogue as though he is actually thinking and saying lines for the first time, and he is a first-rate pantomimist. But aside from Cox the cast is also uniformly excellent, with Teddy Hart scoring in his original Broadway role as the neurotic worry-wart Frankie; Walter Matthau good as the fast-talking Patsy, and Fred Gwynne laughingly dense as the moronic Charlie. There are good bits, too, by Andrew Sabilia as the helpful bartender and Edwin Jerome as Erwin's grumpy employer. It's obvious that for his devoted fans, "Mr. Peeper" can do no wrong."

"Three Men on a Horse", starring Wally Cox, will play through Saturday evening, with matinee scheduled for Friday at 2:40 p.m.

Road to Rome Next

Arlene Francis stars in "The Road to Rome", Robert E Sherwood's comedy of the Roman matron who defies Hannibal's march on Rome with her feminine charm at the playhouse opening Monday night. Featured with Miss Francis is John Baragrey others in the cast include Ann Shoemaker, Ralph Sumpter, Tige Andrews, Michael Tilan, Evan Thomas and Henry Silva. Charles Bowden will direct Paul Bigelow is associate producer, and settings and lighting are by Richard Barnes. The [illegible] cast will be completed by Westport staff members E. S. Shaw, Jr., Sheldon Wile, Helen Cordes, Bill Lawrence and Jerry Kohn; and Westport apprentices Patricia Carr, Jacques Andre, Robert Wunsch, Ray Daley Nicholas Zanides and Stanley Walden.

This marks Miss Francis' first appearance at the Westport Country Playhouse. Miss [illegible] appears on the television pro[illegible]panal "What's My Line" weekly. Mr. Baragrey recently appeared at the New York City Centre in a revival of "The Royal Family" with Ruth Hussey and Peggy Ann Garner. He has appeared previously at the Westport Country Playhouse in several productions.

Silvermine Guild

Stefan Schnabel, stage and motion picture actor, recently seen on Broadway as the Russian colonel in "The Love of Four Colonels," will play the title role when the Silvermine Guild players present William Shakespeare's "Othello" in modern dress on August 7, 8, 9 and August 14, 15, 16 at the Silvermine Guild of Artists in Norwalk.

The production will be directed by Basil Burwell, who directed the players' production of T. S. Eliot's "Sweeney Agonistes" in June.

Marion Schnabel, wife of Stefan Schnabel, will also play his stage wife, Desdemona, in the play.

The Silvermine Players, newly-formed this yeaar, draws its talent from all parts of Fairfield County. Ben Abadie of Wilton is a member. Its purpose is to do experimental plays, as well as revivals of classics, Greek plays, and musicals.

Reservation for "Othello" may be made by calling the Silvermine Guild office in Norwalk.

White Barn

"U.S.A." Premiere

The White Barn Theatre, Westport, will present the premiere performance of "U.S.A." dramatic narrative of John Dos Passos's novel adapted and staged by Paul Shyre, Saturday and Sunday.

Connecticut Symphony

Victor Borge

The Victor Borge concert, for which tickets have been sold since the Pops Operating committee announced his coming in June, takes place Friday in Fairfield University at 8:45 p.m. Evan Whallon twice conductor [illegible] past Pops programs, will [illegible] at the podium.

What the Borge will play Friday night, no one knows. It is a secret with t[illegible]morist, who says he himself [illegible] know until he gets there. [illegible] made three requests—a [illegible]uned piano; an orches[illegible]e stage; and [illegible] of an ape [illegible].

Mr. Whallon, [illegible] in the audience [illegible] this in a small measure gives a faint inkling of what Pops patrons can expect.

Although the Borge part of the program is a big question mark,

Tanglewood Plays "Romeo & Juliet"

Litchfield Enquirer 8/6

With Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon August 7 and 9, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor on Saturday evening August 8, the Berkshire Festival concerts continue this week-end in the 6,000 seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lonox, Mass.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony gave it its complet version with chorus and soloists last winter for the first time, and which now has its first performance at Tanglewood. Jennie Tourel, Mezzo-soprano, will sing the alto role; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone will be the bass soloist; and John McCollum, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will be the tenor; and the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, will assist.

Mr. Bernstein's concert Saturday night will be a memorial to

Jennie Tourel

Serge Koussevitzky for twenty-five years conductor of the Boston Symphony, and the guiding spirit behind the Tanglewood annual festival and school activities. The program opens with Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina," which Dr. Koussevitzky performed many times. Miss Tourel will be soloist both in Ravel's "Sheherazade" and in Mahler's Symphony No. 2("Resurrection") with choral finale. The soprano role in the latter will be sung by Theresa Green, of Baltimore, a Bershire Music Center student.

Theresa Green

Gregor Piatigorsky will be soloist in Darius Milhaud's Concerto for Cello, No. 1 on the Sunday afternoon program, and will team with Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote." The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 P. M. will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

play opposite Miss Jordan as George Henderson, senator and diplomat. The past two seasons Mr. Clarke has been featured in New York and on tour in "The Shrike," winner of a Pulitzer Prize. The cast of "Affairs of State" will also include Eleanor Wilson, J. W. Austin and Stuart Germain.

"The Three-Toed Pony," Sidney Michaels unusual new comedy, that stars Fay Bainter and features Romney Brent, will have its last two performances on Saturday, August 8th.

Tanglewood Plans Gala Program

Scenes from opera, short symphonic pieces, chamber music, a violin concerto and a gala concert which includes portions of "Porgy and Bess," with soloists and the Festival Chorus, are some of the highlights of "Tanglewood on Parade," which will be held, rain or shine, at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, August 13, from 6 to 11 P.M.

The full program follows: Fanfare: Welcome by Boris Goldovsky at 5:45; The Berkshire Music Center in Operation, 6:00, with simultaneous sessions of each department; short symphonic works by the orchestra in the Shed, opera scenes in the Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music in the Chamber Music Hall

At 7:00, Lawn Party and picnic supper. Everyone is invited to bring a picnic supper and to make use of the buffet and refreshment carts. There will be a concert by the Chorus on the porch of the Main House during supper.

At 8:45, Gala Concert in the Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus, conducted by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, which includes Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Act II, Scenes 1 and 2 of "Porgy and Bess," with soloists William Warfield, baritone and Leontyne Price, soprano, and the Festival Chrous.

There will be a drawing for door prizes immediately after the concert, followed by waltzing on the lawn by the Main House.

Cir. (D 19,394)
This Clipping From
NEWBURGH, N. Y.
NEWS
AUG 7 - 1953

Warfield To Sing at Tanglewood

"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Festival version of a "country fair," will be held on Thursday, Aug. 13.

Stars who will take a musical part include the noted violinist Isaac Stern, the soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, who made such a success in "Porgy and Bess," the baritone William Warfield.

Warfield, a big fellow with a big voice, received a tremendous ovation upon his first London and Paris appearances recently.

Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the Summer School of Music, including some unusual opera scenes, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dancing will follow.

Tanglewood is located at Lenox, Mass., a small village in the rolling Berkshires of eastern Massachusetts. The program on Aug. 13 will begin at 5:45 p.m. A note to would-be Festival fans: make sure to arrive early and leave late and you'll have no traffic woes. The reason for this advice follows: this year the Festival is drawing an average of 9,000 fans per concert. The 2:30 p.m. concert on Sunday is: Schubert Symphony No. 5; Barber, Adagio; Strauss, Don Quixote with Gregor Piatigorsky; Milhaud, Concerto for Cello and Roussel Bacchus et Ariane Suite.

[illegible] Arrangements were in charge of Funeral Directors David L. [illegible] Sons, Inc.

[illegible] by Arthur Daly and [illegible] Rogers.

[illegible] head of the Belgian NRLS Insti-

Cir. (D 60,097) (S 112,417)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 7 - 1953

Boston Symphony Gives Flutist Job to Woman

HONORED—Doriot Anthony is the first woman to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. She became first flutist in 1952 upon the retirement of the veteran, Georges Laurent.

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Back in 1937, Universal Pictures made a money-maker with Deanna Durbin and Leopold Stokowski with the intriguing title, "100 Men and A Girl." The Boston Symphony Orchestra, now playing a series of concerts at Tanglewood, goes Universal four better. The unofficial billing is "104 Men and A Girl," with the fascinating young flutist, Doriot Anthony, assuming the role of Miss Durbin (except that Deanna was a singer) and Charles Munch waving his eloquent hands in the best Stokowski traditions.

Miss Anthony, only 30, is the first woman to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. She succeeds George S. Laurent recently retired, who was considered the greatest flute virtuoso in the world.

In her short span of artistic endeavor Miss Anthony, a graduate of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, has appeared with Bruno Walter, William Steinberg, the late Hans Kindler and Alfred Wallenstein. She studied with her mother, Mrs. W. C. Anthony, and Ernest Liegal, Georges Barrere and William Kincaid. She worked under Henri de Busscher of Los Angeles on interpretation.

IMPORTANT JOB

Now the first flutist of any major symphony orchestra is a pretty important person. It is the flutist who puts in all the decorative arabesques with many of the other woodwinds and solo instruments. Quite frequently, Miss Anthony has her own moments of triumph when the composer gives her an opportunity for solo passages. It is then that she is requested to rise from her chair to receive audience recognition.

During the years that the Boston Symphony was the magnet for Tanglewood, the dapper little Frenchman, Georges Laurent, held down the first flute desk. And he was "tops" in his field But we must confess, reluctantly, that the vivacious Miss Anthony is really terrific!

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 7 - 1953

Bruckner Medal To Be Presented Bernstein Tomorrow

Following tomorrow night's performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"), Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct it, will be awarded the Bruckner Society medal by Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of the Boston Post. The ceremony in the Green Room of the Tanglewood Music Shed will be attended by Mrs. Alma Mahler Werfel, widow of the composer, who will come to Lenox for the occasion.

The award is given for outstanding performance of German music. The symphony will conclude the 11th program of the Berkshire Festival.

Cir. (D 38,502)
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 7 - 1953

Big Benefit At Tanglewood On Thursday

With Isaac Stern, violinist, soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert, which commences at 8:15 p. m. in the 6,000 - seat music shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City. William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London. The baritone left the Gershwin opera before its Paris and New York engagements to resume his concert appearances. "Porgy and Bess" had music by George Gershwin, libretto by DuBose Heyward, lyrics by Mr. Heyward and Ira Gershwin, and is based on the play "Porgy" by Dorothy and DuBose Heyward. The Tanglewood presentation will have the Berkshire Festival chorus of more than 100 students and will include the well-known musical numbers "It Ain't Necessarily So," "What You Want With Bess," "The Street Cries," "I Loves You, Porgy."

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, of Minneapolis, vice - chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield.

Cir. (D 56,872)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
AUG 7 - 1953

Two 'Porgy and Bess' Scenes To Highlight Tanglewood Fete

A gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with two scenes from the George Gershwin opera, "Porgy and Bess," will highlight the annual benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center Thursday night at Tanglewood.

The Music Center is the summer school of music maintained by the symphony orchestra.

Stars of the concert will be violinist, Isaac Stern; soprano, Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her baritone husband, William Warfield.

Billed as "Tanglewood on Parade," the program will open at 6 p. m. with all departments of the Music Center in operation simultaneously. Short symphonic works will be offered in the Music Shed, opera scenes will be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall and music will be played in the Chamber Music Hall.

Guests have been invited to take picnic suppers to the lawn party at 7:15 p. m. During supper the Festival Chorus will sing from the porch of the Main House.

Mr. Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the night concert in the Music Shed, starting at 8:15 p. m. The orchestra also will play Handel's Water Music Suite.

Scenes 1 and 2 from the second act of "Porgy and Bess" will comprise the second half of the concert program, to be directed by Leonard Bernstein. In this presentation Miss Price and Mr. Warfield will be soloists with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Dancing on the lawn will follow the concert.

This Clipping From VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 12 1953

Dangle Boston Symphony On Closed-Circuit Basis For Exhibs' Off Nights

Newly-organized theatre-TV outfit, Stadium Television Network, is peddling a series of symphony concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to exhibitors with closed-circuit equipment. Company, headed by Edward L. Dorfman, an indie film producer and formerly veepee of United World Films, is asking theatres to sign up for a series of five concerts which would be presented on an off film night, either Monday or Tuesday. Dorfman's pitch also guarantees the appearance of a top longhair soloist with the Boston symph.

Stadium's spiel to exhibs is that the outfit would come into a city to pre-sell the entire event on a subscription basis. If it fails to sell out at least half the house, theatres can back out without any obligation. Houses that sign up for the series are asked to plunk down a guarantee of about $200.

Exhib interest on the event is divided, with circuits pointing out that the reaction from local managers has varied from city to city. Detroit, for example, has shown tremendous interest. Several circuit execs indicated they might want to try it on an experimental basis since the Boston symph rates as a hot attraction. Musical aggregation recently returned from a hinterland tour and chalked up sock b.o. returns.

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 7 - 1953

Tanglewood Benefit Set For Aug. 13

With Isaac Stern, violinist, soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, at the evening concert, which commences at 8:15 p. m. in the 6,000 - seat music shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City. William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London. The baritone left the Gershwin opera befort its Paris and New York engagements to resume his - concert appearances. "Porgy and Bess" had music by George Gershwin, libretto by DuBose Heyward, lyrics by Mr. Heyward and Ira Gershwin, and is based on the play "Porgy" by Dorothy and DuBose Heyward. The Tanglewood presentation will have the Berkshire Festival chorus of more than 100 students and will include the well-known musical numbers "It Ain't Necessarily So," "What You Want With Bess," the Street Cries, "I Loves You, Porgy."

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, of Minneapolis, vice - chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield.

Designed for Women

By Alice Gould Edman

A FINE introduction to Tanglewood, in case your young people disdain it, is to take them to Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. At 6 they may hear any of five simultaneous performances by the talented students, or a little of each. You are urged to picnic on the lawn. (Drinks will be available at the cafeteria, if you have the patience to wait in line.) If the performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the Beethoven violin concerto, with the remarkable Isaac Stern as soloist is a little too "classical," songs, will follow from "Porgy and Bess," by Leontyne Price, now playing Bess on Broadway, and her husband, William Warfield, who played Porgy on tour. They might win a new high fidelity record player or one of the 38 other door prizes.

THE music [illegible] don't hear the refrain. We Berkshire County residents continually [illegible] this Tanglewood Festival visitors by taking this institution for granted. It is known as one of the great music festivals of the world, far and wide, and as the leading effort of its kind in the U.S. [illegible] years it has reached a point [illegible] in Europe would take a century.

[18]

Cir. (D 98,282)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 7 - 1953

LOIS MARSHALL
Canadian Soprano

SEYMOUR LIPKIN
Pianist

Greatest Tanglewood Season Ends Aug. 16

LENOX, Aug. 7—With an anticipated attendance at its 15 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000, a nexpected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the symphony), and a predictable 40,000 patrons at the 38 concerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, concludes its 1953 program next weekend. One hundred and fifty thousand persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts the concluding concerts on Friday night (Aug. 14) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 16), and Leonard Bernstein will be on the great music shed's podium for the concert of Saturday night (Aug. 15).

Lois Marshall to Sing

The Friday evening program will be given over entirely to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor who is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this Summer.

Lipkin, Piano Soloist

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fantasque (Sunday afternoon).

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

20—The Berkshire Evening Eag

Marsh Works Being Shown At Festival

Final Art Exhibition To Close on August 16

The final art exhibition of the weekly series in the glass reception room at the main Tanglewood gate opened today with examples of the work of Reginald Marsh, American artist who is particularly noted for his paintings of New York City and people. The show will run until the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Aug. 16.

Born in Paris in 1898 of American parents, the artist spent his youth in New York and was educated at Lawrenceville School and Yale University. After college, where he was cartoonist for the Yale Record, he returned to New York for further study under Jacques Maroger and at the Art Students' League.

In 1922 he joined the New York Daily News as staff cartoonist and caricaturist, leaving it three years later to free-lance and to collaborate with Robert Edmond Jones and John Murray Anderson on theatre design. His work, mainly cartoons, has appeared in the New Yorker magazine, Fortune and Harper's. In addition to cartooning he has worked in fresco. Examples of this media are in the new Washington (D.C.) Post Office and the New York Custom House.

The exhibit, like others at Tanglewood, was arranged by Stuart C. Henry, director of the Berkshire Museum, where Mr. Marsh has a one-man show through August.

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 7 - 1953

'Tanglewood Parade' Set for Aug. 13

This year's session of "Tanglewood on Parade" at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. will feature Isaac Stern, violinist, in a performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, William Warfield, bass-baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, in a scene from their recent revival of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

The festival will be held Thursday, Aug. 13, at 6 p. m. on the grounds at Tanglewood.

The Boston Symphony will present its concert under Dr. Charles Munch at 8:15 p. m. playing Handel's "Water Music," the Beethoven concerto with Mr. Stern and the "Porgy and Bess" excerpt.

At 6 p. m. there will be simultaneous sessions by each of the departments making up the Berkshire music center, including chamber music, opera and orchestra. At 7:15 p. m., there will be a lawn party and picnic supper with a concert by choral students.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 8 - 1953

MUNCH CONDUCTS BERLIOZ SYMPHONY

Leads Boston Orchestra in 'Romeo et Juliette' at Fete —Three Soloists Score

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra began tonight their second week-end of Berkshire Music Festival concerts with a performance of Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo et Juliette."

Selection of this difficult and demanding work, in which a personal triumph for conductor or soloists is almost an impossibility, is an index of the high standards that continue to prevail at Tanglewood and of the Boston Symphony's desire to present an unhackneyed repertoire for those who make the pilgrimage to the Berkshire Festival.

The reason, perhaps, why "Romeo et Juliette" is not performed oftener is that, aside from its considerable length, it requires three really excellent soloists, a capable chorus with plenty of time to rehearse and a conductor who understands and feels at home in the world of Berlioz.

Most of these conditions were fulfilled at tonight's performance. Mr. Munch showed us Berlioz' "Romeo" in vivid flashes. The symphony is an uneven work, moments of inspiration alternating with pure bombast. So deft was Mr. Munch's treatment of the difficult work, however, that the bombast seemed less bombastic, the inspiration more exalted than usual.

It was a fresh demonstration of how much can be added to the composer's notations for performance by a conductor of skill, experience and devotion.

Among tonight's soloists, Jennie Tourel was outstanding in the important music allotted to the contralto. As narrator and commentator of the drama, Miss Tourel sang with her usual expressive intensity and fine musicianship.

John McCollum sang the briefer music of the tenor with good effect. Nicola Moscona was sonorous and impressive in Friar Laurence's concluding recitative and aria. The capable chorus was a Tanglewood student group, prepared for this performance by Hugh Ross.

On the whole tonight's performance was a sensitive, stimulating reading of a score that contains more than its fair share of pitfalls for the performers. The work is interesting to hear even in a merely adequate reading, and it is an exciting musical experience when done in a superlative performance, as this was.

Tanglewood Concert Wins Huge Crowd

(Special to The American)
Lenox, Mass., Aug. 8—One of the largest of Saturday night audiences is expected at Tanglewood here tonight for the annual memorial concert in honor of Serge Koussevitzky, who did such much to establish this mecca for music-lovers. Leonard Bernstein, who studied conducting here at the Berkshire Music School under Koussevitzsky, will be the conductor.

Tonight's program will feature Jennie Tourel, contralto, whom the audience of 7,500 heard last night. Miss Tourel, who was heard in a program of songs in Waterbury in recent years, will be the soloist tonight in Ravel's "Sheherazade," three poems for voice and orchestra to the verses of Tristan Klingsor. She will also be a soloist in the second half of the program, the Mahler "Symphony in C Minor, No. 2, for orchestra, soprano and alto solos, and mixed chorus." Theresa Green will sing the soprano solos. Mr. Bernstein will open his program with Moussorgsky's "Prelude to 'Khovanstchina'."

The chorus which did so well last night in Berlioz' "Romeo et Juliette," dramatic symphony, will be heard in tonight's program.

Last night's audience, some 700 more than the corresponding night last year, heard Conductor Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus with Miss Tourel, John McCollum, tenor and Nicola Moscona, bass, in an unusual program. Hearing the "Romeo et Juliette" music was a real treat. One was glad to hear this music so seldom offered on programs and offered at Tanglewood for the first time. Those who heard it here last night under such able conducting will be glad to know that Mr. Munch and the Boston have recorded it and it will be available on discs early this fall.

The audience was so pleased with the performance that it did not wait for intermission to applaud. There was a burst of applause following the Love Scene presented by the orchestra and chorus in the Capulet's Garden, silent and deserted. The scherzo, presenting Queen Mab, of the Fairy of Dreams, just before intermission was excellent. The whole performance was magnificent.

By intermission time the beautiful night's temperature had changed enough to make the audience realize that there was more than a snap in the Berkshire air. It was definitely cool. Even in the large Music Shed. A warm coat was well appreciated. In fact, as we watched the chorus of many young women throughout the second part of the program, we kept wondering if they were not cold up there on the platform in their cool, white summer dresses.

If you are going to Tanglewood for the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert at 8:30 o'clock tonight we recommend you [illegible] other than your [illegible]ong.

S. M.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 7 - 1953

Berkshire Festival Opens Second Concert Tonight

The second weekend of concerts in the Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival will open tonight at 8:30 o'clock with a performance of the "Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony by Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch will conduct tonight's concert and the Sunday concert at 2:30 p.m. Tomorrow evening Leonard Bernstein will conduct a Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

* * *

SOLOISTS TONIGHT will be Jennie Tourel and Nichola Moscona. Miss Tourel will also be the soloist tomorrow evening for Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony. Other numbers tomorrow evening will be the Moussorgsky "Prelude to Khovanstchina"; the Haydn "Symphony number 102 in B flat" and the Ravel "Scheherazade."

Sunday's program will feature Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, as soloist in the Milhaud "Concerto for 'Cello" and in Strauss "Don Quixote" in which he will share honors with violist Joseph De Pasquale. Also included will be the Schubert "Symphony number 5 in B flat," the Barber "Adagio for Strings" and the Roussel "Bacchus et Ariane."

[19]

Cir. (D 98,282)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 7 - 1953

LOIS MARSHALL
Canadian Soprano

SEYMOUR LIPKIN
Pianist

Greatest Tanglewood Season Ends Aug. 16

LENOX, Aug. 7—With an anticipated attendance at its 15 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000, a nexpected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the symphony), and a predictable 40,000 patrons at the 38 concerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, concludes its 1953 program next weekend. One hundred and fifty thousand persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts the concluding concerts on Friday night (Aug. 14) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 16), and Leonard Bernstein will be on the great music shed's podium for the concert of Saturday night (Aug. 15).

Lois Marshall to Sing

The Friday evening program will be given over entirely to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, who is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this Summer.

Lipkin, Piano Soloist

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fantasque (Sunday afternoon).

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 7 - 1953

'Tanglewood Parade' Set for Aug. 13

This year's session of "Tanglewood on Parade" at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. will feature Issac Stern, violinist, in a performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, bass-baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, in a scene from their recent revival of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch.

The festival will be held Thursday, Aug. 13, at 6 p. m. on the grounds at Tanglewood.

The Boston Symphony will present its concert under Dr. Charles Munch at 8:15 p. m. playing Handel's "Water Music," the Beethoven concerto with Mr. Stern and the "Porgy and Bess" excerpt.

At 6 p. m. there will be simultaneous sessions by each of the departments making up the Berkshire music center, including chamber music, opera and orchestra. At 7:15 p. m., there will be a lawn party and picnic supper with a concert by choral students.

Marsh Works Being Shown At Festival

Final Art Exhibition To Close on August 16

The final art exhibition of the weekly series in the glass reception room at the main Tanglewood gate opened today with examples of the work of Reginald Marsh, American artist who is particularly noted for his paintings of New York City and people. The show will run until the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Aug. 16.

Born in Paris in 1898 of American parents, the artist spent his youth in New York and was educated at Lawrenceville School and Yale University. After college, where he was cartoonist for the Yale Record, he returned to New York for further study under Jacques Maroger and at the Art Students' League.

In 1922 he joined the New York Daily News as staff cartoonist and caricaturist, leaving it three years later to free-lance and to collaborate with Robert Edmond Jones and John Murray Anderson on theatre design. His work, mainly cartoons, has appeared in the New Yorker magazine, Fortune and Harper's. In addition to cartooning he has worked in fresco. Examples of this media are in the new Washington (D.C.) Post Office and the New York Custom House.

The exhibit, like others at Tanglewood, was arranged by Stuart C. Henry, director of the Berkshire Museum, where Mr. Marsh has a one-man show through August.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 8 - 1953

MUNCH CONDUCTS BERLIOZ SYMPHONY

Leads Boston Orchestra in 'Romeo et Juliette' at Fete —Three Soloists Score

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra began tonight their second week-end of Berkshire Music Festival concerts with a performance of Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo et Juliette."

Selection of this difficult and demanding work, in which a personal triumph for conductor or soloists is almost an impossibility, is an index of the high standards that continue to prevail at Tanglewood and of the Boston Symphony's desire to present an unhackneyed repertoire for those who make the pilgrimage to the Berkshire Festival.

The reason, perhaps, why "Romeo et Juliette" is not performed oftener is that, aside from its considerable length, it requires three really excellent soloists, a capable chorus with plenty of time to rehearse and a conductor who understands and feels at home in the world of Berlioz.

Most of these conditions were fulfilled at tonight's performance. Mr. Munch showed us Berlioz' "Romeo" in vivid flashes. The symphony is an uneven work, moments of inspiration alternating with pure bombast. So deft was Mr. Munch's treatment of the difficult work, however, that the bombast seemed less bombastic, the inspiration more exalted than usual.

It was a fresh demonstration of how much can be added to the composer's notations for performance by a conductor of skill, experience and devotion.

Among tonight's soloists, Jennie Tourel was outstanding in the important music allotted to the contralto. As narrator and commentator of the drama, Miss Tourel sang with her usual expressive intensity and fine musicianship.

John McCollum sang the briefer music of the tenor with good effect. Nicola Moscona was sonorous and impressive in Friar Laurence's concluding recitative and aria. The capable chorus was a Tanglewood student group, prepared for this performance by Hugh Ross.

On the whole tonight's performance was a sensitive, stimulating reading of a score that contains more than its fair share of pitfalls for the performers. The work is interesting to hear even in a merely adequate reading, and it is an exciting musical experience when done in a superlative performance, as this was.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 7 - 1953

Berkshire Fes... Second Concer...

The second weekend of concerts in the Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival will open tonight at 8:30 o'clock with a performance of the "Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony by Hector Berlioz. Charles Munch will conduct tonight's concert and the Sunday concert at 2:30 p.m. Tomorrow evening Leonard Bernstein will conduct a Koussevitzky Memorial Concert.

* * *

SOLOISTS TONIGHT will be Jennie Tourel and Nichola Moscona. Miss Tourel will also be the soloist tomorrow evening for Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony. Other numbers tomorrow evening

...ool ma... ...chers ... One hundred high school ma... ...matics and science of the ... ...reasure financial ... ...given a co... by Jo... ... Electric adress at ... in an address at ... GE treasurer, at ... Wednesday nig... ...ware honors ... ...with v... ...seph De Pasquale. Also included will be the Schubert "Symphony number 5 in B flat," the Barber "Adagio for Strings" and the Roussel "Bacchus et Ariane."

[19]

Tanglewood Concert Wins Huge Crowd

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. ... One of the largest of Saturday night audiences is expected at Tanglewood here tonight for the annual memorial concert in honor of Serge Koussevitzky, who did such much to establish this mecca for music-lovers. Leonard Bernstein, who studied conducting here at the Berkshire Music School under Koussevitzsky, will be the conductor.

Tonight's program will feature Jennie Tourel, contralto, whom the audience of 7,500 heard last night. Miss Tourel, who was heard in a program of songs in Waterbury in recent years, will be the soloist tonight in Ravel's "Sheherazade," three poems for voice and orchestra to the verses of Tristan Klingsor. She will also be a soloist in the second half of the program, the Mahler "Symphony in C Minor, No. 2, for orchestra, soprano and alto solos, and mixed chorus." Theresa Green will sing the soprano solos. Mr. Bernstein will open his program with Moussorgsky's "Prelude to 'Khovanstchina'."

The chorus which did so well last night in Berlioz' "Romeo et Juliette," dramatic symphony, will be heard in tonight's program.

Last night's audience, some 700 more than the corresponding night last year, heard Conductor Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus with Miss Tourel, John McCollum, tenor and Nicola Moscona, bass, in an unusual program. Hearing the "Romeo et Juliette" music was a real treat. One was glad to hear this music so seldom offered on programs and offered at Tanglewood for the first time. Those who heard it here last night under such able conducting will be glad to know that Mr. Munch and the Boston have recorded it and it will be available on discs early this fall.

The audience was so pleased with the performance that it did not wait for intermission to applaud. There was a burst of applause following the Love Scene presented by the orchestra and chorus in the Capulet's Garden, silent and deserted. The scherzo, presenting Queen Mab, of the Fairy of Dreams, just before intermission was excellent. The whole performance was magnificent.

By intermission time the beautiful night's temperature had changed enough to make the audience realize that there was more than a snap in the Berkshire air. It was definitely cool. Even in the large Music Shed. A warm coat was well appreciated. In fact, as we watched the chorus of many young women throughout the second part of the program, we kept wondering if they were not cold up there on the platform in their cool, white summer dresses.

If you are going to Tanglewood for the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert at 8:30 o'clock tonight we would definitely recommend you take something other than your sheerest dress along.

S. M.

Cir. (D 91,577)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 8 - 1953

'Tanglewood on Parade' To Have Varied Program

Thursday Event at Berkshire Music Center Will Feature Isaac Stern; Stars of 'Porgy and Bess' Dancing on the Lawn; Orchestral Concert

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

LEONTYNE PRICE

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, at the evening concert, which commences at 8.15 p. m. in the 6000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins David and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City. William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London.

The baritone left the Gershwin opera before its Paris and New York engagements to resume his concert appearances. "Porgy and Bess" had music by George Gershwin, libretto by DuBose Heyward, lyrics by Mr. Heyward and Ira Gershwin, and is based on the play "Porgy" by Dorothy and DuBose Heyward. The Tanglewood presentation will have the Berkshire Festival chorus of more than 100 students, and will include the well-known musical numbers "It Ain't Necessarily So," "What You Want With Bess," the Street Cries, "I Loves You, Porgy."

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Minneapolis, vice-chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield. The committee is also arranging for more than 40 door prizes.

The program is as follows:

4:00 p. m.—Opera Scenes (students of Dept. IV), formal gardens (for boxholders and reserves seat patrons only).

5:45 p. m.—Fanfare; welcome by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

6:00 p. m.—Simultaneous demonstrations by each department, Berkshire Music Center:

Music shed—Short symphonic works, orchestra (Dept. I students)

Theater-concert hall—World premiere of one-act opera and cantata:

"Bad boys in School," opera in one act by Jan Meyerowitz (by students, associate division, Dept. IV).

"A Little Boy Lost," cantata by Alan Sapp. (From "Songs of Innocence" and "Songs of Experience" by William Blake) (by students of Dept. V).

Chamber music hall—Chamber music program (Dept. I students).

7:15 p. m.—Lawn party—Picnic supper—Concert by chorus.

8:15 p. m.—Music Shed—Gala Concert. Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Munch, conductor.

Handel .....Water Music
Beethoven .....Violin Concerto
Soloist: Isaac Stern
Boston Symphony Orchestra — Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Gershwin..."Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2.

Soloists: Leontyne Price, Soprano; William Warfield, baritone and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

11:00 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 8 - 1953

The Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Performs Berlioz' 'Romeo and Juliet'

By Francis O. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Aided by good weather, the Berkshire Festival entered its fifth and semi-final week end at Tanglewood tonight, when Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the Romeo and Juliet Symphony of Hector Berlioz. The soloists were Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, Metropolitan Opera bass.

This was the first performance of this symphony, which occupied the entire concert, in these festivals. It has been a notable work for well over a century, and several of its sections are in the standard repertory, but complete performances, owing to its length and its requirement of a chorus, occur very seldom. The last time it was heard in full in New York was when it was given by the Philharmonic Symphony under Toscanini in October, 1942, as a feature of that orchestra's centennial. Last season's performance by the Boston Symphony was said to be that eminent organization's first full presentation of the entire work. Thus despite the age of the work, much of it was a novelty to many of its hearers.

The attendance, including the crowd in the vast music shed and outside on the lawn, was 7,500, compared with 6,825 for the first concert of last summer's corresponding week end. The corresponding figures for 1951 and 1950 were 7,60 0and 8,500.

Cir. (D 641,486) (Sat. 274,941)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 8 - 1953

MUSIC

Berlioz in Berkshires

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8.—One work alone occupied the program for the opening concert of the second week in the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, here at Tanglewood, last night. That work was none other than Hector Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet." The conductor was Charles Munch.

New York last heard the piece some years ago when Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony performed it in Carnegie Hall. The maestro had also led it in the same auditorium in 1942, the orchestra being the Philharmonic-Symphonic, whose centennial was being celebrated that year.

Last night's representation was without cuts, complete. The soloists were Jennie Tourel, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona. The chorus, a large one, was that of the Berkshire Festival, director Hugh Ross.

* * *

It is not exactly known when Berlioz's devotion to Shakespear actually started. However, it is known that when he heard one of the Bard's works, with Harriet, Smithson, the English actress in the cast, his devotionf or Shakespeare increased in direct ratio with the rise of his infatuation for La Smithson. He married the lady, sometime later, after an extraordinary courtship. And, still later, he abandoned her, leaving her to die in poverty.

It would be too cynical to say this "Romeo et Juliette" is a monument to that personal, rather sordid tragedy in Berlioz's life. But a monument it is, perhaps indirectly—who does know—after all—to a great work of the literary art, and Berlioz's mercurial score communicates much beauty, much of passion and much of human suffering.

* * *

It discusses the play, rather than parallel the story. It makes comment, via the chorus, and the tenor and mezzo soprano in the manner of the classic Greek chorus. There is only one impersonation, if one may describe it as such, and that is of Friar Laurence. The rest is the music.

The music calls for some large efforts on the part of orchestral musicians. It calls for fine sensibilities in its conductor.

Last evening the performance had vitality. The score unreeled before us with a special freedom and, at the same time, conviction. In the early sections of the piece, particularly during fortissimo passages, the sound of cellos appeared to be muffed. The whole string section at such places lacked some of the brilliance that is almost its second nature.

Moreover, the Queen Mab scherzo of the fourth movement contained, in the rendering, much less of the fragile, airy lightness required. The playing was precise, good, but rather heavy, and gone was the elfin, dream-like effect aimed at.

* * *

I do think, though, that Mr. Munch got his teeth into some part of the music to give it a thorough going over. This was true of the playing of the second movement, for example. And also of that part of the finale which refers to the resumption of the quarrel between the warring houses of the Montagues and Capulets.

Miss Tourel was distinction itself in the singing of her lines. Mr. Moscona had just the right accents for the scene of reproach at the end. Mr. McCollum acquitted himself agreeably. The chorus was splendid sometimes, and a bit careless on one or two occasions.

An audience of 7500 applauded noisily, calling the conductor and the soloists forward for many bows.

Berkshire Article In Post Tomorrow

The Berkshires as a resort area will be given a two-and-a-half page spread in tomorrow's magazine section of the Boston Sunday Post.

The article, ninth in a series of 13, is written by Frank G. Jason, Post feature writer. He has spent considerable time in the Berkshires and much of his material and photographs have been supplied by John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference.

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 8 - 1953

Berlioz 'Romeo' Given By Boston Symphony

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass. — Almost alone among contemporary conductors Charles Munch evinces a strong predilection for Berlioz.

This indulgence is convincingly vindicated in the case of the "Romeo and Juliet" symphony, which was given in its entirety by the Boston Symphony under Mr. Munch Friday night at Tanglewood. Along with the Requiem and the Infancy of Christ, it represents one of the French composer's few undoubted masterpieces.

Those who recall the incandescent radio broadcast of this work under Toscanini not too many seasons ago, the sinuous line of this typically Gallic interpretation was in radical contrast to the incisive and galvanized performance of the Italian maestro. But such an approach has as many advantages and Mr. Munch made the most of them.

* * *

THE MOST ELECTRIFYING portions of this particular performance, paradoxically enough, were not the familiar Fete of the Capulets, the love scene, nor the justly celebrated Queen Mab Scherzo, but the introduction and prologue (with its wonderful allegro fugato for strings) and the finale which contains the exchanges between Friar Laurence and the assembled Montagues and Capulets with the resultant reconciliation of the two warring families.

The soloist who shone most resplendently was Miss Jennie Tourel (with her brief area in the first part) and she did so through sheer musicianship and artistry. A singer's singer, the purity of her vocal line was an exemplar for the most professional to admire.

* * *

NICOLA MOSCONA, who essayed the part of Friar Laurence, provided a sonorous investiture to his lengthy role and John McCollum declaimed the vocal version of Mercutio's famed Queen Mab speech.

Mr. Munch's affinity for this gorgeous splash of pure orchestral color, however, was the major factor in revivifying this all-too seldom heard symphony with choruses.

Cir. (W 370,017)
This Clipping From
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 8 - 1953

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Friday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Berlioz's symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano; Nicola Moscona, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 8, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as well as other vocal soloists and a chorus. . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 9, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Thursday, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including performances by the various student departments, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Charles Münch and Leonard Bernstein, with Isaac Stern, violin; William Warfield, baritone; and Leontyne Price, soprano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing Brahms' Requiem, with Lois Marshall, soprano; William Warfield, baritone; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 15, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting; no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 16, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting, with Seymour Lipkin, piano. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

[20]

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 9 - 1953

Berkshire Series to End Sunday

THE Berkshire Festival's third and final series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will start Friday night with a performance of Brahms' "Requiem," Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, will be soloists with the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Another soloist of the series is Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who will appear at the closing concert Sunday afternoon. Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the Shed there will be a public rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday night's program which will consist of Symphony No. 4 in A minor, Sibelius; "Sinfonia India," Chavez, and Brahms' Second Symphony, in D major. Evening concerts are at 8:30 o'clock. The Sunday afternoon concert starts at 2:30 o'clock, the first part being broadcast. Charles Munch will conduct and the program will be as follows:

Symphony in B-minor ("Unfinished"), Schubert; Bourree Fantasque, Chabrier; Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde," Wagner; "A Siegfried Idyll," Wagner; Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Wagner; Piano Concerto For the Left Hand, Ravel, Seymour Lipkin, soloist; "La Valse," Ravel.

Open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be performances tomorrow and Tuesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall of Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," the summer's major production by students of the opera department. It will be sung to an English text by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with Goldovsky conducting the student orchestra.

Leo Van Witsen designed the costumes and John Blankenship the scenery, which will employ the Paul Planer GKP projections. This is a slide mechanism which is used in European opera houses and was introduced in this country in the Tanglewood production of Mozart's "Titus" last summer.

William Warfield
Will sing at Tanglewood

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will be further marked by the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Center Thursday night from 6 to 11 o'clock. It will begin with demonstrations by all departments of the Center, featured by the world premieres of a one-act opera, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowits, and a cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp.

At 8:15 o'clock, after a lawn party, picnic supper and concert by choral students, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present a gala concert in the Shed. Munch will conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. Bernstein will conduct scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," in which Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of the Broadway production of the opera, and her husband, William Warfield, will appear as soloists with the chorus. At the close of the concert Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will draw door prizes and the evening will wind up with "Waltzing on the Lawn."

So far this summer all attendance records have been broken. The series of "small" concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall during July had an average attendance of 4360. Since the hall's seating capacity is 1156 it meant that some 3000 persons per concert sat on the lawns to hear the music.

Box-office receipts for the six concerts are said to total $52,224, an increase of 35 per cent over those of last year. The Boston Symphony Orchestra management is said to be considering moving these concerts next season into the 6000-seat Shed.

Cir. (D 89,838) (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

CARLOS CHAVEZ WILL BE HONORED AT TANGLEWOOD

Mexican Composer's 'Sinfonia India' to Be Given During Last Week End

Lenox, Aug. 8—The distinguished composer-conductor Carols Chavez will be honored during the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts when, on Saturday night Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Sinfonia India", composed in 1935-6, and given its first concert performance by the Boston Symphony in April, 1936, when the composer was the orchestra's guest conductor.

In 1928, Mr. Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, which he has built into one of the finest ensembles on the continent. In that year he was appointed director of the National Conservatory of Music, in 1933 he was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, and under President Aleman's regime, in 1946 was named Mexico's director of fine arts.

Carlos began to compose as a child. His first symphony dates from 1918. In the next three years he wrote extensively for orchestra, piano, ensemble and voice. The String Quartet of 1921 was a summation of his apprenticeship and a clear intimation of his mature works.

Chosen as Conductor

It was in July 1928, that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then, in Mexico City, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of Mexico City, with no admission, no tickets.. Now it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts. After 18 years, in July 1945, he announced his resignation: he was in himself the Orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Alemen asked him to remain as titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him director of fine arts: he has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

Among his other important compositions are "Sinfonia de Antigona" (1937) three great choral works, "Tierra Mojada", "El Sol", "Llamadas": a ballet for Martha Graham, known in this country as "Dark Meadow", commissioned by the Library of Congress; a Concerto for Piano, premiered in 1942; a Concerto for Violin, premiered in 1952.

Several Commissions

His Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the Louisville Philharmonic, was given its first performance, the composer conducting the orchestra, February, 1953. He is in process of composing a symphony, commissioned by Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, present ambassador to Italy, in memory of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw. He has also been commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to write an orchestral work on which he will start toward the end of the year; and by New York's Ballet Society, to compose a three-act opera, "The Tuscan Players", to a libretto by Chester Kallman, co-author of the libretto for Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress," to be finished August, 1954, and to be offered first to the New York City Opera Company.

In the opinion of Aaron Copland, the American composer who is his confrere at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, Carlos Chavez "Has gradually evolved a style which is racial and still his own. Composing to him is a natural function, like eating or sleeping. His music is not a substitute for living but a manifestation of life. It exudes softness. Here is absolute music, if ever there was any."

Performed at Tanglewood

A number of Mr. Chavez' compositions are being performed on concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center this summer. One was "Arbolucu", a setting for chorus of a Spanish folksong, from the unique collection of more than 1000 Spanish and Portugese native airs made in 1933-4 by Kurt Schindler, founder of the Schola Cantorum, New York. It was composed in 1942 at the request of Hugh Ross, the Berkshire Music School's choral head.

Cir. (D 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

'PARADE' EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD ON THURSDAY

Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price And William Warfield Will Be Stars of Program

Lenox, Aug. 8 — With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Beethoven Concerto

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, at the evening concert, which starts at 8.15 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance, and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City.

To Make Debut

William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London. The baritone left the Gershwin opera prior to its Paris and New York engagement to resume his concert appearances.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Minneapolis, vice-chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield. The committee is also arranging for more than 40 door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket-holders following the concert by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, who is appearing in two afternoon concerts, Thursday and Friday at the neighboring Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

The Program

The detailed program for "Tanglewood on Parade" follows:—

4 p. m.—Formal gardens, for boxholders and reserved seat patrons.

5.45 p. m.—Fanfare, welcome by Boris Goldovsky.

6 p. m.—Simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center. Music Shed, Short symphonic works, Orchestra of Department I; Theater-Concert Hall, World Premiere of one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowitz by students of the Associate Division of Department IV; Cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp, from, "Songs of Innocence," "Songs of Experience" by William Blake, Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music program, Students of Department I.

7.15 p. m.—Lawn party, picnic supper, concert by chorus, students of Department II.

8.15 p. m.—Music Shed, Gala Concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Handel's Water Music, Beethoven's Violin Concerto; soloist, Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor; Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, with Festival Chorus and soloists. William Warfield, baritone; Leontyne Price, soprano.

11 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes, by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

French Opera To Be Done at Tanglewood

8/9

'Richard Coeur-de-Lion' Monday and Tuesday

"Richard Coeur-de-Lion," an opera in three acts written shortly before the French Revolution by the prolific French composer, Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, will be performed Monday and Tuesday (Aug. 10 and 11) at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The work has been prepared, staged and will be conducted by Boris Goldovsky.

The Gretry opera, using a text by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, will be sung in English. "Richard Coeur-de-Lion," generally considered to be the foundation stone of French comic opera and the composer's masterpiece, had its premiere in Paris in 1784 and its first American performance in Boston in 1797. The records do not show any American performance of the work since a New York production in 1800.

Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenship, employing the Paul Planer GKP projections, a slide mechanism which is used in the larger opera houses of Europe. Costumes are by Leo Van Witsen; choreography is by Leo Kharibian. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct an orchestra of 38 student players.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 9 - 1953

Bernstein Gets Bruckner Medal at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 8—Conductor Leonard Bernstein was awarded the medal of the Bruckner Society of America tonight at the conclusion of the Koussevitzky memorial concert given as part of the Boston Symphony orchestra't Berkshire festival in the music shed at Tanglewood.

The award was made privately in the Green Room at the conclusion of a performance of Gustav Mahler's Second, or "Ressurection," Symphony.

Mr. Bernstein, known both as a former protege of the late Serge Koussevitzky and an ardent enthusiast of the music of Mahler, was presented the medal by Tucker Keiser, Boston music critic. The Bruckner Society of America is an organization dedicated to the propagation of music by Anton Bruckner and Gustav Mahler.

Among the guests at the ceremony was Mrs. Olga Naumoff Koussevitzky, widow of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The soloists for the "Ressurection" Symphony were Jennie Tourel, contralto, and Soprano Theresa Green.

The chorus was that of the Berkshire Festival, prepared by Hugh Ross. The concert began with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovantschina," and included Ravel's song cycle "Scheherazade," with Miss Tourel as soloist.

[21]

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I. JOURNAL
AUG 9 - 1953

Berkshire Series to End Sunday

THE Berkshire Festival's third and final series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will start Friday night with a performance of Brahms' "Requiem," Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, will be soloists with the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Another soloist of the series is Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who will appear at the closing concert Sunday afternoon. Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the Shed there will be a public rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct Saturday night's program which will consist of Symphony No. 4 in A minor, Sibelius; "Sinfonia India," Chavez, and Brahms' Second Symphony, in D major. Evening concerts are at 8:30 o'clock. The Sunday afternoon concert starts at 2:30 o'clock, the first part being broadcast. Charles Munch will conduct and the program will be as follows:

Symphony in B-minor ("Unfinished"), Schubert; Bourree Fantasque, Chabrier; Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde," Wagner; "A Siegfried Idyll," Wagner; Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Wagner; Piano Concerto For the Left Hand, Ravel, Seymour Lipkin, soloist; "La Valse," Ravel.

Open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be performances tomorrow and Tuesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall of Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," the summer's major production by students of the opera department. It will be sung to an English text by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with Goldovsky conducting the student orchestra.

Leo Van Witsen designed the costumes and John Blankenship the scenery, which will employ the Paul Planer GKP projections. This is a slide mechanism which is used in European opera houses and was introduced in this country in the Tanglewood production of Mozart's "Titus" last summer.

William Warfield
Will sing at Tanglewood

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will be further marked by the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Center Thursday night from 6 to 11 o'clock. It will begin with demonstrations by all departments of the Center, featured by the world premieres of a one-act opera, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowits, and a cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp.

At 8:15 o'clock, after a lawn party, picnic supper and concert by choral students, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present a gala concert in the Shed. Munch will conduct Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. Bernstein will conduct scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," in which Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of the Broadway production of the opera, and her husband, William Warfield, will appear as soloists with the chorus. At the close of the concert Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will draw door prizes and the evening will wind up with "Waltzing on the Lawn."

So far this summer all attendance records have been broken. The series of "small" concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall during July had an average attendance of 4360. Since the hall's seating capacity is 1156 it meant that some 3000 persons per concert sat on the lawns to hear the music.

Box-office receipts for the six concerts are said to total $52,224, an increase of 35 per cen over those of last year. The Boston Symphony Orchestra management is said to be considering moving these concerts next season into the 6000-seat Shed.

Cir. (S 87,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

CARLOS CHAVEZ WILL BE HONORED AT TANGLEWOOD

Mexican Composer's 'Sinfonia India' to Be Given During Last Week End

Lenox, Aug. 8—The distinguished composer-conductor Carols Chavez will be honored during the final weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts when, on Saturday night Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Sinfonia India", composed in 1935-6, and given its first concert performance by the Boston Symphony in April, 1936, when the composer was the orchestra's guest conductor.

In 1928, Mr. Chavez organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, which he has built into one of the finest ensembles on the continent. In that year he was appointed director of the National Conservatory of Music, in 1933 he was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, and under President Aleman's regime, in 1946 was named Mexico's director of fine arts.

Carlos began to compose as a child. His first symphony dates from 1918. In the next three years he wrote extensively for orchestra, piano, ensemble and voice. The String Quartet of 1921 was a summation of his apprenticeship and a clear intimation of his mature works.

Chosen as Conductor

It was in July 1928, that he accepted the post of conductor of what was then, in Mexico City, the orchestra of the Musicians' Union. From an aggregation of uncertain power and vague character, he has transformed it into the major symphony it is. The Orquesta Sinfonica de Mexico gave its first concerts for workers and peasants in a park on the outskirts of Mexico City, with no admission, no tickets.. Now it has a large subscription audience in the Palace of Fine Arts. After 18 years, in July 1945, he announced his resignation: he was in himself the Orchestra's conductor, artistic director, financial director, regisseur, general manager, advertising manager, publicity director. President Alemen asked him to remain as titular conductor, and in 1946 appointed him director of fine arts: he has since established Mexico's first official Museum of Fine Arts.

Among his other important compositions are "Sinfonia de Antigona" (1937) three great choral works, "Tierra Mojada", "El Sol", "Llamadas": a ballet for Martha Graham, known in this country as "Dark Meadow", commissioned by the Library of Congress; a Concerto for Piano, premiered in 1942; a Concerto for Violin, premiered in 1952.

Several Commissions

His Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the Louisville Philharmonic, was given its first performance, the composer conducting the orchestra, February, 1953. He is in process of composing a symphony, commissioned by Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, present ambassador to Italy, in memory of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw. He has also been commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to write an orchestral work on which he will start toward the end of the year; and by New York's Ballet Society, to compose a three-act opera, "The Tuscan Players" to a libretto by Chester Kallman, co-author of the libretto for Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress," to be finished August, 1954, and to be offered first to the New York City Opera Company.

In the opinion of Aaron Copland, the American composer who is his confrere at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, Carlos Chavez "Has gradually evolved a style which is racial and still his own. Composing to him is a natural function, like eating or sleeping. His music is not a substitute for living but a manifestation of life. It exemplifies the complete [illegible] nineteenth-century [illegible] lute music, which tyrannized [illegible] more than a hu[illegible] lewood [illegible] pounds no [illegible] aves' com- physics. C[illegible] formed on ordinarily [illegible] the Berk- clean-c[illegible] s summer. setting for song, from [illegible] more than tive airs made in 1933-4 by Kurt Schindler, founder of the Schola Cantorum, New York. It was composed in 1942 at the request of Hugh Ross, the Berkshire Music School's choral head.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

'PARADE' EVENT AT TANGLEWOOD ON THURSDAY

Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price And William Warfield Will Be Stars of Program

Lenox, Aug. 8—With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the "Bess" of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Beethoven Concerto

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, at the evening concert, which starts at 8.15 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance, and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Ziegfeld Theater, New York City.

To Make Debut

William Warfield will make his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem. Mr. Warfield and Miss Price were married a year ago just prior to singing the title roles in "Porgy and Bess" in the Davis-Breen production in Vienna, Berlin and London. The baritone left the Gershwin opera prior to its Paris and New York engagement to resume his concert appearances.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the ticket and publicity committee of 40 for "Tanglewood on Parade," with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Minneapolis, vice-chairman, and Mrs. George Edman, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The honorary committee includes Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and Mayor Robert T. Capeless, Pittsfield. The committee is also arranging for more than 40 door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket-holders following the concert by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, who is appearing in two afternoon concerts, Thursday and Friday at the neighboring Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

The Program

The detailed program for "Tanglewood on Parade" follows:—

4 p. m.—Formal gardens, for boxholders and reserved seat patrons.

5.45 p. m.—Fanfare, welcome by Boris Goldovsky.

6 p. m.—Simultaneous sessions of each department, Berkshire Music Center. Music Shed, Short symphonic works, Orchestra of Department I; Theater-Concert Hall, World Premiere of one-act opera and cantata, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowitz by students of the Associate Division of Department IV; Cantata, "A Little Boy Lost," by Alan Sapp, from "Songs of Innocence," "Songs of Experience" by William Blake, Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music program; Students of Department I.

7.15 p. m.—Lawn party, picnic supper, concert by chorus, students of Department II.

8.15 p. m.—Music Shed, Gala Concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Handel's Water Music, Beethoven's Violin Concerto; soloist, Isaac Stern; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor; Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, with Festival Chorus and soloists, William Warfield, baritone; Leontyne Price, soprano.

11 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes, by Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, followed by waltzing on the lawn.

French Opera To Be Done at Tanglewood

'Richard Coeur-de-Lion' Monday and Tuesday

"Richard Coeur-de-Lion," an opera in three acts written shortly before the French Revolution by the prolific French composer, Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, will be performed Monday and Tuesday (Aug. 10 and 11) at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The work has been prepared, staged and will be conducted by Boris Goldovsky.

The Gretry opera, using a text by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, will be sung in English. "Richard Coeur-de-Lion," generally considered to be the foundation stone of French comic opera and the composer's masterpiece, had its premiere in Paris in 1784 and its first American performance in Boston in 1797. The records do not show any American performance of the work since a New York production in 1800.

Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenship, employing the Paul Planer GKP projections, a slide mechanism which is used in the larger opera houses of Europe. Costumes are by Leo Van Witsen; choreography is by Leo Kharibian. Mr. Goldovsky will conduct an orchestra of 38 student players.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS. MORNING GLOBE
AUG 9 - 1953

Bernstein Gets Bruckner Medal at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 8—Conductor Leonard Bernstein was awarded the medal of the Bruckner Society of America tonight at the conclusion of the Koussevitzky memorial concert given as part of the Boston Symphony orchestra't Berkshire festival in the music shed at Tanglewood.

The award was made privately in the Green Room at the conclusion of a performance of Gustav Mahler's Second, or "Ressurection," Symphony.

Mr. Bernstein, known both as a former protege of the late Serge Koussevitzky and an ardent enthusiast of the music of Mahler, was presented the medal by Tucker Keiser, Boston music critic. The Bruckner Society of America is an organization dedicated to the propagation of music by Anton Bruckner and Gustav Mahler.

Among the guests at the ceremony was Mrs. Olga Naumoff Koussevitzky, widow of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The soloists for the "Ressurection" Symphony were Jennie Tourel, contralto, and Soprano Theresa Green.

The chorus was that of the Berkshire Festival, prepared by Hugh Ross. The concert began with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovantschina," and included Ravel's song cycle "Scheherazade," with Miss Tourel as soloist.

[21]

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 8—Theresa Green, scholarship student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, was awarded by Leonard Bernstein the coveted soprano role in the Mahler Symphony No. 2 at Tanglewood. The performance took place tonight. Aged 24, a native of Baltimore, in private life she is Mrs. Gilbert Coleman of New York City. She is a Marian Anderson award winner, has been a scholarship pupil at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, has won a John Hay Whitney Fellowship, and three times has won the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" award on his television program.

Theresa is the daughter of a minister, one of nine children, and had her first lessons from her mother, church organist and teacher in Baltimore. She has soloed under Reginald Stewart with the Baltimore Symphony, made her New York Town Hall debut in 1950. At Tanglewood this summer she sang the role of Julie in Gluck's comic opera, "The Drunkard Reformed." Next Tuesday night she will have the leading feminine role of Marguerite in Gretry's rarely-heard opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted." In September she returns to the professional concert stage for her first national tour, more than 60 engagements in the U. S. and Canada, as far afield as Newfoundland.

Distinguished Mexican composer-conductor Carlos Chavez, guest conductor at Tanglewood this summer introduced the violin concerto he wrote in 1952 at a lecture-recital at Tanglewood last Friday afternoon. The work was analyzed by composer Barney Childs, and performed by two guest artists, Miss Viviane Bertolani, violinist, New York City, who played it at its Los Angeles premiere, with Harry Kondaks, Boston, as pianist. At the season's final concert of the student symphony orchestra, Saturday, August 15, at 3 p. m. in the Music Shed, Mr. Chavez will lead the orchestra in his 1932 composition, "H. P." (meaning horse power), "Sinfonia de Baile" (ballet symphony).

Mrs. Alma Mahler Werfel, widow of Gustav Mahler, was guest of honor at the Berkshire Festival when Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program which included her late husband's Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection"). Following the performance, the conductor was awarded the Bruckner Society Medal in a ceremony in the Green Room.

Other Tanglewood guests this week end include Samuel Barber, the young American composer who was a teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1947, and whose "Adagio for Strings" will be performed by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday, afternoon; and the noted duo-pianists, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, of New York, who have given Tanglewood recitals. Mr. Luboshutz is an uncle of Boris Goldovsky, head of the summer school's opera department, and they will be his guests at the opening performances Monday night of the Gretry opera, "Richard the Lion-Hearted."

Newest foreign student at Tanglewood is Jaap Drielsma, of the Amsterdam Conservatory, in the Dutch City, a concert pianist who is a Study Group student in Department V.

Samuel Krachmalnick, who followed his brother Jacob, now concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, as a Tanglewood student, and who has one of Leonard Bernstein's more personable conducting pupils this summer, has left for New York, to conduct the subway circuit tour of the popular musical comedy, "Top Banana. The younger Krachmalnick, 27, of St. Louis, directed an orchestra of Department I students in last week's performance by the opera department of Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue."

"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the 18th century French opera which students of Boris Goldovsky's department of the Berkshire Music Center present at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday nights, will have alternates for two of the principal leads. Alvin Edmonson will sing the title role on Monday night, Richard Cassilly on Tuesday; Theresa Green will sing Marguerite on Monday, Lois McCauley on Tuesday. Other principal roles are sung by John McCollum (Blondel), Lee Cass (Sir Williams), Robert Rue (Florestan), Christina Cardillo (Laurette). Mr. Goldovsky will conduct an orchestra of 38 students from Department I.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 9 - 1953

Berkshire Festival In Final Week

With an anticipated attendance at its fifteen concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000; an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the symphony); and a predictable 40,000 patrons at the 38 concerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concludes its 1953 program this weekend, and 150,000 persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts the concluding concerts on Friday night and Sunday afternoon, August 16, and Leonard Bernstein conducts the concert on Saturday night.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor who is guest teacher of composition at the Tanglewood this summer.

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tanglewood premieres of the weekend are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, on Saturday evening, and Chabrier's Bourree Fantasque on Sunday afternoon.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4: p.m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Cir. (D 157,288) (S 216,744)
This Clipping From COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH

Piatigorsky, Pasquale Soloists on 'Festivals'

Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival on WBNS-CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals," Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Munch will open the festival program with the Symphony No. 5 in B flat major by Schubert.

The symphony wil be followed by the Adagio for Strings by the contemporary American composer, Samuel Barber.

Cir. (D 389,011) (S 258,545)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
AUG 9 - 1953

Tanglewood Record Seen In Final Week of Festival

Munch Will Conduct Concerts on Friday Night and Sunday Afternoon, Bernstein to Be on Podium of Music Shed Saturday Night

Lenox, Aug. 8—With an anticipated attendance at its 15 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 100,000, an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the symphony, and a predictable 40,000 pattrons at the 38 cmoncerts and demonstrations of the school's departments, the 16th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will conclude its 1953 program this coming week end. It is expected that about 150,000 persons will have helped shatter all existing records.

Munch, Bernstein to Conduct

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts the program this afternoon with Gregor Piatiogorsky as soloist in the Milhaud Concerto for Cello, No. 1. Mr. Munch also will conduct the concluding concerts on Friday night and on next Sunday afternoon (Aug. 16), while Leonard Bernstein will be on the great Music Shed's podium for the concert Saturday night.

The Friday evening program will be given over in its entirety to Brahms' "German Requiem," for chorus and soloists. Canadian soprano Lois Marshall and baritone William Warfield will make their Tanglewood debuts as soloists, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students participating.

On the Saturday night program Leonard Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, which had its premiere by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936, the composer conducting. The symphony will be in honor of the distinguished Mexican composer-conductor who is guest teacher of composition at the Tanglewood this summer.

Lipkin to Be Soloist

Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, which will have its first Tanglewood performance at the concluding concert. Other Tangl-ewood premieres of the week end are Sibelius' Symphony No. 4, (Saturday evening), and Chabrier's Bourree Fantasque (Sunday afternoon).

A portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The Series C programs are:

Friday

German Requiem .....Brahms
(Soloists: Lois Marshall and William Warfield)

Saturday

Symphony No. 4, in A minor .. Sibelius
Symphony No. 2, in D major ....Brahms

Sunday, Aug. 16

Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished")
.....Schubert
Bourree Fantasque .....Chabrier
Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde" .....Wagner
A Siegfied Idyll .....Wagner
"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III .....Wagner
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand ..Ravel
(Soloist: Seymour Lipkin)
"La Valse" .....Ravel

Student Performances

During the final week of the Berkshire Festival two performances will be given, tomorrow and Tuesday nights of Auguste Gretry's three-act opera, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" of 1784, not presented within living memory, to be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky. The Gretry opera, in English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, is staged by Miss Caldwell, with costumes by Leo Van Witsen, scenery by John Blankenchip and choreography by Leon Kharibian. Mr. Goldovsky conducts an orchestra of Department I students. Leads are sung by John McCollum, Alvin Edmonson, Richard Cassilly, Robert Rue, Theresa Green, Lois McCauley, Christina Cardillo.

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, from 6 to 11 p. m. Thursday, will commence with demonstrations by all departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a feature of which are world premieres of a one-act opera, "Bad Boys in School," by Jan Meyerowits, (Department IV students) and a cantata, "A Little Boy Lost" by Alan Sapp (students of Department V). Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's gala evening concert, with Isaac Stern soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto; and Leontyne Price, soprano, of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," her husband William Warfield, and the Festival Chorus in Scenes 1 and 2 of Act II of the Gershwin opera. Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, will draw door prizes.

School's Activities

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity: Friends of the school, whose contributions help support it, are invited to the following student concerts: Informal chamber music concert (Department I students), Chamber Music Hall, Monday afternoon; "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" (Department IV students), Theater-Concert Hall, Monday and Tuesday evenings, all seats reserved; opera scenes (Department IV, associate division, students), Theater-Concert Hall, Wednesday afternoon; composers' forum (Department III students), Chamber Music Hall, Wednesday evening orchestra concert (Department I students), Music Shed, Saturday afternoon; chamber music concert (Department I students), Theater-Concert Hall, Sunday morning, Aug. 16.

Festival patrons are also admitted, for the nominal charge of $1, to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Saturday morning, Aug. 15, in the Music Shed, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

WORDS and MUSIC
By Harriett Johnson

Berlioz' 'Romeo' at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass.—The second week-end of the Berkshire Festival's major series opened here at Tanglewood Friday night with a novelty—the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, performed with full retinue of chorus and three soloists. While orchestral excerpts are heard intermittently on concert programs, the work today rarely is heard as it was originally created by the composer. The last performance within memory in New York was one by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony several years ago.

Charles Munch officiated with the Boston Symphony for the current hearing with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, Nicola Moscona, bass, and John McCollum, tenor, as soloists, assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus eminently prepared for the occasion by Hugh Ross.

Sounding today something like a museum piece, in spite of several sections which still spell conviction for contemporary ears, this "Romeo and Juliet" in its day was a considerable innovation. When Berlioz, an inspired idea-man if not a great creative mind, wrote the work in 1839, a gigantic composition of this type taking an evening to perform and dramatizing song to such an extent, was real iconoclasm. From a connoisseur's standpoint, it is fascinating to hear the piece as it was done Friday. We can see how Berlioz paved the way for Mahler and others and showed them sometimes what not to do. For sheer musical enjoyment, however, and for music which is suffused with the atmosphere of Shakespeare's tragedy, a contemporary orchestral work like David Diamond's "Romeo and Juliet" has for most of us more validity.

The genius of Berlioz still manifests itself, nonetheless, in the still beautiful "Love Scene," which opens with one of the most appealing sections, a chorus of males, passing revelers who sing snatches as they go merrily on their way. Munch and the Bostonians gave the feathery "Queen Mab" scherzo, one of the more popular movements, a performance which highlighted its fantasy in exquisite style. This type of bravura work of big proportions suits the dramatic setting of Tanglewood and it suits Munch, thus the evening was a definite success from a re-creative aspect.

In spite of being too long, the final grandiose chorus together with the recitative and air of Friar Lawrence, still makes its impact and was among the most musically interesting of the little-known portions.

There is, of course, throughout, the usual Berlioz Claptrap, plus many sections which appear crude beside the orchestra and choral integration demonstrated in so-called "Choral Symphonies" which followed Berlioz.

The performers, however, made the most of their opportunities, especially Miss Tourel, who lent a subjective intensity to her music which enhanced it.

No matter what its limitation, this "Romeo" still adds up to a picturesque musical evening if not a thrilling one, and Tanglewood is undoubtedly the place to hear it.

Cir. (D 186,970) (S 150,268)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
AUG 9 - 1953

Music Festival Figures

CONDUCTOR OF THE Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, right, and James Fassett, music commentator, discuss Berkshire Festival. Today Gregor Piatiogrsky, cellist soloist, and Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist, will be heard in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" over WJR at 2:30 p.m.

[22]

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 9 - 1953

'Tanglewood on Parade' To Be Conducted Thursday

Special to the Telegram

LENOX, Sunday—"Tanglewood on Parade" with musical events from 6 to 11 p. m. Thursday, will be Tanglewood's presentation for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained here by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

On Saturday evening—during Tanglewood's final seasonal weekend — Carlos Chavez will be honored. The distinguished Mexican composer - conductor joined Aaron Copland as teacher of composition here this Summer. There are 400 students enrolled from 41 states and 12 foreign lands, for this the 11th annual session of the Berkshire Festival.

Thursday's Program

On Thursday's program will be "Fanfare" — welcome by Boris Goldovsky at 5:45; "The Berkshire Music Center in Operation" (simultaneous sessions of each department) at 6 including "In the Shed—Orchestra," short symphonic works; "In the Theater-Concert Hall," world premieres of an opera and a cantata, and "In the Chamber Music Hall," a program by the Chamber Music department.

At 7.15 there will be a lawn party and picnic supper, the patrons are invited to bring a picnic supper and to make use of the buffet and refreshment carts.

To Sing on Porch

The chorus will sing on the porch of the Main House at 7.15.

The "Gala Concert" will start in "The Shed" at 8.15. With Charles Munch conducting and Isaac Stern as soloist, Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's Violin Concerto will be heard.

In the second part of the program Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra and Festival chorus in Act II, scenes 1 and 2, of Gershwin's 'Porgy and Bess." Soloists with the Leontyne Price, soprano, now singing "Bess" on Broadway, and William Warfield, baritone —the famous "Porgy" of the European production and star of the movie "Show Boat."

There'll also be 40 door prizes —and the evening will conclude with waltzing on the lawn.

The Chavez concert Saturday evening will honor the man who, in 1928, organized the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, was named chief of the Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education in 1933, and, in 1946, was named Mexico's Director of Fine Arts.

Mr. Chavez' 1932 composition "H. P." (horsepower) and a "sinfonia de Baile," (ballet symphony) have been chosen by the Berkshire school's student symphony orchestra for presentation Saturday night. Mr. Chavez will conduct.

TO BE HONORED

Carlos Chavez, noted Mexican composer-conductor on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, who will conduct his own compositions when he's honored at a Tanglewood concert Saturday.

ADVERTISEMENT

Cir. (D 294,859) (S 262,207)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
POST
AUG 9 - 1953

Bernstein Gets Mahler Honors

LENOX, Aug. 8 — Leonard Bernstein received the Mahler Medal of the Bruckner Society tonight at Tanglewood in a simple ceremony at the conclusion of the Koussevitzky Memorial concert. The presentation was made by Tucker Keiser, music critic for The Boston Post.

In awarding the medal Mr. Keiser said, "In electrifying performances such as we have just had this evening you have introduced to untold thousands the beauty and power of the compositions of Gustav Mahler."

Mr. Bernstein is the youngest conductor ever to receive this high award. Previous conductors to be so honored have been Bruno Walter, Otto Klemperer, Serge Koussevitzky, Richard Burgin, and Dimitri Metropolous.

Cir. (D 123,2
This Clipping From
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
AUG 9 - 1953

LOIS MARSHALL makes her Tanglewood debut as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch in Brahms' "Requiem" on Friday evening in the Music Shed.

Cir. (S 22,518)
This Clipping From WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
AUG 9 - 1953

Piatigorsky, de Pasquale To Be Soloists

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra today in a CBS-Radio program which includes the Symphony No. 5 in B flat major by Franz Schubert, Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and Richard Strauss' tone poem "Don Quixote." In the latter work, Gregor Piatigorsky will be be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist.

Harmonica player John Sebastian will be the featured artist this morning on "The Music Room." Sebastian will present a program of music by Bach, Debussy, Milhaud and Albeniz.

Wanda Krasoff will be piano soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Julius Rudel, on the last of the Wednesday evening broadcasts from the lake shore in Chicago.

The first of two broadcasts from the Brevard Music Festival at the Transylvania Music Camp, Brevard, N. C., will be conducted by James Christian Pfohl on Saturday.

Details of these and other CBS Radio music programs follow:

SUNDAY, AUGUST 9

9:00-9:15 a. m.—"The Music Room," John Sebastian, harmonica soloist.
Bouree from Second English Suite ..... Bach
Beau Soir ..... Debussy-Heifetz
Sailor's Song, from Suite for Harmonica ..... Milhaud
Malaguena ..... Albeniz-Kreisler
9:30-10:00 a. m.—E. Power Biggs Organ Program. Frances Snow Drinker, flute soloist (From Busch-Reisinger Museum, Cambridge, Mass., via WEEI, Boston).
Concerto No. 2, in B flat ..... Handel
Sonata in F major for Flute and Keyboard ..... Telemann
Passacaglia in G minor ..... Handel
11:00-11:30 a. m.—Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Program. J. Spencer Cornwell conductor, Dr. Frank Asper, organist (Via KSL, Salt Lake City).
Again As Evening Shadow Falls ..... Fletcher
Lift Thine Eyes, from "Elijah" ..... Mendelssohn
Jesus, Lover of My Soul ..... Holbrook
Help, Lord, from "Elijah" ..... Mendelssohn
Organ: French Round ..... Boellmann
Organ: Prayer ..... Asper
Lord, We Come Before Thee Now ..... von Weber
2:30-4:00 p. m.—"World Music Festivals"—Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. Gregor Piatigorsky, cello, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, soloists. James Fassett, music commentator.
Symphony No. 5 in B flat ..... Schubert
Adagio for Strings ..... Barber
Don Quixote ..... Strauss
6:30-7:00 p. m.—"Summer in St. Louis"—Eileen Schauler, soprano, and Lawrence Brooks, baritone, with St. Louis Opera Orchestra conducted by Edwin MacArthur (Via KMOX, St. Louis).
Excerpts from "One Touch of Venus" ..... Weill

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12

10:00-11:00 p. m.—Grant Park Symphony Orchestra, from Chicago, Ill. Julius Rudel, conductor. Wanda Krasoff, piano soloist (Via WBBM, Chicago).
Les Preludes ..... Liszt
Variations on a Nursery Tune ..... Dohnanyi
Three Dances from "Three-Cornered Hat" ..... Falla
The Neighbors
The Miller's Dance
Final Dance

SATURDAY, AUGUST 15

4:30-5:00 p. m.—Brevard Music Festival, James Christian Pfohl, conductor. Program to be announced.

Cir. (D 26,042)
This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 10 1953

Bernstein Triumph With Mahler Work Hailed At Festival

The high point of the brilliant Tanglewood musical series was the presentation Saturday night of Mahler's "Resurrection." Guest conductor Leonard Bernstein led the Boston symphony orchestra in a magnificent performance that brought the crowd of 11,000 to its feet at the conclusion in a tremendous personal ovation.

This major symphony takes an hour and a quarter to present and is supplemented by a mixed chorus. Also Jennie Tourel and Therese Green participated as soloists. It was a memorable event and a triumph for Bernstein, who reached heights seldom attained as he gave of his power and artistic talent abundantly.

The Sunday concert was of a lighter vein, with Charles Munch leading in a Schubert program. The contrast of the intense power of Mahler with the softer and gentle charm of Schubert was noted by those who attended the past week-end's series.

Cir. (D 68,568) (S 75,299)
This Clipping From
SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
AUG 9 - 1953

Munch Conducts Boston Symphony In 'Don Quixote'

Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS radio's "Summer Musical Festivals" today at 1:30 p.m. over KWKH.

Mr. Munch will open the festival program with the Symphony No. 5 in B flat major by Franz Schubert. This is one of those remarkable products of genius, written in only four weeks when Schubert was only 19 years old, for private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra. The symphony will be followed by the Adagio for Strings by the contemporary American composer Samuel Barber.

Strauss' "Don Quixote," based upon the Cervantes character, is subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character" and is in the form of an introduction, a theme with ten rather free variations and a finale, all played without pause. The two principal characters are the Don, portrayed by the solo cello, and his faithful squire, Sancho Panza, first heard in the bass clarinet and tenor tuba but thereafter in the solo viola.

James Fassett is music commentator and producer.

Tanglewood Benefit Set for Thursday

With Isaac Stern violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess" and her husband baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting at the evening concert, which commences at 8:15 p.m. in the 6000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Walter Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the cour-

TANGLEWOOD,
Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY (Aug. 9) at 8:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Reserved Seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2
THURS. (Aug. 13)
"Tanglewood on Parade"
Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess" Act II, Scenes 1 & 2.
Reserved Seats $4 and $3, Unreserved—$2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TODAY AT 8:30
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Reserved Seats from $2.50;
Gen'l Adm. $2
Thurs., Aug. 13 — "Tanglewood on Parade." Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess" Act II, Scenes 1 & 2. Reserved Seats $4 and $3. Unreserved—$2.50. Address, Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. Schubert: Symphony No. 5, Barber: Adagio for strings, Strauss: "Don Quixote," Milhaud: Concerto for Cello, Honsel: Bacchus et Ariane. (Soloists: Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; and Joseph De Pasquale, viola). 2:30.

* * *

MONDAY

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. "Richard the Lion-Hearted." by Gretry. Boris Goldovsky, conducting. 8:30.

* * *

TUESDAY

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. "Richard the Lion-Hearted." Repeat performance. 8:30.

* * *

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Center of Music, Duxbury, Playhouse, "Don Pasquale," by Donizetti. 8:30. Opera will be presented nightly through Saturday.

* * *

THURSDAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. "Tanglewood On Parade," potpourri of musical entertainment; opera, chorus, symphony concert. Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, conducting. Soloists include Isaac Stern, violin; William Warfield, baritone; Leontyne Price, soprano. 4 p. m. until midnight.

* * *

FRIDAY

Methuen Memorial Music Hall, Methuen, Mass. Robert Noehren, organist. All Bach program. 8:30.

* * *

Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. "Requiem," Brahms. Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone.

* * *

SATURDAY

Methuen Memorial Music Hall, Methuen, Mass. Robert Noehren, organist. May Festival Program. 8:30.

* * *

Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conducting. Sibelius: Symphony No. 4; Chavez: Sinfonia India; Brahms: Symphony No. 2. 8:30.

* * *

Castle Hill Concerts, Ipswich, Mass. Chamber Concert with James Starker, cellist, and Remus Tzincoca, conducting. Works by Tartini, Von Weber, Mozart and Strauss. 8:30.

* * *

SUNDAY

Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. Schubert: "Unfinished" Symphony; Chabrier: Bourree Fantasque; Wagner: Prelude and Love-Death, a Siegfried Idyll; excerpts from "Die Meistersinger"; Ravel: Piano Concerto for Left Hand, "La Valse." 2:30.

Cir. (D 38,502)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 10 1953

Records Still Topple At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10 —Tanglewood week-end attendance records continue to topple, as the Berkshire Festival goes on to prove that musical fresco can be as stimulating —and more comfortable—than the same programs in a formal auditorium.

The threat of rain yesterday afternoon cut the Shed and lawn audience to 9,100, but untold thousands more heard the opening half of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert in a radio broadcast.

Broadcast before intermission was the sweetly melodic Symphony No. 5 by Franz Shubert; Samuel Barber's Adagio for String Orchestra; and Strauss' "Don Quixote" variations. Gregor Piatigorsky, cello, and Joseph de Pasquale, viola were soloists for the Strauss tone poem, low comedy in music, wherein conductor Charles Munch called for weird and wonderful instrumental effects to depict the bleating of sheep and the howling of winds.

Mr. Barber was in the audience to take bows for his vibrant, brief adagio, an intense little composition that held listeners spellbound.

The after-intermission program included Milhaud's Concerto for Violincello and Orchestra, again with Mr. Piatigorsky as soloist, and Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" suite.

Mr. Piatigorsky's warm understanding of the range of his instrument was well-displayed in the Milhaud concerto, particularly in the singing syncopation of its opening movement.

11,400 At Concert

Saturday night's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert conducted by Leonard Bernstein drew an audience of 11,400 so pleased and thrilled with the performance of the Mahler "Symphony in C minor, No. 2, for orchestra, soprano and alto solos, and mixed chorus that no one moved for 10 minutes when the concert was over, but remained to applaud. Jennie Tourel was contralto soloist and Theresa Green, soprano.

There was shouts of "bravo" intermission time as the orchestra finished Ravel's "Sheherazade", three poems for voice and orchestra to verses of Tristan Klingsor. The program began with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina" after a minute of silence during which all stood, in tribute to the memory of Serbe Koussevitzky. Saturday evening was perfect Berkshire weather and hundreds came early for the enjoyment of the grounds and the picnic area.

The annual Tanglewood on Parade medley for benefit of the Berkshirt Music Center will be held from 6 to 11 p. m. Thursday. The closing program of the 1953 festival will be given Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoon.

FZ.

Cir. (D 541,485) (Sat. 274,941)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 10 1953

Music

Tanglewood—Weekend of Fine Melody

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.—The concert in the Tanglewood Shed yesterday afternoon closed one of the most interesting weeknds of music I can remember up here in some time. Programs were longer than usual although the length had no influence whatever on quality which, I might say, was generally very good.

Better Than Ever.

Charles Munch took care of yesterday's batonistic obligations. He had a devised five-part program without a dud in the batch. It began with Schubert's Fifth Symphony and went on to the adagio for strings of Samuel Barber; the tone poem "Don Quixote" of Richard Strauss, with Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, and Joseph De Pasquale, first violist of the orchestra, as soloists. Later came the Milhaud 'cello concerto, again featuring Mr. Piatigorsky. The afternoon concluded with Roussel's second suite from his music to the ballet "Bacchus et Ariane."

Frankly, I cannot remember Mr. Piatigorsky playing as well as he did yesterday. The tone, the bowing, the remarkable fluidity of his performance were something of a revelation. Perhaps we will have to say from now, "the new Piatigorsky."

This "Don," as envisioned by soloist and conductor, was not merely a benighted knight, an old loon with a ludicrous hankering for the romantic past, but a man deserving sympathy, if not pity; understanding, but not a shake of the head and "tsk, tsk's, the poor madman."

The attention thus paid the aging hero was reverential. It came through in the mellowness of the music, which mirrored the thoughtful pondering of his miserable condition. And the work was given the communication, the expressiveness it so rarely gets.

Artistic Skill.

Mr. De Pasquale, of course, was an important party of all that ideation, and the orchestra delivered its music in the virtuoso manner for which it has become celebrated.

Milhaud's Concerto, a light, tuneful work in its first two movements, takes on some extra qualities in the third. All three, however, are interesting; they last with the listener and they are typical of the Milhaud who combines freshness of thought with artistic skill.

Saturday evening—in a concert given in memory of Serge Koussevitzky—Leonard Bernstein took on quite an assignment—the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony.

Clear and True.

The soloists were Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, and Theresa Green, soprano. Miss Tourel was also heard as soloist in Ravel's "Scheherazade." This artist sang beautifully in both, as beautifully as she had done in the Berlioz "Romeo et Juliette," of Friday evening. Miss Green everywhere sounded clear and true, disclosing a pretty voice indeed.

The attendance for the weekend —28,000. Added information: Mr. Bernstein was presented with the Mahler Medal of the Bruckner Society.

Cir. (D 103,306)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 10 1953

Gregor Piatigorsky Featured Soloist

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood usually resolves itself into a musical potpourri with a little of something for almost every taste; and yesterday was no exception.

Fortunately, the orchestra under Munch displaye d a resurgence of that discipline for which it has became famous—a quality that was not too notably present Friday night in the Berlioz. There was both warmth and precision in Sunday's variegated fare.

Schubert's unassuming little Fifth Symphony was an excellent choice for a beginning. Reminiscent of Haydn and Mozart, it sings with unabashed congeniality and good spirits.

If Munch does not evidence the Schubertian understanding of Walter, his interpretation nevertheless is relaxed and flowing and only intermittently indulges in over-accelerated tempos.

* * *

COMING IMMEDIATELY after Schubert, the "Adagio for Strings" by Samuel Barber could not be accused of contrasting modernism. And the aristocratic and refined performance of the Boston strings elicited not only deserved applause but necessitated a bow from the composer, who was in the audience.

Strauss' "Don Quixote" was the afternoon's principal work and introduced Gregor Piatigorsky in the first of his two solo appearances. A familiar role for this well-known cellist, he filled it on this occasion with more than his usual eloquence. Highly commendable, too, was the solo contribution of the Boston's principal violinist, Joseph De Pasquale.

Orchestrally, it is a tour de force which many a famous aggregation has failed to outline with clarity of detail. To the Boston and Dr. Munch's credit it came off yesterday with a minimum of blur and diffuseness. All that was left to cavil about was the occasional tendency of the brass to cover the other choirs.

* * *

MILHAUD'S First Cello Concerto provided a better showcase for Mr. Piatigorsky's talents because it is finely tailored to the lyric qualities of his instrument.

The three movements, respectively marked "Nonchalant," "Grave" and Joyous," give some indication that the composer is once again communicating with the listener in casual terms, displaying that southern European temperament which permeates so much of his work.

Albert Roussel's ballet suite, "Bacchus and Ariane," concluded the program.—G. W. S.

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 10 1953

ThrongsHear Concerts in 'Tanglewood'

Piatigorsky

Munch

By EMMA VAN WORMER

LENOX, MASS. — Shattering all attendance records Berkshire Festival concerts in "Tanglewood," attracted approximately 28,000 music lovers for the weekend for Series "B" concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in The Shed. Charles Munch, director of the orchestra (now in its summer home here) conducted Friday night and yesterday afternoon. Leonard Bernstein conducted the Koussevitzky Memorial concert Saturday night. A student attendance of 40,000 is anticipated for this season for concerts arranged for that group and for major events.

VIOLONCELLIST Gregor Piatigorsky, soloist in yesterday's concert, highly regarded everywhere by musicians and the concert-going public, played the Milhaud Concerto No. 1 with orchestra, investing this charming work with a beautiful tone production. Piatigorsky and Joseph de Pasquale, first chair violinist of the orchestra, were soloists, with orchestra, in the Richard Strauss "Don Quixote" Fantastic Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character, Opus 35, under the baton of Director Munch. Here was thrilling music, richly orchestrated and with varied colorful expressions. There was an ovation for soloists, director and musicians.

SAMUEL BARBER'S "Adagio for Strings" proved delightful music, the composer (nephew of the late Sidney and Louise Homer, having dedicated this work to his distinguished kinfolk. Composer Barber, in the audience, heard prolonged applause and calls for his appearance, which he acknowledged. Opening program selection was that romantic music, the Fifth Symphony in B Minor of Schubert. A Roussel Suite closed the program. The audience of 9,100 thronged The Shed and found place in the broad lawns of the spacious grounds, despite threatening weather.

GEORGE E. JUDD, manager of the Boston Symphony, tells us that so popular were the "small" concerts earlier in the season that the Boston Symphony management is faced with the problem of whether or not to move them next season entirely to the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Threatening thunder storms and humid conditions dictated a move of the Mozart concert from the Theater Concert Hall to the Shed last month when 4,300 persons attended. Again, exigencies of radio broadcasting dictated that the 20th Century program planned for the smaller hall be given in the Shed with 3,450 listeners.

TONIGHT, Boris Goldovsky will conduct the Gretry opera "Richard, the Lion Hearted," the opera to be repeated tomorrow night. William Warfield, baritone and Leontyne Price (Mrs. Warfield), soprano, arrive Wednesday for rehearsals of "Porgy and Bess" for "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday and for Warfield's appearance as soloist in the Brahms Requiem Friday night. Isaac Stern, famed violinist, will play Thursday night with the orchestra. The final Series of the Berkshire Festival is next weekend with Seymour Lipkin, young pianist, as soloist with the orchestra, Charles Munch conducting.

A look at this final [illegible] Tanglewood program, which [illegible] "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday night, and you can't escape the impression that the composers of the schedule know how to work up to a crescendo . . . A welcome to the foreign newspaper editors visiting here for several days, and our assurances that at other times of the year, Berkshire is a lot quieter . . .

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 10 1953

Berkshire Festival

11,400 at Bernstein Concert In Memory of Koussevitsky

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. —Over 20,000 persons, not counting today's radio audience, heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in last night's and this afternoon's Berkshire Festival concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

With ideal weather, yesterday's program given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky and conducted by Leonard Bernstein drew the summer's largest crowd thus far, 11,400. Ominous afternoon clouds today held down the attendance to 9,100.

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, was today's soloist, with the musicians under Charles Munch's direction, in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" and Darius Milhaud's First Cello Concerto. Joseph De Pasquale, head of his section in the orchestra, played the solo viola which represents Sancho Panza in the Strauss tone poem. The program opened with Schuberts's Fifth Symphony and Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings, which brought an ovation for its composer, and closed with Albert Roussel's Second Suite from "Bacchus et Ariane."

Mahler's Second Played

Gustav Mahler's monumental Second Symphony was the principal work in Saturday's program which represented the annual memorial tribute to the great conductor who founded the Berkshire Music Center and played such a paramount part in the musical development of the Berkshire Festival.

Jennie Tourel, contralto, who had also sung in Friday's performance of the Berlioz Romeo and Juliet Symphony; Theresa Green, soprano, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, sang in the finale. Miss Tourel also sang with the orchestra in Ravel's set of three songs. Scheherazade, which followed the well played prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina."

Miss Tourel's singing in "Scheherazade" evoked the intimate and exotic mood, both of Ravel's music and Tristan Leclere's text, with warmth and range of color and dynamic subtlety. The orchestra, which here is a co-ordinate partner of the singer rather than an accompanist, gave an expressively sympathetic performance. At one or two points it seemed slightly overbearing but elsewhere its playing was well proportioned and had the [illegible] which was necessary for this work.

Miss Green Pleasing

Miss Tourel was also vocally and expressively appealing in the Mahler work, especially in the sustained simplicity of the fourth movement. Miss Green's singing was also pleasing while slightly tentative at first; the chorus deserved praise for its tone quality and dynamic range and control.

The performance of the Mahler symphony revealed the composer's expressive aims, impressive while sometimes unattainable; his copious, if not unlimited, melodic inventiveness, his consummate orchestral craftsmanship. It also revealed the familiar drawback of length in the extensive first movement and still more extensive finale. In the latter pages of the first movement there are times when Mahler seems to have said his say; one of these deceived the audience into premature applause.

Long, But Worth It

But Mahler's largeness is so essential a characteristic of his music that its length must be taken in stride; the enthusiastic audience seems to realize this. Mr. Bernstein's interpretation with an expert and responsive orchestra generally implied imaginative understanding of the music and of its structure; there were a few excessive changes of pace, but as a rule it had the necessary continuity. After the concert Mr. Bernstein received the Bruckner Society's medal from Tucker Keiser, acting music critic of "The Boston Post."

In today's concert Mr. Piatigorsky's cello completely revealed Strauss' memorable musical characterization of Don Quixote, with its pervasive sympathy, its combination of humor and affection. His tone, particularly notable for the clarity and timbre of its higher register, had a remarkable and subtly varied gamut of color. It was also happy in the Milhaud concerto, which has no ultra-musical intention, but is expertly wrought music with contrast of moods, emphasizing the cello in its lyric and most grateful aspect.

Mr. Barber's elegaic Adagio has not lost its poetic appeal with repeated hearings, and the program as a whole found Mr. Munch and the orchestra in their best form.

[24]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 10 1953

Berkshire Festival:

Munch Offers 'Romeo'

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—In a generous outpouring of symphonic music, the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival had several highlights.

Munch's performance of Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its entirety, Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the Mahler Second Symphony, and the playing of Piatigorsky and the B. S. O. in Strauss's "Don Quixote" each dominated its respective concert. A total of 28,000 people attended the three events.

The Berlioz in full dress of solos and chorus attains a completeness not fully appreciated in hearing only the orchestral parts. The Berkshire Festival chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, functioned admirably.

Though Munch did justice to the score's romanticism, the work emerged as more old-fashioned than anticipated.

Wins Medal

Temperamentally attuned to the Mahler, Bernstein conducted a fiery, emotionally-charged performance. It aroused the audience to fever pitch. He was handsomely assisted by the chorus, Miss Tourel, and Theresa Green, soprano.

In making the most of the score as conductor's music, however, Bernstein indulged in inartistic exaggerations. He was over-eager in underlining what Mahler had over-provided in the first place. For his efforts, nonetheless, he received the Bruckner Society medal after the concert.

Munch's masterly reading of the Strauss score made this account of Don Quixote's tale exciting. Better known than the other works, it lost nothing through familiarity because of a finely integrated performance.

Piatigorsky was in top form for the cello solos, most ably seconded by Joseph De Pasquale playing the viola role of Panza.

Notable Singing

The Mahler was the focal point of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, annually entrusted to Bernstein. He opened with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," a special favorite of Koussevitzky, and followed it with Ravel's "Sheherazade" with Miss Tourel as soloist.

She sang with that artistic perfection expected of her, and the memory of her singing persisted even after the Mahler had been performed.

The Strauss was part of the Sunday afternoon program. Munch led off with the simplicity of Schubert's charming Fifth Symphony. He included Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings." A beautiful performance caught the audience's fancy.

Milhaud's piquant melodious, playful cello concerto proved an excellent foil for the Strauss, though its quality was perhaps a bit lost in the vast end. Roussel's second suite from "Bachus et Ariane" gave the concert its brilliant finale. The whole program appeared to bring much satisfaction.

Cir. (D 34,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

In Brief . . .

The appearance of the Metropolitan's Richard Tucker at the Knesses Israel services in Pittsfield is a reminder of how much the county owes the Berkshire Music Center for the success of summer church programs. There has been scarcely a service, large or small, that hasn't been enhanced by a talented voice from Tanglewood . . . The death of Cheshire's Miss Julia Bowen at 93 brought to an end a long career of community service accomplished so quietly that few outside of her own circle knew of it . . . To Dean Brooks of Williams, whose "unearthed" letters chiding townspeople of 1752 for not helping to build a house contain quite a lesson for today, our congratulations. We trust he will see to it that the relics are thoroughly checked for authenticity with some reliable research outfit like Young & Rubicam . . .

A happy first birthday to the McClusky triplets, who seem to be starting off in a most fortuitous way—they don't look very much alike . . . Well, we give up. We suppose a circus parade is only possible at all nowadays by selling space on the elephants . . .

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 11 1953

Music

'Richard' Presented At Lenox

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—At the theater-concert hall last evening, the Berkshire Music Center presented Gretry's comic opera in three acts "Richard the Lion-Hearted." The orchestra was that of Department 1 of the center, its conductor, Boris Goldovsky, who also prepared the production.

The original French text by J. M. Sedaine was translated into practical and very often amusing English by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. The cast was peopled mostly by students. Miss Caldwell staged the piece.

Melody is by no means a negligible element in this score. It is not melody that might be compared with the Olympian melody of Mozart, who was pretty busy himself in those days, but it has attractions quite natural to the spirit of the text and to the comedy that quietly, almost unobtrusively emerges from the lines and situations.

Production Deserves Praise.

There are some good arias in this piece, not the solidly operatic type we have come to know and love in the current repertory. But they serve more than a stage purpose, for they have personalities of their own, that is, Gretry's personality.

All in all, I thought the production deserved praise for its intentions, for its happy touch of true theatre, old as that theatre is, for its simplicity.

The sets were especially good and quite evocative of past moods and manners in the theatre. The man responsible for them, and also for the lighting, was John Blankenship, who employed, in order to obtain unusual effects, the Paul Planer GKP projections, involving apparently a slide mechanism which makes operatic action quite agreeable to the eye, though in shadow and stylization. Also apropos were the costumes of Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky's musical consultants were Paul Ulanowsky, Felix Wolfes and Ludwig Zirner.

Valiantly and Efficiently.

Outstanding in the cast was Lee Cass, as Sir Hugh Williams, whose delivery of spoken lines (there was no sung recitative) proved excellent. As Blondel, the minstrel who sets King Richard free, John McCollum did some good work, getting many laughs with his exaggerated "playing" of an ancient stringed instrument.

Rosalind Elias, as Antonio, Blondel's guide; Christine Cardillo as Laurette, Sir Hugh's daughter; Robert Roe, as the jailer Florestan; Theresa Green, as the Countess of Flanders, all labored valiantly and efficiently.

Cir. (D 34,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

Party Wednesday To Aid Students At Tanglewood

The annual scholarship party of the Tanglewood Student Council will be tomorrow night, starting at 10, at Wheatleigh dormitory. Proceeds are used to help needy students of the Berkshire Festival Music Center at the following season.

There will be door prizes, skits, dancing and refreshments.

[25]

Union
AUGUST 11, 1953

CHARMING OPERA THRILLS CROWDS AT TANGLEWOOD

Gretry's 'Richard the Lion-Hearted' Presented by Orchestra, Cast

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 10—When the theater-shed was inaugurated here at Tanglewood by Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, it was with the idea that it should be the site for the performance of operas not yet, or seldom heard. Thus, through the years, the shed has seen the premiers of "Albert Herring," "Ideomeno" "Le Roi D'Ivetot" and tonight "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Andre Gretry, an opera that had its last performance in America in 1800.

Under the direction of Boris Goldovsky and in a translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, this charming 17th century opera was given a gay and sprightly performance. It has the virtue of a credible plot which goes something like this: the story is based on the legend of the minstrel Blondel, who discovers the whereabouts of the imprisoned King Richard the Lion-Hearted by traveling from fortress to fortress singing the monarch's favorite love song. In Gretry's opera Blondel disguises himself as a blind violinist. Florestan, the warden of the prison, is involved in a love affair and Blondel takes advantage of this to invite him to a peasant party. Ostensibly to meet his beloved. Florestan comes to the party, is arrested by the adherents of Richard's lady love, Marguerite. Since he refuses to free the king, the fortress is assaulted and a happy ending crowns the work.

As usual, settings and costumes were handsome and the various roles well sung and admirably acted. Dialogue, of which there was a great deal, was put across clearly. In fact, seldom does one hear the English language sung or spoken with greater clarity than in a Boris Goldovsky production.

The role of Blondel was taken by John McCollum. He sang it admirably and created a forceful characterization. Antonio, his guide while he pretended to be blind, was charmingly sung by Rosalind Elias. Robert Rue revealed his splendid voice as Florestan. The role of Richard was sung tonight by Richard Cassilly and one of the finest episodes of the evening was his duet with Blondel, when the two tenors joined their voices in an amazingly effective manner. Sir William, the Englishman, on whose estate much of the action takes place, was finely conceived by Lee Cass.

Tonight, the role of Marguerite was sung by Therese Green, the young Negro soprano who has so favorably impressed audiences here. She was a regal figure in black velvet and silver and she sank with beauty of tone and vocal freedom, bringing a distinguished dignity to the role.

There was a large cast with each individual giving nicely defined characterization. The Laurette of Christina Cardillo was a charming portrayal of a peasant girl and she was admirably seconded by the Collette of Arlene Stone.

This little opera is a pleasant mixture of petite chansons and heroic arias. The music moves briskly and forcefully, with tunes tumbling over each other, the orchestra of department 1 played well and Mr. Goldovsky held his forces together with a firm hand.

Thus another work has been brought to Tanglewood; a work which fulfills the idea of the theater-shed as envisaged by Dr. Koussevitzky.

Cir. (D 331,863) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 11 1953

Opera Premiere At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.—Among the events to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center at its annual Tanglewood on Parade Thursday will be the world premiere of a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, "Bad Boys in School." This will be presented under the direction of Boris Goldovsky by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

The opera performance will be one of the several demonstrations that will be held simultaneously at 6 p. m. to show the achievements in the various departments of the school. At the same time the Tanglewood Study Group will present the first performance of "A Little Boy Lost" by Allen Sapp, a composition student in the class of Aaron Copland. Both works were written with school or non-professional performers in mind.

Following the simultaneous demonstrations the Boston Symphony will be heard in the shed in a program directed by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists. Proceeds of the Tanglewood on Parade will aid the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school which is allied to the Berkshire Festival.

Cir. (D 56,590) (S 47,289)
This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 11 1953

Thursday's Program Listed For Berkshire Music Center

Of interest is the announcement that the world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be featured in Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra Summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments, orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group, commencing at 6 p. m.

Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the festival chorus.

...sacred music, with choral groups WNBC, 2.
Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood; Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph de Pasquale, soloists, WCBS, 2:30.
Trans-Atlantic Briefing—five-way conversation ... correspondents stat...

CHARLES MUNCH conducts Boston Symphony at Tanglewood; Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; Joseph Pasquale, viola. 2:30, WCBS.
Symphony No. 5 in B flat.....Schub
Adagio for Strings.....Bar
Don Quixote.....Stra

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Today (Aug. 9) at 8:30—
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved Seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2
Thurs. (Aug. 13)—"Tanglewood on Parade" Many events include Boston Symphony Concert, Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin; LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 Reserved Seats $4 and $3, Unres.—$2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Berkshire Festiv...
Boston Symphony Or...
Charles Munch, co...
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.
Today, 2:30. (Soloists, Gregor Pi... cellist, and Joseph De Pasquale, ... Symphony No. 5 in B flat, ... Adagio for Strings, Barber; "Don ... Strauss.
Thursday, "Tanglewood on Parade" (Benefit of the Berkshire Music ... Concert by student orchestra. Pe... formances of opera, "Bad Boys in ... (Meyerowitz), and Cantata, "A Li... Lost" (Sapp). Chamber Music ... 8:15, Symphony Concert (Charles ... and Leonard Bernstein conducting; ... Isaac Stern, violinist.) Wagn... Handel; Violin Concerto, ... "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scen... 2, with William Warfield, ... Leontyne Price, soprano, and ...
Friday, 8:30. (Soloists, Lois Mar... prano; and William Warfield, ... Requiem, Brahms.
Saturday, 8:30. (Leonard Bern... ducting). Symphony No. 4 in ... Sinfonia India, Chavez; Symphon... in D major, Brahms.
Sunday, Aug. 16, 2:30. Symphon... minor ("Unfinished"); Bourree Fa... Chabrier; Prelude and Love-Death ... tan und Isolde"; A Siegfried M... Meistersinger von Nurnberg," ... from Act II, Wagner; Piano Con... the Left Hand (Seymour Lipkin, ... "La Valse," Ravel. (Commentator ... Fassett).
Berkshire Music Center ... Dept. Monday and Tuesd... "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" ("Ric... Lion-Hearted), Gretry.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 10 1953

Berkshire Festival:

Munch Offers 'Romeo'

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—In a generous outpouring of symphonic music, the second weekend of the Berkshire Festival had several highlights.

Munch's performance of Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its entirety, Leonard Bernstein's interpretation of the Mahler Second Symphony, and the playing of Piatigorsky and the B. S. O. in Strauss's "Don Quixote" each dominated its respective concert. A total of 28,000 people attended the three events.

The Berlioz in full dress of solos and chorus attains a completeness not fully appreciated in hearing only the orchestral parts. The Berkshire Festival chorus, Jennie Tourel, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, functioned admirably.

Though Munch did justice to the score's romanticism, the work emerged as more old-fashioned than anticipated.

Wins Medal

Temperamentally attuned to the Mahler, Bernstein conducted a fiery, emotionally-charged performance. It aroused the audience to fever pitch. He was handsomely assisted by the chorus, Miss Tourel, and Theresa Green, soprano.

In making the most of the score as conductor's music, however, Bernstein indulged in inartistic exaggerations. He was over-eager in underlining what Mahler had over-provided in the first place. For his efforts, nonetheless, he received the Bruckner Society medal after the concert.

Munch's masterly reading of the Strauss score made this account of Don Quixote's tale exciting. Better known than the other works, it lost nothing through familiarity because of a finely integrated performance.

Piatigorsky was in top form for the cello solos, most ably seconded by Joseph De Pasquale playing the viola role of Panza.

Notable Singing

The Mahler was the focal point of the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, annually entrusted to Bernstein. He opened with Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovanstchina," a special favorite of Koussevitzky, and followed it with Ravel's "Sheherazade" with Miss Tourel as soloist.

She sang with that artistic perfection expected of her, and the memory of her singing persisted even after the Mahler had been performed.

The Strauss was part of the Sunday afternoon program. Munch led off with the simplicity of Shubert's charming Fifth Symphony. He included Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings." A beautiful performance caught the audience's fancy.

Milhaud's piquant melodious, playful cello concerto proved an excellent foil for the Strauss, though its quality was perhaps a bit lost in the vast end. Roussel's second suite from "Bachus et Ariane" gave the concert its brilliant finale. The whole program appeared to bring much satisfaction.

Cir. (D 16,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

In Brief . . .

The appearance of the Metropolitan's Richard Tucker at the Knesses Israel services in Pittsfield is a reminder of how much the county owes the Berkshire Music Center for the success of summer church programs. There has been scarcely a service, large or small, that hasn't been enhanced by a talented voice from Tanglewood . . . The death of Cheshire's Miss Julia Bowen at 93 brought to an end a long career of community service accomplished so quietly that few outside of her own circle knew of it . . . To Dean Brooks of Williams, whose "unearthed" letters chiding townspeople of 1752 for not helping to build a house contain quite a lesson for today, our congratulations. We trust he will see to it that the relics are thoroughly checked for authenticity with some reliable research outfit like Young & Rubicam . . .

A happy first birthday to the McClusky triplets, who seem to be starting off in a most fortuitous way—they don't look very much alike . . . Well, we give up. We suppose a circus parade is only possible at all nowadays by selling space on the elephants . . .

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 11 1953

Music

'Richard' Presented At Lenox

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—At the theater-concert hall last evening, the Berkshire Music Center presented Gretry's comic opera in three acts "Richard the Lion-Hearted." The orchestra was that of Department 1 of the center, its conductor, Boris Goldovsky, who also prepared the production.

The original French text by J. M. Sedaine was translated into practical and very often amusing English by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. The cast was peopled mostly by students. Miss Caldwell staged the piece.

Melody is by no means a negligible element in this score. It is not melody that might be compared with the Olympian melody of Mozart, who was pretty busy himself in those days, but it has attractions quite natural to the spirit of the text and to the comedy that quietly, almost unobtrusively emerges from the lines and situations.

Production Deserves Praise.

There are some good arias in this piece, not the solidly operatic type we have come to know and love in the current repertory. But they serve more than a stage purpose, for they have personalities of their own, that is, Gretry's personality.

All in all, I thought the production deserved praise for its intentions, for its happy touch of true theatre, old as that theatre is, for its simplicity.

The sets were especially good and quite evocative of past moods and manners in the theatre. The man responsible for them, and also for the lighting, was John Blankenship, who employed, in order to obtain unusual effects, the Paul Planer GKP projections, involving apparently a slide mechanism which makes operatic action quite agreeable to the eye, though in shadow and stylization. Also apropos were the costumes of Leo Van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky's musical consultants were Paul Ulanowsky, Felix Wolfes and Ludwig Zirner.

Valiantly and Efficiently.

Outstanding in the cast was Lee Cass, as Sir Hugh Williams, whose delivery of spoken lines (there was no sung recitative) proved excellent. As Blondel, the ministrel who sets King Richard free, John McCollum did some good work, getting many laughs with his exaggerated "playing" of an ancient stringed instrument.

Rosalind Elias, as Antonio, Blondel's guide; Christine Cardillo as Laurette, Sir Hugh's daughter; Robert Roe, as the jailer Florestan; Theresa Green, as the Countess of Flanders, all labored valiantly and efficiently.

Cir. (D 16,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

Party Wednesday To Aid Students At Tanglewood

The annual scholarship party of the Tanglewood Student Council will be tomorrow night, starting at 10, at Wheatleigh dormitory. Proceeds are used to help needy students of the Berkshire Festival Music Center at the following season.

There will be door prizes, skits, dancing and refreshments.

Union
AUGUST 11, 1953

CHARMING OPERA THRILLS CROWDS AT TANGLEWOOD

Gretry's 'Richard the Lion-Hearted' Presented by Orchestra, Cast

By WILLARD CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 10—When the theater-shed was inaugurated here at Tanglewood by Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, it was with the idea that it should be the site for the performance of operas not yet, or seldom heard. Thus, through the years, the shed has seen the premiers of "Albert Herring," "Ideomeno" "Le Roi D'Ivetot" and tonight "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Andre Gretry, an opera that had its last performance in America in 1800.

Under the direction of Boris Goldovsky and in a translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, this charming 17th century opera was given a gay and sprightly performance. It has the virtue of a credible plot which goes something like this: the story is based on the legend of the minstrel Blondel, who discovers the whereabouts of the imprisoned King Richard the Lion-Hearted by traveling from fortress to fortress singing the monarch's favorite love song. In Gretry's opera Blondel disguises himself as a blind violinist. Florestan, the warden of the prison, is involved in a love affair and Blondel takes advantage of this to invite him to a peasant party. Ostensibly to meet his beloved. Florestan comes to the party, is arrested by the adherents of Richard's lady love, Marguerite. Since he refuses to free the king, the fortress is assaulted and a happy ending crowns the work.

As usual, settings and costumes were handsome and the various roles well sung and admirably acted. Dialogue, of which there was a great deal, was put across clearly. In fact, seldom does one hear the English language sung or spoken with greater clarity than in a Boris Goldovsky production.

The role of Blondel was taken by John McCollum. He sang it admirably and created a forceful characterization. Antonio, his guide while he pretended to be blind, was charmingly sung by Rosalind Elias. Robert Rue revealed his splendid voice as Florestan. The role of Richard was sung tonight by Richard Cassilly and one of the finest episodes of the evening was his duet with Blondel, when the two tenors joined their voices in an amazingly effective manner. Sir William, the Englishman, on whose estate much of the action takes place, was finely conceived by Lee Cass.

Tonight, the role of Marguerite was sung by Therese Green, the young Negro soprano who has so favorably impressed audiences here. She was a regal figure in black velvet and silver and she sank with beauty of tone and vocal freedom, bringing a distinguished dignity to the role.

There was a large cast with each individual giving nicely defined characterization. The Laurette of Christina Cardillo was a charming portrayal of a peasant girl and she was admirably seconded by the Collette of Arlene Stone.

This little opera is a pleasant mixture of petite chansons and heroic arias. The music moves briskly and forcefully, with tunes tumbling over each other, the orchestra of department 1 played well and Mr. Goldovsky held his forces together with a firm hand.

Thus another work has been brought to Tanglewood; a work which fulfills the idea of the theater-shed as envisaged by Dr. Koussevitzky.

Cir. (D 331,883) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 11 1953

Opera Premiere At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.—Among the events to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center at its annual Tanglewood on Parade Thursday will be the world premiere of a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, "Bad Boys in School." This will be presented under the direction of Boris Goldovsky by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

The opera performance will be one of the several demonstrations that will be held simultaneously at 6 p. m. to show the achievements in the various departments of the school. At the same time the Tanglewood Study Group will present the first performance of "A Little Boy Lost" by Allen Sapp, a composition student in the class of Aaron Copland. Both works were written with school or non-professional performers in mind.

Following the simultaneous demonstrations the Boston Symphony will be heard in the shed in a program directed by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, with Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists. Proceeds of the Tanglewood on Parade will aid the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school which is allied to the Berkshire Festival.

Cir. (D 56,590) (S 47,289)
This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 11 1953

Thursday's Program Listed For Berkshire Music Center

Of interest is the announcement that the world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be featured in Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments, orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group, commencing at 6 p. m.

Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists, and the festival chorus.

sacred music. Papal pronouncement on Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood; Gregor Piatigorsky and
Joseph de Pasquale, soloists, WCBS, 2:30.
Trans-Atlantic Briefing—five-way conversation among correspondents stationed in

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood:
Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; Joseph de
Pasquale, viola. 2:30, WCBS.
Symphony No. 4 in B flat.....Schubert
Adagio for Strings.....Barber
Don Quixote.....Strauss

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Today (Aug. 9) at 8:30—
(Soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky, Cello)
Remaining Concerts Aug. 14, 15, 16
Reserved Seats from $2.50; Gen'l Adm. $2
Thurs. (Aug. 13)—"Tanglewood on Parade"
Many events include Boston Symphony Concert,
Conducted by CHARLES MUNCH and LEONARD
BERNSTEIN; Soloists—ISAAC STERN, Violin;
LEONTYNE PRICE, Soprano, appearing with WILLIAM WARFIELD, Baritone, in "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 Reserved Seats
$4 and $3, Unres.—$2.50
Address Box Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

LATER, 2 WHLL, WNYC, 7, WNYC.
Mendelssohn
Dvorak
Strauss
Chopin
Mass.
egor P squale,
flat,
"Don
Parade
Music
restra.
formances of opera, "Bad Boys (Meyerowitz), and Cantata, "A Lost" (Sapp). Chamber Music
8:15, Symphony Concert (Char and Leonard Bernstein conducting Isaac Stern, violinist.) Wa
Handel; Violin Concerto,
"Porgy and Bess," Act II, Sce
2, with William Warfield,
Leontyne Price, soprano, and Friday, 8:30. (Soloists, Lois Ma prano; and William Warfield,
Requiem, Brahms.
Saturday, 8:30. (Leonard Bern ducting). Symphony No. 4 in Sinfonia India, Chavez; Symph in D major, Brahms.
Sunday, Aug. 16, 2:30. Symph
minor ("Unfinished"); Bourree
Chabrier; Prelude and Love-Dea tan und Isolde"; A Siegfried Meistersinger von Nurnberg," from Act II, Wagner; Piano Co
the Left Hand (Seymour Lipkin
"La Valse," Ravel. (Commentat Passett).
Berkshire Music Center
Dept. Monday and Tues
"Richard Coeur-de-Lion"
Lion-Hearted), Gretry.

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 11 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

erican Premiere

y Francis D. Perkins

NOX, Aug. 10.—Andre Er-te Gretry's "Richard Lion," an opera well n in musical history and own on today's stages, had rst American performance r a century tonight in wood's Theater Concert as this summer's major ion of the Berkshire Center's always enterpris-pera department.

is Goldovsky, head of the rtment, who conducted, and Caldwell, who has staged ngaging work, wrote the sh translation of J. M. Se-'s not rather naive libretto, John Blankenchip designed ets. One unusual feature of nery was the use of Paul 's projection mechanism he semi-final battle scene. is example of French eight-century opera comique irst performed in Paris in before the turn of the y, it was heard in Boston, adelphia and New York. t has been shelved for so that the authentic score hard to obtain. The one ob-d from France was a much ed version made by Adolphe n, so Mr. Goldovsky turned 's native Belgium and e music from the Brussels um.

Paris Heard It in 1780s

e instrumental parts ob-d from Brussels are those retry's time, and tonight's nce heard virtually what ians had heard in the after Gretry had sub-ed a new close for an ally unsatisfactory ending. plot offers no difficulties; it with King Richard I of nd, captured in Austria returning from the Cru-, and the rescue contrived is minstrel, Blondel, who, ised as a blind man, makes elf known to Richard by a which Richard, in the , is supposed to have com-d, and which turns up in of the three acts.

ondel, sung by John McCol-lum, is the opera's most rewarding role; Richard Cassily sang Richard. Other principal roles were Sir Hugh Willams, an English nobleman, sung by Lee Cass; Laurette, his daughter, sung by Christine Cardillo; Florestan, Richard's jailor, sung by Robert Rue, and Antonio, Blondel's youthful guide, sung by Rosalind Elias. Theresa Green was the Countess of Valois.

Florestan loves Laurette, and is captured at a rendezvous with her, which gives a chance for Sir Hugh, Blondel and various soldiers to release Richard, who is rapturously welcomed by Marguerite.

Of Romantic Opera Genre

The work, set forth in speech and in solos, ensembles and choruses, might be described as a romantic opera or musical play; the genre is of a type represented by Reginald De Koven's "Robin Hood" over a century later. There are copious tunes, including Blondel's aria, "Richard, My King," early in the first act, and a hearty drinking song at the end of it.

The men have the lion's share of the singing, although Laurette and Antonio have pleasing airs. Marguerite's musical assignment is mainly in concerted scenes. The scoring is neat, not elaborate, but effective; the music is not vocally exacting, but is always sympathetic with the dramatic situation. It has not the heroic, mythological air of earlier eighteenth century opera, or its formality.

Like other works of its time, its flavor is cosmopolitan rather than national, but, since it represents a type of opera now unfamiliar, at least in this country, it does not give the standardized impression made by certain other works by lesser masters of the day.

The unconvincing nature of the libretto may probably bar "Richard" from major modern stages, but it could be a very serviceable and likeable vehicle for smaller companies and student groups, such as the [illegible] shire Center's enthusiastic young singers.

Arlene Stone, Alfred Knopf, Anne English, Louis McCauley, McKenry Boatwright, Suzanne Der Derian, Paul Huddleston, Richard Brand, Hunger Moore, Wendell Clifford Orr, and Arthur Schoep completed the cast.

The opera will be repeated tomorrow night with three changes in the vocal roster.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 11 1953

OPERA BY GRETRY STAGED AT LENOX

Goldovsky Conducts Students at Berkshire Center in 'Richard the Lion-Hearted'

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10—The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center has made it a point—and an act—of faith to do something out of the ordinary each year, either new or old, and it has not failed this summer. The big production this year is Gretry's opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted," presented here tonight, and if there have been previous performances of this eighteenth-century work in this part of the world, one has not heard about them.

Gretry is an honorable name in the music dictionaries. And what one knows principally of this opera is that it has a tune, Richard's Love Song, that recurs through the piece, almost like a leitmotif. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, wondered in his prefatory remarks whether this use of the tune by Gretry had not some influence, or at least some connection, with the development of the idea of the leitmotif.

Well, Mr. Goldovsky's conjecture is as good as the next man's, and perhaps better. But it struck this listener that Gretry had a libretto that would let him repeat a tune, and he had the wit to know that he had written what we could call a hit number. It is a charming melody, and in a way it is symptomatic of the opera as a whole.

Theatrical Style Obvious

It is obvious that Gretry had a certain theatrical style at his fingertips—the galant manner widely employed in the last decades of the Eighteenth Century. After all, this opera was written in 1783, and in this very decade "The Marriage of Figaro" and "Don Giovanni" were born, and the rare gifts of musicianship and knowledge of the human heart with which Mozart transformed a current style were not apparently within Gretry's reach.

This does not mean that Gretry should be underestimated. Certainly it was fine to have the Berkshire Center's production. It revealed the lightheartedness and gaiety of which Gretry was capable. He did not labor his points. His music always has grace and point. How it would wear with repetition is another question. If one may hazard a guess after a first hearing of this piece, it lacks the warmth and humanity that would make it stand up as a repertory piece.

Clemens Kalischer

AS KING RICHARD: Alvin Edmonson, who appeared in Gretry's comic opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted" last night at Tanglewood, as performed by students attending the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight's production, which will be repeated tomorrow, was one of the most felicitous that the Berkshire Center's opera department has done. The style of the entire enterprise—musical interpretation, staging, sets and costumes—had the right touch of airiness. There was a bit of cuteness here and there, and there was a comic Englishman who, one would have thought, had become old hat in Shakespeare's time. He got laughs, it should be added, sadly.

Translation Apt and Quaint

The English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell was apt and it was quaint, Mr. Goldovsky pleaded that this was the fault or credit of the original by Sedaine. Miss Caldwell was responsible for the staging, John Blankenchip for the sets and Leo Van Witsen for the costumes. Paul Palner's projections of set backgrounds, a technique used here last year for Mozart's "Titus," were even an improvement on last season. Opera producers everywhere should take notice.

As is always the case with a Berkshire Center production, there was a wealth of fresh, young, promising voices. Those of Christine Cardillo, Theresa Green, Rosalind Elias, John McCollum and Robert Rue made the most favorable impression, partly because they had more to do than the others. But even the chorus sounded vibrant. As for the orchestra, drawn from the Center's orchestra department, it did its share with gusto. Mr. Goldovsky as the conductor kept the whole show moving in lively fashion.

Perhaps Gretry's "Richard" resembled very skillful musical comedy at times. But what's wrong with skillful musical comedy?

Cir. (D 653,252) (S 982,681)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 11 1953

Berkshire Music Center:

Gretry 'Richard' Fetchingly Sung

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 11.—For its major production, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center presented a revival of Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" last night. Of historical interest more than anything else, it had its moments.

As a production competing with past offerings, however, it qualified as a feebler effort in spite of a certain charm.

First heard in Paris in 1784, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" had its New York premiere in 1800. It has been designated Gretry's masterpiece and the foundation stone of French comic-opera.

Today, its naivete both musical and dramatic seems utterly quaint. Time has obscured it justifiably.

Fortunately, the work was given in a notably singable English translation by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. They have capitalized on some of its humor while overworking the convention of rhyming in a commendably "workable" text. The result appears to underline the inherent simplicity of the story to the point of being almost painful.

Music Charms

The charm, of course, springs from the music. Actually there is nothing distinguished about it. It conforms to the formulas of 18th-Century practice, apt in their day. A considerable amount of spoken dialogue makes the arias the more conspicious without their being particularly worthy of such prominence.

Staged by Sarah Caldwell, set by John Blankenchip, and costumed by Leo Van Witsen, the production proved no more than adequate. It employed Paul Planer's slide projection mechanism to advantage. Through this medium the staging of the battle scene was quite effective.

The student cast sang earnestly in a straight-forward manner.

As Blondel, the wandering minstrel seeking the imprisoned King Richard, John McCollum combined acting and singing convincingly.

Rosalind Elias as his guide sang with appealing voice and manner.

Theresa Green revealed a lovely soprano voice as Marguerite, the countess in love with Richard. Lee Cass gave a good impersonation of a British nobleman.

Goldovsky conducted an orchestra of 38 students who did a highly creditable job.

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 11 1953

Tanglewood Parade To Feature Concert Thursday In Shed

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments — orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group — commencing at 6:00 p. m. Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist; and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for Act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists and the Festical Chorus.

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 11 1953

Editors From Europe End Berkshire Visit

A group of 14 editors of European newspapers who spent the week-end in the Berkshires left Pittsfield airport last night for Washington, D. C.

Escorted by two representatives of the State department and one of the Defense department, the editors were guests in Pittsfield homes during their stay. They attended two concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood and yesterday visited dance classes at Jacob's Pillow dance festival.

The editors were from Belgium, Denmark, France, Italy, Holland, Norway, Portugal and England.

Yesterday afternoon they were taken on a sight-seeing tour of the county by the Berkshire Hill Conference.

Cir. (D 14,049)
This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
POST-STAR
AUG 11 1953

Tanglewood Festival Nears Close

Final Week's Program Sure to Appeal to All Music Devotees

By BRUENNHILDE D. McCUNE

The Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is in its last week. Under the direction of Charles Munch, programs have been given since July 11 in the theatre and in the large shed, which seats 6,000 people. Pierre Monteux, famous Frenchman, recently resigned conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein, well-know American, have been guest conductors. Mr. Bernstein will again conduct concerts this coming week-end. Soloists have been Isaac Stern and Zino Francescatti, violinists; Gregor Piatigorsky, famous violincellist, and Jennie Tourel, soprano.

Those who enjoy fine music can have a wonderful time at Tanglewood by attending, not only the week-end programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, but also the special events, such as the one scheduled for this coming Thursday evening, "Tanglewood on Parade." At this time there will be a concert in the Shed, with Munch and Bernstein conducting. Isaac Stern will play the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess," and Leontyne Price, now starring on Broadway as Bess, will be soloists in Act II of "Porgy and Bess," to be given with chorus and orchestra.

Picnic on Lawn

You may take a picnic supper and eat on the lawn, a custom which prevails at Tanglewood. At every concert a thousand or more listeners make themselves comfortable on the grass with blankets, pillows and good things to eat. To do this, the listener is required to buy only a general admission ticket.

Sunday afternoon the Shed concert presented Schubert's Fifth Symphony, an Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Concerto for Cello" by Darius Milhaud and Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet. It was a program full of interest and was played, of course, as only a first-rate orchestra like the Boston Symphony can play.

Of special interest to those in this locality who knew the late Louise Homer or who are acquainted with her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, of Lake George, was the Adagio written by Samuel Barber. Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Mme. Homer and a cousin of Mrs. Stires. A graduate of Curtis Institute of Music, he has won many prizes for his musical creations, including the Pulitzer Prize and the American Prix de Rome. He is the first composer to achieve the distinction of winning the Pulitzer Prize twice. Mr. Barber's compositions include a symphony premiered by Serge Koussevitzky, works for strings and piano and songs.

The Adagio played Sunday appears as the slow movement in his String Quartet in B minor. Based upon a single melodic theme, it is musical from start to finish and romantic in that it possesses elegiance of style. Mr. Barber, who was in the audience, was called to the podium by Mr. Munch to share in the enthusiastic reception of the piece.

Variations Played

Strauss' fantastic variations, "Don Quixote," were played instead of a symphony. This long composition, with an introduction, 10 variations and a finale, depicts episodes in the life of this lunatic knight. The three themes in the work represent Quixote, Dulcinea, the lady of his dreams, and Sancho Panza, his servant. Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo parts in the Variations. The two closing numbers were Darius Milhaud's Concerto, played by Mr. Piatigorsky and the orchestra, and the Ballet by Roussel.

Works to be performed this coming week-end are: Friday at 8:30 P. M., Brahm's Requiem with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists and Charles Munch conducting; Saturday at 8:30 P. M., Sibelius, Symphony; Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque; Wagner, "A Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger"; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with Seymour Sipkin, soloist; and "La Valse." Mr. Munch will conduct.

A coast-to-coast radio network will broadcast part of the Sunday afternoon concert from 2:30 to 4 P. M. There has been no difficulty in securing seats for the concerts

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 11 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

erican Premiere

By Francis D. Perkins

c. Aug. 10.—Andre Er-Modeste Gretry's "Richard de Lion," an opera well in musical history and own on today's stages, had st American performance e a century tonight in lewood's Theater Concert this summer's major ion of the Berkshire Center's always enterpris-pera department.

ris Goldovsky, head of the tment, who conducted, and Caldwell, who has staged ngaging work, wrote the translation of J. M. Se-rather naive libretto, John Blankenchip designed ts. One unusual feature of enery was the use of Paul projection mechanism emi-final battle scene. is example of French eight-ntury opera comique first performed in Paris in before the turn of the it was heard in Boston, delphia and New York. it has been shelved for so that the authentic score hard to obtain. The one ob-d from France was a much ed version made by Adolphe n, so Mr. Goldovsky turned tretry's native Belgium and the music from the Brussels eum.

s Paris Heard It in 1780s

e instrumental parts ob-d from Brussels are those retry's time, and tonight's ence heard virtually what ians had heard in the after Gretry had sub-ed a new close for an ally unsatisfactory ending. plot offers no difficulties; it with King Richard I of and, captured in Austria returning from the Cru-, and the rescue contrived minstrel, Blondel, who, ised as a blind man, makes lf known to Richard by a which Richard, in the , is supposed to have com-d, and which turns up in of the three acts.

ondel, sung by John McCol-lum, is the opera's most rewarding role; Richard Cassily sang Richard. Other principal roles were Sir Hugh Willams, an English nobleman, sung by Lee Cass; Laurette, his daughter, sung by Christine Cardillo; Florestan, Richard's jailor, sung by Robert Rue, and Antonio, Blondel's youthful guide, sung by Rosalind Elias. Theresa Green was the Countess of Valois.

Florestan loves Laurette, and is captured at a rendezvous with her, which gives a chance for Sir Hugh, Blondel and various soldiers to release Richard, who is rapturously welcomed by Marguerite.

Of Romantic Opera Genre

The work, set forth in speech and in solos, ensembles and choruses, might be described as a romantic opera or musical play; the genre is of a type represented by Reginald De Koven's "Robin Hood" over a century later. There are copious tunes, including Blondel's aria, "Richard, My King," early in the first act, and a hearty drinking song at the end of it.

The men have the lion's share of the singing, although Laurette and Antonio have pleasing airs. Marguerite's musical assignment is mainly in concerted scenes. The scoring is neat, not elaborate, but effective; the music is not vocally exacting, but is always sympathetic with the dramatic situation. It has not the heroic, mythological air of earlier eighteenth century opera, or its formality.

Like other works of its time, its flavor is cosmopolitan rather than national, but, since it represents a type of opera now unfamiliar, at least in this country, it does not give the standardized impression made by certain other works by lesser masters of the day.

The unconvincing nature of the libretto may probably bar "Richard" from major modern stages, but it could be a very serviceable and likeable vehicle for smaller companies and student groups, such as the ... shire Center's enthusiastic young singers.

Arlene Stone, Alfred Knopf, Anne English, Louis McCauley, McKenry Boatwright, Suzanne Der Derian, Paul Huddleston, Richard Brand, Hunger Moore, Wendell Clifford Orr, and Arthur Schoep completed the cast.

The opera will be repeated tomorrow night with three changes in the vocal roster.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 11 1953

OPERA BY GRETRY STAGED AT LENOX

Goldovsky Conducts Students at Berkshire Center in 'Richard the Lion-Hearted'

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10—The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center has made it a point—and an act—of faith to do something out of the ordinary each year, either new or old, and it has not failed this summer. The big production this year is Gretry's opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted," presented here tonight, and if there have been previous performances of this eighteenth-century work in this part of the world, one has not heard about them.

Gretry is an honorable name in the music dictionaries. And what one knows principally of this opera is that it has a tune, Richard's Love Song, that recurs through the piece, almost like a leitmotif. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, wondered in his prefatory remarks whether this use of the tune by Gretry had not some influence, or at least some connection, with the development of the idea of the leitmotif.

Well, Mr. Goldovsky's conjecture is as good as the next man's, and perhaps better. But it struck this listener that Gretry had a libretto that would let him repeat a tune, and he had the wit to know that he had written what we could call a hit number. It is a charming melody, and in a way it is symptomatic of the opera as a whole.

Theatrical Style Obvious

It is obvious that Gretry had a certain theatrical style at his fingertips—the galant manner widely employed in the last decades of the Eighteenth Century. After all, this opera was written in 1783, and in this very decade "The Marriage of Figaro" and "Don Giovanni" were born, and the rare gifts of musicianship and knowledge of the human heart with which Mozart transformed a current style were not apparently within Gretry's reach.

This does not mean that Gretry should be underestimated. Certainly it was fine to have the Berkshire Center's production. It revealed the lightheartedness and gaiety of which Gretry was capable. He did not labor his points. His music always has grace and point. How it would wear with repetition is another question. If one may hazard a guess after a first hearing of this piece, it lacks the warmth and humanity that would make it stand up as a repertory piece.

Tonight's production, which will be repeated tomorrow, was one of the most felicitous that the Berkshire Center's opera department has done. The style of the entire enterprise—musical interpretation, staging, sets and costumes—had the right touch of airiness. There was a bit of cuteness here and there, and there was a comic Englishman who, one would have thought, had become old hat in Shakespeare's time. He got laughs, it should be added, sadly.

Translation Apt and Quaint

The English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell was apt and it was quaint, Mr. Goldovsky pleaded that this was the fault or credit of the original by Sedaine. Miss Caldwell was responsible for the staging, John Blankenchip for the sets and Leo Van Witsen for the costumes. Paul Palner's projections of set backgrounds, a technique used here last year for Mozart's "Titus," were even an improvement on last season. Opera producers everywhere should take notice.

As is always the case with a Berkshire Center production, there was a wealth of fresh, young, promising voices. Those of Christine Cardillo, Theresa Green, Rosalind Elias, John McCollum and Robert Rue made the most favorable impression, partly because they had more to do than the others. But even the chorus sounded vibrant. As for the orchestra, drawn from the Center's orchestra department, it did its share with gusto. Mr. Goldovsky as the conductor kept the whole show moving in lively fashion.

Perhaps Gretry's "Richard" resembled very skillful musical comedy at times. But what's wrong with skillful musical comedy?

Clemens Kalischer

AS KING RICHARD: Alvin Edmonson, who appeared in Gretry's comic opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted" last night at Tanglewood, as performed by students attending the Berkshire Music Center.

Cir. (D 14,049)
This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
POST-STAR
AUG 11 1953

Tanglewood Festival Nears Close

Final Week's Program Sure to Appeal to All Music Devotees

By BRUENNHILDE D. McCUNE

The Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is in its last week. Under the direction of Charles Munch, programs have been given since July 11 in the theatre and in the large shed, which seats 6,000 people. Pierre Monteux, famous Frenchman, recently resigned conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein, well-know American, have been guest conductors. Mr. Bernstein will again conduct concerts this coming week-end. Soloists have been Isaac Stern and Zino Francescatti, violinists; Gregor Piatigorsky, famous violincellist, and Jennie Tourel, soprano.

Those who enjoy fine music can have a wonderful time at Tanglewood by attending, not only the week-end programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, but also the special events, such as the one scheduled for this coming Thursday evening, "Tanglewood on Parade." At this time there will be a concert in the Shed, with Munch and Bernstein conducting. Isaac Stern will play the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess," and Leontyne Price, now starring on Broadway as Bess, will be soloists in Act II of "Porgy and Bess," to be given with chorus and orchestra.

Picnic on Lawn

You may take a picnic supper and eat on the lawn, a custom which prevails at Tanglewood. At every concert a thousand or more listeners make themselves comfortable on the grass with blankets, pillows and good things to eat. To do this, the listener is required to buy only a general admission ticket.

Sunday afternoon the Shed concert presented Schubert's Fifth Symphony, an Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Concerto for Cello" by Darius Milhaud and Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet. It was a program full of interest and was played, of course, as only a first-rate orchestra like the Boston Symphony can play.

Of special interest to those in this locality who knew the late Louise Homer or who are acquainted with her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, of Lake George, was the Adagio written by Samuel Barber. Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Mme. Homer and a cousin of Mrs. Stires. A graduate of Curtis Institute of Music, he has won many prizes for his musical creations, including the Pulitzer Prize and the American Prix de Rome. He is the first composer to achieve the distinction of winning the Pulitzer Prize twice. Mr. Barber's compositions include a symphony premiered by Serge Koussevitzky, works for strings and piano and songs.

The Adagio played Sunday appears as the slow movement in his String Quartet in B minor. Based upon a single melodic theme, it is musical from start to finish and romantic in that it possesses elegance of style. Mr. Barber, who was in the audience, was called to the podium by Mr. Munch to share in the enthusiastic reception of the piece.

Variations Played

Strauss' fantastic variations, "Don Quixote," were played instead of a symphony. This long composition, with an introduction, 10 variations and a finale, depicts episodes in the life of this lunatic knight. The three themes in the work represent Quixote, Dulcinea, the lady of his dreams, and Sancho Panza, his servant. Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo parts in the Variations. The two closing numbers were Darius Milhaud's Concerto, played by Mr. Piatigorsky and the orchestra, and the Ballet by Roussel.

Works to be performed this coming week-end are: Friday at 8:30 P. M., Brahm's Requiem with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists and Charles Munch conducting; Saturday at 8:30 P. M., Sibelius, Symphony No. 4; Chavez, Sinfonia India; Brahms, Symphony No. 2 with Bernstein conducting; Sunday at 2:30 P. M., Schubert's Unfinished

Cir. (D 653,252) (S 982,681)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 11 1953

Berkshire Music Center:

Gretry 'Richard' Fetchingly Sung

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 11.—For its major production, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center presented a revival of Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" last night. Of historical interest more than anything else, it had its moments.

As a production competing with past offerings, however, it qualified as a feebler effort in spite of a certain charm.

First heard in Paris in 1784, "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" had its New York premiere in 1800. It has been designated Gretry's masterpiece and the foundation stone of French comic-opera.

Today, its naivete both musical and dramatic seems utterly quaint. Time has obscured it justifiably.

Fortunately, the work was given in a notably singable English translation by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell. They have capitalized on some of its humor while overworking the convention of rhyming in a commendably "workable" text. The result appears to underline the inherent simplicity of the story to the point of being almost painful.

Music Charms

The charm, of course, springs from the music. Actually there is nothing distinguished about it. It conforms to the formulas of 18th-Century practice, apt in their day. A considerable amount of spoken dialogue makes the arias the more conspicious without their being particularly worthy of such prominence.

Staged by Sarah Caldwell, set by John Blankenchip, and costumed by Leo Van Witsen, the production proved no more than adequate. It employed Paul Planer's slide projection mechanism to advantage. Through this medium the staging of the battle scene was quite effective.

The student cast sang earnestly in a straight-forward manner.

As Blondel, the wandering minstrel seeking the imprisoned King Richard, John McCollum combined acting and singing convincingly.

Rosalind Elias as his guide sang with appealing voice and manner.

Theresa Green revealed a lovely soprano voice as Marguerite, the countess in love with Richard. Lee Cass gave a good impersonation of a British nobleman.

Goldovsky conducted an orchestra of 38 students who did a highly creditable job.

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 11 1953

Tanglewood Parade To Feature Concert Thursday In Shed

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments — orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus, and study group — commencing at 6:00 p. m. Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven, with Isaac Stern as soloist; and Leonard Bernstein will have the podium for Act II, scenes 1 and 2 of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists and the Festical Chorus.

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 11 1953

Editors From Europe End Berkshire Visit

A group of 14 editors of European newspapers who spent the week-end in the Berkshires left Pittsfield airport last night for Washington, D. C.

Escorted by two representatives of the State department and one of the Defense department, the editors were guests in Pittsfield homes during their stay. They attended two concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood and yesterday visited dance classes at Jacob's Pillow dance festival.

The editors were from Belgium, Denmark, France, Italy, Holland, Norway, Portugal and England.

Yesterday afternoon they were taken on a sight-seeing tour of the county by the Berkshire Hills Conference.

Last Week of Performances Being Given at Tanglewood

8/12
Post-Star Glens Falls NY

By BRUENNHILDE D. McCUNE

The Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is in its last week. Under the direction of Charles Munch, programs have been given since July 11 in the theatre and in the large shed, which seats 6,000 people. Pierre Monteux, famous Frenchman, recently resigned conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein, well-know American, have been guest conductors. Mr. Bernstein will again conduct concerts this coming week-end. Soloists have been Isaac Stern and Zino Francescatti, violinists; Gregor Piatigorsky, famous violincellist, and Jennie Tourel, soprano.

Those who enjoy fine music can have a wonderful time at Tanglewood by attending, not only the week-end programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, but also the special events, such as the one scheduled for tomorrow evening, "Tanglewood on Parade." At this time there will be a concert in the Shed, with Munch and Bernstein conducting. Isaac Stern will play the Beethoven Violin Concerto. William Warfield, popular star of "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess," and Leontyne Price, now starring on Broadway as Bess, will be soloists in Act II of "Porgy and Bess," to be given with chorus and orchestra.

Picnic on Lawn

You may take a picnic supper and eat on the lawn, a custom which prevails at Tanglewood. At every concert a thousand or more listeners make themselves comfortable on the grass with blankets, pillows and good things to eat. To do this, the listener is required to buy only a general admission ticket.

Sunday afternoon the Shed concert presented Schubert's Fifth Symphony, an Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Concerto for Cello" by Darius Milhaud and Albert Roussel's "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet. It was a program full of interest and was played, of course, as only a first-rate orchestra like the Boston Symphony can play.

Of special interest to those in this locality who knew the late Louise Homer or who are acquainted with her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, of Lake George, was the Adagio written by Samuel Barber. Mr. Barber is a nephew of the late Mme. Homer and a cousin of Mrs. Stires. A graduate of Curtis Institute of Music, he has won many prizes for his musical creations, including the Pulitzer Prize and the American Prix de Rome. He is the first composer to achieve the distinction of winning the Pulitzer Prize twice. Mr. Barber's compositions include a symphony premiered by Serge Koussevitzky, works for strings and piano and songs.

The Adagio played Sunday appears as the slow movement in his String Quartet in B minor. Based upon a single melodic theme, it is musical from start to finish and romantic in that it possesses elegance of style. Mr. Barber, who was in the audience, was called to the podium by Mr. Munch to share in the enthusiastic reception of the piece.

Variations Played

Strauss' fantastic variations, "Don Quixote," were played instead of a symphony. This long composition, with an introduction, 10 variations and a finale, depicts episodes in the life of this lunatic knight. The three themes in the work represent Quixote, Dulcinea, the lady of his dreams, and Sancho Panza, his servant. Gregor Piatigorsky and Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo parts in the Variations. The two closing numbers were Darius Milhaud's Concerto, played by Mr. Piatigorsky and the orchestra, and the Ballet by Roussel.

Works to be performed this coming week-end are: Friday at 8:30 P. M., Brahm's Requiem with Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, as soloists and Charles Munch conducting; Saturday at 8:30 P. M., Sibelius, Symphony No. 4; Chavez, Sinfonia India; Brahms, Symphony No. 2 with Bernstein conducting; Sunday at 2:30 P. M., Schubert's Unfinished Symphony; Chabrier, Bourree Fantasque; Wagner, "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger"; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with Seymour Sipkin, soloist; and "La Valse." Mr. Munch will conduct.

A coast-to-coast radio network will broadcast part of the Sunday afternoon concert from 2:30 to 4 P. M. There has been no difficulty in securing seats for the concerts.

Cir. (D 56,872)

This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

AUG 12 1953

Berkshire Festival Lists 3 Concluding Concerts

Tre Berkshire Festival will be concluded this weekend with concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The predicted 150,000 season's attenrance, including the festival concerts and 38 demonstrations and concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, will shatter all records for the festival.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon and Leonard Bernstein Saturday nigrt.

Brahm's Friday Night

Friday night's concert will be given over to Brahms' "German Requiem" for chorus and soloists. Lois Marshall, Canadian Soprano, and William Warfield, will be soloists and t he Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will participate.

Mr. Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez at Saturday night's program, which also will include symphonies by Sibelius and Brahms.

At Sunday's concert Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand. Works of Schubert, Chabriet and Wagner also will be performed.

'Tanglewood on Parade'

The concluding concerts will be preceded by "Tanglewood on Parade," a gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Thursday commencing at 6 p. m. The Music Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school of music.

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of the benefit program.

Scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will be presented with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists.

New Exhibit Is Opened At Library

Eagle 8/11

Harry Lane

LENOX — A new exhibit was hung at the Lenox Library yesterday consisting of paintings by Harry Lane and paintings and sculpture by Homer Gunn.

Mr. Lane's work consists of 10 oil paintings, including one of the West Stockbridge, Center Church and other local scenes. Two portraits done by Mr. Lane are of Dr. and Mrs. John Millet, formerly of Stockbridge where Dr. Millet was on the staff at the Riggs Foundation.

A native of New York, Mr. Lane trained in Munich and Paris and is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the Worcester Museum, Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, in the collection of Standard Oil of New Jersey, in murals at the U.S. post offices in Port Washington, N.Y., and Oakdale, Pa., and in numerous private collections.

Since 1949 he has been a resident of West Stockbridge and last summer was acting director of the Berkshire Art Center in Canaan, N.Y. He has been instrumental in assemblying group shows, including a season opening exhibit at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge and two shows in the reception hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Gunn is represented in the Lenox Library exhibit by five pieces of sculpture done in California redwood and four oil paintings. His paintings have been described by critics as "quasi-cubism."

A native of Uxbridge, Mr. Gunn is a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design and studied under Jon Corbino at the Art Students League of New York. He has had one-man shows at the Creative Gallery on 57th Street, New York City and at Hofstra College in Hempstead, Long Island, N.Y. His work is represented at the Sea Cliff Gallery on Long Island and was recently exhibited at the Stockbridge Playhouse, Tanglewood and the Berkshire Museum, where he is currently conducting a summer sculpture class.

(From Late Editions of Yesterday's Times)

OPERA BY GRETRY STAGED AT LENOX

8/12

Goldovsky Conducts Students at Berkshire Center in 'Richard the Lion-Hearted

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10—The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center has made it a point—and an act—of faith to do something out of the ordinary each year, either new or old, and it has not failed this summer. The big production this year is Gretry's opera "Richard the Lion-Hearted," presented here tonight, and if there have been previous performances of this eighteenth-century work in this part of the world, one has not heard about them.

Gretry is an honorable name in the music dictionaries. And what one knows principally of this opera is that it has a tune, Richard's Love Song, that recurs through the piece, almost like a leitmotif. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, wondered in his prefatory remarks whether this use of the tune by Gretry had not some influence, or at least some connection, with the development of the idea of the leitmotif.

Well, Mr. Goldovsky's conjecture is as good as the next man's, and perhaps better. But it struck this listener that Gretry had a libretto that would let him repeat a tune, and he had the wit to know that he had written what we could call a hit number. It is a charming melody, and in a way it is symptomatic of the opera as a whole.

It is obvious that Gretry had a certain theatrical style at his fingertips—the galant manner widely employed in the last decades of the Eighteenth Century. After all, this opera was written in 1783, and in this very decade "The Marriage of Figaro" and "Don Giovanni" were born, and the rare gifts of musicianship and knowledge of the human heart with which Mozart transformed a current style were not apparently within Gretry's reach.

This does not mean that Gretry should be underestimated. Certainly it was fine to have the Berkshire Center's production. It revealed the lightheartedness and gaiety of which Gretry was capable. He did not labor his points. His music always has grace and point. How it would wear with repetition is another question. If one may hazard a guess after a first hearing of this piece, it lacks the warmth and humanity that would make it stand up as a repertory piece.

Tonight's production, which will be repeated tomorrow, was one of the most felicitous that the Berkshire Center's opera department has done. The style of the entire enterprise—musical interpretation, staging, sets and costumes—had the right touch of airiness. There was a bit of cuteness here and there, and there was a comic Englishman who, one would have thought, had become old hat in Shakespeare's time. He got laughs, it should be added, sadly.

The English translation by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell was apt and it was quaint, Mr. Goldovsky pleaded that this was the fault or credit of the original by Sedaine. Miss Caldwell was responsible for the staging, John Blankenchip for the sets and Leo Van Witsen for the costumes. Paul Palner's projections of set backgrounds, a technique used here last year for Mozart's "Titus," were even an improvement on last season. Opera producers everywhere should take notice.

As is always the case with a Berkshire Center production, there was a wealth of fresh, young, promising voices. Those of Christine Cardillo, Theresa Green, Rosalind Elias, John McCollum and Robert Rue made the most favorable impression, partly because they had more to do than the others. But even the chorus sounded vibrant. As for the orchestra, drawn from the Center's orchestra department, it did its share with gusto. Mr. Goldovsky as the conductor kept the whole show moving in lively fashion.

Cir. (D 152,922) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

AUG 12 1953

'Tanglewood on Parade' for Benefit Tomorrow

With Isaac Stern, violinist; soprano Leontyne Price and her husband, baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood tomorrow evening.

There will be demonstrations by every department of the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch also will conduct the Suite from Handel's "Water Music."

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II, Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein. This concert performance will feature Leontyne Price, William Warfield and the Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 12 1953

New Opera, Cantata At Berkshire Benefit

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of "Tanglewood On Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

These works will be performed, starting at 6 p.m. tomorrow by students of the Berkshire Music Center as part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments—orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus and study group—which precedes a concert by the Boston Symphony in the Shed, led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein and featuring Isaac Stern as soloist in a Beethoven concerto, and scenes from Act II of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with William Warfield and Leontyne Price, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

Cir. (D 7,161)

This Clipping From
WEST WARWICK, R. I.
PAWTUXET VALLEY TIMES

AUG 12 1953

PIANOS ARRIVE

Tanglewood, Mass., — (INS) — One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 79-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

AUG 12 1953

Allard and Droeghmans Retire from Symphony

Raymond Allard, first bassoon, and cellist Hyppolyte Droeghmans will retire from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival Sunday. They were honored at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, following morning rehearsal.

Pasquale Cardillo was master of ceremonies. Allard and Droeghmans were presented gold watches by Charles Munch, conductor. Speakers included violinist Harry Ellis Dickson; Thomas D. Perry, assistant manager of the orchestra and Dr. Lewis Perry, trustee.

Allard, born at Sin-le-Noble, France, in 1898, joined the Boston Symphony in 1922. He lives in Brookline. Droeghmans, born in Liege, Belgium, in 1884, has been with the orchestra since 1927. He lives in Newton Center.

[27]

HARVARD SUMMER NEWS

Published weekly for the Harvard Summer School at the Harvard CRIMSON, 14 Plympton Street, Cambridge 38, Mass. Telephone Kirkland 7-2811 or Kirkland 7-600, Ext. 2180. Office hours: Monday through Friday, 9 to 12, 1:30 to 5.

Crimson Printing Company, 14 Plympton Street
Cambridge 38, Mass.

Ronald P. Kriss '54, Managing Editor
Francis M. V. Cahouet '54, Business Manager
Stephen S. Shohet '56 David L. Halberstam '55
Robert M. O'Neil '56 Sue Winter Carol Orkin
Edward Csaszar Margery Stern Robert Wigod

THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1953

Faculty Profile

Woody

Some thirty-odd years ago a Harvard undergraduate tried out for membership in the Harvard Glee Club; he was turned down because his voice was not good enough. Undaunted, he tried again, this time for the post of accompanist, and was accepted. Today that same student is the world-famous conductor of the glee club that had turned him down, as well as of the Radcliffe Choral Society. In addition he is professor of Music and University Organist and Choirmaster. His name—G. Wallace Woodworth, affectionately known as "Woody."

Born in Boston, Woody prepared at Cazenovia Seminary in New York. He then came to Harvard in 1920 and, a scholarship student in the top three rank list groups, was graduated cum laude in history. His contact with Professor Archibald T. Davison, then conductor of the Glee Club, later made him decide to switch from history to music, "towards which," Woody says, "the powerful magnetism of Dr. Davison had attracted me all through my undergraduate years."

As a graduate student in music, Woody jumped at the chance to become "Doc" Davison's conducting assistant. When Doc decided to give up conducting the Radcliffe Choral Society in 1925, Woody was made its regular conductor as well as acting conductor of the Glee Club during Doc's sabbatical.

Picking up an M.A. degree in 1926, Woody went abroad the following year on a Paine Travelling Fellowship to study further in England and travel on the Continent. Romantic Europe evidently had its effect, for shortly after returning he acquired a charming wife, whom he took back to Europe with him a few summers later. An assistant in music in 1928, he rose to a full professorship by 1946, during which period he succeeded Doc as permanent conductor of the Glee Club and as University Organist and Choirmaster, and was for four years chairman of the Music Department.

Surpassed by none as a choral conductor, Woody has maintained the highest standards over the years, both in performance and in the choice of music to be performed. During a tour a few years ago, one of the leading New York critics said, "The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society constitute three of the finest singing groups in the country—a men's chorus, a women's chorus, and a mixed chorus." Anyone who has sung under Woody will agree the Glee Club is not just another singing group, but constitutes a college course in its own right. As a rare champion of music of all kinds, he makes singers get to the heart of any composition, be it a Renaissance motet or one of the many new works written especially for him and the Harvard Glee Club. He has always harbored a special love for the Baroque period, and is an authority on Bach and the sources of Bach's style. On returning from his year in Europe, he became the first conductor of the Bach Cantata Club and, from 1928 to 1933, gave the first Boston performances of cantatas and other choral works.

Although primarily concerned with voices Woody has found time to conduct orchestras as well. He directed the Pierian Sodality Orchestra from 1929 to 1932. At Koussevitzky's request, he conducted a pair of concerts of the Boston Symphony in 1944, which included the New England premiere of the Symphony No. 2 by Harvard's own Walter Piston; and in 1952, Charles Munch had him return to the same podium, where he gave a magnificent and unforgettable performance of Stravinsky's Oedipus Rex. In recent years he has also conducted several of the summer concerts on the Esplanade.

But Woody is far more than a conductor. He is a fine teacher—ideal for introducing intelligent laymen to musical masterworks and showing them how to listen most profitably. In 1946 he was honored with being selected to deliver the Lowell Lectures in the Boston Public Library. He presented an excellent historical survey of Renaissance and Baroque choral music, and had the inspired idea of illustrating each talk with live instrumental and vocal performances prepared and trained by himself.

Recently radio station WGBH decided to present a weekly preview of each of the Boston Symphony's regular concerts, in which the listener would be introduced to the works on the program and taught how to listen. Woody was a natural choice for the job, and this spring his program received the highest award from the Institute for Education by Radio-Television for being the country's best program in the cultural class.

His most telling quality perhaps is a contagious enthusiasm, apparent from the podium, over the airwaves and in the classroom, and possessed to a degree that I have never observed in anyone else. When playing a record in class, he can make one feel that he too is hearing the piece for the first time and being carried away by it. He knows how to make one appreciate the good qualities of any work or composer. Over the last ten years I have noted only two pieces he admits to heartily dislike: he once referred to Richard Strauss' autobiographical tone-poem Ein Heldenleben as "disgusting and unpleasant"; and he has quite rightly branded Cesar Franck's D Minor Symphony as "the supreme example of everything a symphony should not be."

Woody is a master of the apt illustration. He has conveyed wonderfully the spirit of the music of the 16th-century Venetian composer Giovanni Gabrieli by giving a vivid description of the rich panchromatic brilliance of Venice itself and the impression created by the facade and interior of St. Mark's. And I recall he once gave a moving reading of Plato's account of the death of Socrates when we were discussing the musical and dramatic content of Bach's Matthew Passion and the inevitability of the Crucifixion. He has termed Berlioz "the perfect Hollywood composer" and gone on to tell how Berlioz injected a virus into the musical life of the 19th century that was contagious and irresistible.

No one understands the first movement of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony better than Woody, and he is at his very best in analysing it for students, a process that usually takes up two class periods. He is superb at putting across the vague and tenuous ambiguity of the opening measures and the way it is achieved. But when he gets to the climactic fortissimo recapitulation he is sublime—literally and figuratively: to demonstrate the giant muscular iambic rhythms he leaps high in the air several times and comes crashing down tota gravitate on the floor with a noise easily audible in the next building. "Ah, and see what the kettledrums are doing there!" he exclaims, and proceeds to pommel thunder out of the top of his desk with all his considerable might. "Oh, to be a kettledrummer just for this passage! What moral regeneration!" And nothing could be more in keeping with the spirit of Beethoven than all this venting of robust energy and virility; for Beethoven was continually stamping, thumping and pounding in his rooms, much to the distress of his housekeeper. Woody also shares Beethoven's hardiness; he can often be seen traversing Cambridge in cold months without an overcoat, and many have been the chilly mornings that, from my window, I saw him eating breakfast and reading the paper outdoors in his shirtsleeves.

The duties as University Organist and Choirmaster require Woody to prepare the music for the daily 8:45 a.m. services in Appleton Chapel and the Sunday services in Memorial Church, as well as to play for most of the weddings and funerals there. And his is the job of providing music for other University ceremonies, such as Commencement each June. In fact it is he who, dressed in his black and crimson academic regalia, heralds the entrance of the academic procession into the Tercentenary Theater by conducting a fanfare for brass, drum and cymbals by Walter Piston from atop one of the projections abutting the Widener Library steps.

Besides his Harvard duties during the regular academic year, Woody has willingly taken on many extra tasks. From 1929 to 1938 he spent his summers as assistant director of the Concord School of Music, and in 1940 was assistant director of the Berkshire Music School at Tanglewood. And he is or has been a trustee, advisor or officer of numerous universities, conservatories, professional associations and other organizations. The past few summers he has taught choral conducting and a music history course for the Harvard Summer School.

Seemingly indefatigable is this man with a uniquely valuable combination of talents, who accomplishes what three or four normal men could do working full time. No wonder that he claims he has little time for relaxation or hobbies, except for a month or so on Nantucket Island the end of each summer. He says, "Our two children have developed an amazing devotion to Nantucket." But I suspect he looks forward to his visits there as much as they do.

Woody has said that over the years his students and singers, "by their responsiveness, their devotion, their ardor and intelligence, and their deep love of music, have strengthened my faith and given me my best moments." The same could well be said of Woody himself by those who have come in contact with him.

He loves people, especially young people. He is vitally interested in the educational process, and part of his great success lies in putting into practice the wise philosophy contained in Alfred North Whitehead's The Aims of Education, which he has long admired.

Woody is always striving to come as close to perfection as he can. He is ever on the lookout for a more effective way to do something or to explain something. One day he was playing a record in class of the start of the finale of Beethoven's Second Symphony. He repeated it several times, and then took the needle off. Turning to the class, he shook his forefinger and hesitatingly said, "Do you know what that opening theme is? It's two knockout uppercuts to the jaw by Joe Louis."

—CALDWELL TITCOMB

Cir. (D 26,042)

This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

AUG 13 1953

Brookline Woman Leaves One Million; Smith Gets Bequest

DEDHAM, Mass. (UP)— Miss Clara R. Williamson of Brookline, who died Aug. 1, left bequests totaling $1,000,000, according to her will filed for probate today.

Residue of the estate with all personal effects and $15,000 was bequeathed to a sister, Margaret Williamson of Boston's Back Bay.

Other bequests included: Smith College $20,000; First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston $10,000; Mt. Pleasant Home, Boston, Boston Symphony Orchestra and College Club, Boston $5,000 each; Perkins Institution for the Blind, First Church of Christ, Scientist, Northampton, and Village Improvement Society, Jaffrey, N. H., $1,000 each.

[28]

Cir. (D 23,658)
This Clipping From UTICA, N. Y.
PRESS
AUG 8 - 1953

This Week In Music

by

William R. Eckhof

Persons visiting Tanglewood this Summer have returned to Utica telling stories of an excellent young musician who is giving them new insight into some of the world's finest music.

By no means unheralded, that conductor nevertheless has surprised even his friends by his maturity and scholarly approach to music.

Among those so impressed was Duane La Fleche of Gannett News Service. "This Week in Music" is happy to introduce Mr. La Fleche as guest columnist today.

Albany — (GNS) — The young man in the bright pink shirt, gray flannels and white, rubber-soled shoes, surrounded by a hundred-odd young people, was exuding energy.

Occasionally, with a wave of his hand he would halt the proceedings about him. One group of young people he would exhort, to another he would explain, and to the whole he would suddenly chant (beat well pronounced):

"Wha de da da da."

The young man was Leonard Bernstein. He was standing on the podium in the huge Tanglewood music shed. Around him were grouped more than 100 of the students at the Berkshire music Center. He was rehearsing them in a Dvorak symphony.

Mr. Bernstein was good-humored, he was enthusiastic and he was sweating. It was hard but pleasant work.

"The whole tone light and swift," was his word to the violins.

"No, no. You rush!" to the brass, and then, after a cerditably played passage, to the ensemble:

"You played so well I had to stop you."

But then he ordered the passage repeated.

Mr. Bernstein, not quite 35, was enjoying himself and enjoying the enthusiasm of the young students about him. He has, in fact, been enjoying himself for 10 meteoric years during which he was, among other things:

Shot across the musical heavens as a bright young man of promise fulfilling that promise.

Conducted the world's greatest symphony orchestra.

Written the music for such Broadway hits as "On the Town" and the current "Wonderful Town."

Composed a symphony, "Jeremiah."

Written "The Age of Anxiety" a composition that appeared first in a rather novel form and later as a ballet.

Composed two other ballets.

Appeared as piano soloist with many symphonies in works by his own and others.

Taught at Tanglewood, made recordings, traveled over most of the world, written a comic opera, "trouble in Tahiti," and only quite recently, had a book.

In the last he had the collaboration of his wife of a year and a half, the former Felicia Montalegre, Chilean by birth and in her own right an accomplished actress and TV actress.

"I've haod a wonderful few years," he says.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 8 - 1953

Opera Planned At Berkshire Music Center

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present two performances of Andre-Ernest-Modeste Gretry's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" on Monday and Tuesday evenings at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, near Lenox, in the Berkshires.

* * *

THE OPERA WILL be given in an English translation by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell and will be staged by Miss Caldwell. All seats are reserved and the performances will be open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining its Society of Friends.

The opera had its premiere in Paris Oct. 21, 1784, and was given its first American performance in Boston in 1797. It was subsequently heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800.

* * *

IT IS CONSIDERED Gretry's masterpiece and the foundation of French comic-opera. Goldovsky was able to prepare the opera from the original manuscript of 1784 through the co-operation of the City of Brussels.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idomeneo" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot."

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 10 1953

Cir. (D 38,502)
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 8 - 1953

Tanglewood Concert Wins Huge Crowd

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 8—One of the largest of Saturday night audiences is expected at Tanglewood here tonight for the annual memorial concert in honor of Serge Koussevitsky, who did such much to establish this mecca for music-lovers. Leonard Bernstein, who studied conducting here at the Berkshire Music School under Koussevitzsky, will be the conductor.

Tonight's program will feature Jennie Tourel, contralto, whom the audience of 7,500 heard last night. Miss Tourel, who was heard in a program of songs in Waterbury in recent years, will be the soloist tonight in Ravel's "Sheherazade," three poems for voice and orchestra to the verses of Tristan Klingsor. She will also be a soloist in the second half of the program, the Mahler "Symphony in C Minor, No. 2, for orchestra, soprano and alto solos, and mixed chorus." Theresa Green will sing the soprano solos. Mr. Bernstein will open his program with Moussorgsky's "Prelude to 'Khovanstchina'."

The chorus which did so well last night in Berlioz' "Romeo et Juliette," dramatic symphony, will be heard in tonight's program.

Last night's audience, some 700 more than the corresponding night last year, heard Conductor Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus with Miss Tourel, John McCollum, tenor and Nicola Moscona, bass, in an unusual program. Hearing the "Romeo et Juliette" music was a real treat. One was glad to hear this music so seldom offered on programs and offered at Tanglewood for the first time. Those who heard it here last night under such able conducting will be glad to know that Mr. Munch and the Boston have recorded it and it will be available on discs early this fall.

The audience was so pleased with the performance that it did not wait for intermission to applaud. There was a burst of applause following the Love Scene presented by the orchestra and chorus in the Capulet's Garden, silent and deserted. The scherzo, presenting Queen Mab, of the Fairy of Dreams, just before intermission was excellent. The whole performance was magnificent.

By intermission time the beautiful night's temperature had changed enough to make the audience realize that there was more than a snap in the Berkshire air. It was definitely cool. Even in the large Music Shed. A warm coat was well appreciated. In fact, as we watched the chorus of many young women throughout the second part of the program, we kept wondering if they were not cold up there on the platform in their cool, white summer dresses.

If you are going to Tanglewood for the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert at 8:30 o'clock tonight we would definitely recommend you take something other than your sheerest dress along.

Cir. (D 56,872)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
AUG 10 1953

TANGLEWOOD HOST — Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, will welcome visitors to the annual benefit for the school, "Tanglewood on Parade," to be held at 6 p. m. Thursday at Tanglewood. Students of the opera department will perform.

Cir. (D 244,564)
This Clipping From
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
NEWS
AUG 8 1953

Charles Munch to be on air

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Richard Strauss' tone poem "Don Quixote" in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on Sunday (KNX 11:30 a. m.). Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist.

Cir. (D 143,029)
This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS
AUG 10 1953

Music Festival To Feature Pianos

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. (INS)—One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival.

Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Munch Presents Outstanding Programs at Tanglewood

By D. E. RITZ

Charles Munch is presenting outstanding programs in the Tanglewood music festival concerts in the big Shed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's own concert hall in the Berkshires. The second weekend series opened Friday night with a performance of Berlioz' "Romeo et Juliette" Symphony and closed yesterday afternoon with Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, as soloist in the Strauss' "Don Quixote" and the Milhaud "Concerto for Violoncello and Orchestra." Leonard Bernstein conducted a Koussevitsky memorial concert Saturday evening.

SOLOISTS FOR "Romeo et Juliette" were Jennie Tourel, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Nicola Moscona, bass. The elaborate choral parts were sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, which had been prepared by Hugh Ross.

"Romeo et Juliette" is one of the works which has been on the reviewer's "want-to-hear-some-day-before-we-die" list for many years. We had heard portions of it but never had truly expected to hear it in its entirety until Mr. Munch listed it for this season. Judging from the size of the audience, which completely filled the Shed and overflowed onto the lawn, we were not alone.

Although following a four-movement structure plan the symphony is completely episodic in character and the solo voices are used only for narration. The choral writing is intense and the orchestration is subtle in its delicate beauty. Berlioz has a faculty of writing for instruments in an out-of-the-ordinary pattern and of combining the patterns into a whole that is unique.

THE SOLOISTS are used only in the first movement and the final episode of the last movement. The contralto follows an orchestral introduction with a choral recitative and stanzas and the tenor presents Mercutio's Queen Mab speech in a Scherzetto. The bass presents the Friar Laurence exhortation to reconciliation as the closing episode of the symphony.

The economy of orchestration is one of the items which impressed us most. The scintillating effects from the strings, voice against the harp and later against the harp and 'cellos, the clipped phrases from the chorus, the breaking down of orchestra and chorus into their component parts to portray as only orchestral genius can.

No review could do justice to "Romeo et Juliette" or its presentation on Friday evening. It takes a Tanglewood to make such a performance possible in this country and a Charles Munch to realize the opportunity.

Concluding concerts in the Tanglewood series will be presented Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. The Brahms "Requiem" will be featured Friday evening and Schubert, Chabrier, Wagner and Ravel numbers on Sunday afternoon. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Saturday evening program.

[09]

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS. TELEGRAM
AUG 9 - 1953

Weekend Music At Tanglewood

LAST WEEKEND at the Berkshire Festival the first of the August series of Music Shed concerts was played. It was exciting to be in the audience for the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts, though we missed the Friday night concert that is part of the weekend program group. No one who has not visited Tanglewood can imagine the magnificent setting it provides for these Summer concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as part of the Berkshire Festival.

Pierre Monteux conducted the all-Tschaikovsky program last Sunday afternoon and the concert was broadcast up to the intermission. A smiling, friendly figure, Mr. Monteux received a warm and emotional ovation from the audience at the end of the program. Even the birds seemed to enjoy Tschaikovsky for they added an unrehearsed obbligato to several measures of the Fifth Symphony.

It seemed impossible that 10,800 people attended Saturday night's concert, which included Mendelssohn's Italian - Symphony and a piano concerto by Lukas Foss with the composer as soloist. The program was conducted by Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and music director of the Berkshire Festival. The Music Shed, a huge wedge - shaped building with nearly perfect acoustics, seats 6000. The shed consists chiefly of a high roof supported on a steel framework, and the overflow audience gathers on the the lawn outside.

Tanglewood expresses a welcome to the music-lovers who come there through its hospitality. For concert ticket-holders, the grounds open at 6 p. m. before evening concerts and at noon on Sundays. It is an accepted custom and a delightful one to bring picnic lunch or supper to eat on the grounds.

Love of music is the common bond among the thousands who make a Tanglewood pilgrimage each Summer. This year, the 16th of the Berk-hundreds of automobiles in the parking area bear license plates from every part of the country, testifying to the national reputation of the Berkshire Festival.

The season will end next weekend. Shed concerts will be given on Friday night, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Making his Tanglewood debut on Friday night will be William Warfield, baritone soloist who was enthusiastically received at last Fall's Worcester Music Festival. Friday's program wil be the Brahms' Requiem conducted by Charles Munch. Leonard Bernstein will conduct on Saturday and Mr. Munch will conduct the concluding concert on Sunday.

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS. TELEGRAM
AUG 9 - 1953

World Music To Feature 'Don Quixote'

Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on WTAG-CBS' "World Music Festivals" at 2.30 p. m. today. Mr. Munch will open the festival program with the Symphony No. 5 in B flat major by Franz Schubert. This is one of those remarkable products of genius, written in only four weeks when Schubert was only 19 years old, for private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra. The symphony will be followed by the Adagio for Strings by the contemporary American composer Samuel Barber.

Strauss' "Don Quixote," based upon the Cervantes character, is subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character" and is in the form of an introduction, a theme with ten rather free variations and a finale, all played without pause. The two principal characters are the Don, portrayed by the solo cello, and his faithful squire, Sancho Panza, first heard in the bass clarinet and tenor tuba but thereafter in the solo viola.

James Fassett is music commentator and producer.

Cir. (D 123,277) (S 151,479)
This Clipping From
BROOKLYN, N. Y. EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

WILLIAM WARFIELD will sing in "Porgy and Bess," backed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood on Thursday.

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

MARSH EXHIBITS HIS ART AT TANGLEWOOD

To conclude the weekly art exhibitions in the reception room at Tanglewood, Reginald Marsh, distinguished American artist particularly noted for his paintings of New York City and its people, will present a selection of his drawings and paintings to be shown through the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival, Aug. 16. The Tanglewood show will be in addition to Mr. Marsh's one-man-show running until Aug. 31 at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

Reginald Marsh, born in Paris in 1898 of American parents, spent his youth in New York City and was educated at Lawrenceville School and Yale College. After college, where he was cartoonist for the "Yale Record," he returned to New York for further work under Jacques Maroger and studies at the Art Student's League. In 1922 he joined the New York Daily News as staff cartoonist and caricaturist, leaving it in 1925 to free-lance and to collaborate with Robert Edmond Jones and John Murry Anderson on theater design. Since 1925 his works, mainly cartoons, have appeared in such publications as the New Yorker magazine, Fortune and Harpers'. In addition to cartooning, he has worked in fresco; examples of this media are in the New Post Office at Washington, D. C., and the Custom House of New York.

The weekly Tanglewood art exhibitions this season, all arranged through the co-operation of Stuart C. Henry of the Berkshire Museum, have included a group-show (including works by Stanley Bate, John Carroll, E. Arnold Clark, Honer Gunn, June Kimball, and Harry Lane) and one-man-shows by Harry Lane, Franc Epping (sculpture) and others.

Cir. (D 281,218)
This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y. NEWS
AUG 11 1953

Gretry's 'Richard' Delightfully Staged By Berkshire Center

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS
Buffalo Evening News Music Critic

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the three-act opera written shortly before the French Revoution by the prolific French composer, Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, received its first American performance since 1800 here Monday evening.

The delightfully-staged revival of a romantic opera that is accounted both Gretry's masterpiece and the "foundation stone" of French opera-comique was presented by the enterprising Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center.

This particular revival took a bit of doing. Through the co-operation of the city of Brussels — Gretry was Belgian-born — Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, was able to prepare the opera from the original manuscript of 1784, certain portions of which bear the composer's signature.

French publishers from whom the manuscript had been sought sent the Berkshire Music Center the only version available for commercial use.

Based on Rescue Legend

With the help of the French composer, Darius Milhaud, and P. Collaer, head of the Belgian National Radio Broadcasting Institute, arrangements were made with the city of Brussels to secure from its museum the Gretry original.

The French text by J. M. Sedaine has been neatly translated by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, who were responsible respectively for the knowing musical direction and the expert staging. The opera had its premiere in Paris Oct. 21, 1784, and its first American performance in Boston in 1797, followed by performances in Philadelphia in 1798 and New York in 1800.

The opera is based on the legendary rescue of the imprisoned King Richard by his faithful minstrel, Blondel, who, disguised as a blind fiddler, wandered from fortress to fortress singing the king's favorite love song.

This song, known as Blondel's air, became highly popular in the latter part of the 18th Century and held its public favor well into the 19th Century.

Music Light, Graceful

It was sung in 1789 at a banquet given by the bodyguard of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette to the officers of the garrison at Versailles just before the angry mob dragged off the ill-fated pair to Paris.

The score bears witness to Gretry's originality. In it he makes the first use of a device that became inextricably associated with Wagner many years later—the leit-motif—for he employed a simple old-style air as a recurring theme. Interestingly enough, he also was the first to suggest a hidden orchestra, also used later by Wagner.

There was more than merely antiquarian interest in the Tanglewood performance, however. The lightness and grace of the music, its refreshing verse and felicitious evocation of pathos, humor and ardor made one wonder why a revival of the stage-piece in this country has not occurred long before this.

Orchestra of Top Caliber

The young singing-actors caught with admirable spirit the naivete and delicate romantic simplicity of the work.

Several promising voices were heard, among them John McCollum, who was excellent as Blondel; Rosalind Elias, as Antonio; Christine Cardillo, entrancing as Laurette; Theresa Green, a regal countess of Flanders, and Lee Cass, a "right proper Englishman" according to 18th Century ideas.

The 38-piece orchestra under Mr. Goldovsky was of top caliber and vitality. Stage movements and patterns were artistically planned and carried out, the costumes imaginative and colorful and settings particularly worthy of praise.

John Blankenchip, in charge of scenery and lighting, made effective use of the Paul Planer GKP Projections, a species of slide mechanism used in the larger opera houses of Europe and first introduced in this country in the Tanglewood production last Summer of the Mozart opera, "Titus."

Cir. (D 91,877)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS. EVE. NEWS
AUG 10 1953

Piano Duo in Lenox Concert

Leonard Bernstein, left, and Lukas Foss, faculty members at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will appear at the first annual concert to benefit the Stockbridge Bowl Association which will be held at Seranak, the Lenox home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky tomorrow afternoon at 3.30. It will mark their first appearance as a piano duo. They will be joined by Richard Dyer-Bennet, ballad soloist; Mac Morgan, bass, and Boris Goldovsky, who will be master of ceremonies.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y. GAZETTE
AUG 11 1953

Music Center Benefit to Be Held Thursday

The Tanglewood on Parade program, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday and will last from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. This will be followed by dancing on the lawn of the summer home of the Boston Symphony orchestra near Lenox in the Berkshires.

* * *

ISAAC STERN, violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. The second half of the concert program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the center's conducting classes, and will feature soloists William Warfield, baritone, and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price in Act II, scenes I and II of "Porgy and Bess."

All ticket holders will be invited to attend demonstrations of the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music, opera department and the Tanglewood study group.

Picnic suppers may be brought and eaten on the lawn for the lawn party-picnic supper scheduled for 7 p.m. The Shed concert will open at 8:15 o'clock.

Cir. (D 400,454)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS. RECORD
AUG 11 1953

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments . . . orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus and study group . . . commencing at 6 p. m. Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS. HERALD
AUG 9 - 1953

Tanglewood Benefit Set for Thursday

With Isaac Stern violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess" and her husband baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting at the evening concert, which commences at 8:15 p.m. in the 6000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Walter Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Zeigfeld Theatre, New York City.

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 9 - 1953

Weekend Music At Tanglewood

LAST WEEKEND at the Berkshire Festival the first of the August series of Music Shed concerts was played. It was exciting to be in the audience for the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts, though we missed the Friday night concert that is part of the weekend program group. No one who has not visited Tanglewood can imagine the magnificent setting it provides for these Summer concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as part of the Berkshire Festival.

Pierre Monteux conducted the all-Tschaikovsky program last Sunday afternoon and the concert was broadcast up to the intermission. A smiling, friendly figure, Mr. Monteux received a warm and emotional ovation from the audience at the end of the program. Even the birds seemed to enjoy Tschaikovsky for they added an unrehearsed obbligato to several measures of the Fifth Symphony.

It seemed impossible that 10,800 people attended Saturday night's concert, which included Mendelssohn's Italian - Symphony and a piano concerto by Lukas Foss with the composer as soloist. The program was conducted by Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and music director of the Berkshire Festival. The Music Shed, a huge wedge - shaped building with nearly perfect acoustics, seats 6000. The shed consists chiefly of a high roof supported on a steel framework, and the overflow audience gathers on the the lawn outside.

Tanglewood expresses a welcome to the music-lovers who come there through its hospitality. For concert ticket-holders, the grounds open at 6 p. m. before evening concerts and at noon on Sundays. It is an accepted custom and a delightful one to bring picnic lunch or supper to eat on the grounds.

Love of music is the common bond among the thousands who make a Tanglewood pilgrimage each Summer. This year, the 16th of the Berkshire Festival, larger audiences than ever before are being recorded for the concerts. The hundreds of automobiles in the parking area bear license plates from every part of the country, testifying to the national reputation of the Berkshire Festival.

The season will end next weekend. Shed concerts will be given on Friday night, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Making his Tanglewood debut on Friday night will be William Warfield, baritone soloist who was enthusiastically received at last Fall's Worcester Music Festival. Friday's program wil be the Brahms' Requiem conducted by Charles Munch. Leonard Bernstein will conduct on Saturday and Mr. Munch will conduct the concluding concert on Sunday.

'Don Quixote'

Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on WTAG-CBS' "World Music Festivals" at 2.30 p. m. today.

Mr. Munch will open the festival program with the Symphony No. 5 in B flat major by Franz Schubert. This is one of those remarkable products of genius, written in only four weeks when Schubert was only 19 years old, for private performances by Schubert's own little chamber music orchestra. The symphony will be followed by the Adagio for Strings by the contemporary American composer Samuel Barber.

Strauss' "Don Quixote," based upon the Cervantes character, is subtitled "Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character" and is in the form of an introduction, a theme with ten rather free variations and a finale, all played without pause. The two principal characters are the Don, portrayed by the solo cello, and his faithful squire, Sancho Panza, first heard in the bass clarinet and tenor tuba but thereafter in the solo viola.

James Fassett is music commentator and producer.

Cir. (D 123,277) (S 151,479)
This Clipping From
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
AUG 11 1953

WILLIAM WARFIELD will sing in "Porgy and Bess," backed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood on Thursday.

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 9 - 1953

MARSH EXHIBITS HIS ART AT TANGLEWOOD

To conclude the weekly art exhibitions in the reception room at Tanglewood, Reginald Marsh, distinguished American artist particularly noted for his paintings of New York City and its people, will present a selection of his drawings and paintings to be shown through the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival, Aug. 16. The Tanglewood show will be in addition to Mr. Marsh's one-man-show running until Aug. 31 at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

Reginald Marsh, born in Paris in 1898 of American parents, spent his youth in New York City and was educated at Lawrenceville School and Yale College. After college, where he was cartoonist for the "Yale Record," he returned to New York for further work under Jacques Maroger and studies at the Art Student's League. In 1922 he joined the New York Daily News as staff cartoonist and caricaturist, leaving it in 1925 to free-lance and to collaborate with Robert Edmond Jones and John Murry Anderson on theater design. Since 1925 his works, mainly cartoons, have appeared in such publications as the New Yorker magazine, Fortune and Harpers'. In addition to cartooning, he has worked in fresco; examples of this media are in the New Post Office at Washington, D. C., and the Custom House of New York.

The weekly Tanglewood art exhibitions this season, all arranged through the co-operation of Stuart C. Henry of the Berkshire Museum, have included a group-show (including works by Stanley Bate, John Carroll, E. Arnold Clark, Honer Gunn, June Kimball, and Harry Lane) and one-man-shows by Harry Lane, Franc Epping (sculpture) and others.

Cir. (D 281,218)
This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS
AUG 11 1953

Gretry's 'Richard' Delightfully Staged By Berkshire Center

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS
Buffalo Evening News Music Critic

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—"Richard the Lion-Hearted," the three-act opera written shortly before the French Revoution by the prolific French composer, Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry, received its first American performance since 1800 here Monday evening.

The delightfully-staged revival of a romantic opera that is accounted both Gretry's masterpiece and the "foundation stone" of French opera-comique was presented by the enterprising Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center.

This particular revival took a bit of doing. Through the co-operation of the city of Brussels — Gretry was Belgian-born — Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, was able to prepare the opera from the original manuscript of 1784, certain portions of which bear the composer's signature.

French publishers from whom the manuscript had been sought sent the Berkshire Music Center the only version available for commercial use.

Based on Rescue Legend

With the help of the French composer, Darius Milhaud, and P. Collaer, head of the Belgian National Radio Broadcasting Institute, arrangements were made with the city of Brussels to secure from its museum the Gretry original.

The French text by J. M. Sedaine has been neatly translated by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, who were responsible respectively for the knowing musical direction and the expert staging. The opera had its premiere in Paris Oct. 21, 1784, and its first American performance in Boston in 1797, followed by performances in Philadelphia in 1798 and New York in 1800.

The opera is based on the legendary rescue of the imprisoned King Richard by his faithful minstrel, Blondel, who, disguised as a blind fiddler, wandered from fortress to fortress singing the king's favorite love song.

This song, known as Blondel's air, became highly popular in the latter part of the 18th Century and held its public favor well into the 19th Century.

Music Light, Graceful

It was sung in 1789 at a banquet given by the bodyguard of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette to the officers of the garrison at Versailles just before the angry mob dragged off the ill-fated pair to Paris.

The score bears witness to Gretry's originality. In it he makes the first use of a device that became inextricably associated with Wagner many years later—the leit-motif—for he employed a simple old-style air as a recurring theme. Interestingly enough, he also was the first to suggest a hidden orchestra, also used later by Wagner.

There was more than merely antiquarian interest in the Tanglewood performance, however. The lightness and grace of the music, its refreshing verse and felicitious evocation of pathos, humor and ardor made one wonder why a revival of the stage-piece in this country has not occurred long before this.

Orchestra of Top Caliber

The young singing-actors caught with admirable spirit the naivete and delicate romantic simplicity of the work.

Several promising voices were heard, among them John McCollum, who was excellent as Blondel; Rosalind Elias, as Antonio; Christine Cardillo, entrancing as Laurette; Theresa Green, a regal countess of Flanders, and Lee Cass, a "right proper Englishman" according to 18th Century ideas.

The 38-piece orchestra under Mr. Goldovsky was of top caliber and vitality. Stage movements and patterns were artistically planned and carried out, the costumes imaginative and colorful and settings particularly worthy of praise.

John Blankenchip, in charge of scenery and lighting, made effective use of the Paul Planer GKP Projections, a species of slide mechanism used in the larger opera houses of Europe and first introduced in this country in the Tanglewood production last Summer of the Mozart opera, "Titus."

Cir. (D 91,877)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 10 1953

Piano Duo in Lenox Concert

Leonard Bernstein, left, and Lukas Foss, faculty members at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will appear at the first annual concert to benefit the Stockbridge Bowl Association which will be held at Seranak, the Lenox home of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky tomorrow afternoon at 3.30. It will mark their first appearance as a piano duo. They will be joined by Richard Dyer-Bennet, ballad soloist; Mac Morgan, bass, and Boris Goldovsky, who will be master of ceremonies.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 11 1953

Music Center Benefit to Be Held Thursday

The Tanglewood on Parade program, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday and will last from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. This will be followed by dancing on the lawn of the summer home of the Boston Symphony orchestra near Lenox in the Berkshires.

* * *

ISAAC STERN, violinist, will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. The second half of the concert program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the center's conducting classes, and will feature soloists William Warfield, baritone, and his wife, soprano Leontyne Price in Act II, scenes I and II of "Porgy and Bess."

All ticket holders will be invited to attend demonstrations of the school's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music, opera department and the Tanglewood study group.

Picnic suppers may be brought and eaten on the lawn for the lawn party-picnic supper scheduled for 7 p.m. The Shed concert will open at 8:15 o'clock.

Cir. (D 400,454)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
RECORD
AUG 11 1953

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The short works will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center as a part of a simultaneous demonstration by each of the school's five departments . . . orchestra, chamber music, opera, chorus and study group . . . commencing at 6 p. m.

Following their performance will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch will conduct Handel and Beethoven.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 9 - 1953

Tanglewood Benefit Set for Thursday

With Isaac Stern violinist; soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess" and her husband baritone William Warfield as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday. Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting at the evening concert, which commences at 8:15 p.m. in the 6000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Suite from Handel's "Walter Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," Act II Scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Leontyne Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at the Zeigfeld Theatre, New York City.

Clr. (D 39,276)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 12 1953

Opera Presented at Tanglewood

by D. E. RITZ

"Richard the Lion-Hearted" was presented Monday and last evening at the Theatre-Concert Hall in Tanglewood under the baton of Boris Goldovsky, who with Sarah Caldwell had translated the three-act Gretry opera into English suitable for the modern stage.

* * *

THE PRINCIPAL OFFERING of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department this year it formed as delightful an evening of operatic entertainment as we've heard in many day. A 38-piece orchestra from the school's Department I accompanied.

Gretry's opera is based on the legend of the minstrel Blondel who rescues England's King Richard from imprisonment. He discovers the whereabouts of the king by the simple process of disguising himself as an old and blind violinist and wandering from fortress to fortress playing the love-song which the King had composed.

It had its premiere in Paris on Oct. 21, 1784, and was given its first American performance in Boston in 1797. It was later heard in Philadelphia in 1798 and in New York in 1800.

Its quaintness is one of its most delightful assets. The very elaborate costumes, Mr. Goldovsky in a before-the-music commentary, explained, made no effort to be historically correct but reflected the extremely hazy ideas of the 18th-century French regarding the English. But the whole highly improbable setup only adds to the charm of a piece of "good theater."

* * *

THE GRETRY MUSIC has an elusive quality and its solo, duet, trio and part writing generally are masterful. The 19-member cast and the 20-member chorus were chosen from the center's opera department, which as usual numbers many exceptional young vocalists.

We heard the Monday evening performance and particularly admired John McCollum in the role of Blondel; Christine Cardillo as Laurette; Theresa Green in the role of Countess Marguerite; Robert Rue, Florestan; Richard Cassilly as King Richard; and Rosalind Elias in the role of the guide to Blondel. At last evening's performance the role of Marguerite was sung by Lois McCauley and that of the king by Alvin Edmonson. Lee Cass was highly skillful in the presentation of the role of the caricatured English nobleman.

Attention to minute detail is a distinguishing feature of all Tanglewood performances. John Blankenchip was responsible for the artistic setting, lighting and projection designs used in the performances.

* * *

THE FOREUNNER of the violin, used by Blondel, may not have had the power or sweetness of its present-day counterpart but no dances could have been livelier than those played by the minstrel following each of his "sips" of sherry. Nor could shrewder or subtler plans be laid to play off each person he meets to best aid in his own fixed purpose of freeing his king.

A 50th wedding anniversary with renewal of vows occassions much wholesome fun and merriment in the little village. It is the ideal place for a meeting of lovers, and it is a lover's meeting which enables the king's handful of loyal subjects to free him from the gloomy castle on the hill. A piped tune for the golden wedding dance was a delight.

Gretry's opera is another of the series made possible by the foresight of the late Serge Koussevitzky who planned the Theatre-Concert Hall for the home of an experimental project for opera.

Clr. (D 196,884)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
AUG 13 1953

Stars Perform at All-Day 'Tanglewood on Parade'

With Isaac Stern, violinist, and soprano Leontyne Price, the Bess of Broadway's "Porgy and Bess," and her husband, baritone William Warfield, as stars, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held today at the home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, Lenox.

Festivities include demonstrations by every department of the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert by the orchestra, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., followed by the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Isaac Stern will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with music director Charles Munch conducting, at the evening concert in the 6000-seat Music Shed. Mr. Munch also will conduct the suite from Handel's Water Music, arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," act II, scenes 1 and 2, will occupy the second half of the concert program, directed and conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes. This concert performance and the appearance of Miss Price, a Berkshire Music Center student in 1951, is made possible through the courtesy of Blevins Davis and Robert Breen, producers of the successful revival of the opera currently playing at Manhattan's Ziegfeld Theater. Mr. Warfield will be making his Tanglewood debut at the concert, and the following night will be Berkshire Festival soloist with soprano Lois Marshall in Brahms' Requiem.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1

Wallingford Post

Concert Season At Tanglewood Closes August 16

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities Sunday (August 16), with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's Music Director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Saturday night, August 15, Mr. Bernstein's program will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius Symphony No. 4, in A minor, and the Sinfonia India of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer - conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will be in the audience.

Sunday afternoon, August 16, Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

8/11/53

Boxholders Are Listed For Festival

24 Subscribers Are Residents of Berkshire County

Twenty-four of the 79 subscribers to boxes for one or more concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood are permanent or summer residents of Berkshire County.

Local boxholders are: Pittsfield, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Whittlesey, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Jalonack; Dalton, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane and Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop M. Crane Jr.; Lenox, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn; Stockbridge, Miss Mabel Choate, Mrs. Charles C. Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoving, Mrs. Walter Janney, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Procter, Mrs. George Otis Rockwood, McA. Donald Ryan; Housatonic, Robert Anderson and Dr. Walter VanHorst.

Also, Great Barrington, Mr. and Mrs. Willam Felton Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett, Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood R. Burdsall, Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler, Richard L. Strobridge and Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Straus 2d; Otis, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Sokolsky; and Williamstown, Dr. and Mrs. James Phinney Baxter 3d.

Others From Area

Others from the Berkshire area are: Old Chatham, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. John S. Willams; Salisbury, Conn., William W. Gibson, Miss Edith Seaville, Mrs. Donald J. Warner and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Whitridge; Sharon, Conn., Mrs. Harold Hatch and Mrs. Edwin C. Jameson; Norfolk, Conn., Henry S. Redmond; and Millbrook, N.Y., Gordon Mendelssohn.

Among other boxholders are: Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Thomas of Pawling, N.Y., Frederick W. Beinecke and Merrill H.Whitney of New York, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller of Boston and Little Boar's Head, N.H., and Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield of Marblehead.

Clr. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 13 1953

Tanglewood Nears The End Of Most Successful Season

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts has been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities Sunday with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Saturday night Mr. Bernstein's program will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius Symphony No. 4, in A minor, and the Sinfonia India of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will be in the audience.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m. will be broadcast nationally by CBS radio, with the network's director of music, James Fasset, as commentator.

Clr. (D 130,147)
This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 13 1953

Tonight in "Tanglewood on Parade" in the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Lenox, Mass., Leontyne Price, soprano and William Warfield, baritone, (Mr. and Mrs. Warfield) pictured above, will appear with the Berkshire Festival Chorus and Orchestra in excerpts from the George Gershwin folk opera, "Porgy and Bess" in which these American singers were starred in Europe.

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 14 1953

Tanglewood On Parade Seen By Lenox Audience of 8,400

Attendance at the "Tanglewood on Parade" program, now an established feature of the final week of the annual Berkshire Music Festival, fell slightly short of the anticipated total yesterday, with 8,400 instead of the expected 10,000 on hand for the afternoon-evening performance at Lenox.

Final Series Opening

Nevertheless, festival officials were confident that the final series of major concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra, which will open tonight in the famed music shed, will swell the season's patronage close to a record-breaking 150,000.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" program, which opened at 4:00 o'clock yesterday afternoon, was for the benefit of the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music conducted as a part of the festival, and resulted in gross receipts of $20,000.

The big features included an evening concert in the shed, where Charles Munch led the orchestra in Handel's "Water Music" and Isaac Stern was soloist for Beethoven's Violin concerto, while Leonard Bernstein directed the orchestra and festival chorus in scenes from Act 2 of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess", with William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloists.

New Works Sung

Earlier, students of the opera department presented the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' one-act opera, "Bad Boys in School", and Allen Sapp's cantata, "A Little Boy Lost". In addition, the work of each department was demonstrated in special programs in the chamber music hall and the theater concert hall.

The final series of three major concerts will begin at 8:30 o'clock tonight when the orchestra and chorus, with Charles Munch conducting, will present Brahms' "Requiem". Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield will be soloists. Tomorrow night's program will include the Symphony No. 4 in A minor by Sibelius, Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and the Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major, with Leonard Bernstein wielding the baton. The final concert, beginning Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, will include Schubert's famous "Unfinished" symphony, three Wagner selections, a Ravel piano concerto, and "LaValse", also by Ravel.

Cir. (D 60,097) (S 112,417)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
AUG 13 1953

Around the Town:

Tanglewood Ends Season With Program Sunday

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Last call for Tanglewood for this year. Sunday afternoon the Boston Symphony Orchestra will "fold their tents like the Arabs and silently steal away"—to the City of the bean and the cod for the regular winter season.

Here, practically in our own back yard, is the world's finest music festival, reached through some of the finest scenery in America—the Berkshires. If Sunday afternoon is propitious there is the possibility of an audience of 14,000 music lovers: 6,000 in the shed and 8,000 parked all over the spacious lawns.

IMMENSE PARKING SPACE

The immense parking field contains cars with license plates from every state in the Union, Canada and Mexico. Bisecting the great shed, built like a piece of pie, but open at the sides, insuring protection from inclement weather while allowing a free circulation of air from the surrounding mountains are the boxes, peopled with the elite of New England, famous names in the field of finance, art, business and the several professions.

For those who have never had the privilege of visiting Tanglewood, there is provided a gala opportunity to see and hear every department of the unique musical institution in vital operation. Tonight, beginning at 5:45 and continuing until 11 o'clock is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," open to everyone with prices ranging from $2.50 for the unreserved section to $5 for seats in the boxes.

SOMETHING TO PLEASE ALL

No matter what your preference for music happens to be, you will find some part of the program to fill your esthetic needs. Tonight there will be opera in the Theatre-Concert Hall, short symphonic works in the large shed with Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein conducting the orchestra of 104 men; excerpts from "Porgy and Bess" with Leontyne Price, soprano and William Warfield, baritone; choral works by the Berkshire Chorus of some 200 voices; dancing on the land and the chance to win one of several door prizes in addition.

Isaac Stern, world famous violinist, will be heard in a Beethoven violin concerto with the orchestra. These are just a few of the highlights of "Tanglewood on Parade."

PICNIC LUNCHEON

A lot of folks bring their own picnic lunch, spread out their blankets on the many beautiful lawns or go over to the cafeteria on the grounds where an excellent menu of hot and cold dishes is provided.

One of the most frequent questions which will be propounded during the winter will be:

"Did you get over to Tanglewood last summer?"

It could be quite an embarrassing question since the opportunity is so easy of achievement—a 50 mile drive where you will see as many folks from your town as you meet every day.

MILLERTON, N.Y.
NEWS
8/13/53
8/13/53

Tanglewood Ends "Most Successful" Season On Weekend

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers' concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities this Sunday with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's Music Director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Saturday Mr. Bernstein's program will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius Symphony No. 4, in A minor, and the Sinfonia India of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will be in the audience.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin, in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2:30 to 4:00 P.M., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

Cir. (D 91,577)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 14 1953

Berkshire Music Center Attendance Breaks All Records

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center, currently in its 11th six-week season, come to a close this week end, with the termination of the 1953 Berkshire Festival, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood in Lenox. When the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires—the only such school operated by a symphony anywhere in the world—closes its doors Sunday, it will have given 43 concerts and demonstrations of the work of its students.

The student concerts, which are open to all those who contribute to the Society of Friends of the summer school, their contributions helping to support its activities, have proven increasingly popular. Membership in the Friends numbers well over 4000, of which some 1500 or about 35 per cent are from Berkshire County.

With 39 events given up to last night and with four more on the schedule, an estimated audience of 35,775 has attended, as against a total attendance at 38 such events in 1952 of 34,400. Total attendance for 1953 is expected to pass 40,000.

Cir. (D 11,929)
This Clipping From
WALTHAM, MASS.
NEWS TRIBUNE
AUG 14 1953

Indian Musical Influence Emphasized at Tanglewood

LENOX (U.P.) — Music with Indian themes and rhythms will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood tomorrow night.

The music is "Sinfonia India (Indian symphony). The composer is a Mexican, Carlos Chavez, noted for his use of Indian inspiration in his works.

Journeying nearly 2000 miles from his Mexican home, Chavez was surprised to find that the shore of Lake Makheenac, bordering Tanglewood, once was a camping ground of the Mohican Indians.

Moreover, he discovered, when his "Indian Symphony" was rehearsed, that the head of the Boston Symphony 'cello section is the grandson of a full-blooded Cherokee. He is Sam Mayes, a cousin of the late humorist, Will Rogers, also of Cherokee blood and the man who started him on his musical career by presenting him with a baby-size 'cello.

To cap the climax, Chavez learned that the first orchestral score printed in the United States was Indian-inspired. Appearing as a special supplement in "The Massachusetts Magazine," published in Boston on March 19, 1791, it was titled "The Death Song of an Indian Chief."

Cir. (D 98,282)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 14 1953

Boston Symphony Plays Indian Opus

LENOX, Aug. 14 (UP) — Music with Indian themes and rhythms is going to be played by the Boston Symphony orchestra at its Berkshire festival in Tanglewood tomorrow night. And thereby hangs a tale.

The music is "Sinfonia India" (Indian Symphony). The composer is the Mexican, Carlos Chavez, noted for his use of Indian inspiration in his works.

Journeying nearly 2000 miles from his Mexican home, Chavez was surprised to find that the shore of Lake Makheenac, bordering Tanglewood, once was a camping ground of the Mohican Indians.

Moreover, he discovered, when his "Indian Symphony" was rehearsed, that the head of the Boston Symphony 'cello section is the grandson of a full-blooded Cherokee. He is young Sam Mayes, a cousin of the late humorist, Will Rogers, also of Cherokee blood and the man who started him on his musical career by presenting with a baby-size 'cello.

To cap the climax, Chavez learned that the first orchestral score printed in the United States was Indian-inspired. Appearing as a special supplement in "The Massachusetts Magazine," published in Boston March 19, 1791, it was titled "The Death Song of an Indian Chief."

Cir. (D 47,103)
This Clipping From
WOMEN'S WEAR DAILY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 14 1953

SOLOIST — William Warfield will be the soloist in the Brahms Requiem at Tanglewood tonight. Last night he appeared with his wife, Leontyne Price, in the Tanglewood benefit concert, singing excerpts from "Porgy and Bess." Mrs. Warfield [illegible] in the role of Bess in the musical at the Ziegfeld Theatre.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 14 1953

In Brief . . .

Since "Tanglewood on Parade" is in the nature of graduation for the students of the Berkshire Music Center, yesterday's program makes it practically mandatory that their diplomas be presented summa cum laude . . . We congratulate the Allessio brothers, one of three farms in Massachusetts named to compete for New England honors in the annual green pastures contest, for reminding everybody once again that Pittsfield is not entirely industrial . . . The appointment of John Heaton as Pittsfield manager for Mohawk Airlines is a compliment to the efficiency and reliability of the man in whose hands the management of the city's airport has rested since its formal beginnings . . .

Bouquets to the North Adams branch of the Red Cross, which has forsaken talk for action in scheduling a special one-day blood drive to help end the shortage . . . Dick Tibbetts' feature article today on the Laurel Hill Association is a pleasant reminder of the debt communities all over the nation owe to the indomitable Mary Hopkins and the determined conservationists who followed her . . .

Cir. (D 78,153)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
AUG 14 1953

Tanglewood Parade Is Brilliant Event

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 13—Dull skies and humidity this afternoon and evening had little effect upon the spirits of the 8400 persons who turned out for the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" and turned in gross ticket receipts of approximately $20,000.

There was something doing from 4 p. m. on, following the words of welcome of Boris Goldovsky. Scenes from operas were performed in the gardens, while in the theater-shed two American premieres took place, and, in addition, the students' orchestra played in the shed and there was also chamber and choral music.

The evening program in the shed drew a capacity audience. The program opened with Charles Munch directing a charming performance of Handel's "Water Music" suite; a performance of grace and tonal beauty, yet sturdy and sometimes earthy. When Issac Stern plays the Beethoven violin concerto it is something worth going far to hear. Tonight, with Mr. Munch conducting and the Boston Symphony Orchestra providing expert collaboration, one heard a performance of the great opus that was wholly rewarding. The violinist was recalled innumberable times to acknowledge tumultuous applause.

Porgy and Bess Stars

The second portion of the program was turned over to Leonard Bernstein and was devoted to two scenes from "Porgy and Bess" with the distinguished proponents of the roles, Leontyne Price and Willian Warfield, as soloists. The Berkshire festival chorus was also on hand to make the evening complete.

William Warfield is one of the greatest singing-actors of the time. His delineation of "Porgy" was sensitive, strong and deeply moving. Miss Price, who was a student at Tanglewood a couple of years ago, has a beautiful voice, clear, strong and of extended range. When the two singers joined their voices the effect was thrilling. Mr. Bernstein conducted with an eye to every effect, and none was lost.

American premieres do not happen too often at Tanglewood and so there was particular significance in the two performed this afternoon. The first was a cantata with a text by William Blake. It was composed by Allen Sapp and received a splendid build up from Aaron Copland, who introduced the work to the audience. It was conducted by Ingolf Dahl. This work was written for the students of Department 5, a department which has amateur musicians as well as those on the professional threshold. It is a work which can be played and sung by relatively inexperienced performers. We did not find it particularly rewarding. It is not generally pleasant music, but there are two clever inventions, one for strings and the other for strings and woodwinds. The song portions are negligible.

Hilarious Stuff

The opera, written by Jan Meyerowitz from a play by Johann Nestroy, was also designed for use in schools or by semi-professional groups.

It is titled "Bad Boys in School" and it is hilarious from start to finish. The music is sprightly and humorous and entirely singable. The story is trite, but gives the youngsters plenty of opportunity to be real bad boys in school, to the consternation of the schoolmaster and the supervisor. this is an opera which should find its way into many schools and here's hoping it will.

Well, its been a big day and as soon as the music is over prizes will be drawn by the fabulous English comedienne, Anna Russell, who gave a show at the Stockbridge Theater this afternoon. Finally there will be dancing with Lukas Foss and Berkewitz at the pianos, playing waltzes. People will be tired when it's over but they have had a grand time.

Cir. (D 56,872)
This Clipping From
ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
AUG 14 1953

Porgy, Bess and Beethoven

Stern and Bernstein Star at Tanglewood

By DUANE LA FLECHE

A young conductor literally dancing his way through the second act of "Porgy and Bess," and the great mastery and great simplicity of Isaac Stern as soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto made the Berkshire Music Festival's annual Tanglewood on Parade program last night a major musical success.

There is no disparagement in saying that Leonard Bernstein danced his way through Porgy and Bess. Nor is there any disparagement in saying he "made like" a jazz band with the dignified Boston Symphony. Mr. Bernstein (who said a few weeks ago in this newspaper that the future of American music lies in the theater) produced a memorable performance of Gershwin's truly American folk opera.

The soloists were William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, who headed the cast in this year's revival of the Gershwin work in both London and New York. The chorus, conducted by Hugh Ross, was composed of students at the Berkshire Music Center.

And so the audience of 8,400 laughed with Mr. Warfield as he sang "It Ain't Necessarily So"; was quite swept away by "Summertime," as sung by Miss Price, and thundered their happiness at the whole as Mr. Bernstein brought the work to a rousing close.

Moving Performance

Before intermission the audience had been in a different mood, for they had heard a deeply moving performance of the Beethoven concerto. Mr. Stern, the soloist, showed a full understanding of the work and great mastery of his instrument. Truly admirable, too, was the complete understanding between Mr. Stern and Charles Munch, the conductor.

A finer performance of the work could seldom be heard.

The orchestral program included the Water Music Suite of Handel, also conducted by Mr. Munch.

The soloists and all concerned in the program had given their services free of charge and the gross proceeds of the concert, something in excess of $20,000, went to the benefit of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Student Programs

Before the symphony concert the crowds had had their choice of attending any of several musical programs by students at the music center.

In the large shed a student orchestra, with student conductors, played several short symphonic works. The chamber music department had its own program. In the theater concert hall premiers were given of a short opera, written particularly for high school use, and a cantata.

Of the two premieres, the Allen Sapp cantata was the more successful. The short opera, by Jan Meyerowitz, entitled "Bad Boys in School" was unforgivably coy.

The long evening of music was brought to a close when many remained to waltz on the lawn.

Tanglewood closes its season this weekend. There will be concerts tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon.

Cir. (D 53,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 14 1953

Area First Aid Workers To Help at Tanglewood

Three Northern Berkshire members of the Red Cross first aid corps will help man the first aid tent at Tanglewood, Lenox, during this week-end's series of Berkshire Symphonic festival concerts, it was announced today.

Peter V. Mancuso of this city and School Supt. Francis V. Grant of Williamstown will be on duty this evening and Thomas F. Mahar of this city on Sunday afternoon.

Cir. (D 130,147)
This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 14 1953

TALKING IT OVER

Interlochen, Mich. Among Few Centers To Complete Cycle of Five Requiems

By EMMA VAN WORMER

THE NATIONAL MUSIC CAMP in Interlochen, Mich., will close its largest choral season in its records with a performance of the Verdi Requiem Saturday, Aug. 22. The dramatic work will be sung by 500 members of the Interlochen Festival Choir with full symphony orchestra accompaniment. Maynard Klein, festival conductor and professor of choral music in the University of Michigan, will conduct.

THIS WILL mark the second performance of the Requiem Interlochen, the first having been sung in 1948. Interlochen Music camp, affiliated with the University of Michigan, is one of the few places in America to complete the cycle of five major requiem settings — the Mozart, Brahms, Berlioz, Faure and Verdi. Rehearsals for the great work have been in progress eight weeks. Soloists: Florence McCracken, soprano; Mary Chelf Jones, mezzo soprano; Gale Doss, tenor; John Muschick, bass. Both Miss McCracken and Muschick are members of the voice faculty Ohio State University and Interlochen. Doss and Mrs. Jones are members of the Interlochen staff.

AMONG NOTABLE works performed this summer in Interlochen: Haydn's oratorio "The Creation," the Bach Cantata No. 140 "Wachet Auf," the Buxtehude "Jesu Meine Freude," the Bach "Magnificat," and Stravinsky's "Symphony of Psalms." Final concert in the summer series of "symphonies under the stars" in Interlochen will be Aug. 23, when the 300-piece National High School Orchestra will play. The program will include the Brahms First and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

WITH THE 1953 season in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., drawing to a close, enthusiastic applause for Music Director Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra demands five or six calls to the stage by the conductor and soloists. Recently in the Berkshire Music Center (summer home of the Boston Symphony) Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor-composer, was presented with a plaque, in recognition of his contributions to music.

Series 3 in The Shed opens tonight, a performance of the Brahms Requiem, with Lois Marshall, Canadian soprano, and William Warfield, American baritone, as soloists. Charles Munch will be on the podium. Tomorrow night, Bernstein will conduct an orchestral concert in The Shed. The Sunday afternoon concert will be conducted by Director Munch. Among Syracusans in attendance at a recent concert in The Shed were Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Moses, 246 Rigi av., and Earl A. Little, 118 E. Jefferson st.

HERE AND THERE: Jen Nelson, personable and beautiful singing star of hit shows, will fill engagements in Nassau, B. I., during the early autumn. Miss Nelson, who came to the Lyric Circus from Kansas City engagements, has returned to her home in Manhattan . . . Charles L. Wagner, veteran impressario, whose opera companies have appeared in this area for several seasons, will send "Il Trovatore" on the road in the fall. "C. L." (as he is known to artists and music managers) has been a music manager more than half a century. Among artists under his management, in the "golden" years of opera and recital: Tenor John McCormack and soprano Mary Garden.

"C. L." points out that numbers of his young singers have left his companies to sing in the Metropolitan Opera. Among them: Laura Castellano, soprano, and native of Rochester, and Jon Crain and Gabor Carelli, tenors. Miss Castellano, in private life is Mrs. Desire Defrere. Defrere, stage manager in the "Met," is artistic director for the Wagner Touring Companies.

CARELLI LEAVES soon for Central America to fill two or three weeks' engagements with his own company of singers. The group will be soloists in oratorios with local choruses and orchestra, and will present operatic concerts. Recently, Carelli sang Rudolfo in two Carol Longone Operalogues, "La Traviata." In October he will go to the Pacific coast to sing in operas with Bidu Sayao, "Met" soprano among leads in the cast . . . Maestro Nicola Restigno, widely known upstate, having conducted opera performances in Rochester, Syracuse and Utica, has been in Cincinnati this summer, to conduct operas. Rescigno, known in Europe, as in America, was among guest conductors in Havana and in San Francisco a few seasons ago. He has served as conductor of the Connecticut Grand Opera Co.

Mrs. Carlton P. Potter, mem of the board of Civic Mus

ERNIE RUDY and his orchestra, back from a long tour including engagements in Chicago and New Orleans, have several New York City broadcasts over CBS and Mutual, from Wednesday through Sunday nights, with Mutual time on Monday night and a Tuesday band stand show. Soloist is the young baritone Don Rogers, who served in the Navy during World War II . . . Ernest McChesney, here earlier in the summer for Lyric Circus engagements, will be in Blowing Rock, N. C., this season. Late in the fall, McChesney will take his own company of the Oscar Straus operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," to the coast. McChesney is tenor soloist of the New York Oratorio Society.

The Lively Arts

The Real Tanglewood--Where Musicians Work

By HERBERT KUPFERBERG

Exclusive to The Chronicle from the New York Herald Tribune

LENOX, MASS., AUG. 13—When Tanglewood, scene of America's great Berkshire Musical Festival, ends its summer season Sunday, the drugstore here will put away the pictures of composers that have decorated its showcases, the restaurant on U. S. 7 will empty its juke box of the Chopin and Tchaikovsky records, and the traffic will turn away from the Berkshire Hills.

For the past six weeks Tanglewood has been the musical capital of America. More than 150,000 people have visited it to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its famous fan-shaped shed. They have wandered the grounds of the 210-acre estate that houses Tanglewood, and sprawled under its elm trees as rarely heard operatic and chamber works were performed. And yet very few of them have seen the real Tanglewood, the Tanglewood that is gradually changing the musical face of America.

Charles Munch

The real Tanglewood might be called the festival of the working girl, if the working girl is taken as a symbol of the serious young musician of today. When Charles Munch, the tall, gray-haired conductor of the Boston Symphony, opened Tanglewood this summer he told his audience that they were there for "work, work and more work."

His audience consisted not of the great crowds that travel to Tanglewood for a single evening or perhaps a week end of music, but of 400 young men and women who are there throughout the season. They are the members of the Berkshire Music Center, the pick of 1100 applicants from the world over.

One is the conductor of a Korean symphony orchestra. Another is a secretary in a New York office. A third is a resort newspaper publisher from Florida. A fourth is a piano teacher from Scarsdale, N. Y. They come from 40 States and ten foreign countries. They are there for what George E. Judd, the veteran manager of the orchestra, calls, "the last step to a successful professional career."

☆ ☆ ☆

TO GET INTO THE BERKSHIRE SCHOOL you have to be a skilled musician. Boris Goldovsky, the Metropolitan opera radio commentator, who runs Tanglewood's opera department, auditions 500 eager applicants a year. He accepts 50. Half of these receive scholarships; the others pay the $150 tuition.

At Tanglewood no one is taught to sing, to play the bassoon or to read music—they already know how.

What the late Serge Koussevitsky, who established the Berkshire Music School in 1940, wanted to create was a place where the young professional could make music with older hands and where the most proficient could appear as soloists with the great Boston Symphony Orchestra. Famous names have been uncovered here—Dorothy Maynor and Leonard Bernstein, for example.

☆ ☆ ☆

TYPICAL OF THIS YEAR'S MUSICIANS is Sara Mae Endich, a soprano from Steubenville, Ohio. Miss Endich works the year round as a part-time secretary in a New York office to supplement her income from singing engagements. She has come to Tanglewood for two seasons.

Her first summer here brought her one of the great thrills of her life, for although she had never sung with an orchestra before, she was singled out from the chorus to be soloist with the Boston Symphony in a Schubert Mass and a Mozart Litany. Last month, after hearing her performance at Tanglewood in a Bach cantata, one New York critic wrote: "Miss Endich is a soprano with a very bright future, for she is endowed with a voice of truly beautiful and rich texture."

But press clippings don't mean too much at Tanglewood, because there's little time to read them. If a student misses three classes or practice sessions, he is politely asked to leave.

Sara Mae Endich and her colleagues at Tanglewood work an eight-hour, six-day week on the spacious "campus." On Sunday, which is their day "off," they attend the Boston Symphony concerts.

☆ ☆ ☆

AARON COPLAND, one of America's leading composers, has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music center since the 1945 season. He says that its expanding educational activities are as important to the faculty as to the students.

... keeps us in contact with the younger generation," he says. "We see the most talented kids from all over the country. And when the sessions close, we watch them go back and become musical leaders in their own communities."

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 14 1953

TANGLEWOOD GIVES A GALA 'ON PARADE'

Afternoon, Evening Programs Marked by Two Premieres —Opera Excerpts Aperitif

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13—The annual five-ring musical circus known as "Tanglewood on Parade" went on display here today for a one-day stand. The 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center, the full membership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra led by Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein, and guest artists Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and William Warfield provided an afternoon's and evening's entertainment in different areas of far-flung Tanglewood.

More than 8,400 men, women and children (there were large delegations from the summer camps in the neighborhood), paid more than $20,000 to gain admittance to the festivities. As all the artists contributed their services, a substantial sum after deduction of expenses was earned for the Berkshire Music Center, for whose benefit this occasion was designated.

Although it began to darken as if for showers in the afternoon and there was a bit of light rain, by 5:45 P. M., when the fanfare initiating the formal phase of the proceedings had sounded, thousands of the visitors were on the grounds.

But even before this fanfare, the Berkshire Music Center had provided musical diversion for the early arrivals. As an aperitif, there was a program of opera, which began at 4:15 P. M., in the formal garden. Students of the center's Opera Department presented a scene from Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte," and excerpts from "Pagliacci" and Chavrier's "An Incomplete Education."

They sang and played these excerpts in costume, using a platform as a stage, a few simple props and, as their backdrop, the trimmed hedges of the garden. In the distance were the mighty hills of Berkshire, as Hawthorne, who once lived and wrote on this estate, called them.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department, spoke the brief welcoming address for Tanglewood after the fanfare had assembled a crowd on the lawn before the shed. The visitors were invited to take pot-luck wherever their musical tastes inclined them. These were their choices:

In the main shed, where the Boston Symphony played in the evening, the Orchestra Department of the center presented works by Prokofieff, Dvorak, Debussy and Ravel. The student conductors were Harold Blumenfeld of St. Louis, Erno Daniel of Wichita Falls, Tex.; Herbert Blomstedt of Sweden and Robert Mandell of New York. The 'cello soloist was Uziahu Wiesel of Israel.

In the chamber music hall, there was a program of chamber music with students as the performers. Brahms, Hindemith, Franck and two students—Jack Urbont of New York and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Japan—were the composers.

In the theatre-concert hall there were two world premières—Allen Sapp's Cantata, based on William Blake, and the Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Bad Boys in School"—performed by the special study group at Tanglewood and the associate division of the opera department.

Both new works had Tanglewood connections. Mr. Sapp wrote his Cantata specifically for the Tanglewood study group as a result of receiving last year's Wechsler Commission from the Berkshire Music Center, and he had been a

IN MUSIC FESTIVAL: Isaac Stern, violinist, who was heard in the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,2

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 14 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

By a Staff Correspondent

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—Once again Tanglewood is on parade! The annual open house event, designed to display the various talents and accomplishments of the Berkshire Music Center, got under way this evening after a welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's Opera Department. The short speech was prelude to feverish campus-wide activity which saw all of Tanglewood's departments simultaneously offering their wares to an audience that braved even a threatening sky to se them.

During the course of one ho there was, in the Theater Con cert Hall, the world premiere of a cantata on a text by Wi liam Blake by Allen Sapp an an opera, "Bad Boys in School" by Jan Meyerowitz. At the same time the Large Music Shed was host to four conducting students — Harold Blumenfeld, Erno Daniel, Herbert Blomstedt and Robert Mandell—who directed a student orchestra in music by Prokofiev, Dvorak, Debussy and Ravel. And coincidentally the center's chamber music department programmed pieces by Jack Urbongh, Tossi Ichiyanagi, Brahms, Hindemith and Franck.

As a finale to the day's activity, and after a picnic supper served on the spacious Tanglewood lawn, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was heard in a special concert featuring the second act of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" with Leonard Bernstein conducting and William Warfield, baritone, and Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloists. Also included were performances of Handel's Water Music Suite and Beethoven's Concerto in D, directed by Charles Munch, with Isaac Stern as violinist.

Taken in sum it was an occasion for high spirits. When Tanglewood parades its skills, a gala ceremony is in the making.

J. S. H.

by Copland, Weelkes, Monteverdi, Carlos Chavez (this year's eminent guest composing-teacher at Tanglewood), Kubik, Stewart and Jannequin from a station on the main porch of the administration building.

At the evening concert, Mr. Munch began the proceedings with Handel's "Water Music" and Mr. Stern as the virile, searching soloist offered the Beethoven Violin Concerto. Mr. Bernstein led the second half—scenes from "Porgy and Bess"—with Miss Price and Mr. Warfield as the guest artists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, as the choral group of Catfish Row. The full house gave these performers, all expert and first-rate interpreters of the music they undertook, rousing receptions.

Mr. Stern especially deserved the best of the audience. His playing of this concerto has never been more subtle and mature. It had a depth of understanding given to few violinists in any generation. Mr. Stern has learned to say a great deal without pushing or straining; it is as if the conception reached out from a deep grasp of a Beethoven in his grandly passionate and seraphically simple moods.

After the concert there was a drawing for door prizes. Anna Russell, who has made an art of spoofing art, was the guest of honor who did the drawing.

The evening ended with waltzing on the lawn by guests and Tanglewood students and faculty.

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 14 1953

Mexican Composer To Hear Work At Festival Concert Tomorrow

When the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, plays "Sinfonia India" in tomorrow evening's Berkshire Festival concert the composer will be in the audience. Carlos Chavez is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Chavez, who is director of Mexico's National Conservatory of Music in Mexico City and head of the Mexican Department of Fine Arts of the Secretariat of Public Education, is a leader in the country's awakening to musical consciousness. Aaron Copland, head of Tanglewood's composition department and assistant director of the school wrote of him, "Single-handed he has created a tradition which no future Mexican composer can afford to ignore."

"Sinfonia India" was written during the composer's visit to the United States in 1936. He used three Indian melodies from the northern Pacific coast of his country. He has written "The indigenous music of Mexico is a reality of contemporary life. It is not, as might be thought, a relic to satisfy mere curiosity on the part of intellectuals, or to supply more or less important data for ethnology. The indigenous art of Mexico is, in our day, the only living manifestation of the race which makes up approximately four-fifths of the country's racial stock."

The program will open with Sibelius' Symphony No. 4 and close with Brahms' Second Symphony.

Tanglewood

Tonight

8.30—Opening of third Berkshire Festival series with concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting Brahms' "Requiem." Music Shed.

Tomorrow

10.00 AM — Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of pension fund. Music Shed.

3.00 PM—Symphony concert by student orchestra.

*Open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

[34]

Cir. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 15 1953

...nglewood's Final Series Is Opened With Crowd of 7,600

A crowd of 7,600 attended last night's Tanglewood concert, the first of the final week-end of the current season.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, and the Music Festival chorus directed by Hugh Ross, performed Brahms' "Requiem." Soloists were Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone.

Originally called the "German Requiem"by Brahms, who composed it in 1865, probably in memory of Robert Schumann who died in 1856, it is sung in German.

The music of the composition is highly reverential in character with an underlying air of religious excitement, and the large audience barely breathed during its performance.

Tonight, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Symphony No. 4 in A minor of Sibelius; "Sinfonia India" by Chavez, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D major.

The finnal concert of the series will be at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, with Charles Munch conducting. On the program are Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony in B minor, Chabrier's "Bourree Fantasque," the prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde" by Wagner, excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Ravel's piano concerto for the left hand with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and Ravel's "LaValse."

DEIRDRE OWENS

Cir. (D 24,512)
This Clipping From
NEW BRITAIN, CONN.
HERALD
AUG 15 1953

Berkshire Festival Breaks All Records

LENOX, MASS.—(UP)—The 16th Berkshire Music Festival concludes its summer program tomorrow with all previous attendance records broken.

More than 150,000 persons attended the 15 festival concerts, some 40 student performances and Thursday's "Tanglewood On Parade," the annual benefit for the school.

Festival Music Director Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra both here and during the fall and winter season in Boston, shares leadership of the orchestra in the final weekend performances with Leonard Bernstein.

Bernstein heads the orchestra conducting department of the Music Center founded by his friend and benefactor, the late Serge Koussevitsky.

Cir. (D 11,929)
This Clipping From
WALTHAM, MASS.
NEWS TRIBUNE
AUG 15 1953

Tanglewood's Season Ending; 150,000 Attend

LENOX (U.P.) — The 16th Berkshire Music Festival concludes its summer program tomorrow with all previous attendance records broken.

More than 150,000 persons attended the 15 festival concerts, some 40 student performances and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the school.

Festival music director Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra both here and during the fall and winter season in Boston, shares leadership of the orchestra in the final weekend performances with Leonard Bernstein.

Bernstein heads the orchestra conducting department of the music center founded by his friend and benefactor, the late Serge Koussevitsky.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 16 1953

Berkshire Prizes Are Awarded

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15.—Winners of cash prizes donated by Jascha Heifetz, Gregor Piatigorsky and Samuel Wechsler were announced today by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, at the afternoon student orchestra concert which closed the center's six-week session at Tanglewood.

The two Heifetz Awards, of $150 each, went to Barbara Lieberman, 602 Cortelyou Road, Brooklyn, and Barbara Sorlien, of Fargo, N. D., both violinists. Uziahu Wiesel, cellist, from Israel, won the Piatigorsky Award of $200, and Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Bellas Artes, Augustinas 620, Santiago, Chile, received the Wechsler Commission for a chamber music work for three violins, viola, cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is a former Berkshire Center student. The awards were made on the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and promise.

Miss Lieberman, who is twenty-one years old, was graduated from Sarah Lawrence College in 1952 and from the Juilliard School of Music in the spring. Miss Sorlien, nineteen, is a student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Mr. Wiesel, twenty-six, studied at the Israeli Academy of Music before coming to the United States in 1944, and is now enrolled at the Juilliard School. He received his B. A. degree from City College in the spring. Mr. Orrego, thirty-four, studied composition with Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1946.

Cir. (D 90,143)
This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
AUG 16 1953

Final Berkshire Concert To Be Given Today

The final program of the 1953 season at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass. will be given this afternoon by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program for this afternoon's concert will consist of Schubert's Symphony in C minor ("Unfinished"); Wagner's Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan und Isolde," the "Siegfried Idyll," and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg."

Also included in the program will be the Piano Concerto For the Left Hand by Maurice Ravel, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist with the Boston Symphony, and "La Valse," also by Ravel.

General admission tickets to the grounds at Tanglewood will be available at $2 each, and a limited number of tickets is still available for the reserved sections.

A telephone call to the Berkshire box office at Lenox, Mass. would insure availability of tickets.

The entire afternoon program will be broadcast coast-to-coast over CBS radio with commentary by James Fassett.

Cir. (D 186,970) (S 150,268)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
AUG 15 1953

Brahm's Requiem Performance Notable At Berkshire Festival

Presentation Restrained; Somewhat Glossy From Heroic Drama Standpoint

By JULIAN SEAMAN
Blade Staff Writer

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15—The Berkshire Music Festival, set in the sylvan greenery of Tanglewood, a mile down the road from this staid resort, began its final weekend in the great shed upon a doleful note last night.

For the allurement at hand was Brahms' "A German Requiem," attended by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch in relaxed and poetic mood for once, and a students' chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

Entirely American

Soloists were entirely American—the soprano, Lois Marshall, and the baritone, William Warfield, of "Porgy and Bess" and "Show Boat."

The performance was restrained and sensitive, somewhat glossy from the standpoint of heroic drama, yet tentier and strangely searching. This was not quite the gruff and fluting Brahms, nor the Brahms of eroding self-abasement; rather, I would say, the noble and brooding Brahms, nicely adjusted perhaps, and all his buttons on.

Performance of the chorus was variable, a uniform sonority and flexibility at odds with uncertain tonality and some downright screaming.

Intuitive Eloquence

Mr. Warfield's organ voice had difficulty with German syllables, a barrier one has learned to expect in this type of voice, but his singing had an intuitive eloquence that bespoke a natural affinity with the music and its import.

Miss Marshall, in another few years, is likely to become one of our foremost lyric sopranos. Seldom in recent years has there been such a faultless exhibition of phrasing, line and perfect control. This is a lyric soprano of singular beauty and purity, projected without blemish and unerring taste.

Altogether, one can set this down as one of the notable performances in recent times of a great choral work.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,...)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 16 1953

Berkshire Festival Ends This Afternoon

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 Summers concerts, concludes today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony), and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

Charles Munch conducts this afternoon's concert at 2:30 with pianist Seymour Lipkin as soloist in Ravel's Concerto for the Left Hand. The complete program: Schubert, Symphony in B minor ("Unfinished"); Wagner, Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan and Isolde"; Wagner, A Siegfried Idyll; Wagner, "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III; Ravel, Piano Concerto for the Left Hand (soloist, Seymour Lipkin); Ravel, "La Valse."

Cir. (D 91,577)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 15 1953

3 Special Cash Prizes Awarded at Tanglewood

Awards Announced at Concert by Student Orchestra This Afternoon; Festival Ends Tomorrow

Tanglewood, Aug. 15—Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced today by the Berkshire Music Center, summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival which concludes tomorrow. They are the Jascha Heifetz Award, the Gregor Piatigorsky Award and the Samuel Wechsler Commission.

On the basis of talent, co-operative spirit and future promise the prizes have been awarded to the following:

The Heifetz Award of $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien of Farge, N. D.; the Piatigorsky Award of $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel of Israel; the Wechsler Commission amounting to $300 to Juan Orrego of Santiago, Chile, a former Tanglewood student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is himself a former student at Tanglewood.

The awards were announced by Aaron Copland, assistant director since its founding in 1940, at a concert this afternoon by the student orchestra at the conclusion of the school's six-week season.

The three grants are in addition to other special scholarships announced earlier this year, like the Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships which enabled composition students Robert Barney Childs, Reno, Nev. and Alvin Epstein, Hartford, Conn. to attend this season. Other awards of this nature are in the form of payment of tuition, thus cancelling a student's scholarship indebtedness. Funds from this source come from the Fredric R. Mann and Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship fund, the Parrish Award and the Dreyfus Award.

Winners Well Advanced

Today's award winners are all well advanced in their musical careers. The Heifetz winners are first-year students at Tanglewood. Barbara Lieberman, 21, was graduated from Sarah Lawrence College in 1952, from the Juilliard School of Music, New York last spring. Barbara Sorlien, 19, is a student at the Curtis Institute of Wiesel, 26, also a first-year student at the Berkshire Music Center, came to the United States in 1944 after study at the Israeli Academy of Music, and got his B.A. from the City College of New York last spring. He is enrolled at Juilliard. He is a member of the Israeli Quartet, and has performed for the League of Composers and in the Israeli Radio Orchestra.

Juan Orrego, 34, was a composition student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in the summer of 1946. He is a graduate of the Universidad Catolica where he studied architecture, and the Conservatorio Nacional de Musica in Chile. He is on leave of absence as conductor of the National University Choir and the University Glee Club of Santiago. In the U. S. he has studied at Columbia University, the University of Virginia and at Princeton, and holds a Guggenheim Fellowship.

The Misses Lieberman and Sorlien have both been concert mistresses of the student orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, and at today's concert were soloists in the Bach Double Violin Concerto. Mr. Wiesel had the solo role in the Dvorak Cello Concerto at Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" student concert.

Week-end Concerts

The week-end's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Shed are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight, Mr. Bernstein's program will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius Symphony No. 4, in A minor, and the Sinfonia India of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, will be in the audience.

Tomorrow afternoon, Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist, who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department, and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of the Sunday concert, 2.30 to 4 p. m., will be broadcast nationall by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The complete programs are:

Tonight, 8.30 Leonard Bernstein

Sibelius .. Symphony No. 4, in A minor
Chavez .. Sinfonia India
Brahms .. Symphony No. 2, in D major

Tomorrow, 2.30 p. m. Charles Munch

Schubert .. Symphony in C minor ("Unfinished")
Wagner .. Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde"
Wagner .. A Siegfried Idyll
Wagner .. "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," Excerpts from Act III
(Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio James Fassett, commentator)
Ravel Piano Concerto for the Left Hand Soloist: Seymour Lipkin
Ravel .. "La Valse"

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 15 1953

'GERMAN REQUIEM' IS HEARD AT FETE

Brahms' Work With Soloists, Chorus Opens Last Week-End of Tanglewood Concerts

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14—The final week-end of concerts at the Berkshire Festival began here tonight in the stately music shed at Tanglewood with a performance of a big work for chorus, soloists and orchestra—Brahms' "A German Requiem."

Of the major choral works in the repertory, this one is among the less frequently performed. That may be one reason why it does not draw anywhere in the same league with such firmly established masterpieces as Beethoven's Ninth and "Missa Solemnis" or Bach's B minor Mass. There was an audience of 7,600 on the grounds tonight, by no means a small one, but it would have been much larger if a more powerful attraction had been on the program.

Does Brahms' "German Requiem" deserve this position in the public's taste? One would have to say that the public, as is so often the case, is not wrong. Perhaps more frequent performances of the piece would endear it to more people, but one is inclined to feel that even this would make little difference.

The surface content of the work is devout and earnest. There are some grand choral effects and some touching solo passages. But Brahms wrote this music when he was 33 years old. His heart was warm and his sentiments noble, but he had not yet achieved the rigorous concentration or the somber meditative power that marked some of his late works in a similar vein.

Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, which had been trained well by Hugh Ross, in a performance that was as devoted and sincere as the work itself. If the general spirit of the evening was somewhat oppressively and unrelievedly serious, some of the responsibility must be visited on the composer.

The soloists were Lois Marshall, who sang with handsomely focused soaring soprano tones and with touching expressiveness, and William Warfield, who brought a resonant dignity to the baritone's pages. The Boston Symphony played with its usual dependability, and the large chorus, drawn from the Berkshire Music Center enrollment, filled the night air with great sonorous gobs of sound, and very rousing they were to hear.

BARITONE SOLOIST: William Warfield, who was heard in Brahms' "A German Requiem" at the Berkshire Music Festival last night.

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 15 1953

Music

Impressive Performance Given of Brahms Requiem

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

FIVE YEARS AGO, to the exact day, "A German Requiem" of Johannes Brahms was given at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Robert Shaw. Last night, as the first of the final trio of the season's concerts in the big Shed, the great musical elegy was given again by the same orchestra with Charles Munch as conductor, Lois Marshall, as soprano soloist, and William Warfield, baritone, and the large Berkshire Festival chorus which had been trained by Hugh Ross.

There are seven divisions in the mass and Brahms poured his genius into each section, not by compounding effects but by a quiet but profoundly reverent spirit. His most convincing moments occur when he understates his devotion and faith. The text was chosen by the composer from the various parts of the Lutheran Bible. There is little for the orchestra alone; the chorus enters at the beginning only after a very few but lovely bars in the lower-timbred half of the strings with the horns. Brahms' sense of fitness prompts him to employ some other wind instruments but not to call on the violins at all during this whole long section. In this restrained lament the chorus achieved some of its finest singing, making inflections that are not usually accomplished with such a hundred-strong group.

* * *

THE BIG CHORAL moment of the cantata came in the sixth section when they sang the fugue "Lord, Thou Art Worthy" with majestic vigor. The contrast is accentuated by the opening passages which are contemplative over dampered strings. But as the movement progresses all throats are cleared, instrumental as well as vocal, and the organ, played last night by E. Power Biggs, joins the orchestra, now with mutes removed, for a full proclamation of faith and affirmation. There is interchange of statements at this point with the baritone soloist, who had had another opportunity earlier in a more plaintive mood. Mr. Warfield's voice was easily adequate for all the demands required of it in so huge an auditorium and against the well-controlled balance of the orchestra. In addition, he sang with serious purpose and devoted confidence, a facet all the more remarkable when his vivid and histrionic work in "Porgy and Bess" on the previous evening was recalled.

Miss Marshall had but one solo, "Ye Now Are Sorrowful," in the second half of the evening. The deep impression she made was due to simple sincerity of every utterance and to the beautiful quality of her opulent voice. The opening ascending phrase, from D to A, was impressively even and unstrained and roundly pure. Her ample voice with the comforting phrases carried easily to the four corners of the Shed, with exceptionally well-controlled assistance of Mr. Munch.

There are no sensational moments in this Brahms; there settles on one's shoulders the comforting relaxation that profoundly felt and simply expressed art in music can lend to an audience. The soloists and the conductor were recalled repeatedly.

Cir. (D 38,433)

This Clipping From
BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES

AUG 15 1953

Records Broken at Berkshire Festival

LENOX. — (UP) — The 16th Berkshire Music Festival concludes its summer program Sunday with all previous attendance records broken.

More than 150,000 persons attended the 15 festival concerts, some 40 student performances and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the school.

Festival Music Director Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston symphony orchestra both here and during the fall and winter season in Boston, shares leadership of the orchestra in the final weekend performances with Leonard Bernstein.

Bernstein heads the orchestra conducting department of the music centre founded by his friend and benefactor, the late Serge Koussevitsky.

Cir. (D 76,911) (S 132,777)

This Clipping From TULSA, OKLA.
WORLD

AUG 16 1953

Summer Music Festival

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Summer Music Festival program over CBS and KTUL at 1:30 p. m. Sunday.

The program will include the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished") and three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

Cir. (D 103,308)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

AUG 15 1953

Munch Does 'Requiem' In Tanglewood Finale

Lenox, Mass. — The Boston Symphony under Charles Munch opened its final weekend of the Tanglewood season Friday night with a solid, vigorous performance of the Brahms' German Requiem.

William Warfield, one of the best baritones in the country, was the male soloist, and he did a perfectly splendid job. He fell back on the score for one of his solos, but for the rest of the time he sang from memory. (He was the only one who did not use a score at all times.)

Mr. Warfield has an impressive physical presence. He stood with hands clasped in front of him, an expression of impassioned nobility on his face.

* * *

HIS VOICE IS POWERFUL, as all who heard him sing "Old Man River" in the film version of "Show Boat" know. In the spacious music shed here, those noble tones were clearly audible above both the chorus and orchestra. Under better acoustical conditions, his voice would have been shown to even better advantage, for not only is the shed hard on voices, but the orchestra played a bit too loudly.

Lois Marshall sang the soprano solo. After a rather weak, uncertain start, she settled down to a very good account of the part. Her voice is not in the same class with Mr. Warfield's, but she sang with a great deal of feeling.

The chorus, that of the Berkshire Festival, had been prepared by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and it had been as well trained as a group of students could be.

During the first part of the requiem, it tended to sing unevenly and with a ragged edge to its tone. During the second half, it seemed to settle down a bit. It was partly this improvement that made the latter portion of the evening a much more moving experience than the previous section had been.

* * *

DR. MUNCH, though he gave the wrong beat at one point and threw the chorus into a slight case of suppressed hysteria, conducted throughout the evening in the grand manner.

He had all his multitudinous forces under fine control, his conception of the work always was noble without being flamboyant, and he made sure that everything was kept moving.

There are inevitably places in a work of this dimension that are heavy going for an audience that is not sitting on foam rubber, but on the whole The Requiem was given a strong and impressive performance.

The crowd, which is usually a bit light on Friday nights, numbered only 7,600 last night. If any of these missing thousands stayed away because of the threatening storms they made a mistake, for the threats turned into a brilliant, almost celestial sunset which ran the lower end of the spectrum from light purple to a fiery rose.—E. C.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 16 - 1953

Berkshire Festival Concludes Today

The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities today with all attendance records shattered. More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony); and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

This afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the summer school's conducting department and to BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand, a Tanglewood premiere.

The portion of today's concert, 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, with the network's director of music, James Fassett, as commentator.

The complete program is:

Symphony in C minor ("Unfinished") Schubert
Prelude and Love-Death, "Tristan und Isolde" Wagner
A Siegfried Idyll Wagner
"Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg", Excerpts from Act III Wagner
(Broadcast coast-to-coast by CBS Radio, James Fassett, commentator)
Piano Concerto for the Left Hand. Ravel
Soloist: Seymour Lipkin
"La Valse" Ravel

(From Late Editions of Yesterday's Times)

'GERMAN REQUIEM' IS HEARD AT FETE

Brahms' Work With Soloists, Chorus Opens Last Week-End of Tanglewood Concerts

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14—The final week-end of concerts at the Berkshire Festival began here tonight in the stately music shed at Tanglewood with a performance of a big work for chorus, soloists and orchestra—Brahms' "A German Requiem."

Of the major choral works in the repertory, this one is among the less frequently performed. That may be one reason why it does not draw anywhere in the same league with such firmly established masterpieces as Beethoven's Ninth and "Missa Solemnis" or Bach's B minor Mass. There was an audience of 7,600 on the grounds tonight, by no means a small one, but it would have been much larger if a more powerful attraction had been on the program.

Does Brahms' "German Requiem" deserve this position in the public's taste? One would have to say that the public, as is so often the case, is not wrong. Perhaps more frequent performances of the piece would endear it to more people, but one is inclined to feel that even this would make little difference.

The surface content of the work is devout and earnest. There are some grand choral effects and some touching solo passages. But Brahms wrote this music when he was 33 years old. His heart was warm and his sentiments noble, but he had not yet achieved the rigorous concentration or the somber meditative power that marked some of his late works in a similar vein.

Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus, which had been trained well by Hugh Ross, in a performance that was as devoted and sincere as the work itself. If the general spirit of the evening was somewhat oppressively and unrelievedly serious, some of the responsibility must be visited on the composer.

The soloists were Lois Marshall, who sang with handsomely focused soaring soprano tones and with touching expressiveness, and William Warfield, who brought a resonant dignity to the baritone's pages. The Boston Symphony played with its usual dependability, and the large chorus, drawn from the Berkshire Music Center enrollment, filled the night air with great sonorous gobs of sound, and very rousing they were to hear.

[36]

Cir. (D 186,970) (S 158,287)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
AUG 16 1953

For U Of M Jubilee Year, 26 Concerts In Ann Arbor

Special to The Blade

ANN ARBOR, Aug. 15 — The University Musical Society will celebrate its Diamond Jubilee Season with 26 major concerts next fall and winter. Roberta Peters, coloratura of the Metropolitan, will begin the season Oct. 7 in Hill Auditorium.

Ten concerts in all will be heard in the Choral Union series.

★ ★ ★

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra comes Oct. 22; Virtuosi di Roma, Nov. 2; Leonard de Paur's Infantry Chorus, Nov. 24; Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Dec. 13; Sir Ernest MacMillan and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Feb. 10; Paul Badura-Skoda, pianist, Feb. 17; George London, basso, Feb. 28; Elena Nikolaidi, mezzo-soprano, March 12; Myra Hess, pianist, March 17.

Five concerts are announced for the Extra Concert Series, also in Hill Auditorium: Guiomar Novaes, pianist, Oct. 12; George Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra, Nov. 8; Francois-Julien and the Band of the Republican Guard, Paris, Nov. 30; Marian Anderson, Jan. 10; Arthur Fiedler and Boston "Pops" Tour Orchestra, March 4.

★ ★ ★

THE ANNUAL Christmas concerts will follow tradition — Haendel's "Messiah," Dec. 5 and 6. The 14th annual chamber music festival will include two groups this year: The Griller Quartet, Feb. 19 and 21, Rackham Auditorium. The Reginald Kell Players will perform Feb. 20.

The 61st annual May Festival, with the Philadelphia Orchestra, is scheduled for April 29, 30; May 1 and 2.

Recurrence of an old nervous disorder has induced Vladimir Horowitz, pianist, to cancel his transcontinental tour next year. Hence he will not appear in the Choral Union Series at the University of Michigan Dec. 13 as announced. Charles A. Sink, president of the society, has announced that Fritz Reiner and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will fill this date.

Cir. (D 653,252) (S 982,681)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 16 1953

Miles Kastendieck:

Accent on Choral Music Newest Berkshire Trend

MILES KASTENDIECK

WHAT may be considered a significant trend is emerging from Charles Munch's directorship of the Berkshire Festival. After two years it is evident that he is accenting choral music in his program-making. The inclusion of six works in the current festival suggests the trend.

That the cantatas should appear more and more in the Bach programs might be considered a normal development. Turning them over to Hugh Ross as conductor of the Berkshire Festival Chorus highlights his work with the group justifiably. A cantata for each Bach program is in order.

Munch undertook to fill an important gap in choral performance by listing the Berlioz "Requiem" last year. He has followed that with the Brahms "Requiem" this weekend. These are major works quite worthy of the attention given them and not frequently heard.

Early Interest

Of special interest earlier in the festival was the performance of the virtually unknown "Theresa Mass," of Haydn. Never made in the history of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the choice indicated that Munch's interest in choral literature was extensive.

His desire to present Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" last week with all the choral units intact substantiates a desire to use the festival's chorus to further familiarity of this aspect of the music.

Good for All

With Lukas Foss's "A Parable of Death" and the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony also included, there has been more than the usual amount of activity for the chorus. The general excellence of its performance has more than warranted the prominence given it.

This emphasis on choral music is most healthy. It is good for choristers and for audiences alike. An extensive literature abounds in this field.

As a matter of record, Munch has been broadening the experience of Boston Symphony audiences at home by giving them opportunities to hear more choral music. It is natural for him to extend the practice to Tanglewood. That he may foster a new interest and possibly crystallize a policy in future festivals would be a definite contribution as well as an important influence.

Cir. (D 74,947) (S 117,225)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
AUG 16 1953

The Lively Arts—

Gretry — Without Regret

By T. H. Parker

As is customary each year, the opera department of the Berkshire Musical Festival at Tanglewood offered a sample of its student wares last week. The work presented was Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry's "Richard Coeur de Lion," and the performance and production, under tutelage of Boris Goldovsky, department head, and Sarah Caldwell, were, as noted in earlier despatches, pleasant and able.

It is Mr. Goldovsky's habit to come before the audience at these events, and deliver a sociable and insouciant talk about matters to hand. On this occasion he paid tribute to the late, Great, Good Dr. Serge Koussewitzky, whose vision had made possible the Berkshire Music Center and the opera department in its bosom.

Mr. Goldovsky pointed out that as a result of this effort and achievement, it is now possible to see the rare and the unusual in opera and he accounted it a blessing. I agree with him. There have been interesting things to witness, new and old, at these opera-department soirees. Things like the Benjamin Britten operas, "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idomeneo" and "Titus," Tschaikovsky's "Queen Of Spades" and most recently of course, the Gretry."

Viewed against a timeless scale of values some of these have been more worthy than others. But all of them, especially the old works, have been instructive. Contemporary opera, of course, manages to get a hearing with some regularity nowadays. The traditional masterpieces, as everyone knows, are heard with only too appalling regularity. But the landmarks of the deeper past moulder forgotten, unless there is some Beulah-land like the Berkshire Music Center that can afford to put them on again.

★

Certainly, a number of these works evoked from past Parnassi are museum pieces. Yet, if they are worth the many pages devoted to them in textbooks on the history of music, they are worth being staged on at least some single occasion, as living illustrations of such chronicles. One picture, seen through the opera-house proscenium, is thus worth ten thousand words.

Such was the case with the Gretry "Richard Coeur de Lion" last week. It was a work of charms and curiosities. The charms had the faint scent of myrrh about them, as could not help clinging to arts so long interred. But the fact remains that Andre Ernest Modeste Gretry was a pinnacle of operatic arts and artifices in his day. He wrote more than 50 works that were played upon the most important stages of Paris. And he did not gather his laurels in a time when audiences were foolish or unlettered, but in a highly sophisticated and literate period, the latter half of the Eighteenth Century.

However our ideals and tastes in opera may have changed, Gretry represented the summation of a phase and a period. So, for reasons of scholarship alone, it was worthwhile that his masterpiece, "Richard Coeur de Lion," should be recreated for our examination. It is not sufficient to be entertained all the time. We can do with a little education once in a while, such as this Berkshire Music Center event made possible.

Those who saw the presentation perhaps did not add to their store of facts about Gretry. Textbooks had already pointed out his studies in declamation, his true rather than trivial sense of humor, his fine understanding of the right proportions to be given the elements of an opera, his ability to draw a world of characters to the life, his great intelligence and the essential French bent of his genius which have encouraged people to call him "the Moliere of music."

Yet, there is a difference between conning a fact and experiencing it, and that was the difference between meeting a work of Gretry on the printed page and on the stage. Whether the audience at Tanglewood ended up convinced that Gretry was worth either the praise lavished on him by his contemporaries, or by his chroniclers, naturally I cannot say. But the important thing is that they at least had a chance to judge for themselves, and whatever opinion they arrived at added something to their knowledge.

★

I, for one, would be glad to see the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center continue its recreation of masterpieces from les temps perdus, almost rather than present new works of today. There are other opportunities for contemporary opera. There are few stages, however, endowed to work for the cause of scholarship as well as art, and I hope that the Center's opera department will be industrious in both pursuits. It's a rare opportunty for the department as well as for its special and cherishing audiences.

Incidentally, I was somewhat surprised to note the medieval staging of "Richard" at Tanglewood. I somehow had the impression, right or wrong, that historical sense in Gretry's theater had not developed so accurately or literally as to represent the times of The Lion-Hearted in Twelfth Century garb and setting. It was all right with me, let me say at once, for I think there is nothing quite so piquant as the illuminations from that time to the Tres Riches Heures of the Duc de Berri. Nevertheless, I had expected to see a production more in the court-fantastical style of Versailles, and in keeping with the essential temper of the music, which certainly could not be called archaistic in medieval or any general, ancient sense. I'm not complaining, but only asking.

Cir. (D 8,721)
This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 17 1953

Crowd of 13,100 at Last in Series of Tanglewood Concerts

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 17 (AP) — A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday as the Berkshire Music Festival concluded its 16th season.

The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six-week festival.

After participating in the concert, two musicians with a total of 57 years service announced their retirement from the orchestra. They are Raymond Allard of Newton, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans of Brookline, celloist, since 1927.

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 17 1953

Record 13,100 Hear Final Berkshire Festival Concert

A record crowd of 13,100 music lovers thronged the huge shed and spread over the gracious lawns of Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, to hear the final concert in the last series of the Berkshire Festival.

Charles Munch displayed his innate musical artistry as he conducted the Boston Symphony in this varied and well-chosen program. Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, opening the program, was given a restrained and lyrical reading. Three numbers by Richard Wagner followed, the tragically tender Prelude and Love Death from Tristan and Isolde and a Siegfried Idyll, an intimately serene reflection of the first year of Wagner's marriage to Cosima Liszt. Written particularly for her in 1870 and performed in their home on Christmas morning, it was given to the public eight years later with great reluctance on Wagner's part and only because of financial duress.

In the Introduction to Act Three of "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg," from its resigned but resolute theme of the disappointed cobbler to the final lively dance theme which gives way to the majestic theme of the Mastersingers, each section of the orchestra seemed to outdo each other in vibrant tone color. Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand alone was effortlessly played by the serious and technically able pianist Seymour Lipkin, familiar to Tanglewood audiences. It is a constant source of wonderment at the ability of one hand to produce such a musically complete composition.

Ravel's La Valse Choreographic Poem, described by him in these words: "At first the scene is dimmed by a kind of swirling mist, through which one discerns, vaguely and intermittently, the waltzing couples. Little by little the vapors disperse, the illumination grows brighter, revealing an immense ballroom filled with dancers; the blaze of the chandeliers comes to full splendor." An Imperial Court about 1855, left the audience with a good feeling, lightheartedness but a little regretful that the rare musical opportunities are to be curtailed until next year.—M.deB.B.

Cir. (D 78,998) (S 102,999)
This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
AUG 17 1953

13,100 AT CONCERT

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16 (AP)—A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today as the Berkshire music festival concluded its 16th season. The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six week festival.

[37]

Cir. (D 46,630)
This Clipping From PORTLAND, ME.
PRESS-HERALD
AUG 17 1953

13,100 Hear Closing Tanglewood Concert

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16. (AP)—A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today as the Berksire Music Festival concluded its 16th season.

The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six week festival.

After participating in the concert, two musicians with a total of 57 years service announced their retirement from the orchestra. They are Raymond Allard of Newton, principal bassoonist, with the orchesta since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans of Brookline, celloist, since 1927.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 16 1953

AWARDS ARE GIVEN AT BERKSHIRE FETE

Two Violinists, 'Cellist and Composer Honored at Last Concert by Students

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15—The Berkshire Music Center, which has been providing an intensive workshop in music each summer since 1940, ended its annual six-week session today. Although the center is not a formal school and grants no diplomas, the final concert this afternoon by the student orchestra served as a kind of commencement exercise.

Prizes were awarded to outstanding students at the center by Aaron Copland, assistant director. The Heifetz Award—$150 to each of two winners this year—went to Barbara Lieberman of Brooklyn and Barbara Sorlien of Fargo, N. D., both violinists. The Piatigorsky Award of $200 went to Uziahu Wiesel, 'cellist from Israel. These prizes were given on the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

The Samuel Wechsler commission of $300 went to Juan Orrego of the Facultad de Belles Artes in Santiago, Chile. Señor Orrego, who was a student in composition for 1946, was invited to write a chamber music composition for three violins, viola, 'cello and piano. This prize was set up by Samuel Wechsler of New York, who was once a student at the center.

Miss Lieberman and Miss Sorlien served as concert masters of the student orchestra at Tanglewood this summer. Today they were soloists in the Bach Concerto for two violins. Miss Lieberman is a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College and the Juilliard School. Miss Sorlien is a student at Curtis Institute.

The prizes announced today are not the only ones granted at Tanglewood. Others were made earlier in the season. Robert Barney Childs of Reno, Nev., and Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., received Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships that enabled them to attend this summer's sessions as composition students. The Fredric R. Mann and Sally A. Eisemann Scholarship Fund, the Parrish Award and the Dreyfus Award made possible tuition scholarships for other students.

The guest conductor at today's final student orchestra concert was Carlos Chavez, distinguished Mexican composer and conductor who has been this summer's guest teacher in composition. Señor Chavez, who served a six-year term recently as the head of his country's Institute of Fine Arts, was also represented in his capacity as a composer at tonight's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. His "Sinfonia India" was on the program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

MASTER AND STUDENT: Uziahu Wiesel, right, 26-year-old Israeli 'cellist and student at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Gregor Piatigorsky, faculty member and famed solo 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Wiesel has been given the center's annual Piatigorsky award.

Cir. (D 26,042)
This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 17 1953

Tanglewood Closes Out Its Season With Largest Gatherings In History

The biggest season Tanglewood has ever had came to a close Sunday afternoon with more than 13,000 people cheering conductor Munch as he took bow after bow before the Boston Symphony orchestra in the big music shed. This has been a record-breaking Berkshire Festival, which offers more concerts at the beautiful Lenox estate every year and still draws a bigger audience each time. Attendance for this season is estimated at 126,350 for the concerts in the theatre-concert hall and in the music shed. Probably half of those people sat on the lawns outside the halls to hear the music.

In addition there was a tremendously successful "Tanglewood on Parade" fund-raising program and three rehearsals open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra pension fund. There were also many concerts offered by students at the Berkshire Music Center—operatic and orchestral programs of considerable worth.

Tanglewood has become the musical capital of this country and the Berkshire Festival ranks with the great music festivals of the world. The guest artists include many of the most promising young musicians in this country. The programs generally have something new in accordance with the late Dr. Koussevitzky's belief in encouraging young composers, although the great bulk of the music offered is drawn from the treasury of established masterpieces.

Mr. Munch has established himself as a great favorite since he took over leadership of the peerless Boston Symphony. His conducting of the Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts at the beginning of the season won widespread praise. During the course of the big concerts later, he was specially commended for the Brahms German Requiem, performed Friday night with the excellent Berkshire Festival Chorus. This seldom heard work was presented powerfully, with the gloriously clear voice of Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield's superb baritone, in solo passages.

Also memorable in a season full of high points was Leonard Bernstein's conducting of Mahler's Resurrection Symphony. Mr. Bernstein's brilliance, especially with modern works, has earned him a tremendous following, and the audiences at Tanglewood are apt to be largest when he is on the podium.

The all-time record-breaker, however, was Sunday afternoon with Mr. Munch giving the Unfinished Symphony by Schubert, three unforgettable excerpts from Wagner, and two Ravel compositions. There is no question that the letdown anticipated with Dr. Koussevitzky's death has not materialized and that the Festival is still growing. It now fills the Berkshire area with music-lovers for most of the summer and shows no sign of slowing its steady expansion.

Cir. (D 43,916) (S 76,106)
This Clipping From ROANOKE, VA.
TIMES
AUG 16 1953

Wagner Music To Be Featured

Berkshire Festival Will Be Heard Today

The Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Sigfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger," all by Wagner, will be featured on "World Music Festivals," this afternoon at 2:30 over WDBJ. The program will again originate at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., presenting the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The orchestra will also perform Schubert's Symphony No. 8 in B minor—the "Unfinished" Symphony.

Commentator James Fassett will present his "word and sound" pictures of the Berkshire Festival. Future broadcasts of "World Music Festivals" will present concerts from famed European music centers.

THE GOLDEN FLEECE

"Jason and the Golden Fleece," Greek legend of a lad's adventure with a fierce dragon and fire-eating bulls in his crusade against an evil king, will be dramatized by the "Let's Pretend" Players, today at 4:30 p.m.

CHURCH OF THE AIR

The Rev. Father Walter J. Orchard, C. S. P., of the Paulist Fathers in St. Paul's College in Washington, will be the speaker on "Church of the Air" this morning at 10 o'clock over WDBJ. At 10:30, the Rev. Allen W. Graves, minister of the Immanuel Baptist Church in Tulsa, Okla., will speak on "Filled With the Spirit."

EUGENIE BAIRD SINGS

Songstress Eugenie Baird is guest tonight at 7 o'clock on "Guy Lombardo Time." Eugenie joins Guy and the Royal Canadians in a half-hour of popular music. Miss Baird will sing "Be Good To Yourself," "Why Should I Want You," a song she recently recorded, and "You, You, You." The Royal Canadians play a medley of "All the Things You Are," "Music, Maestro, Please," "Blue Room" and "Easy to Love."

DECEMBER BRIDE

Lily Ruskin, America's best-loved mother-in-law, played by Spring Byington, has a good deed backfire tonight at 9 o'clock. When Lilly gets a raise for her son-in-law Matt, he knows nothing about it and quits because he feels he's worth more. Lily has her hands full trying to straighten things out on "December Bride," a regular Sunday night feature over WDBJ.

MARGIE'S DIARY

Margie buys an antique grandfather clock and discovers a diary that causes a calamity when her father learns of the sale. The episode is titled "Margie's Diary" on the "My Little Margie" show on WDBJ tonight at 8:30 o'clock. Gail Storm and Charles Farrell co-star.

DIAMOND AND A HATPIN

"Richard Diamond, Private Detective" investigates a murder on an Oklahoma ranch in "The Hatpin Case" tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Greenhorn Diamond has more trouble with horses than with crime! Dick Powell stars as the investigator.

Cir. [illegible]
This Clipping From
HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 17 1953

Bernstein Handled Tanglewood Baton Saturday Evening

Ovations poured from Tanglewood's audience of 12,100 persons, one of the largest of the festival season, Saturday night for Leonard Bernstein's conducting of the Boston Symphony orchestra in major works of Sibelius, Chavez, and Brahms.

The young conductor rewarded the audience with unique and skillful interpretations colored by his showmanship. His directing characterized by nervous variations and tempo was at its best in Carlos Chavez's "Sinfonia India," a modern work of indigenous music of Mexico with three central themes.

His complete grasp of the implications of the work was evident in the capture of its intensity and terseness woven about vigorous themes which evolve into a patterned unity. The quick rhythms so important to the work were also masterfully pronounced in the orchestration.

Chavez, a composition instructor at the Berkshire Music Center for the summer, was in the audience during the presentation and received sounding applause along with Bernstein. The composer who wrote this work in 1936 is one of the leaders in Mexico's cultural revival and was formerly director of the Mexico Symphony orchestra, director of the National Conservatory of Music, and head of the Mexican Department of Fine Arts.

The concert opened with the brooding Symphony No. 4 in A minor, Op. 63, by Jean Sibelius and closed on a very different note with the idyllic Symphony No. 2 in D major, Op. 73, by Johannes Brahms. Bernstein mastered the jump from Sibelius to Chavez to Brahms with ease and left his individual mark on each with his interpretations.

His orchestration of the Brahms symphony magnified its pastoral charm and contemplativeness while his attention to detail brought out the full rich harmonies of the work. The themes were clearly defined and easy to follow as they were taken up with sweetness by the strings and finally reiterated in full orchestration. Bernstein conducted the evocative fourth symphony by Sibelius full of fragmentary themes and dissonances with dynamic force.

The final concert of the festival season was held Sunday afternoon with Charles Munch conducting.

By I. R. M.

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 17 1953

Record 13,100 Attend Tanglewood Finale

LENOX, Monday (AP) — A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday as the Berkshire Music Festival concluded its 16th season.

The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six week festival.

Cir. (D 39,275)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 17 1953

14,000 Enjoy Final Concert at Tanglewood; Lipkin Solos

By D. E. RITZ

The Tanglewood Festival Concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra closed yesterday afternoon with a program conducted by Charles Munch and Seymour Lipkin as soloist. It was heard by an audience of over 14,000 persons.

* * *

MUNCH ALSO conducted the Friday evening program which featured the Brahms "German Requiem." Leonard Bernstein conducted the Saturday evening program made up of the Sibelius Fourth Symphony, the Chavez "Sinfonia India" and the Brahms Second Symphony.

Soloists for the Brahms Requiem were Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone. Hugh Ross had prepared the Berkshire Festival Chorus which sang the choral portions superbly. Warfield's rich baritone was ideal in "Lord, make me to know the measure of my days on earth" and "Here on earth have we no continuing place." Miss Marshall sang the ever lovely "Ye now are sorrowful, howbeit, ye shall again behold me, and your heart shall be joyful." Both received well-deserved applause.

* * *

THE REQUIEM IS full-bodied, intense music that is satisfying. It does not depend on display or bizarre treatment but is entirely sound, sincere music that comes straight from the heart and reaches there. Like all Brahms music it sounds much simpler in structure than it is, and the orchestral rhythms are complex without ever detracting from the simple lines of the vocal score. Somber but not sad, deeply religious and mystic, it restores one's faith in the verities of life.

THE TANGLEWOOD programs by the Boston Symphony have now reached their 14th year and each year they are enjoyed by larger audiences. Those of us in the northeast within easy driving distance of the western Massachusetts hills are more than fortunate in having the rich cultural background of the annual summer programs of the Boston orchestra to draw upon.

[38]

Clr. (D 78,153)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
AUG 17 1953

Greatest Tanglewood Festival in History Ends With 13,100 at Finale

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 16—As I sit here in the crowded pressroom I can hear the shouts, bravos and applause of the 13,100 people who are bidding farewell to Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and farewell also to this Tanglewood season. It's been a great season with many records broken.

126,350 Admissions

An estimated 126,350 people have attended the theater shed and shed concerts and the gross ticket sale is estimated at $311,600 for the 15 concerts plus "Tanglewood On Parade" and the three orchestra pension fund rehearsals. Nature helped a lot, for only two days were really unpleasant.

There was much to admire in the program and the performance thereof this afternoon. Seymour Lipkin, pianist, was the bright star of the program, offering a fabulous performance of the Ravel Piano Concerto for Left Hand. The program opened with a rugged performance of Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony. It was a finely integrated, sensitive reading Charles Munch provided, one of his best. The recorded portion of the program concluded with three Wagner works, the Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde"; the "Siegfried Idyll" and the Introduction, Dance of the Apprentices, and Entrance of the Mastersingers from "Die Meistersingers Von Nurnberg." The Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde" was played magnificently. Seldom has Mr. Munch provided a more profound and communicative reading as of this wonderful music. Oh, to hear "Tristan and Isolde" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the pit. The excerpts from "The Mastersingers" were equally impressive, broad and majestic when called for, and unutterably gay and rhythmic when that mood was foremost.

Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand is a work where seeing is almost necessary if one is to believe what one hears. It is a formidable work, one which makes demonaic demands on the pianist. Seymour Lipkin made a tremendous sensation here last season and he made an equally impressive appearance this year. A pianist of rare sensitivity and prodigious technique, the concerto this afternoon became expressive, meaningful and brilliant. All this was accomplished in that unassuming manner which is particularly Lipkin's.

The program concluded with one of Mr. Munch's finest efforts, Ravel's "La Valse." It was a highly colored, scintillating performance which rose and fell, only to return to a superb conclusion.

Artistically this Tanglewood season has been one of the best. Programs have been diversified and not restricted to the familiar works. Several performances were unforgettable, notably Leonard Bernstein's reading of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony and the Fourth Symphony of Sibelius and Mr. Munch's reading of the Brahms "A German Requiem" and the "Tristan and Isolde" excerpts heard today. We look forward to next season.

concerts began in the vast music shed.

And when the first shed concert was concluded it was found that 10,300 had established a new mark. By this afternoon everyone was speaking in terms of attendance as the 13,100th patron strode onto the lawns. It is indeed remarkable when one considers that the average attendance at the big programs has been 11,133.

Take into consideration, too, that 3000 persons per program sat on the lawns to enjoy the six smaller concerts and that an average of 5100 persons were present on the green for these grand major concerts.

Nowhere else one would think such a thing was possible let alone to see it a reality before their very eyes.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra departs tonight and Dr. Munch leaves for a well earned rest in Nice, France on Wednesday. But it will be many years before the 1953 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood ceases to be the topic of conversation in music circles the country over. There have been great soloists and great artists here this season and their performances will never fade in memory.

Ovation Given Conductor Munch

Lenox, Aug. 16—The Berkshire Music Festival came to its conclusion here at Tanglewood this afternoon before a record attendance of 13,100 music lovers from every corner of the North American continent. The finale notes floated out over the vast lawns and down to the echoing waters of Stockbridge Bowl at exactly 4.55 but it was long afterwards before the thrilled audience would permit the popular Dr. Charles Munch to get away for his well earned vacation.

Everyone has recognized the fact that this conductor of the world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra has long since captured the hearts and minds of concertgoers. But this afternoon as the sun began to set on Tanglewood 13,100 admirers let him know without a question of doubt that they consider him the greatest conductor in the universe. Seldom before has a conductor been given such a grand tumultuous applause that was accorded Dr. Munch. And never was there a more deserving man. His beaming countenance and ever present charm and ability to draw from his musicians the very finest has left him with a stamp of greatness.

As he was recalled time after time, he embraced first one and then another of his outstanding artists. And with each embrace the crowd roared an even louder approval, the like of which has never been heard before at Tanglewood.

Clr. (D 38,502)
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 17 1953

Tanglewood Attendance Record Set

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 17 — The Berkshire Music Festival came to a spectacular close for the season yesterday, musically, financially and attendance-wise.

An audience of 13,100 filled the 6,000-seat Shed and overflowed onto the green lawns, to hear Charles Munch direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Schubert (the poignant and familiar "Unfinished" Symphony); Wagner and Ravel.

His Wagner was the Prelude and Liebstod from "Tristan and Isolde;" the "Siegfried Idyll;" and excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger."

Seymour Lipkin, 26 - year-old alumnus of the music school at Tanglewood, was soloist for the taxing, incredibly brilliant Piano Concerto for the Left Hand by Maurice Ravel. Saved for the program's closing, with a fine sense of the dramatic, was Ravel's demonaic "La Valse."

Saturday night's audience, hitting 12,100, heard Leonard Bernstein, a steady, surely - maturing Bernstein, conduct three widely-different compositions, each illustrating another facet of his growing competence as a conductor. There was the Sibelius 4th Symphony; the strongly - rhythmic "Sinfonia India," by Chavez; and Brahms' Symphony No. 2.

His handling of the orchestra for the Chavez work, an exposition on Mexican Indian folk themes, was masterful and direct, with Mr. Bernstein at times appearing as a primitive dancer conveying the strength of the music from musicians to audience. Chavez, teaching at Tanglewood this summer, shared the enthusiastic applause with the young conductor.

Attendance figures for the six weeks of 1953 concerts were given at 117,950, an all-time record. Total paid admissions for the series this year was $311,600, including "Tanglewood on Parade," and three orchestra Pension Fund benefit concerts.

F.Z.

Clr. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953

Berkshire Residents at Tanglewood

Mr. and Mrs. George K. Livermore and Mrs. Livermore's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson of Lakeside, Lenox, chat during intermission at yesterday's final concert of the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Jackson is special consultant to President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Flouffe

Clr. (D 13,075)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 17 1953

Tanglewood Festival Ends; New Record of 126,350 Set

The second largest audience in the history of Tanglewood gave the Boston Symphony orchestra and its musical director one of the greatest ovations they have ever received as the 16th and most successful Berkshire Symphonic festival closed at 4.55 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Records Smashed

The crowd, which boosted the season's total paid attendance at 16 concerts to a record-smashing 126,350, called Dr. Charles Munch back again and again to receive its plaudits.

Tanglewood officials said after the concluding concert that the nine programs in the 6,000-seat music shed had drawn a total attendance of 91,800, that the six Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts in the theater-musical hall that preceded the major festival concerts were attended by 26,150, and that Tanglewood on Parade, the special performance given last Thursday evening, attracted an audience of 8,400, to boost the year's paid-attendance total to 126,350. This was nearly 3,100 more than the previous record of 123,277 set in 1950, the year in which the late Serge Koussevitzky retired at the close of the festival programs. Last year's total was 110,875 and in 1951 the figure was 120,650.

Many records besides that for total attendance were broken. The festival had its largest opening week-end in history with 7,200 at the two Bach concerts given on July 11 and 12 and the total of 26,150 at the six Bach-Mozart-Haydn offerings set a new record. The attendance of 31,000 in the first series of three shed concerts this year also was a new record for the first week-end of major festival performances. And the total of $311,600 paid for tickets also set a record.

Second Largest

The only time Tanglewood has seen a larger crowd than yesterday's 13,100 was at the fifth major concert in 1951 when 15,800 passed through the gate. And last Saturday night's crowd of 12,100 was in the top bracket, exceeded only four times until yesterday.

Tanglewood officials estimated that 43,825 persons also attended performances by the students of the Berkshire Music center in addition to the 126,350 at the festival concerts. The Music center performances are open without charge to Friends of the Music center, comprised of contributors to its support.

The Music center, which had an enrollment of 397 this year, closed its six weeks' season last evening and the students scattered to their homes in the four corners of the United States and to several foreign lands.

With the close of the Tanglewood concerts, members of the Boston orchestra, for whom this was the 14th Tanglewood season—different group played the first two years—also started their vacations. Dr. Munch will leave Wednesday for a trip to his native France, to return, as the orchestra members will, when rehearsals start in a few weeks for the fall and winter season of Boston Symphony hall concerts.

Two Retire

Two long-time members of the orchestra retired with yesterday's concert. They are Raymond Allard, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans of Brookline, 'cellist since 1927.

Yesterday's program which entranced the 13,100 persons in the audience, of whom 7,100 heard it from the lawns around the huge 6,000-seat shed, offered Schubert's Symphony in B minor, the "Unfinished" symphony; Chabrier's "Bourree Fantasque;" a group of Wagnerian works, the Prelude and "Love-Death" from "Tristan and Isolde," the Siegfried Idyll and three excerps, the introduction, Dance of the Apprentices and Entrance of the Mastersingers, from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" and two Ravel works, the Piano concerto for the left hand with 26-year-old Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and "La Valse."

On Saturday evening, with Leonard Bernstein conducting, the orchestra performed Sibelius' Fourth symphony in A minor, Chavez' "Sonfonia India" with the composer in the audience, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D major.

Clr. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 17 1953

31,100 Attend Final Concert At Tanglewood

LENOX, Aug. 16 (AP)—A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today as the Berkshire Music Festival concluded its 16th season.

The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six-week festival.

After participating in the concert, two musicians with a total of 57 years service announced their retirement from the orchestra. They are Raymond Allard of Newton, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1922, and Hippolyte Droeghmans of Brookline, cellolist since 1927.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953

Boston Orchestra Eloquent In Season's Final Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

CHARLES MUNCH consigned the 1953 Tanglewood season to musical history yesterday afternoon with the indelible last five notes of Ravel's "La Valse" with which he completed the final concert in the huge Shed with the Boston Symphony orchestra at one of their most eloquent moments. With a program essentially popular the orchestra closed the season with an audience which raised total attendance figures for the entire season above any previous records and which maintained artistic standards at an enthusiastic pitch.

Carlos Chavez

The Schubert "Unfinished Symphony" and excerpts from Wagner: The Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan und Isolde," the Siegfried Idyll, and the Introduction, Dance of the Apprentices, and the Entrance of the Mastersingers, from "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," filled the first half of the afternoon. After intermission came two Ravel choices: The Waltz and, preceding it, Seymour Lipkin in the piano concerto for the left hand. The concerto was written for Paul Wittgenstein who lost his right arm in the first world war, and Lipkin made it a tour de force, yet it would not be accurate to call it only a striking exhibition of skill, for he put bravado into it to impress anyone who listened without watching.

* * *

RAVEL wrote his other concerto, for a usually equipped pianist, at about the same time. His manner of conducting and his quiet undemonstrative appearance would not have suggested that his music would be so full of spirit and dash. He calls the waltz a choreographic poem and indicated that he conceives it as a ball held at an imperial court about 1855 and the tempo lenged reads "Mouvement de valse viennoise." There is no dance floor we can imagine which would be ample for Ravel's sweeping rhythm. A flying trapeze might possibly serve although still inadequately. Munch knows his Ravel and he sensed the virtuosity of the Bostonians.

It was a wonderful climax to the Festival and an astonishing display of brilliance. Among the many recalls Munch called to the front of the stage the two musicians who are retiring this year and for whom this was the last concert. With touching and true Gallic sentiment he embraced Raymond Allard, bassoonist, and Hippolyte Droeghmans, cellist.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Leonard Bernstein took his second program of the season and devoted it to the Brahms' second symphony for the close of his concert and to the Sibelius' fourth and Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonia India" for the first half.

Mr. Chavez, the leader and instigator of most things musical in Mexico, has been on the faculty in the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center this season. It was with more than usual cordiality that the audience gave him whole-hearted approval of his music when Bernstein called him to the stage from his seat in the audience. Chavez based his short single movement work on three Indian melodies and, to express it, he calls for a huge orchestra including a percussion section originally requiring primitive Indian instruments. He allows that their equivalents in common use or easily obtainable replicas will serve as the originals are not absolutely essential, but there are drums, clay and metal rattles, gourds, and a tenabari, which is a string of butterfly cocoons, a grijutian, a string of deer hoofs, and a raspador Yaqui, a rasping stick.

The rhythm, at close sight, is irregular. The bars are divided into variable idioms and he even asks that certain instruments remain very subdued, the violins at the start, for instance, while the violas, celli, bass clarinets and bassoons, give with healthily released strength. In such a percussive pattern the interpolated little melodies, such as the simple and tender air given the clarinet after the strenuous introduction, has an especial poignance. This is progressively passed around to the strings and it exudes the rise and fall of the peasant chant we so easily associate with the aboriginal inhabitants of the Americas. Chavez has done for his Mexico somewhat as Bartok did for his Hungary. It must be said that Bernstein conveyed the soul of the music with high-spirited zest which must have gratified the composer as much as it pleased the audience.

* * *

THE SIBELIUS FOURTH has not been played at Tanglewood before. It seems to be bucking the tide all the time. One need look no further than the initial bar to notice that the composer asks that the celli and bass violas paradoxically play fortissimo but with mutes. The desired effect is one of contrary forces vying for freedom or supremacy. It is far from gay music yet it is not abysmally tragic. The contrasting tempos of the alternate movements still remain in the same character, leaving a gray mood, at best. Bernstein and the orchestra played the Brahms as if they had been released from a heavy burden and as if they were relishing the opportunity here of spreading their wings which had been constrained in the Sibelius. It glowed with warmth and tonal splendor.

Attendance records sometimes resemble stock market reports but they do have an especial connotation when referring to Tanglewood. The increasing numbers of people coming from far and wide is evidence of the interest music lovers the world over have in this unique enterprise. The orchestra and all the subsidiary attractions are worthy of this confluence, and the wisdom of the management should be here noted and appreciated in combining both music from the established repertory and new and contemporary works. This policy, it would seem, is valid and right, from an artistic standpoint as well as from that of the box office.

Seymour Lipkin

Cir. (D 103,308)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 17 1953

Tanglewood Ends On Record Note

By EVANS CLINCHY

Lenox, Mass. — Well, the festival here at Tanglewood closed its season Sunday afternoon by setting a record for all-time attendance at a Berkshire festival —a massive total of 126,350 people having paid their way in to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra this year.

Not only did the festival as a whole set a record, but Sunday afternoon set a new all time high of 13,100 for a final concert audience.

The conclusion to be drawn from all this, I take it, is that Tanglewood is now big business. People now come from many miles around, in shorts, in sport jackets and in tuxedos, to either sit on the hard metal seats in the shed or to sprawl comfortable on the grass outside without hearing all the music.

* * *

WHEN ALL is said, done and over with, the cause of this great popularity here is not too difficult to uncover. Tanglewood has become a musical garden spot on the tourist map. It is not only a place where you can hear music of the garden variety but it is a very beautiful spot in which to hear it.

And the programs this last weekend, with the possible exception of the Brahm's Requiem Friday night, did little to dispel the purely routine standard that those who crowd in upon Tanglewood have obviously come to hear.

* * *

SATURDAY'S PROGRAM was the most diversified of the last two and therefore the most interesting. It was conducted by Leonard Bernstein, the youthful glamour boy of the Tanglewood scene.

Mr. Bernstein selected for his evening the large, extended Sibelius Fourth, the lovely and lyrical Brahms second and a 1936 composition by Mexico's Carlos Chavez entitled "Sinfonia India."

* * *

THIS LAST PIECE was the hit of the evening. It is based upon three genuine Mexican Indian themes. It is full of generous percussion noises, and it generates a large degree of excitement.

It ends on a smash-bang note that sounds very much like a rifle shot, and this final slam brought the audience to its feet in a lengthy, standing ovation. Mr. Chavez himself was on hand to accept the tumultous acclaim, and both he and Mr. Bernstein bowed many times before the audience could be quieted.

Sunday afternoon, the program was conducted by Mr. Munch, and it was placed right down his alley. It included two Ravel pieces, the Concerto for the left hand with Seymour Lipkin at the piano, and "La Valse," three Wagner excerpts, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan," a Siegfried idyll, and sections from the third act of "Miestersinger," and Schuberts unfinished.

Mr. Munch is particularly fine on these standard items from the French and Wagnerian repertoires. The Shubert was played with gem-like clarity.

* * *

ALL THE OTHER WORKS, too, were played with all the tonal polish and virtuosity that it would be possible to ask for. Mr. Munch was quite at home in this sea of romanticism, yet he still made his Schubert charming, if a bit over-dramatic.

There is little doubt in my mind that the Boston Symphony is one of the great orchestral instruments of our time. It is infinitely versatile, always professional. You can count on it to do a superlative job every time.

But, as at Tanglewood here, it is often called upon to do the ordinary.

It would be more just, I think, if its material more often lived up to its viruosity.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953

In Brief . . .

Fully as gratifying as the general attendance increase at the Festival this year has been the 30 per cent membership boost in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose ranks comprise the backbone of Tanglewood's public support . . . On the assumption that competition for public office is healthy, Ward 7 voters should welcome the candidacy of Edward S. Harubin for the School Committee seat now held by James E. Curtin. It marks the first time that a challenger has showed up in Mr. Curtin's bailiwick for many years . . . The public lecture series concluded Saturday at Stockbridge School having proved a valuable addition to the county's cultural fare, it's good to learn that Hans Maeder plans to continue it this fall . . .

President Grover C. Bowman of North Adams State Teachers College deserves an "A" for candor in contending that schools should get back to teaching the fundamentals. Insofar as education has departed from the standards he prescribes, it has been largely the doing of teachers' colleges . . . It's interesting to learn from Joseph Franz that the acoustics at Tanglewood are excellent partly because there wasn't enough money to permit any fancy construction when the music Shed was built. It isn't often that one gets more by paying less . . .

Cir. (D 14,049)
This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
POST-STAR
AUG 17 1953

Tanglewood Draws Crowd

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16 (AP)—A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today as the Berkshire Music Festival concluded its 16th season.

The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six-week festival.

After participating in the concert, two musicians with a total of 57 years service announced their retirement from the orchestra. They are Raymond Allard of Newton, principal bassoonist, with the orchestra since 1928, and Hippolyte Droeghmans of Brookline, celloist, since 1927.

[40]

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD - TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 17 1953

Music

Final Notes Go Big in Berkshires

By ROBERT BAGAR.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 17.—The 1953 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood came to its conclusion yesterday with what may be justly called a bang-up job by Charles Munch and his redoubtable Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Oddly enough from a cursory glance at the program, with its offerings, one did not expect the excitements that were in store for the 13,000 who attended. In a moment of flippancy one might easily have dismissed this program more or less as a program of encores.

Hardly! For Mr. Munch was at his most communicative, his most commanding, his most completely persuasive in the Schubert "Unfinished," three Wagner pieces—"The Prelude" and "Love-Death" from "Tristan Und Isolde," the introduction, dance of the apprentices and entrance of the mastersingers from "Die Meistersinger" and the "Siegfried Ityl," besides Ravel's piano concerto for the left hand and the same composer's "La Valse."

One of the Best.

It is enough to say that the concert was one of the best—in point of performance—that I have ever heard the conductor do up here. Or anywhere, for that matter. No surprise could have been greater than to here these "encores" so stupendously performed. And at one place in the proceedings, during "La Valse" I thought the conductor was actually showing off, this remarkable orchestra.

Seymour Lipmin, a young pianist with more technical skill in his left than some others may boast in both hands, acquitted himself with honor in the concerto. It's not considered the best possible Ravel, but its rendering yesterday made that allegation a dubious one.

There was no real chef d'oeuvre of the afternoon in the playing of the Bostonians, the items were all such, thanks to the spirit, the subtelty, the finesse of the several orchestral accomplishments. It seems almost needless to say that the Wagner excerpts were purest gems of sound and meaning, marvelously balanced and persuasive in all their aspects.

Just Duck Soup.

For his part, Leonard Bernstein, on Saturday evening, delivered himself of some excellent baton works in the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez and in the Second Symphony of Brahms.

His Brahms was well planned and poised. He made the most of the melodic opportunities present, and his vital delivery of the big sections earned him praise and more praise.

I thought, however, that the Sibelius Fourth, for all the clarity of the rendering, the acute understanding of its mercurial moods, could have had a more continuous line in the performance. As it was, the batonist and orchestra did some truly fine things in it anyway.

The final weeend drew a total of 32,800. The figure of 126,350—the attendance for the entire show, was the biggest in the history of the festival.

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 17 1953

Music Festival Ends

13,100 Hear Final Concert of Season at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass.—(AP)—A crowd of 13,100 jammed Tanglewood for a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday as the Berkshire Music Festival concluded its 16th season.

The huge crowd brought to 117,950 the number of music lovers who attended the series during the six-week festival.

Cir. (D 186,670) (S 150,358)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
AUG 17 1953

Boston Symphony Performs Wagner In Tanglewood Concert

Charles Munch Conducts Festival Program Which Includes Schubert, Ravel Selections

By JULIAN SEAMAN
Blade Staff Writer

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 17—The Wagnerian muse, a bulky maiden of tradition, generously endowed in all directions, wasted away to a wraith here yesterday afternoon. For Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra, at the Sixteenth annual Berkshire Music Festival on the grounds of Tanglewood, gave her nothing but courtesy and anemic sweetness.

Mr. Munch in Wagner is a curious phenomenon. Icelandic fable eludes him, nor can he quite grasp the need for stark and rude heroics. His godlike visions are faintly apologetic, as though he bade you hear symphonic sounds tinged with a faint disdain. All of it is suave, slightly saccharine, with no hint of robust drama or the kind of Olympian rebellion that Wagner himself conceived.

All Great Music

There were no traffics and discoveries in this program, but all of it was great music—the Schubert "Unfinished," which underwent this same treatment of sugary precision; the "Tristan" prelude and Liebestod, the "Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from the third act of "Meistersinger"; that Ravel piano concerto for the left hand commissioned by Paul Wittgenstein and "La Valse," the choreographic poem devised for Ida Rubenstein.

The Ravel music aptly suited the Munch temperament and the present inclinations of the orchestra. These performances had a quality of old satin, knife-like discipline and a lean beauty in design and structure.

The pianist was Seymour Lipkin, winner of the Rachmaninoff Fund award, native of Detroit, and an apprentice conductor and resident pianist with the Cleveland Orchestra. This was shallow playing, in accord with demands of this shallow music, a stunt that left no idea of his capabilities as an artist. Yet he has been praised highly by my colleagues.

Symphonic Form

At least two examples of the symphonic form constituted a basic part of the program Saturday night—the Sibelius Fourth and the Brahms Second. Both could be said to have been administered if not actually conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The third item of musical concern was a "Sinfonia India," by the Mexican, Carlos Chavez.

Mr. Bernstein no longer can be regarded as the "young" but promising talent hatched by the more or less paternal Serge Koussevitzky. It has been 15 years and more since he emerged and the fledgling stage has given no sign of maturity. In fact, Mr. Bernstein can be classed as a case of arrested development.

Not So Extravagant

He is not quite so extravagant this year; his athleticisms seem to have relaxed and apparently he has decided to ape batonic manners of his mentor—i.e., the waving wrist, the jerky fist, the elbows akimbo. But the good Serge got results thereby, and the Bernstein results are questionable.

The Chavez score, setting rudeness and raw noise as a goal, seemed to please the very young and to appeal to the middle-aged. It embroiders weak themes in searing colors upon coarse cloth. Its relation to the symphonic form is negligible; in fact, I wondered why Mr. Chavez bothered to term it a "symphony," save that this is a fashion among composers too careless or ignorant to consider form essential.

Destine Company Dances At Jacob's Pillow

A matinee seance at Jacob's Pillow, nine miles east of Lee, where Ted Shawn and his entourage of the dance is holding customary revels, presented Jean Leon Destine and a group of Haitiian dancers; some assorted morsels of the repertoire and a performance of the Falla opera-ballet, "El Amor Brujo" (Love, The Sorceress).

The Destine company displayed some startling and arresting rhythms, studies in animal motion and elemental noise. None of the alleged flamenco dancing was quite devoid of an inevitable artificiality.

Mr. Shawn himself, still the expert and seasoned showman, showed some evidence of inexorable maturity. He appeared in two roles—first as a young Polish farmer in Wyoming, who converts the peasant polka into a modern travesty, all with a boyish charm and naivete; then as the spectre lover in "El Amor Brujo."

By the way, attendance at the Shed series this year broke a record, 91,800, compared with 89,800 in 1950; 89,750 in 1951 and 89,175 last year.

ADVERTISEMENT

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 17 1953

TANGLEWOOD ENDS ANNUAL FESTIVAL

Lipkin Is Piano Soloist in Ravel Concerto as Munch Conducts —Attendance Record Set

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16—The sun shone brilliantly on Tanglewood and on the overflow thousands on the lawns around the music shed this afternoon, and as a result the Berkshire Music Festival came to an end with a new attendance record for the season.

The previous high of 124,100 set in 1950, was surpassed this summer when today's audience of 13,100 brought the season's total to a grand 126,350. The season's gross of $303,800 also was a new high.

These festivals in the Berkshires, begun almost twenty years ago, seem to be in the ascendant on every front. The first three weekends of programs in the theatre-concert hall this year drew 26,150 persons as against the 1950 record of 23,500, and it may be that by next season these concerts will have to be moved into the music shed. As for the three main festival weeks in the shed, this year's attendance of 91,800 beat out the 1950 record of 89,800.

A Program of Favorites

To wind up this year's festival, Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony today in a program made up largely of perennial favorites. He began with Schubert's "Unfinished" and continued with a number of Wagner works—the Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde," the "Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger." After the intermission, Seymour Lipkin was soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto for the left hand, and the festival ended with one of Mr. Munch's fiery specialties—Ravel's "La Valse."

Mr. Lipkin is one of the many Tanglewood alumni. He has worked here as one of the late Serge Koussevitzky's young conducting talents and was the winner of the nation-wide Rachmaninoff Prize for pianists some years ago. He handled the difficult Ravel concerto with consummate ease as far as its technical promlems were concerned, and he made his mechanical command subservient to the essential needs of the music.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra were very much in the vein for the Schubert and Wagner works, and he and the orchestra gave Mr. Lipkin sensitive support. At the end of "La Valse," the throng burst out into a thunderous ovation by way of au revoir to the musicians and Tanglewood.

At last night's concert, Leonard Bernstein was the conductor, and he gave a satisfying account of his maturing musicianship. In a testing program that embraced Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and Brahms' Second Symphony, Mr. Bernstein proved that he was equipped emotionally and intellectually to voyage in three widely different musical worlds.

Sibelius Symphony Heard

The Sibelius Symphony, one of the Finnish master's deepest and finest, had breadth and dignity. Mr. Bernstein and the Boston Symphony made it clear how Sibelius' concise ideas germinate into an immense entity; details were neatly etched but they were part of the large draughtsmanship.

The Chavez symphony, which is as brilliant and imaginative as one of the great modern Mexican murals, had tremendous pace and color. Possibly the composer might have been able to bring additional values to the slow sections, but Mr. Bernstein did a good job. His interpretation of Brahms indicated that he had advanced a great deal in the field of the classical repertoire.

Señor Chavez, who has been this year's guest composer at the Berkshire Music Center, was in the audience when his work was played, and the roaring tribute of the crowd caused him to join Mr. Bernstein on the stage in acknowledgment. Señor Chavez, of course, is a first-rate conductor, and it is a pity he was not invited to display this facet of his gifts in the course of the festival.

Cir. (D 91,577)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 17 1953

RECORD CROWD AS BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL ENDS

13,100 at Final Performance; New All-Time Records Reported

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 17—As the 16th Berkshire Festival came to a close yesterday afternoon, with an audience of 13,100 enthusiastic music lovers in attendance, it was announced that all attendance records for the festival had been shattered.

In six weeks, from July 11 through yesterday, the festival concert attendance totalled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; 113,300 in 1950, a record year when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years.

The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9425 over the 34,400 a year ago. The gala "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8400 persons this year, as against 6000 in 1952.

The festival early began upsetting records. Preliminary concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, programs devoted to Bach, Mozart and Haydn in the small-capacity Theatre-Concert Hall attracted a total of 26,150 persons (1952: 19,700; 1951: 22,900; 1950: 23,500). An average attendance of 4360 persons attended each performance this year, which means that more than 3000 persons per concert have sat on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or under the sun to listen to music that, until just a few years ago, could have been classified as only for special tastes.

So popular have these "small" concerts proved that the orchestra management is faced with the problem of whether or not to move them next season entirely to the large-capacity Music Shed. The brace of Bach concerts July 11-12 saw an attendance of 7200, the largest opening festival week-end crowd on record. The Mozart concerts, which over the years have proved the most popular in this series, were long sold out in advance. Box office receipts for these preliminary concerts totaled $58,235, an increase of 35 per cent compared to those of 1952.

Total paid admissions for the 15 festival concerts in 1953 and "Tanglewood on Parade" and three orchestra pension fund rehearsals was $311,600, as against $268,000 for 1952; $253,200 for 1951; $238,300 for 1950. The 1953 15 festival concerts alone grossed $303,800.

On the musical side, Charles Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music, included in the festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony Orchestra had never performed before.

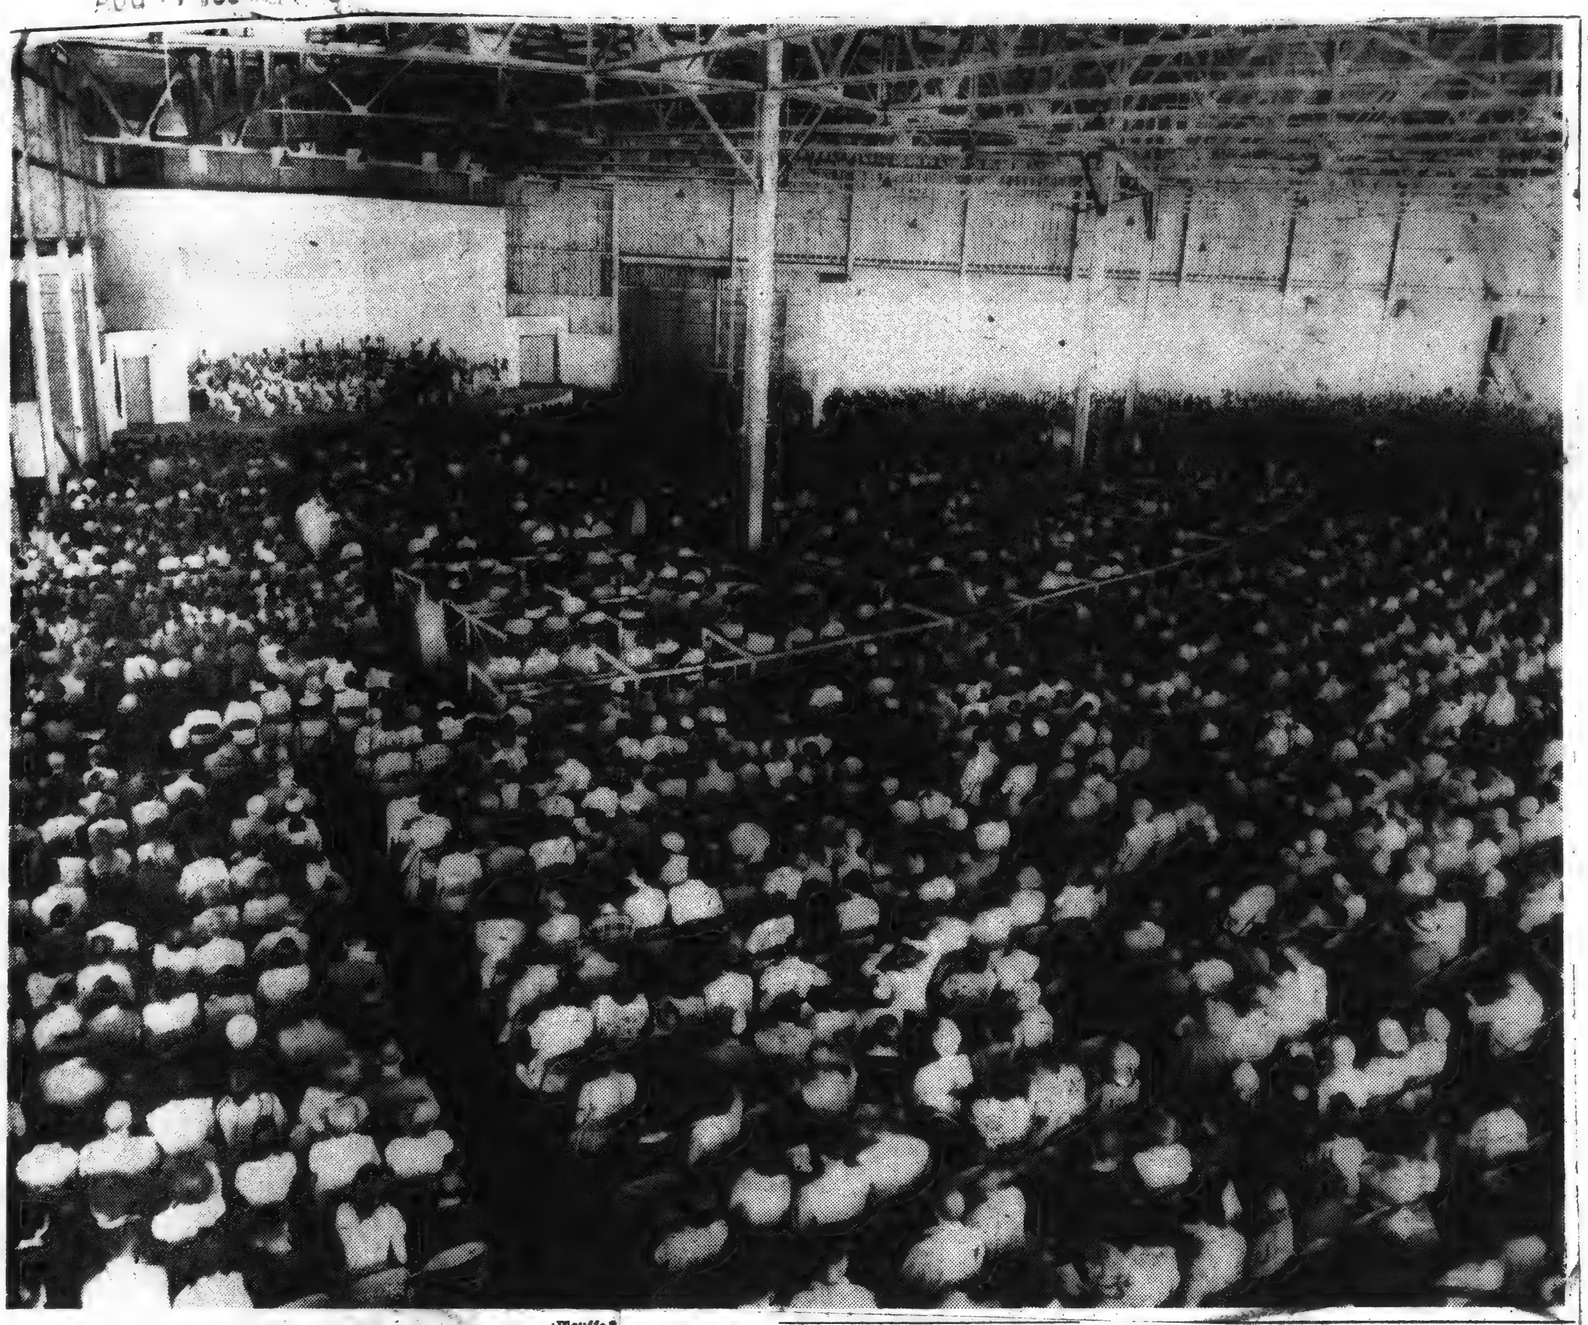
With a student body of 397, chosen from 1500 applicants the activities of the Berkshire Music Center also mounted. The student enrollment was composed of 292 full-time students from 40 states and the District of Columbia, New York leading with 76, Massachusetts next with 33, Michigan with 18. Seven foreign countries—Canada, Israel, Italy, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Sweden — were represented.

At the conclusion of yesterday's concert, the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra returned to Boston where it was scheduled today to make recordings at Symphony Hall headquarters. Tomorrow, Director Munch leaves by air for France for a vacation until the orchestra opens its 73d season in Boston Oct. 9.

Applications for Berkshire Festival subscription tickets for 1954 and inquiries concerning admission to the Berkshire Music Center next season should be sent to Symphony Hall, Boston, where Tanglewood business will be carried on until June 1, 1954.

[41]

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953



Plouffe

CLIMAX OF A RECORD SEASON: All previous records were broken for the season's Berkshire Music Festival when yesterday's crowd of 13,100 brought this year's attendance up to 117,950, and box office receipts of more than $300,000. When this unusual photograph was made inside the Shed, Seymour Lipkin was at the piano as soloist with the BSO, Charles Munch conducting, in Ravel's pianoforte concerto for the left hand.

All Records Smashed As Tanglewood Closes

TANGLEWOOD — After breaking all records with an attendance of 117,950 and box office receipts of more than $300,000 for the 16th Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony Orchestra with its music director, Charles Munch, packed their instruments last night and left for Boston to make recordings at Symphony Hall today before winding up the 1953 season.

Munch Returning to France

Tonight Mr. Munch will fly to his home in Nice, France, for a six-week holiday and the musicians will disperse for the shortest vacation of any major American orchestra. They will return to Boston the first week in October to open their 73d season.

Yesterday afternoon's audience of 13,100 was the largest for a single concert this season. Saturday night, with Leonard Bernstein conducting, the concert attracted 12,000 and 7600 turned out Friday evening, bringing the week-end total to 32,800, which was 1800 more than that of Series A, a record for an opening week end and 1100 more than for the last series in 1952.

Last year's attendance was 104,875 and receipts totaled about $268,000.

The average audience for the nine Shed concerts was 10,200, compared to 9464 in 1952. For the six preliminary programs in the theatre seating 1152, the average attendance was 4360, which means that 3000 listened from the lawn.

Student Event Popular

The Berkshire Music Center, the only summer school conducted by an orchestra, also broke records with a total audience of 43,825 for its performances, an increase of 9425 over 1952. Membership in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, to whom the events were open and whose contributions help to support the school, jumped from 3900 of last year to 5472 and their donations from $22,647 to $27,637. Thirty-five per cent of the Friends are permanent or summer residents of the Berkshires.

The school granted 204 scholarships, including 16 for foreign students. The majority of the awards are returnable to a revolving fund. Student payments for tuition, dormitory fees and registration totaled $58,786, compared to $55,850 in 1952.

Picnickers yesterday arrived early and stayed late. Many of the audience lingered to say farewell to the musicians and to snap pictures of the conductor as he emerged from his dressing room to go to Seranak, where Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky entertained at tea a few of her friends and out-of-town guests.

A crowd gathered in the center of the campus to listen to guitar solos by one of the audience. Several hours after the close of the concert, groups were still talking and eating from picnic baskets.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 17 1953

MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival

By Jay S. Harrison

Season's Finale

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16.—The Berkshire Music Festival, 1953, came to an end this afternoon in a burst of orchestral fireworks and with a record-breaking attendance. Today's audience numbered 13,100, the largest of the summer, and the biggest ever to attend the final concert. It brought the week end's total to 32,800 and the season's to 117,900, thereby smashing all previous attendance figures in Tanglewood's history. The program, with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra, listed Ravel's "La Valse" and piano concerto for the left hand, with Seymour Lipkin a soloist; Shubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Wagner's Prelude and "Love-Death" from "Tristan und Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyll" and three excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger."

The concert came to an end in a whirl of flying fingers and provocative sounds. The incredible difficulties of the Ravel concerto were surmounted by Mr. Lipkin admirably and cleanly with scarcely a hint of the usual inaccuracies that pursue all who undertake this demonic work. It is in his favor, moreover, that the concerto emerged as a piece of music rather than the trick or stunt it can easily become. In short, music was made by Mr. Lipkin and well made, too.

Munch in Fine Form

The remainder of the program saw Mr. Munch in fine form. His "La Valse" spun like a dervish, stamped its beat forcefully and echoed throughout the hall. Previously, Mr. Munch had conducted the Tristan with due turbulence, the Idyll with some eccentricity, and the Meistersinger excerpts with great understanding and majesty. His Schubert, taken as a whole, was a performance which placed the dramatic foremost and allowed the lyric to shift for itself. But since Mr. Munch's sense of drama is brave and forthright, it made for a tidy presentation but quite avoided the excess sentimentality which many conductors inevitably take to be the Schubert ideal.

Last night an audience of 12,100 heard Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony in a program that included Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonia India" and Brahms' Symphony No. 2. All told, it was a field day for Mr. Bernstein and, for his admirers, an occasion for rejoicing.

Bernstein's Stature Grows

Concerning Mr. Bernstein, the truth is plain—he has grown immensely in stature and has become, in fact, a masterful conductor. For every fault he possesses there are fifteen virtues. For every indiscretion he commits there are untold miracles he works in tying together the loose ends of the orchestral score. And for these reasons his program of the evening, a long one and full of pitfalls, was in most instances a roaring success.

By what manner of alchemy Mr. Bernstein is able to get to the heart of a contemporary score, the present writer hesitates to guess. But there is no denying that the conductor's performance of Chavez' "Sinfonia," a minor masterwork of huge complexity, reflected the music's profile in a mirror of perfection. The work itself, based for the most on Mexican Indian themes, is exotic but not perfumed, hypnotic but not bizarre. It is a twelve-minute concentrated study in the development of folk material and its underlying rhythms. Setting it forth as he did, Mr. Bernstein permitted the work to speak for itself without urging and demonstrate the sophistication and knowledge that had gone into its making.

Rare Reading of Brahms

The Brahms Symphony, another matter entirely, was also accorded a vigorous and monumental reading. As played, it was a Brahms with his nerve endings exposed, a Brahms to whom fury and passion were no secret things. Mr. Bernstein lifted the work up, made tempests where they rarely are and gave us a musical portrait of uncommon boldness and power.

It was only in the Sibelius Fourth, a wintry and solitary work, that Mr. Bernstein came to grief. The piece is lean and spare and based on the play of isolated motives. By overheating them they do not fuse, but melt instead and tautness disappears. Mr. Bernstein, in dramaticizing each simple phrase, dissipated the score tension and caused it to grow flabby. And that is death is a wiry work.

[42]

Cir. (D 26,126)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953

Plouffe

SATURDAY HIGH LIGHT: Carlos Chavez, Mexican composer, congratulates Conductor Leonard Bernstein following the performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night at Tanglewood of Chavez' composition, "Sinfonia India," which was wildly acclaimed by the large audience.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 17 1953

Munch Leads Stellar Concert

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 17.—How Charles Munch conducted and the Boston Symphony played in the concluding program of the Berkshire Festival should be long remembered by the audience of 13,100 people present yesterday afternoon. It was a memorable concert.

What looked like a list of very familiar music became transformed into a series of enlightening performances. People may speak of the Tanglewood magic that inspired them, but the thunderous applause was for the modest, unassuming conductor who wove the spell.

Munch's innate simplicity made the beloved melodies of Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony sing gloriously. His wealth of feeling communicated a personal quality to Wagner's prelude and love-death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyll," and excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger." His command of the orchestra produced a tour-de-force in Ravel's "La Valse."

However well-known the music, the performance of each piece reflected a penetration of mood quite apt and brought its special distinction. All this presented Munch at his finest. His attention to Ravel also included the piano concerto for the left hand with Seymour Lipkin as soloist. The young pianist surmounted the technical intricacies of the work skilfully, but caught little of its personality.

Cheer Chavez

Leonard Bernstein conducted the Saturday night concert for a crowd of 12,100 people. He offered a provocative program with the Sibelius Fourth Symphony, Chavez's "Sinfonia India," and the Brahms Second Symphony. Aside from the over-intensification of his conducting, the concert demonstrated again his tremendous talent.

What caught the audience's special fancy was the presence of Carlos Chavez. It had thoroughly enjoyed his rhythmic, colorful music so superbly played under Bernstein's understanding direction. When he was finally persuaded to come to the platform, he received a reception of unusual warmth not altogether spurred by the Berkshire Music Center students who had come to know him as composer-in-residence for the Summer.

Bernstein showed more appreciation for the Sibelius than grasp of its content. His tendency to destroy balances by over-accenting or subduing passages was responsible. The same might be said of his Brahms which just missed being an exceptional performance.

The weekend began with the Brahms Requiem conducted by Munch, sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, and by Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone. Munch imparted both the personal and dramatic aspects of the work in a performance which grew better as it progressed but never attained distinction. Miss Marshall distinguished herself in a solo just right for her voice.

The festival ended with a record-breaking, over-all attendance of 126,350 people. Yesterday's crowd was the largest for a single event. The total receipts have been set at $303,800, the largest in Tanglewood history.

Cir. (D 74,647) (S 117,225)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
AUG 17 1953

Music Shed Symphonic Series Ends

Tanglewood Season Is Silver Lined by Attendance Record

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16 (Special) — With a record breaking total of 126,350 customers, and $303,800 more in the bank, the fourteenth annual Berkshire Music Festival closed here this afternoon. The skies may have been grey, but for Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, they certainly had their silver lining.

Total attendance for today's final concert also reached a new high, some 13,100 visitors, more than half of whom camped on the lawn like a Gypsy caravan. Inside the music shed, in the boxes, you could see pearl necklaces. Outside on the greensward, you could see tan up to here, as women came in shorts of every style and contour.

Familiar Fare

Musically, the concert ended up more or less as it had begun and had continued across the three week ends. Except for the Ravel piano concerto for left hand, it was thrice familiar fare. The opening work was Schubert's unfinished symphony. Mr. Munch must have had in mind the Wagner which was to follow, for this Schubert was strong stuff. If you like it so high-proof, you would have called his reading and the Boston Symphony's playing, dramatic, intense, ultra resonant. If you still prefer to think of the "unfinished" as essentially lyric, the adjectives for you would have been "violent," "heavy handed" and "brassy." Accepted at Mr. Munch's rate of exchange, it was well played by the orchestra who gave it ring and solidity, and who managed to keep the performance exceedingly lucid and transparent despite their emphases.

The prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan und Isolde" opened a group of three Wagner excerpts which also include "A Siegfried Idyll" and various and sundry familiarities from "Die Meistersinger." For my taste and sentiment, the "Tristan" lost its natural momentum early in the prelude as Mr. Munch proceeded to drive it up the hill of its crescendo, with the brake on. Though it was vehemently interpreted bar by bar by Mr. Munch and the boys and girl of the Boston Symphony, it did not add up to the resurgent effect it should have. Far better were the readings and performances of the other two Wagner items.

Ravel Works in Windup

After intermission Mr. Munch really undertook to pour it on. The orchestra and he were coming down the home stretch of the festival and there should be a real finish for a Roman holiday. There was. Both of the works were by Ravel, the piano concerto for left hand, and "La Valse." Mr. Munch added them up to fireworks.

The concerto is for the most part a dark and stormy night in music. Seymour Lipkin, himself a Tanglewood product, was soloist, and in the novelty of encountering a concerto for one hand only, practically the whole audience bent forward, craning their necks. Many even trained binoculars on the soloist, for this was something to be seen as well as heard. Actually, it did not tax Mr. Lipkin very much. The real pyrotechnics are in the orchestra. The soloist indeed has enough to do to keep him occupied, but it is not spectacular. Mr. Lipkin made it polished and musicianly, and received the warm enthusiasms of the house. Mr. Munch and the orchestra made their contribution turbulent and striking, which was also all to the good. Well, now that we have had a concerto for one left hand, let's have another for two. Plenty pianists got 'em.

The final outburst, "La Valsez," was another of those all-out efforts like last week's "Bolero." It brought people up standing, which after all had the added advantage of getting them on their homeward way quicker. What could have been neater?

T. H. P.

Cir. (D 3,300)
This Clipping From
CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
AUG 17 1953

Munch Conducts Final Tanglewood Summer Concert

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, closed its doors for another season yesterday afternoon with the final concert of the season conducted by Charles Munch. The program opened with the "Unfinished" Symphony by Franz Schubert and was followed by the Prelude and "Love Death," from "Tristan und Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyll" and Excerpts from Act III, of "Die Meistersinger" by Wagner. The last half of the program was entirely devoted to the works of the late Maurice Ravel with the playing of his Piano Concerto for Left Hand," with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and the Choreographic Poem, "La Valse."

One might venture to say that the outstanding program of the season was presented on Friday evening, Aug. 14, when Charles Munch directed members of the orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus in a performance of Johannes Brahms' "A German Requiem." Although the "Requiem" is not a liturgical mass, it does show Brahms at his most reverent, devoted, and religious self. In this performance of the work, Mr. Munch followed the score carefully and gave his audience a vivid, introspective reading. The work of the chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, is again to be commended for its outstanding work in this demanding composition. The choice of soloists, Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, was indeed, a fine one. Their rich, resonant voices seemed to fit the demands of the solo parts without exception. Due to the threats of an impending hurricane, the audience on Friday evening was small, but appreciative. Those who were present heard a performance of a great compositon as it was undoubtedly intended to be performed.

On Saturday evening, Aug. 15, Leonard Bernstein again assumed the podium for a program of Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. The Symphony No. 4 in A minor, Opus 63 of Sibelius, could be called a moody work; not a deeply profound one, not a composition that is very engaging to the listener. It seems to be sombre, in character except for the rhythmic second movement. The performance by Mr. Bernstein was clear, exacting, and well-paced.

Carlos Chavez was represented on Saturday night's program with a performance of his polyrhythmic, percussive "Sinfonia India." Leonard Bernstein again proved his ambidexterous self in his conducting of this work. Mr. Bernstein didn't miss a trick; it's a shame Mr. Chavez couldn't have pulled a few more tricks out of the bag to make it a more interesting composition. Rhythm and percussion tend to make you sit on the edge of your seat and tap your toe, but they don't always make for good music. In the case of the "Sinfonia India," it was apparent that something more was needed to stir the soul.

To end the program, Mr. Bernstein chose the 2nd Symphony of Brahms. The performance was bold, exciting, emotional and well-defined. It again proved that Leonard Bernstein is expanding his repertoire and that his musical insight is growing along with the repertoire.

The Tanglewood season is now over. Greene County music lovers again sit back and await next spring when news of the 1954 Tanglewood season will be forthcoming.

C. R. Warrington, Jr.

The New Muscle Of the Festival

The 1953 Tanglewood season came to its customary rapturous close yesterday afternoon with the breaking of another attendance record. The Festival, if not unique is at least unusual in its being a project that has had no recessions in its popularity. It started with a rush and has been accelerating ever since, except during the years when it was hampered by war restrictions.

In going from strength to strength it has continued to confute the doubts and predictions of the pessimists. There have been any number of jeremiads from the skeptics from year to year. It was said that novelty was the chief attraction that brought the crowds. Other explanations were curiosity, the feeling that it was the current fad, the desire of the average person to be seen there, or heard talking about it, as an aid to his cultural reputation. There were predictions when Dr. Koussevitzky died that the Tanglewood festival would go into a decline.

The decline is conspicuous by its absence. Whatever argument there may be about the relative competence of Dr. Koussevitzky and Dr. Munch, the general judgment of those who attend is that the quality of music to be heard at Tanglewood is unsurpassed at any summer festival. To what extent the 13,000 increase in paid attendance this year for fifteen Festival concerts in comparison to attendance last year may be laid to the substitution of Friday concerts for Thursday night performances can not be answered precisely. Obviously the more heavily laden bill of fare for week-enders helped at the gate. But the abolition of the Thursday night concerts was in no sense a desperate remedy. Unfortunately, serious music must operate at a deficit in this country where there is no government subsidy. The management of an orchestra can not be censured for trying to reduce that deficit to manageable proportions. The pique of the innkeepers is understandable but it has little validity. Actually, over the long run, the purposes of both are identical.

All in all Tanglewood is one of the great contributions to American culture in the 20th Century, and there is every prospect with its new muscle that it will long continue to make Berkshire proud to be its locus, whatever its inconveniences and minor irritations.

tion whether they do not go beyond the point of diminishing returns. If the cigarette and liquor taxes were reduced to the point where they were at least comparable to those in neighboring states, might not the increase in Massachusetts purchases make up for the reduction in the rate of the tax? There is no question that Bay Staters living near the state line slip over that line whenever it is convenient.

There is one other fact about the state income tax that is worth noting. The exemption applies only to earned income. People who own any securities have no exemption on such unearned income unless their income from all sources (for a married couple) is less than $2500 a year. Contrary to belief, a large proportion of security holders are people of moderate means, and not bloated plutocrats. The Massachusetts law on unearned income has long been a factor in discouraging the retired from staying or settling in the state and inducing them to move to states where the financial as well as the meteorolgical climate, meaning particularly Florida and California, is milder.

There is one paradox about the Massachusetts unearned income law, which is the most "socialistic" of that of any state. It was passed by a Republican Legislature many years before the New Deal had ever been heard of.

In Brief . . .

Fully as gratifying as the general attendance increase at the Festival this year has been the 30 per cent membership boost in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose ranks comprise the backbone of Tanglewood's public support . . . On the assumption that competition for public office is healthy, Ward 7 voters should welcome the candidacy of Edward S. Harubin for the School Committee seat now held by James E. Curtin. It marks the first time that a challenger has showed up in Mr. Curtin's bailiwick for many years . . . The public lecture series concluded Saturday at Stockbridge School having proved a valuable addition to the county's cultural fare, it's good to learn that Hans Maeder plans to continue it this fall . . .

President Grover C. Bowman of North Adams State Teachers College deserves an "A" for candor in contending that schools should get back to teaching the fundamentals. Insofar as education has departed from the standards he prescribes, it has been largely the doing of teachers' colleges . . . It's interesting to learn from Joseph Franz that the acoustics at Tanglewood are excellent partly because there wasn't enough money to permit any fancy construction when the music Shed was built. It isn't often that one gets more by paying less . . .

ing department, is feted at a dinner at the Berkshire Restaurant by her former Rationing Board associates and presented a handbag by Miss Marjorie Keene,

Notes and Footnotes

WITH THE INK hardly dry on travelers' checks signed by departing Tanglewood tourists, we made a quick survey of local lodging places regarding business. We have news. Good news.

Royal Treadway at the Red Lion in Stockbridge reports business this year better than last. Like all other places we checked, Mr. Treadway allowed the change in Tanglewood dates—Friday, Saturday and Sunday instead of the former Thursday, Saturday and Sunday—had, if anything, increased their overall season trade. Looking ahead, he says week-end bookings for fall are a bit better than average.

At the Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington, Landlord James J. Joyce tells us they had more bookings this summer as a whole than in any of the previous 15 years he has operated the big establishment. This includes business conferences (conventions) and permanent guests. This Inn is booked for conferences well into November, a new late date for Mr. Joyce. "The drop off after Tanglewood," says he, "is nothing like it has been formerly."

It's good news, too, from Manager George Turain at the Curtis in Lenox. They have had more house guests than ever before, and there are a nice batch of reservations ahead. The Curtis will be pretty full toward the last of September through the middle of October in particular.

From Manager Wright Gibson Jr. at the Sheraton we learned their summer business was much better than last year, and coming week ends look as good as last year, which was a very good year indeed.

The motels, a new venture here, have had fabulous business. Sam Friedland of the Tanglewood Motor Court says they've done capacity business right along, and expect full houses until Oct. 15. William Gilford at Town & Country Motor Lodge expects the same through the fall foliage season in October, Mrs. Eva Gordon at Wagon Wheels is well booked until after Labor Day, and Mrs. Fred Jurgenson at Green Acres Motel expects big fall business.

Gradually the Berkshires are lengthening the resort business beyond the three Tanglewood weeks, which is good business indeed.

—o—

THIS PEACE in Korea isn't much good. People are more jittery than ever, like fighters between rounds waiting for the next bell. No one expected when they asked candidate Eisenhower to end the war, that it would be in humiliation, frustration, and with the enemy arrogant and intractable.

—o—

NOTE FOR horseplayers: We hear where a certain housewife built up a sizable bank account in this way. She took the bets for her gambling husband, but instead of placing them on the horses, banked the money. When he won she paid him off from the fund, and in time was several thousand dollars ahead. She didn't dare tell him, however, because it would spoil his fun.

—o—

MUSIC HATH charms to move the savage beast. At Tanglewood it also moves a certain segment of the audience outside the Shed to tramp, tramp, tramp all over the lot, and over the people sitting there. Why not build a big treadmill next year for people who cannot take their music sitting down?

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

Struggle for Contract To Shows Dependence of N.

By Dudley

MASSACHUSETTS would greatly appreciate the prompt assistance of the rest of New England in securing a Navy contract for the Fore River Shipyard at Quincy, just south of Boston.

Specifically, Massachusetts is urging Washington to give the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, owners of the Fore River yard, the contract for building a Forrestal-type of aircraft carrier, to cost some $209,000,000. Two of these giant aircraft are now under construction; one at a commercial shipyard at Newport News, Va., and the other at the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N.Y.

The construction of a third carrier has been authorized and the money voted. It is understood that the final decision as to where to place the contract will be made in a matter of days. That is why Governor Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts has wired President Eisenhower, his assistant, Sherman Adams, and the secretary of the Navy, urging that the job be assigned to Fore River. He has also asked the other New England governors to join him in similar appeals to Washington.

The struggle for the carrier is a good illustration of the need for better organization of the New England delegation in Congress for prompt action in support of regional interests and needs. Such organization was urged by Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts in presenting his economic program for New England on the floor of the Senate last May.

* * * *

IF BETHLEHEM gets the carrier, it will keep the Fore River yard busy for three years. If it doesn't get this contract or its equivalent, its present employment of 7000 will be reduced to but 1000 or so by next summer. Already some 1500 men have been released as the work on hand is being completed. Governor Herter has told Washington that it is not in the interest of the national defense to allow this skilled work force to become dispersed into other employments and locations.

A few years ago Connecticut's United Aircraft took occasion to point out that more than half of the hundreds of millions of dollars it received under government contracts went to scores of sub-contractors, mostly in New England. The same would be true of the $209,000,000 allocated for the carrier, if Fore River gets the contract.

* * * *

THE HEAD of the newly-created Small Business Administration in Washington, William D. Mitchell, has been urged to make an early visit to New England. There is every reason to believe that he will do so at the first convenient opportunity.

Mr. Mitchell's visit to Boston will undoubtedly bring about the first regional meeting of representatives of the six state development corporations now operating or organizing in New England. Ever since the 1953 legislatures of Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut followed the example of Maine and New Hampshire in authorizing the establishment of this new type of lend-agency for small industries, it has been agreed that some means be found for bringing them together. Mr. Mitchell's visit will be a most suitable occasion.

Letters

Sour Note

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I enclose my letter to the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center of Aug. 6 complaining about the inadequate toilet facilities at Tanglewood and, on the reverse side, Mr. Judd's most superficial reply to a justified complaint made in the interest of Tanglewood.

I do not know whether there are 28 "For Men" and "Comparable accommodations for Women," as Mr. Judd states. At any rate they can not be found by the public and they are not known to the guards at the gate who referred us to the toilets either at the gate or in the Shed or in the house. The remaining 25 may be behind the stage, I don't know, but I suggest that you dispatch one of your cub reporters to Tanglewood one Sunday afternoon at 2.15 and let him describe the lines of 30 and more women and of men waiting next to the gate and wholly in the "public eye" to drop their nickel—a nickel each person for that little business usually not charged for!—to gain admission and a "seat."

And at the same time your cub reporter should look into the utterly insufficient facilities during the intermission to have a bite or a cup of coffee.

Otherwise Tanglewood is perfect.

ROBERT O. HELD.
920 Riverside Drive,
New York 32, N.Y.

In Voters' Hands

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

In his "Every Saturday" column of Aug. 15 on the municipal election campaign, Roger Linscott says in part: "Issues or not, however, the calibre of the at-large candidates raises several interesting possibilities—not the least of which is that George A. Purnell, the wily dean of the City Council may find his chair pulled out from under him in November. Although he's been in office for a quarter of a century and knows more political tricks than a Tammany captain, Mr. Purnell retained his seat with little to spare in the last election, running fourth among the four winning at-large candidates. Anyone who's had rough going against the relatively weak field of candidates in previous years may find this year's field a Waterloo."

This statement was precedec

Cir. (M 1,004,767)
This Clipping From SEVENTEEN
NEW YORK, N. Y.
.53

On August 9 and 16, Charles Munch (right) will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Pierre Monteux conducts the performance on August 2

The New Muscle Of the Festival

The 1953 Tanglewood season came to its customary rapturous close yesterday afternoon with the breaking of another attendance record. The Festival, if not unique, is at least unusual in its being a project that has had no recessions in its popularity. It started with a rush and has been accelerating ever since, except during the years when it was hampered by war restrictions.

In going from strength to strength it has continued to confute the doubts and predictions of the pessimists. There have been any number of jeremiads from the skeptics from year to year. It was said that novelty was the chief attraction that brought the crowds. Other explanations were curiosity, the feeling that it was the current fad, the desire of the average person to be seen there, or heard talking about it, as an aid to his cultural reputation. There were predictions when Dr. Koussevitzky died that the Tanglewood festival would go into a decline.

The decline is conspicuous by its absence. Whatever argument there may be about the relative competence of Dr. Koussevitzky and Dr. Munch, the general judgment of those who attend is that the quality of music to be heard at Tanglewood is unsurpassed at any summer festival. To what extent the 13,000 increase in paid attendance this year for fifteen Festival concerts in comparison to attendance last year may be laid to the substitution of Friday concerts for Thursday night performances can not be answered precisely. Obviously the more heavily laden bill of fare for week-enders helped at the gate. But the abolition of the Thursday night concerts was in no sense a desperate remedy. Unfortunately, serious music must operate at a deficit in this country where there is no government subsidy. The management of an orchestra can not be censured for trying to reduce that deficit to manageable proportions. The pique of the innkeepers is understandable but it has little validity. Actually, over the long run, the purposes of both are identical.

All in all Tanglewood is one of the great contributions to American culture in the 20th Century, and there is every prospect with its new muscle that it will long continue to make Berkshire proud to be its locus, whatever its inconveniences and minor irritations.

In Brief . . .

Fully as gratifying as the general attendance increase at the Festival this year has been the 30 per cent membership boost in the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose ranks comprise the backbone of Tanglewood's public support . . . On the assumption that competition for public office is healthy, Ward 7 voters should welcome the candidacy of Edward S. Harubin for the School Committee seat now held by James E. Curtin. It marks the first time that a challenger has showed up in Mr. Curtin's bailiwick for many years . . . The public lecture series concluded Saturday at Stockbridge School having proved a valuable addition to the county's cultural fare, it's good to learn that Hans Maeder plans to continue it this fall . . .

President Grover C. Bowman of North Adams State Teachers College deserves an "A" for candor in contending that schools should get back to teaching the fundamentals. Insofar as education has departed from the standards he prescribes, it has been largely the doing of teachers' colleges . . . It's interesting to learn from Joseph Franz that the acoustics at Tanglewood are excellent partly because there wasn't enough money to permit any fancy construction when the music Shed was built. It isn't often that one gets more by paying less . . .

Notes and Footnotes

WITH THE INK hardly dry on travelers' checks signed by departing Tanglewood tourists, we made a quick survey of local lodging places regarding business. We have news. Good news.

Royal Treadway at the Red Lion in Stockbridge reports business this year better than last. Like all other places we checked, Mr. Treadway allowed the change in Tanglewood dates—Friday, Saturday and Sunday instead of the former Thursday, Saturday and Sunday—had, if anything, increased their overall season trade. Looking ahead, he says week-end bookings for fall are a bit better than average.

At the Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington, Landlord James J. Joyce tells us they had more bookings this summer as a whole than in any of the previous 15 years he has operated the big establishment. This includes business conferences (conventions) and permanent guests. This Inn is booked for conferences well into November, a new late date for Mr. Joyce. "The drop off after Tanglewood," says he, "is nothing like it has been formerly."

It's good news, too, from Manager George Tyrsin at the Curtis in Lenox. They have had more house guests than ever before, and there are a nice batch of reservations ahead. The Curtis will be pretty full toward the last of September through the middle of October in particular.

From Manager Wright Gibson Jr. at the Sheraton we learned their summer business was much better than last year, and coming week ends look as good as last year, which was a very good year indeed.

The motels, a new venture here, have had fabulous business. Sam Friedland of the Tanglewood Motor Court says they've done capacity business right along, and expect full houses until Oct. 15. William Gilford at Town & Country Motor Lodge expects the same through the fall foliage season in October, Mrs. Eva Gordon at Wagon Wheels is well booked until after Labor Day, and Mrs. Fred Jurgenson at Green Acres Motel expects big fall business.

Gradually the Berkshires are lengthening the resort business beyond the three Tanglewood weeks, which is good business indeed.

—o—

THIS PEACE in Korea isn't much good. People are more jittery than ever, like fighters between rounds waiting for the next bell. No one expected when they asked candidate Eisenhower to end the war, that it would be in humiliation, frustration, and with the enemy arrogant and intractable.

—o—

NOTE FOR horseplayers: We hear there a certain housewife built up a sizable bank account in this way. She took the bets for her gambling husband, but instead of placing them on the horses banked the money. When he won she paid him off from the fund, and in time was several thousand dollars ahead. She didn't dare tell him, however, because it would spoil his fun.

—o—

MUSIC HATH charms to move the savage beast. At Tanglewood it also moves a certain segment of the audience outside the Shed to tramp, tramp, tramp all over the lot, and over the people sitting there. Why not build a big treadmill next year for people who cannot take their music sitting down?

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

dinner at the Berkshire Restaurant by her former Rationing Board associates and presented a handbag by Miss Marjorie Keene.

Struggle for Contract To Shows Dependence of N.

By Dudley

MASSACHUSETTS would greatly appreciate the prompt assistance of the rest of New England in securing a Navy contract for the Fore River Shipyard at Quincy, just south of Boston.

Specifically, Massachusetts is urging Washington to give the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, owners of the Fore River yard, the contract for building a Forrestal-type of aircraft carrier, to cost some $209,000,000. Two of these giant aircraft are now under construction; one at a commercial shipyard at Newport News, Va., and the other at the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N.Y.

The construction of a third carrier has been authorized and the money voted. It is understood that the final decision as to where to place the contract will be made in a matter of days. That is why Governor Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts has wired President Eisenhower, his assistant, Sherman Adams, and the secretary of the Navy, urging that the job be assigned to Fore River. He has also asked the other New England governors to join him in similar appeals to Washington.

The struggle for the carrier is a good illustration of the need for better organization of the New England delegation in Congress for prompt action in support of regional interests and needs. Such organization was urged by Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts in presenting his economic program for New England on the floor of the Senate last May.

• • • •

IF BETHLEHEM gets the carrier, it will keep the Fore River yard busy for three years. If it doesn't get this contract or its equivalent, its present employment of 7000 will be reduced to but 1000 or so by next summer. Already some 1500 men have been released as the work on hand is being completed. Governor Herter has told Washington that it is not in the interest of the national defense to allow this skilled work force to become dispersed into other employments and locations.

A few years ago Connecticut's United Aircraft took occasion to point out that more than half of the hundreds of millions of dollars it received under government contracts went to scores of sub-contractors, mostly in New England. The same would be true of the $209,000,000 allocated for the carrier, if Fore River gets the contract.

• • • • •

THE HEAD of the newly-created Small Business Administration in Washington, William D. Mitchell, has been urged to make an early visit to New England. There is every reason to believe that he will do so at the first convenient opportunity.

Mr. Mitchell's visit to Boston will undoubtedly bring about the first regional meeting of representatives of the six state development corporations now operating or organizing in New England. Ever since the 1953 legislatures of Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut followed the example of Maine and New Hampshire in authorizing the establishment of this new type of lend agency for small industries, it has been agreed that some means be found for bringing them together. Mr. Mitchell's visit will be a most suitable occasion.

Letters

Sour Note

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I enclose my letter to the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center of Aug. 6 complaining about the inadequate toilet facilities at Tanglewood and, on the reverse side, Mr. Judd's most superficial reply to a justified complaint made in the interest of Tanglewood.

I do not know whether there are 28 "For Men" and "Comparable accommodations for Women," as Mr. Judd states. At any rate they can not be found by the public and they are not known to the guards at the gate who referred us to the toilets either at the gate or in the Shed or in the house. The remaining 25 may be behind the stage, I don't know, but I suggest that you dispatch one of your cub reporters to Tanglewood one Sunday afternoon at 2.15 and let him describe the lines of 30 and more women and of men waiting next to the gate and wholly in the "public eye" to drop their nickel—a nickel each person for that little business usually not charged for!—to gain admission and a "seat."

And at the same time your cub reporter should look into the utterly insufficient facilities during the intermission to have a bite or a cup of coffee.

Otherwise Tanglewood is perfect.

ROBERT O. HELD.
920 Riverside Drive,
New York 32, N.Y.

In Voters' Hands

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

In his "Every Saturday" column of Aug. 15 on the municipal election campaign, Roger Linscott says in part: "Issues or not, however, the calibre of the at-large candidates raises several interesting possibilities—not the least of which is that George A. Purnell, the wily dean of the City Council may find his chair pulled out from under him in November. Although he's been in office for a quarter of a century and knows more political tricks than a Tammany captain, Mr. Purnell retained his seat with little to spare in the last election, running fourth among the four winning at-large candidates. Anyone who's had rough going against the relatively weak field of candidates in previous years may find this year's field a Waterloo."

This statement was preceded

Cir. (M 1,004,767)
This Clipping From SEVENTEEN
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG - 1953

On August 9 and 16, Charles Munch (right) will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Pierre Monteux conducts the performance on August 2.

Cir. (D 126,176) (S 184,919)
This Clipping From
DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
AUG 18 1953

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Berkshire Festival Is Huge Success

HYDE PARK, Aug. 18.—I should like to say a little bit about the program I attended at the Berkshire music festival, Tanglewood, Mass., last Friday evening. The Boston Symphony orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, played Brahms' "Deutsches Requiem."

The soprano was Miss Lois Marshall of Canada, who once was afflicted with polio but it did not affect her voice, which was really lovely. The baritone was William Warfield, who toured Europe last year with the company doing "Porgy and Bess." While over there recently I heard what a magnificent Porgy he was

Cir. (D 12,259) (S 12,146)
This Clipping From
GRAND JUNCTION, COLO.
SENTINEL
AUG 19 1953
Cir. (D 113,277) (S 116,910)
This Clipping From
RALEIGH, N. C.
NEWS & OBSERVER
AUG 19 1953
Cir. (D 29,863)
This Clipping From
EL PASO, TEXAS
HERALD-POST
AUG 18 1953
Cir. (D 280,777) (S 499,081)
This Clipping From PITTSBURGH, PA.
PRESS
AUG 18 1953

My Day

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

HYDE PARK—I should like to say a little bit about the program I attended at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., last Friday.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, played Brahms' "Deutches Requiem." The soprano was Miss Lois Marshall of Canada, who once was afflicted with polio. But it did not affect her voice, which

Cir. (D 121,576)
This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
NEWS
AUG 19 1953

Cir. (D 121,576)
This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
NEWS
AUG 18 1953

My Day—

Hyde Park Exhibit Bigger Than in the Past

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK.—I did a recording on Thursday with Bill Leonard of CBS. In the afternoon and evening I saw two movies which were submitted by Great Britain and France for consideration in the competition for an award which chooses the best movie on the basis of what will convey most clearly some phase of the ideals by which we live.

We got up early Friday morning so as to be back in Hyde Park in time to open the three-day art exhibit at the village library. I could hardly believe that this was the same art exhibit I had visited last year.

The number of contributors has grown greatly since then, and I think the quality of the painting has greatly improved.

Some of the painters are amateurs.

To one who loves the Hudson River and Dutchess County, it is always very difficult not to want to buy some of the water colors. But I have so many pictures now that it is hard to find space on the walls for them.

We have not only painters in Hyde Park Village, but a number of craftsmen.

Friday afternoon my niece, Mrs. Elliott, and I went up to Tanglewood as Mrs. Auerbach's guests for the evening performance.

I was opportu

Mr. and Mrs. Stern of New Orleans, their guests since they were my kind and thoughtful hosts last year in New Orleans.

On Saturday afternoon we celebrated two birthdays among the young friends in the neighborhood. All the children joined in the party, the ages ranging from ear to 14 years.

ight, 1953, by United te, Inc. Reproduction in n part prohibited.)

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 18 1953

Tanglewood Has Record Season

Special to the Telegram

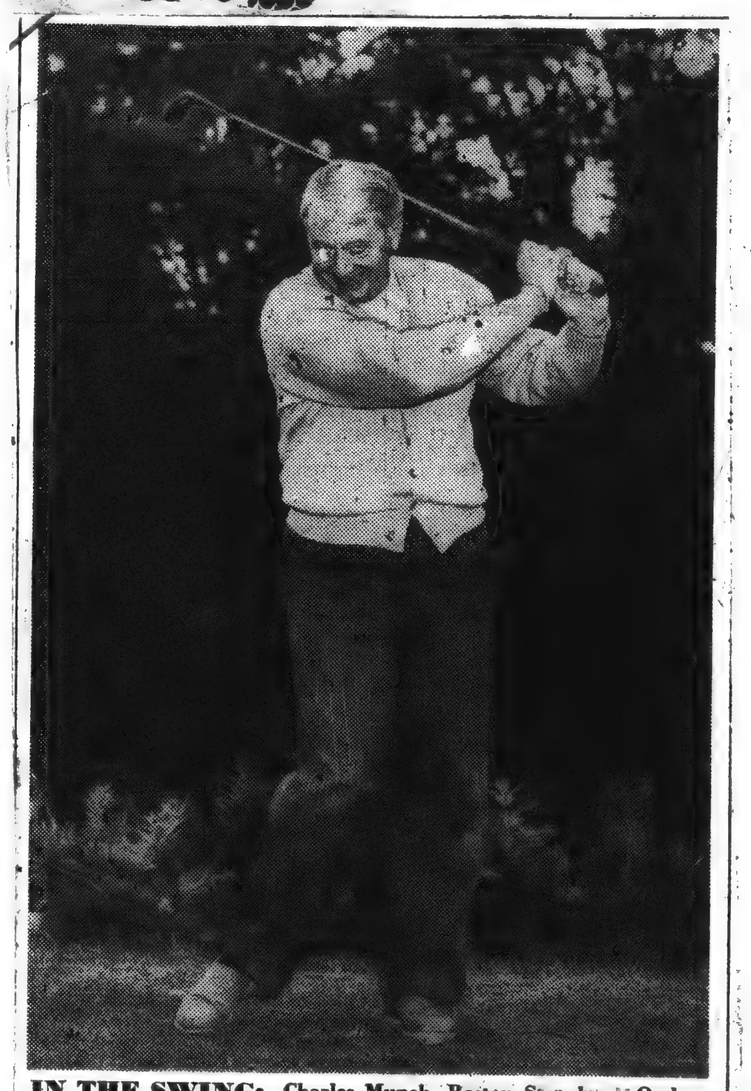
LENOX, Tuesday — The Boston Symphony Orchestra broke all previous attendance records during the 16th Berkshire Festival completed at Tanglewood Sunday.

Concert attendance during the six-week season totaled 117,950. Previous record year was 1950, when 113,300 attended the last performances conducted by the late Serge Koussevitzky.

The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9425 over a year ago.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8400 persons this year as against 6000 last year.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 19 1953



IN THE SWING: Charles Munch, Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, tries his hand with a driver at the Stockbridge Golf Club. This was one of his ways of relaxing between concerts at the Berkshire Festival at near-by Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 20 1953

Vicarious Thrill

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I have just read Jay Rosenfeld's review [Aug. 8] of the Tanglewood concert at which Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" was given. Mr. Rosenfeld's reviews are always excellent, but he surpassed himself this time. This is superb writing, indeed. This review presented such a graphic interpretation of the concert that for a few minutes 2000-odd miles vanished and I was back at my beloved Tanglewood again, thrilling to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its Berkshire setting of the great Shed.

GLADYS H. SCHUMACHER
Box 8063, Greenway Station,
Tuscon, Ariz.

Cir. (D 9,928)
This Clipping From
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
AUG 19 1953

Berkshire Festival Had Best Season

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its music director, Charles Munch, conducting, closed the 16th Berkshire Festival, the most successful to date for the orchestra and its music school, the Berkshire Music Center. Manager George E. Judd listed as causes "the increasing awareness of music patrons of the festival's accessibility from Connecticut, Hudson and Mohawk valleys; the accoustical marvels of the 6,000-seat music shed and the 1,152-seat theatre-concert hall, whose open sides permit music lovers to overflow onto the lawns of the Tanglewood estate so that no one need be turned away; the stimulating and varied programs; the high standard of students enrolled in the school for its eleventh season; and the favorable Berkshire weather."

In six weeks, from July 11 through August 16, the festival concert attendance totalled 117,950 as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; and 113,300 in 1950, a record year because the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances then with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9,425 over a year ago. The gala "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 persons this year, as against 6,000 in 1952.

Cir. (D 35,334)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
AUG 19 1953

Music Festival To Be Marked Next Month

South Mountain, Coolidge Groups To Be Sponsors

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 19 — The 35th anniversary of music at South Mountain here will be celebrated with solo recitals and a major chamber music festival in September under auspices of the Coolidge Foundation and the South Mountain Association.

The first concert by Carroll Glenn, violinist, will take place Sunday at 4. Leonid Hambro, pianist, will be heard Aug. 30.

The Coolidge Festival in September will consist of five concerts Wednesday through Friday, Sept. 23-25. The Berkshire String Quartet, Kroll String Quartet and Albert Sprague Coolidge, oboe will play Sept. 23 at 4 p.m. Sept. 24 at 11 a.m., the Bel Arte Trio, assisted by Louis Speyer, oboe, James Pappoutsakis, flute, and Lukas Foss, piano, will appear. On the same date at 4 p.m., the Hufstader Singers, accompanied by an instrumental ensemble from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present a program of choral music.

The Kroll and Berkshire quartets will appear again Sept. 25 at 11 a.m. and, at 4 p.m., Milton Katims and a chamber orchestra from the National Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra will present the concluding concert.

On Oct. 21, William Masselos, winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs' $1,000 prize will be heard in a piano recital.

Fine Singing Is Heard at Tanglewood Concert

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK.—I should like to say a little bit about the program I attended at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., last evening. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, played Brahm's "Deutsches Requiem."

The soprano was Miss Lois Marshall of Canada, who once was afflicted with polio but it did not affect her voice. It was really lovely. The baritone was William Warfield, who toured Europe last year with the company doing "Porgy and Bess."

While over there recently I heard what a magnificent Porgy he was, and after hearing him I can well understand the enthusiasm of his audiences. His voice is a wonderful instrument.

I was in Beacon Saturday afternoon for a funeral and when I stopped at a service station the man in charge told me the story of a little girl living in the town who has been practically adopted by the whole of Beacon.

She is Patricia Ostrowski, 10 years old, a victim of leukemia. Her parents have been told the disease is incurable, but a fund has been raised in the town to do everything possible for her, keeping her alive in the hope that something will be discovered which might effect a cure.

The garageman told me he had just bought her a little bicycle, which she may not be able to use, but which certainly will lend encouragement.

He is not only trying to raise money, which is needed to do everything possible for little Patricia, but he begged me to tell her story so that the fund may grow.

Also, if there is any place in this country where new treatments may be known, such a discovery may quickly be brought to the attention of Patricia's parents.

At Sunday noon I went over to the library to meet a group of some 250 strong, mostly Cubans or those of Cuban descent, from New York City who brought along a little bust of a famous Cuban general to present to the library.

Also, the United Nations interns—students who work at the U. N. during the summer months—picnicked on my grounds at the cottage, and I answered questions for them for about an hour after lunch.

They wanted to know about my trip, about Senator McCarthy, about European and Asian conditions from the point of view of a United States traveler.

There are 49 internes, but all of them were not here on Sunday. They come from 33 countries.

[45]

Cir. (D 126,176) (S 184,919)
This Clipping From
DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
AUG 18 1953

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Berkshire Festival Is Huge Success

HYDE PARK, Aug. 18.—I should like to say a little bit about the program I attended at the Berkshire music festival, Tanglewood, Mass., last Friday evening. The Boston Symphony orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, played Brahms' "Deutsches Requiem."

The soprano was Miss Lois Marshall of Canada, who once was afflicted with polio but it did not affect her voice, which was really lovely. The baritone was William Warfield, who toured Europe last year with the company doing "Porgy and Bess." While over there recently I heard what a magnificent Porgy he was, and after hearing him I can well understand the enthusiasm of his audiences. His voice is a wonderful instrument.

Cir. (D 12,259) (S 12,146)
This Clipping From
GRAND JUNCTION, COLO.
SENTINEL
AUG 19 1953
Cir. (D 113,277) (S 116,910)
This Clipping From
RALEIGH, N. C.
NEWS & OBSERVER
AUG 19 1953
Cir. (D 29,863)
This Clipping From
EL PASO, TEXAS
HERALD-POST
AUG 18 1953
Cir. (D 280,777) (S 499,081)
This Clipping From PITTSBURGH, PA.
PRESS
AUG 18 1953

My Day

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

HYDE PARK—I should like to say a little bit about the program I attended at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., last Friday.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, played Brahms' "Deutsches Requiem." The soprano was Miss Lois Marshall of Canada, who once was afflicted with polio. But it did not affect her voice, which was really lovely.

The baritone was William Warfield, who toured Europe last year with a company doing "Porgy and Bess." While over there recently I heard what a magnificent Porgy he was, and after hearing him I can well understand the enthusiasm of his audiences. His voice is a wonderful instrument.

Cir. (D 121,576)
This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
NEWS
AUG 18 1953

My Day—

Hyde Park Exhibit Bigger Than in the Past

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK.—I did a recording on Thursday with Bill Leonard of CBS. In the afternoon and evening I saw two movies which were submitted by Great Britain and France for consideration in the competition for an award which chooses the best movie on the basis of what will convey most clearly some phase of the ideals by which we live.

We got up early Friday morning so as to be back in Hyde Park in time to open the three-day art exhibit at the village library. I could hardly believe that this was the same art exhibit I had visited last year.

The number of contributors has grown greatly since then, and I think the quality of the painting has greatly improved.

Some of the painters are amateurs.

To one who loves the Hudson River and Dutchess County, it is always very difficult not to want to buy some of the water colors. But I have so many pictures now that it is hard to find space on the walls for them.

We have not only painters in Hyde Park Village, but a number of craftsmen.

Friday afternoon my niece, Mrs. Elliott, and I went up to Tanglewood as Mrs. Auerbach's guests for the evening performance.

I was particularly glad of this opportunity, for I had not seen Mr. and Mrs. Stern of New Orleans, their guests since they were my kind and thoughtful hosts last year in New Orleans.

On Saturday afternoon we celebrated two birthdays among the young friends in the neighborhood. All the children joined in the party, the ages ranging from nearly one year to 14 years.

(World Copyright, 1953, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 18 1953

Tanglewood Has Record Season

Special to the Telegram

LENOX, Tuesday — The Boston Symphony Orchestra broke all previous attendance records during the 16th Berkshire Festival completed at Tanglewood Sunday.

Concert attendance during the six-week season totaled 117,950. Previous record year was 1950, when 113,300 attended the last performances conducted by the late Serge Koussevitzky.

The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9425 over a year ago.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8400 persons this year as against 6000 last year.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 20 1953

Vicarious Thrill

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I have just read Jay Rosenfeld's review [Aug. 8] of the Tanglewood concert at which Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" was given. Mr. Rosenfeld's reviews are always excellent, but he surpassed himself this time. This is superb writing, indeed. This review presented such a graphic interpretation of the concert that for a few minutes 2000-odd miles vanished and I was back at my beloved Tanglewood again, thrilling to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its Berkshire setting of the great Shed.

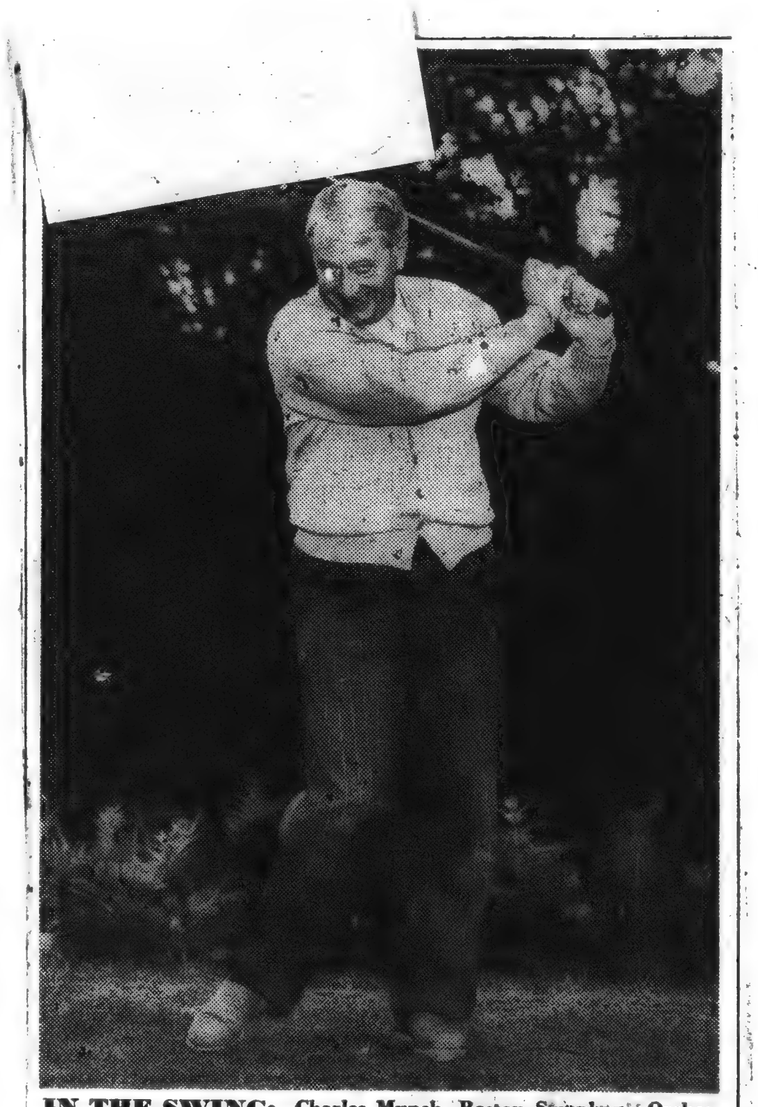
GLADYS H. SCHUMACHER
Box 8063, Greenway Station,
Tuscon, Ariz.

Cir. (D 9,928)
This Clipping From
MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
AUG 19 1953

Berkshire Festival Had Best Season

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its music director, Charles Munch, conducting, closed the 16th Berkshire Festival, the most successful to date for the orchestra and its music school, the Berkshire Music Center. Manager George E. Judd listed as causes "the increasing awareness of music patrons of the festival's accessibility from Connecticut, Hudson and Mohawk valleys; the accoustical marvels of the 6,000-seat music shed and the 1,152-seat theatre-concert hall, whose open sides permit music lovers to overflow onto the lawns of the Tanglewood estate so that no one need be turned away; the stimulating and varied programs; the high standard of students enrolled in the school for its eleventh season; and the favorable Berkshire weather."

In six weeks, from July 11 through August 16, the festival concert attendance totalled 117,950 as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; and 113,300 in 1950, a record year because the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances then with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9,425 over a year ago. The gala "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 persons this year, as against 6,000 in 1952.



IN THE SWING: Charles Munch, Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, tries his hand with a driver at the Stockbridge Golf Club. This was one of his ways of relaxing between concerts at the Berkshire Festival at near-by Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 35,334)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
AUG 19 1953

Music Festival To Be Marked Next Month

South Mountain, Coolidge Groups To Be Sponsors

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 19 — The 35th anniversary of music at South Mountain here will be celebrated with solo recitals and a major chamber music festival in September under auspices of the Coolidge Foundation and the South Mountain Association.

The first concert by Carroll Glenn, violinist, will take place Sunday at 4. Leonid Hambro, pianist, will be heard Aug. 30.

The Coolidge Festival in September will consist of five concerts Wednesday through Friday, Sept. 23-25. The Berkshire String Quartet, Kroll String Quartet and Albert Sprague Coolidge, oboe, will play Sept. 23 at 4 p.m. Sept. 24 at 11 a.m., the Bel Arte Trio, assisted by Louis Speyer, oboe, James Pappoutsakis, flute, and Lukas Foss, piano, will appear. On the same date at 4 p.m., the Hufstader Singers, accompanied by an instrumental ensemble from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present a program of choral music.

The Kroll and Berkshire quartets will appear again Sept. 25 at 11 a.m. and, at 4 p.m., Milton Katims and a chamber orchestra from the National Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra will present the concluding concert.

On Oct. 21, William Masselos, winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs' $1,000 prize will be heard in a piano recital.

...s Heard at Tanglewood Concert

...munch conducting, played Brahm's "Deutsches Requiem."

The soprano was Miss Lois Marshall of Canada, who once was afflicted with polio but it did not affect her voice. It was really lovely. The baritone was William Warfield, who toured Europe last year with the company doing "Porgy and Bess."

While over there recently I heard what a magnificent Porgy he was, and after hearing him I can well understand the enthusi...n of his audiences. His voice ...a wonderful instrument.

...was in Beacon Saturday after...n for a funeral and when I ...pped at a service station the ...n in charge told me the story ...a little girl living in the town who has been practically adopted by the whole of Beacon.

She is Patricia Ostrowski, 10 years old, a victim of leukemia. Her parents have been told the disease is incurable, but a fund has been raised in the town to do everything possible for her, keeping her alive in the hope that something will be discovered which might effect a cure.

The garageman told me he had just bought her a little bicycle, which she may not be able to use, but which certainly will lend encouragement.

He is not only trying to raise money, which is needed to do everything possible for little Patricia, but he begged me to tell her story so that the fund may grow.

Also, if there is any place in this country where new treatments may be known, such a discovery may quickly be brought to the attention of Patricia's parents.

At Sunday noon I went over to the library to meet a group of some 250 strong, mostly Cubans or those of Cuban descent, from New York City who brought along a little bust of a famous Cuban general to present to the library.

Also, the United Nations interns—students who work at the U. N. during the summer months—picnicked on my grounds at the cottage, and I answered questions for them for about an hour after lunch.

They wanted to know about my trip, about Senator McCarthy, about European and Asian conditions from the point of view of a United States traveler.

There are 49 internes, but all of them were not here on Sunday. They come from 33 countries.

[45]

Clr. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953

The new Mural Room of Tom's Villa Rosa in Woodmont, opening night, will feature an invitation Gourmet's Dinner, followed by entertainment under the direction of the television team the Bontempis—Pino and Zodo.

This beautifully appointed addition to the well-known eating place, which was at one time a waiting station and sandwich shop on the now defunct New Haven-to-Bridgeport Shore Line Trolley, seats 300 diners and boasts air-conditioning, perfect acoustics, and every other possible feature for the comfort and convenience of its patrons.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, closed the sixteenth Berkshire Festival, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony participated, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., last Sunday, with a program devoted to the symphonic works of Schubert, Wagner and Ravel.

Remarking that the season had been the most successful for the orchestra and its music school, the Berkshire Music Center manager George E. Judd listed as causes for gratification "the increasing awareness of music patrons of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from Connecticut, Hudson and Mohawk valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane; the acoustical marvels of the 6,000-seat Music Shed and the 1,152-seat Theatre-Concert Hall with their open sides which permit music lovers to overflow onto the lawns of the Tanglewood estate so that no one need be turned away; the stimulating and varied programs; the excellent press and national radio coverage by a major network; the high standard of students enrolled in the school for its eleventh season; and the favorable Berkshire weather."

ADIEU, MES AMIS: When Charles Munch left his dressing room in the Music Shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon, drawing a close to the most successful Berkshire Music Festival in 16 years, he was greeted at right by these camera fans who made several photographs of the famed conductor as he walked to his car. Plouff

Clr. (D 23,602) (S 24,091)

This Clipping From
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
AUG 18 1953

Berkshire Center Makes Known Awards

Three special cash prizes named for their donors were made known Saturday by the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival which concluded Sunday. They are the Jascha Heifetz award, the Gregor Piatigorsky award and the Samuel Wechsler commission.

On the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise the prizes have been awarded: the Heifetz award $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman, Brooklyn, and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky award of $200 to cellist Uziahu Avni, of Israel; the Wechsler commission $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Augustinas 620, Santiago Chile, a former student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is himself a former student at Tanglewood.

The awards were made known by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since its founding in 1940, at a concert Saturday afternoon by the student orchestra at the conclusion of the school's six-week season.

Clr. (D 6,200)

This Clipping From
CELINA, OHIO
DAILY STANDARD
AUG 18 1953

MUSIC

NEW YORK (U.P.) — Three weekends of Bach, Mozart, and Haydn were warm-ups for three weekends of the full Boston Symphony at the 16th Berkshire Festival in the hills of western Massachusetts.

The warm-up week-ends used members of the orchestra correctly proportioned in numbers to the scores that were performed. The Each weekend — Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon — included five of the Brandenburg concertos, the second orchestral suite, and the 28th cantata.

The Mozart concerts included the D major divertimento (K. 136), the G major violin concerto (K. 216), the serenade for 13 wind instruments (K. 361), the Sinfonia Concertante (K. 264), Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, and the "Prague" and "Jupiter" symphonies.

Isaac Stern was soloist for the Mozart; Lukas Foss, pianist, for the fifth Brandenburg. Otherwise, soloists were drawn from the orchestra — Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; and Richard Burgin, violin.

The full 104 piece orchestra began performing in the Music Shed July 31, inaugurating three weekends. Charles Munch, its musical director, conducted, assisted by Hugh Ross.

Clr. (D 3,094)

This Clipping From
LAWRENCE, MASS.
EAGLE
AUG 18 1953

PIANOS ARRIVE

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. (INS) —One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Clr. (D 35,334)

This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
AUG 18 1953

Berkshire Festival Sets Records

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 18—The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this year set new records with a total attendance of 117,950, compared with 113,300 in 1950, the previous peak. That was the year when the late Serge Koussevitsky conducted his last performances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra which he led for 25 years.

Audiences at student performances totaled 43,825, an increase of 9,425 over last year.

Attendance at the concerts given by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center school also showed substantial increases.

Receipts for 15 festival concerts, the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit and three orchestra pension fund rehearsals totaled $311,600, compared with $266,000 last year.

Clr. (D 33,690)

This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
AUG 18 1953

Sarah Lawrence Grad Wins Berkshire Prize

One of the two Heifetz Awards—$150 each—given this year at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., went to Barbara Lieberman, a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College.

Miss Lieberman, a violinist who lives in Brooklyn, and is a graduate also of the Juilliard School of Music in New York, won the prize on the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

The Berkshire center, although not a formal school, has been providing an intensive workshop in music each Summer and its annual six-week session ended Saturday.

Clr. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 18 1953

Fine Concert Ends Season At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 17 — The Berkshire Music Festival came to a spectacular close for the season Sunday musically, financially and attendance - wise.

An audience of 13,100 filled the 6,000-seat Shed and overflowed onto the green lawns, to hear Charles Munch direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Schubert (the poignant and familiar "Unfinished" Symphony); Wagner and Ravel.

His Wagner was the Prelude and Liebstod from "Tristan and Isolde;" the "Siegfried Idyll;" and excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger."

Seymour Lipkin, 26 - year-old alumnus of the music school at Tanglewood, was soloist for the taxing, incredibly brilliant Piano Concerto for the Left Hand by Maurice Ravel. Saved for the program's closing, with a fine sense of the dramatic, was Ravel's demoniac "La Valse."

Saturday night's audience, hitting 12,100, heard Leonard Bernstein, a steady, surely - maturing Bernstein, conduct three widely-different compositions, each illustrating another facet of his growing competence as a conductor. There was the Sibelius 4th Symphony; the strongly - rhythmic "Sinfonia India," by Chavez; and Brahms' Symphony No. 2.

His handling of the orchestra for the Chavez work, an exposition on Mexican Indian folk themes, was masterful and direct, with Mr. Bernstein at times appearing as a primitive dancer conveying the strength of the music from musicians to audience. Chavez, teaching at Tanglewood this summer, shared the enthusiastic applause with the young conductor.

Attendance figures for the six weeks of 1953 concerts were given at 117,950, an all-time record. Total paid admissions for the series this year was $311,600, including "Tanglewood on Parade," and three orchestra Pension Fund benefit concerts.

F.Z.

GREENFIELD, MASS
RECORDER-GAZETTE
8/20/53

Other Editors

THE NEW MUSCLE OF THE FESTIVAL

(Berkshire Eagle)

The 1953 Tanglewood season came to its customary rapturous close Sunday afternoon with the breaking of another attendance record. The Festival, if not unique, is at least unusual in its being a project that has had no recessions in its popularity. It started with a rush and has been accelerating ever since, except during the years when it was hampered by war restrictions.

In going from strength to strength it has continued to confute the doubts and predictions of the pessimists. There have been any number of jeremiads from the skeptics from year to year. It was said that novelty was the chief attraction that brought the crowds. Other explanations were curiosity, the feeling that it was the current fad, the desire of the average person to be seen there, or heard talking about it, as an aid to his cultural reputation. There were predictions when Dr. Koussevitzky died that the Tanglewood festival would go into a decline.

The decline is conspicuous by its absence. Whatever argument there may be about the relative competence of Dr. Koussevitzky and Dr. Munch, the general judgment of those who attend is that the quality of music to be heard at Tanglewood is unsurpassed at any summer festival. To what extent the 13,000 increase in paid attendance this year for fifteen Festival concerts in comparison to attendance last year may be laid to the substitution of Friday concerts for Thursday night performances can not be answered precisely. Obviously the more heavily laden bill of fare for week-enders helped at the gate. But the abolition of the Thursday night concerts was in no sense a desperate remedy. Unfortunately, serious music must operate at a deficit in this country where there is no government subsidy. The management of an orchestra can not be censured for trying to reduce that deficit to manageable proportions. The pique of the innkeepers is understandable but it has little validity. Actually, over the long run, the purposes of both are identical.

All in all Tanglewood is one of the great contributions to American culture in the 20th Century, and there is every prospect with its new muscle that it will long continue to make Berkshire proud to be its locus, whatever its inconveniences and minor irritations.

WESTPORT, CONN
TOWN CRIER
8/20/53

The new Mural Room of Tom's Villa Rosa, in Woodmont, opening night, will feature an invitation Gourmet's Dinner, followed by entertainment under the direction of the television team, the Bontempis—Pino and Fedora.

This beautifully appointed addition to the well-known eating place, which was at one time a waiting station and sandwich shop on the now defunct New Haven-to-Bridgeport Shore Line Trolley, seats 300 diners and boasts air-conditioning, perfect acoustics, and every other possible feature for the comfort and convenience of its patrons.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, closed the sixteenth Berkshire Festival, the fourteenth since the Boston Spmphony participated, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., last Sunday, with a program devoted to the symphonic works of Schubert, Wagner and Ravel.

Remarking that the season had been the most successful for the orchestra and its music school, the Berkshire Music Center manager George E. Judd listed as causes for gratification "the increasing awareness of music patrons of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from Connecticut, Hudson and Mohawk valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane; the acoustical marvels of the 6,000-seat Music Shed and the 1,152-seat Theatre-Concert Hall with their open sides which permit music lovers to overflow onto the lawns of the Tanglewood estate so that no one need be turned away; the stimulating and varied programs; the excellent press, and national radio coverage by a major network; the high standard of students enrolled in the school for its eleventh season; and the favorable Berkshire weather."

Clr. (D 23,602) (S 24,091)
This Clipping From
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
AUG 18 1953

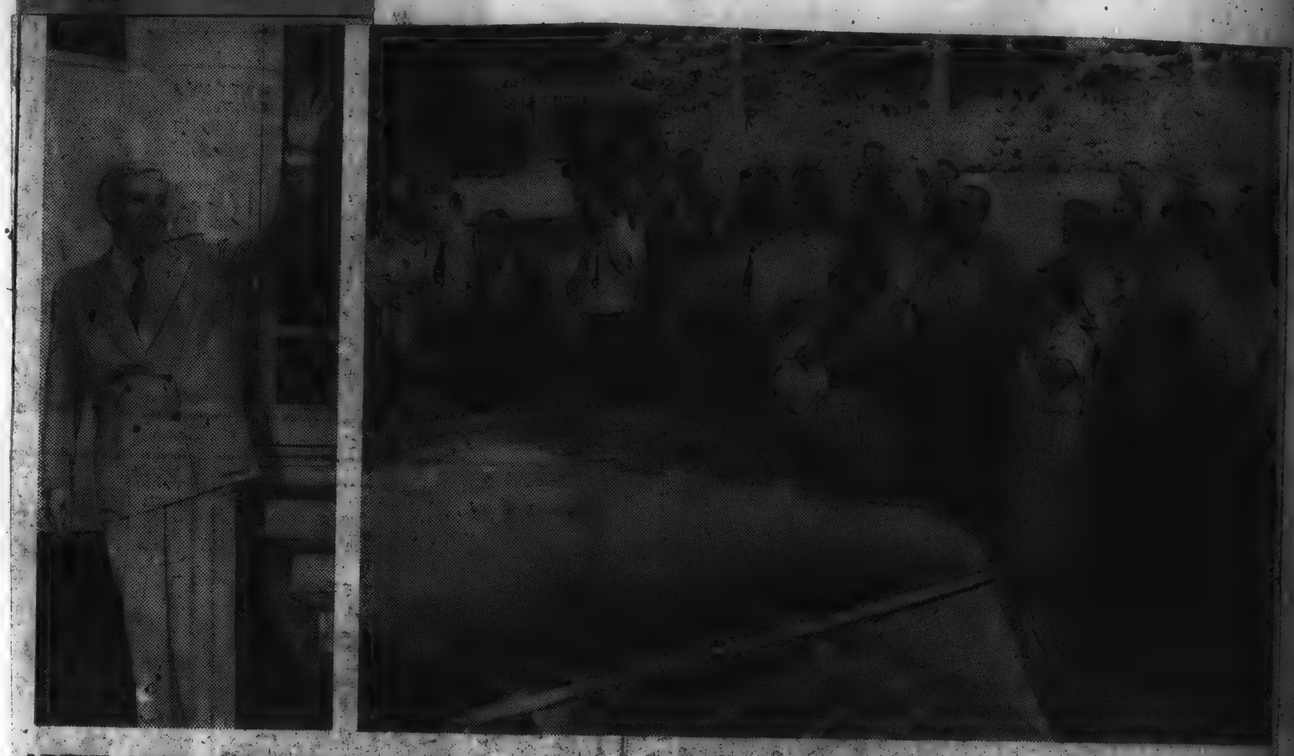
Berkshire Center Makes Known Awards

Three special cash prizes named for their donors were made known Saturday by the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival which concluded Sunday. They are the Jascha Heifetz award, the Gregor Piatigorsky award and the Samuel Wechsler commission.

On the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise the prizes have been awarded: the Heifetz award $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Lieberman, Brooklyn, and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky award, of $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, of Israel; the Wechsler commission $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Augustinas 620, Santiago Chile, a former student, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano. Mr. Wechsler is himself a former student at Tanglewood.

The awards were made known by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since its founding in 1940, at a concert Saturday afternoon by the student orchestra at the conclusion of the school's six-week season.

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 17 1953



ADIEU, MES AMIS: When Charles Munch left his dressing room in the Music Shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon, drawing a close to the most successful Berkshire Music Festival in 16 years, he was greeted at right by these camera fans who made several photographs of the famed conductor as he walked to his car.

Clr. (D 6,200)
This Clipping From
CELINA, OHIO
DAILY STANDARD
AUG 18 1953

MUSIC

NEW YORK (U.P.) — Three weekends of Bach, Mozart, and Haydn were warm-ups for three weekends of the full Boston Symphony at the 16th Berkshire Festival in the hills of western Massachusetts.

The warm-up week-ends used members of the orchestra correctly proportioned in numbers to the scores that were performed. The Bach weekend — Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon — included five of the Brandenburg concertos, the second orchestral suite, and the 28th cantata.

The Mozart concerts included the D major divertimento (K. 136), the G major violin concerto (K. 216), the serenade for 13 wind instruments (K. 361), the Sinfonia Concertante (K. 264), Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, and the "Prague" and "Jupiter" symphonies.

Isaac Stern was soloist for the Mozart; Lukas Foss, pianist, for the fifth Brandenburg. Otherwise, soloists were drawn from the orchestra — Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; and Richard Burgin, violin.

The full 104 piece orchestra began performing in the Music Shed July 31, inaugurating three weekends. Charles Munch, its musical director, conducted, assisted by Hugh Ross.

Clr. (D 38,334)
This Clipping From
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
AUG 18 1953

Berkshire Festival Sets Records

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 18—The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this year set new records with a total attendance of 117,950, compared with 113,300 in 1950, the previous peak. That was the year when the late Serge Koussevitsky conducted his last performances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra which he led for 25 years.

Audiences at student performances totaled 43,825, an increase of 2,425 over last year.

Attendance at the concerts given by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center school also showed substantial increases.

Receipts for 15 festival concerts, the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit and three orchestra pension fund rehearsals totaled $311,600, compared with $288,000 last year.

Clr. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)
This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 18 1953

Fine Concert Ends Season At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 17 — The Berkshire Music Festival came to a spectacular close for the season Sunday musically, financially and attendance - wise.

An audience of 13,100 filled the 6,000-seat Shed and overflowed onto the green lawns, to hear Charles Munch direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Schubert (the poignant and familiar "Unfinished" Symphony); Wagner and Ravel.

His Wagner was the Prelude and Liebstod from "Tristan and Isolde;" the "Siegfried Idyll;" and excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger."

Seymour Lipkin, 26 - year-old alumnus of the music school at Tanglewood, was soloist for the taxing, incredibly brilliant Piano Concerto for the Left Hand by Maurice Ravel. Saved for the program's closing, with a fine sense of the dramatic, was Ravel's demoniac "La Valse."

Saturday night's audience, hitting 12,100, heard Leonard Bernstein, a steady, surely - maturing Bernstein, conduct three widely different compositions, each illustrating another facet of his growing competence as a conductor. There was the Sibelius 4th Symphony; the strongly - rhythmic "Sinfonia India," by Chavez; and Brahms' Symphony No. 2.

His handling of the orchestra for the Chavez work, an exposition on Mexican Indian folk themes, was masterful and direct, with Mr. Bernstein at times appearing as a primitive dancer conveying the strength of the music from musicians to audience. Chavez, teaching at Tanglewood this summer, shared the enthusiastic applause with the young conductor.

Attendance figures for the six weeks of 1953 concerts were given at 117,950, an all-time record. Total paid admissions for the series this year was $311,600, including "Tanglewood on Parade," and three orchestra Pension Fund benefit concerts.

I.Z.

GREENFIELD, MASS
RECORDER-GAZETTE
8/20/53

Other Editors

THE NEW MUSCLE OF THE FESTIVAL

(Berkshire Eagle)

The 1953 Tanglewood season came to its customary rapturous close Sunday afternoon with the breaking of another attendance record. The Festival, if not unique, is at least unusual in its being a project that has had no recessions in its popularity. It started with a rush and has been accelerating ever since, except during the years when it was hampered by war restrictions.

In going from strength to strength it has continued to confute the doubts and predictions of the pessimists. There have been any number of jeremiads from the skeptics from year to year. It was said that novelty was the chief attraction that brought the crowds. Other explanations were curiosity, the feeling that it was the current fad, the desire of the average person to be seen there, or heard talking about it, as an aid to his cultural reputation. There were predictions when Dr. Koussevitzky died that the Tanglewood festival would go into a decline.

The decline is conspicuous by its absence. Whatever argument there may be about the relative competence of Dr. Koussevitzky and Dr. Munch, the general judgment of those who attend is that the quality of music to be heard at Tanglewood is unsurpassed at any summer festival. To what extent the 13,000 increase in paid attendance this year for fifteen Festival concerts in comparison to attendance last year may be laid to the substitution of Friday concerts for Thursday night performances can not be answered precisely. Obviously the more heavily laden bill of fare for week-enders helped at the gate. But the abolition of the Thursday night concerts was in no sense a desperate remedy. Unfortunately, serious music must operate at a deficit in this country where there is no government subsidy. The management of an orchestra can not be censured for trying to reduce that deficit to manageable proportions. The pique of the innkeepers is understandable but it has little validity. Actually, over the long run, the purposes of both are identical.

All in all Tanglewood is one of the great contributions to American culture in the 20th Century, and there is every prospect with its new muscle that it will long continue to make Berkshire proud to be its locus, whatever its inconveniences and minor irritations.

Clr. (D 33,690)
This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
AUG 18 1953

Sarah Lawrence Grad Wins Berkshire Prize

One of the two Heifetz Awards—$150 each—given this year at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., went to Barbara Lieberman, a graduate of Sarah Lawrence College.

Miss Lieberman, a violinist who lives in Brooklyn, and is a graduate also of the Juilliard School of Music in New York, won the prize on the basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

The Berkshire center, although not a formal school, has been providing an intensive workshop in music each Summer and its annual six-week session ended Saturday.

Clr. (D 3,094)
This Clipping From
LAWRENCE, MASS.
EAGLE
AUG 18 1953

PIANOS ARRIVE

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. (INS) —One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

[46]

Cir. (D 172,699)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor
AUG 22 1953

Seymour Lipkin, soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 23 1953

Another First for Boston

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was the first to make symphonic recordings and the first to be broadcast, will score another first next January when it will perform over a national closed-circuit television hook-up.

It will give the first of five monthly productions which will be seen in more than half a hundred theaters across the country. The miracle of electronics will bring music lovers in cities hundreds of miles apart into Symphony Hall. It will be a good thing for music and for the country. Boston should be proud to be part of this "first."

This Clipping From CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
AUG 2 3 195

Notes of Music and Musicians

Ravinia reported attendance of 6,755 for the four chamber music concerts by the Hungarian quartet and Mieczyslaw Horszowski. This compares with 9,500 for 1952 when the Budapest quartet had assistance from the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and 15,000 [illegible] when William Kapell was the guest. Back in 1949 and the old pavilion, Heifetz, Rubinstein and Piatigorsky played to more than 34,000.

• • •

Tanglewood reports an especially successful summer for the 16th Berkshire festival, both for the Boston orchestra, with a record concert attendance of 117,950, and for the music school. George E. Judd, the orchestra's manager, credited as additional lures [the first being Berkshire quality, of course], increasing awareness of Tanglewood's accessibility, the "acoustical marvels" of the 6,000 seat shed and the smaller concert hall with open sides to permit overflow on the lawns, press and radio coverage on a national scale, the high standard of Berkshire students, and the Berkshire weather.

• • •

The Louisville Orchestra, under the direction of Robert Whitney, soon to begin its 15th season, will start next Jan. 2 the weekly matinee concerts provided by the Rockefeller Foundation grant of $400,000 made last spring and designed to stretch over a four year period. Except for six weeks in April these concerts will be given thruout the year. In using the grant for a program of commissioned works, recordings and special broadcasts, the orchestra, as previously announced, will commission 28 orchestral works and two 1 hour operas annually, with 10 works being assigned to music student composers on an award basis. Composers who wish to be considered for commissions are asked to submit to the Louisville Orchestra's Commissioning Recommendation committee their names, credits, affiliations, and some background biografy. Scores of completed works should not be submitted unless requested by the committee. Long playing records made by Columbia will be issued once a month during the four year period, and will be offered on subscription only, at $65 for 12 records.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 23 1953

New Tanglewood Tale

Music Center Records Set in Attendance, Gate

By JAY S. HARRISON

From T. S. Eliot we know that April is the cruelest month. And from the concert calendar we know that August is the dullest. For here we are arrived in the doldrums, the time of year when music ceases and summer settles. The Stadium has closed, the Goldman Band departed and Tanglewood has come and gone. Now is the moment of silence.

And yet there is a final summer tale to tell—a Tanglewood tale that Hawthorne never wrote. It is the narrative of box-office receipts, attendance figures and student activity on the campus of America's most prosperous music festival. And a drama it is, for 1953 has been a record-breaking year and the breaking of records is the meat of many a yarn.

Attendance Record

First, the matter of the Berkshire Music Center's attendance statistics. Confessedly, figures are not the richest source of reading material, but they do tell a story of sorts, in this case a moving story of nationwide audiences gathered to do honor to a great orchestra, the Boston Symphony, in its summer home. At Tanglewood the total attendance over a slim period of six week ends was an incredible 117,950. In the sixteen years of the center's existence, the fourteenth since the B. S. O. has participated, no sum total ever rivaled this mass of folk. It represents, moreover, when broken down, a series of shattered records, begun, indeed, with the very first week of the symphony's concerts.

Examine. The brace of Bach concerts on July 11 and 12 saw an attendance of 7,200, the largest opening festival week-end crowd ever counted. Thereafter, audience upon audience broke record upon record. In the Theater-Concert Hall, which houses the chamber concerts of the first three weeks, the average evening audience ran to some 4,360, which indicates that more than 3,000 persons took to the Tanglewood lawns for lack of accommodation in the too-small hall. So popular, in fact, have these preliminary concerts become that there is talk now of moving them next year into the larger Music Shed whose capacity is more generous and whose comforts are more numerous.

Music Shed Crowds

And the big series also toppled existing statistics. In all probability the reason for this may be traced to the Boston Symphony's new policy of performing on three consecutive days, beginning on Friday and ending on Sunday. In the past it was the habit of the orchestra to give a concert on Thursday, another Saturday and the final one on Sunday. But many week-end vacationers were unable to attend a Thursday event and thus the series was telescoped to allow listeners to hear the most music in the shortest time. Graphically illustrated, the combined attendance catch for the big Music Shed programs since 1950, Serge Koussevitzky's last year, reads precisely like this:

1950	1951	1952	1953
89,800	89,750	85,175	91,800

Who argues with facts? Tanglewood, 1953, has been a banner year.

Even more gratifying, however, has been the response shown by music-minded tourists to the Berkshire Music Center student concerts and demonstrations of skill. Fifty-four such performances were given during the six-week period just ended and a total of 43,000 as opposed to 1952's 34,400, heard them. And even the size of the student body itself showed an increase over previous years.

Enrollment 401

The enrollment totaled 401, selected out of 1,500 applicants who had wished to make Tanglewood their summer haunt. Students came from forty-one states and twelve foreign lands to work with a faculty that included Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin and William Kroll—not to mention the Boston Symphony Orchestra's redoubtable and distinguished first-desk players. Thus it was not unusual to encounter a Parisian as concert-master of the student orchestra, a Japanese studying composition with Carlos Chavez, a Bolivian singing in the chorus, or a Swede, baton in hand, beating four-in-a-measure in preparation for a meeting with his teacher, Mr. Bernstein.

But this year the baby of the center, and its especial joy, was all the talk of the campus. The Tanglewood Study Group, set up in '52 under Ingolf Dahl for gifted amateurs who wished to spend two, four or six weeks of their vacations in the absorbtion of music, numbered 105 students. The avowed aim of the organization, "to provide an introduction to the large quantity of the best music of modest demands that is outside the regular repertory," brought to Lenox, Mass., a host of trainees devoted to their hobby though not yet professional enough to make it their day-to-day work. There were housewives, attornies, an IBM operator, an animated cartoon artists, a chemist, an organ builder, a bookstore manager, a psychiatrist—literally a cross-section of contemporary occupations. And all of them sang, played, heard concerts, made music, lived, for better or worse, the active musician's life.

What, then, does it all mean? Nothing, really, save that music is still a going concern, (the total paid admissions to Tanglewood's concerts reached a tidy $311,600); that people will fight mountains and valleys to hear it; that students will continue to study it; that its capacity to nourish the spirit remains undiminished through time. Enough? Come forward, he who asks for more.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
NEWS (B'klyn Section)
AUG 23 1953

Music Prizes to Girl Violinists

The Jascha Heifetz Awards of $150 each went to Barbara Sorlien (left) of Fargo, N. D., and Barbara Lieberman of 602 Cortelyou Road, Brooklyn, violin students at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Awards were made on basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

[47]

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor
AUG 22 1953

Seymour Lipkin, soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto for the Left Hand with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 280,829)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 23 1953

Another First for Boston

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which was the first to make symphonic recordings and the first to be broadcast, will score another first next January when it will perform over a national closed-circuit television hook-up.

It will give the first of five monthly productions which will be seen in more than half a hundred theaters across the country. The miracle of electronics will bring music lovers in cities hundreds of miles apart into Symphony Hall. It will be a good thing for music and for the country. Boston should be proud to be part of this "first."

This Clipping From CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
AUG 23 1953

Notes of Music and Musicians

Ravinia reported attendance of 6,755 for the four chamber music concerts by the Hungarian quartet and Mieczyslaw Horszowski. This compares with 9,500 for 1952 when the Budapest quartet had assisting artists from the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and 15,000 in 1951 when William Kapell was their guest. Back in 1949 and the old pavilion, Heifetz, Rubinstein, and Piatigorsky played trios for more than 34,000.

• • •

Tanglewood reports an especially successful summer for the 16th Berkshire festival, both for the Boston orchestra, with record concert attendance of 117,950, and for the music school. George E. Judd, the orchestra's manager, credited as additional lures [the first being Berkshire quality, of course], increasing awareness of Tanglewood's accessibility, the "acoustical marvels" of the 6,000 seat shed and the smaller concert hall, with open sides to permit overflow on the lawns, press and radio coverage on a national scale, the high standard of Berkshire students, and the Berkshire weather.

• • •

The Louisville, Ky., orchestra under the direction of Robert Whitney, soon to begin its 17th season, will start next Jan. 2 the weekly matinee concerts provided by the Rockefeller Foundation grant of $400,000 made last spring and designed to stretch over a four year period. Except for six weeks vacation, these concerts will be given thruout the year. In using the grant for a program of commissioned works, recordings and special broadcasts, the orchestra as previously announced, will commission 28 orchestral works and two 1 hour operas annually, with 10 works being assigned to music student composers on an award basis. Composers who wish to be considered for commissions are asked to submit to the Louisville Orchestra's Commissioning Recommendation committee their names, credits, affiliations, and some background biografy. Scores of completed works should not be submitted unless requested by the committee. Long playing records made by Columbia will be issued once a month during the four year period, and will be offered on subscription only, at $65 for 12 records.

Cir. (D 331,863) (S 567,270)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 23 1953

New Tanglewood Tale

Music Center Records Set in Attendance, Gate

By JAY S. HARRISON

From T. S. Eliot we know that April is the cruelest month. And from the concert calendar we know that August is the dullest. For here we are arrived in the doldrums, the time of year when music ceases and summer settles. The Stadium has closed, the Goldman Band departed and Tanglewood has come and gone. Now is the moment of silence.

And yet there is a final summer tale to tell—a Tanglewood tale that Hawthorne never wrote. It is the narrative of box-office receipts, attendance figures and student activity on the campus of America's most prosperous music festival. And a drama it is, for 1953 has been a record-breaking year and the breaking of records is the meat of many a yarn.

Attendance Record

First, the matter of the Berkshire Music Center's attendance statistics. Confessedly, figures are not the richest source of reading material, but they do tell a story of sorts, in this case a moving story of nationwide audiences gathered to do honor to a great orchestra, the Boston Symphony, in its summer home. At Tanglewood the total attendance over a slim period of six week ends was an incredible 117,950. In the sixteen years of the center's existence, the fourteenth since the B. S. O. has participated, no sum total ever rivaled this mass of folk. It represents, moreover, when broken down, a series of shattered records, begun, indeed, with the very first week of the symphony's concerts.

Examine. The brace of Bach concerts on July 11 and 12 saw an attendance of 7,200, the largest opening festival week-end crowd ever counted. Thereafter, audience upon audience broke record upon record. In the Theater-Concert Hall, which houses the chamber concerts of the first three weeks, the average evening audience ran to some 4,360, which indicates that more than 3,000 persons took to the Tanglewood lawns for lack of accommodation in the too-small hall. So popular, in fact, have these preliminary concerts become that there is talk now of moving them next year into the larger Music Shed whose capacity is more generous and whose comforts are more numerous.

Music Shed Crowds

And the big series also toppled existing statistics. In all probability the reason for this may be traced to the Boston Symphony's new policy of performing on three consecutive days, beginning on Friday and ending on Sunday. In the past it was the habit of the orchestra to give a concert on Thursday, another Saturday and the final one on Sunday. But many week-end vacationers were unable to attend a Thursday event and thus the series was telescoped to allow listeners to hear the most music in the shortest time. Graphically illustrated, the combined attendance catch for the big Music Shed programs since 1950, Serge Koussevitzky's last year, reads pleasingly like this:

1950	1951	1952	1953
89,800	89,750	85,175	91,800

Who argues with facts? Tanglewood, 1953, has been a banner year.

Even more gratifying, however, has been the response shown by music-minded tourists to the Berkshire Music Center student concerts and demonstrations of skill. Fifty-four such performances were given during the six-week period just ended and a total of 43,000 as opposed to 1952's 34,400, heard them. And even the size of the student body itself showed an increase over previous years.

Enrollment 401

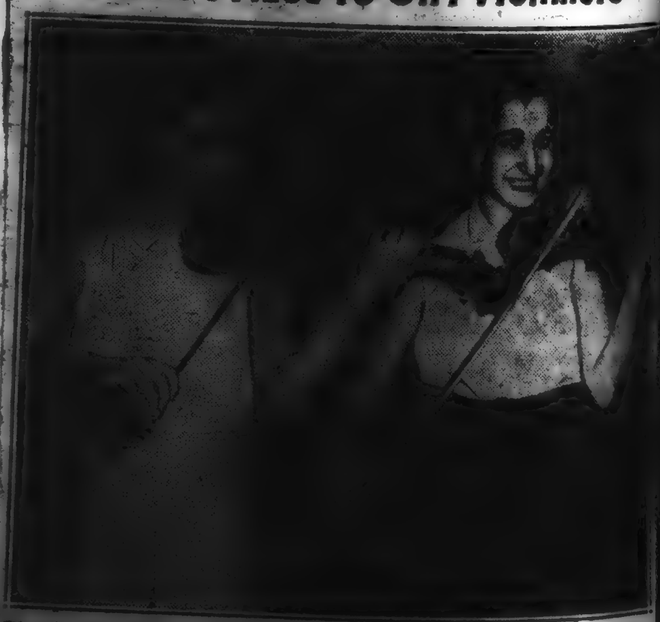
The enrollment totaled 401, selected out of 1,500 applicants who had wished to make Tanglewood their summer haunt. Students came from forty-one states and twelve foreign lands to work with a faculty that included Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin and William Kroll—not to mention the Boston Symphony Orchestra's redoubtable and distinguished first-desk players. Thus it was not unusual to encounter a Parisian as concert-master of the student orchestra, a Japanese studying composition with Carlos Chavez, a Bolivian singing in the chorus, or a Swede, baton in hand, beating four-in-a-measure in preparation for a meeting with his teacher, Mr. Bernstein.

But this year the baby of the center, and its especial joy, was all the talk of the campus. The Tanglewood Study Group, set up in '52 under Ingolf Dahl for gifted amateurs who wished to spend two, four or six weeks of their vacations in the absorption of music, numbered 105 students. The avowed aim of the organization, "to provide an introduction to the large quantity of the best music of modest demands that is outside the regular repertory," brought to Lenox, Mass., a host of trainees devoted to their hobby though not yet professional enough to make it their day-to-day work. There were housewives, attornies, an IBM operator, an animated cartoon artists, a chemist, an organ builder, a bookstore manager, a psychiatrist—literally a cross-section of contemporary occupations. And all of them sang, played, heard concerts, made music, lived, for better or worse, the active musician's life.

What, then, does it all mean? Nothing, really, save that music is still a going concern, (the total paid admissions to Tanglewood's concerts reached a tidy $311,600); that people will fight mountains and valleys to hear it; that students will continue to study it; that its capacity to nourish the spirit remains undiminished through time. Enough? Come forward, he who asks for more.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
NEWS (B'klyn Section)
AUG 23 1953

Music Prizes to Girl Violinists

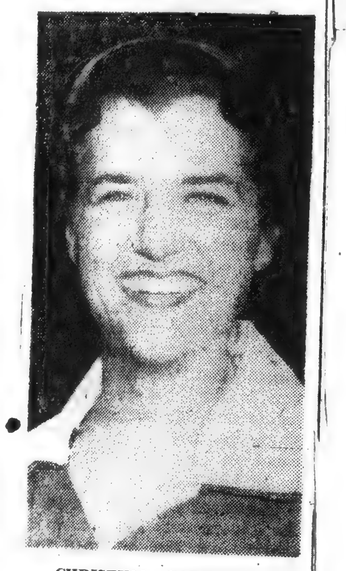


The Jascha Heifetz Awards of $150 each went to Barbara Sorlien (left) of Fargo, N. D., and Barbara Lieberman of 602 Cortelyou Road, Brooklyn, violin students at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Awards were made on basis of talent, cooperative spirit and future promise.

[47]

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 23 1953

Only a few in the audiences at the opera, "Richard the Lion Hearted," as presented by the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, realized that the lyric soprano who performed so splendidly in the role of "Laurette," the daughter of the British nobleman Sir Hugh



CHRISTINA CARDILLO

Williams, was one of Berkshire's won. The talented Christina Cardillo, a sister of Pasquale, the BSO clarinetist, is a North Adams resident. Her musical career began at Tanglewood some eight years ago. Since then she has enjoyed success in the United States and abroad.

While a scholarship student at the New England Conservatory at Boston, Christina was soloist with the Boston Symphony and Pops on many occasions. At Symphony Hall, she was heard with the BSO in Schubert's "Mass in C" and Brahm's "Requiem." For the past two years she has been in Milano, Italy, on scholarship to study under Franco Ferraris. There she was featured in operas at the Summer Theater. She returned to this country only six weeks ago.

Prior to her sailing, Miss Cardillo was offered a scholarship at Florence and a radio network contract at Pompeii. However, these were declined inasmuch as she had her heart set on a particular audition that she will make in New York City next month. Already metropolitan music critics have predicted a bright future for the North Adams girl.

The Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge will feature "Bunty Pulls the Strings," a Graham Moffat comedy, this week. Fresh from her success in "Affairs of State" at the Playhouse, Gaye Jordan will have the leading role. Other favorites in the cast will b John W. Austin, William Swar Deirdre Owens. Betty Bunce is r turning to Stockbridge for a ro in this play. Staying on from th cast of "Gigi" will be Vio Roache.

Much to the pleasure of Berkshire summer theater followers it has been announced by director William Miles that he intends to extend the season at Stockbridge an extra week. The bonus production will be a romantic comedy, "Bell, Book and Candle," by John van Druten. Remaining as the cast will be Gaye Jordan. William Roerick, William Swan and Stuart Germain.

E. H. T.

[48]

Cir. (D 260,526) (S 303,360)
This Clipping From
WASHINGTON, D. C.
TIMES-HERALD
2
AUG 23 1953

GOTHAM LETTER

Vacationing Critic Sees Coney Island In Tanglewood

BY JOHN CHAPMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.

THE summer theatrical experience of this paid playgoer and devotee of the entertainment arts have been few, because of a vacation, and disappointing, because of—well, because. I have never been a one to take a busman's holiday or a postman's day off and flitter about in the country theaters seeing packaged Pinzas and other attractions.

The only two shows I wanted to see I was forced by time and circumstances to miss—Shirley Booth in "The Time of the Cuckoo" in Central City, Colo., and Wally Cox as Erwin, the greeting-card poet of "Three Men on a Horse," in Westport, Conn., and other way stations.

After having come down out of the Adirondacks, we thirsted for culture, so a week ago Saturday we charged up to Tanglewood, Mass., the magnificent Berkshire mountains property of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Very often I had read of the summer festival of music given there each year; had read of the thousands who hear the week end concerts in the big music shed and of the additional thousands who sit on acres and acres of lawn in front of the shed and hear the performance in the great outdoors. It was high time I went to this Lewisohn stadium with grass, so we went.

WELL, it was like Coney Island with French horns. It was the temple of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, bellies, bottoms and babies. Strewn on the greensward were sunbathers with and without blankets under them, in a kaleidoscope of costumes.

The older ones slept; the youthful ones necked with an indifference to propriety that would dismay a Jones Beach guard, and the babies roughhoused and scampered. Nobody in the big yard seemed to be listening to the music—but after all it was only a nice concert by the students' symphony orchestra

Cir. (D 186,970) (S 150,268)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
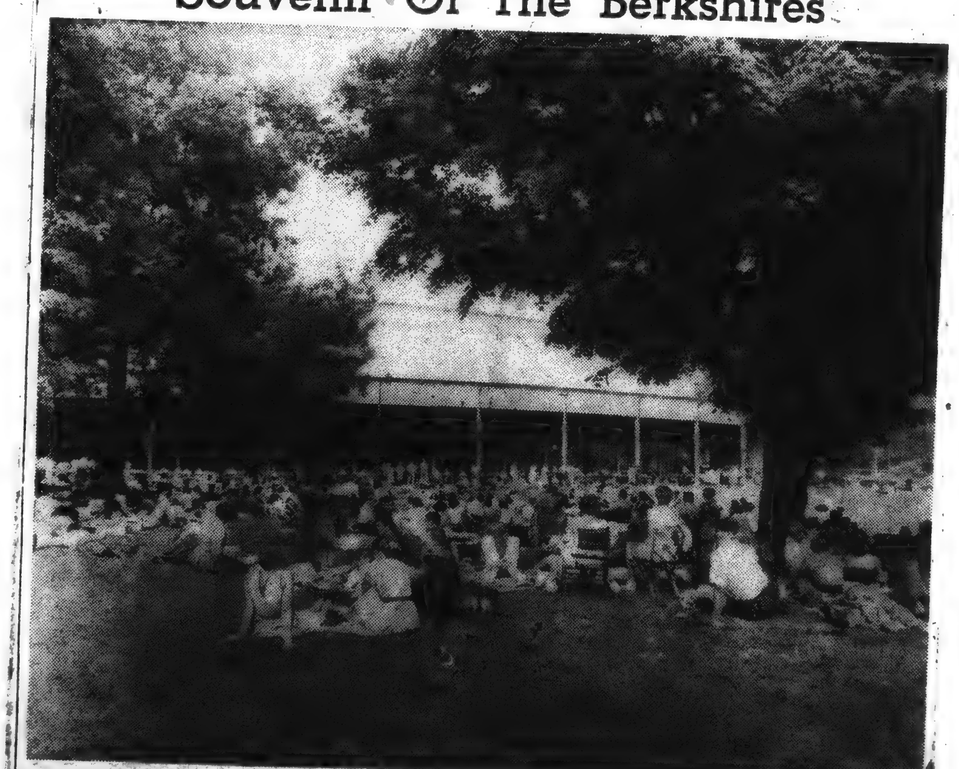
BLADE
AUG 23 1953

Souvenir Of The Berkshires



SUPPER was al fresco at Tanglewood as the crowds gathered for concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Conductor Charles Munch. A record attendance in the big Shed was chalked up by this year's festival, which ran from early July and has just closed.

Cir. (S 223,266)
This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
AUG 23 1953

Chautauqua's Many Years; 'Tanglewood' Crescendo; Lyric 'Song of Norway'

This date in music: 1904, William Primrose born in Glasgow. He became leader of the Primrose Quartet, playing the viola, and is known for recordings and concertizing, in America and abroad. He has been principal viola player with NBC Symphony.

By E. V. W.

THE 18TH SEASON of Chautauqua Institution is marked to- in Amphitheater under direction ba utauqua Symphony Orchestra. to the 100th anniversary of the ne 75th anniversary of Thomas tric light and inception of the pr hautauqua since the founding a sc

Highly Successful Berkshire Season; 117,950 Attend

Pa gifts also include composi- Hi n; and the veteran Pierre Fr nteux. Choral conductor in wi anglewood," Hugh Ross, di- lie ted the choral section of the de sic Center in six Festival con- "D ts. The opera department di- sin tor, Boris Goldovsky. du op

* * *

THE ANNUAL Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., which closed recently, was the most successful thus far for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its music school, Berkshire Music Center, according to Manager George E. Judd. In the six weeks, July 11 through Aug. 16. Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950 as compared with 104,875 in 1952. The year 1950 set a previous record when the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he had directed for 25 years.

THE STUDENT BODY in the Music Center, chosen from some 1,500 applicants, numbered 397. There were 292 full-time students from 40 states and the District of Columbia, New York leading with 76; Massachusetts next with 33 and Michigan with 18. Seven foreign countries — Canada, Israel, Italy, Japan, Korea, Mexico and Sweden were represented. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Music Center School attracted 8,400 and brought school receipts of $20,000, as against $13,000 in 1952 when 6,000 attended.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY returned to Symphony Hall, headquarters for recordings following the final "Tanglewood" concert in the great Shed. On Aug. 18, Orchestra Director Charles Munch, director also of the Berkshire Festival and conductor of many of the concerts, flew to Nice, France, for vacation until the Orchestra begins its 73d season in Boston Oct. 9. During the season in "Tanglewood," guest conductors of the Symphony were Leonard Bernstein, whose musi-

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)
This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 23 1953

Berkshire Music Festival Ends Successful Season

The 16th annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood has just ended, and its success merely confirms the undeniable truth that it is now one of the world's outstanding celebrations of great music, deserving a place beside those at Salzburg and Bayreuth.

Munch

In the six weeks from July 11 through Aug. 16, the Festival concert attendance totaled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 last year, 112,650 in 1951 and 113,300 in 1950, a record year in which the late Serge Koussevitsky conducted his last performance with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9,425 over last year. And the gala "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 persons this year, as against 6,000 in 1952.

On the musical side, Charles Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music, included in the Festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony had never performed before—Bach's Cantata No. 28 with chorus and soloists, which Hugh Ross conducted; Mozart's Divertimento in D for Strings; Haydn's "Theresa" Mass; Darious Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde"

New to Tanglewood audiences were the following: Lukas Foss' cantata, "A Parable of Death," which had its New England premiere on July 26, with Vera Zorina as narrator; Richard Strauss' "Divertimo;" Lukas Foss' revised Piano Concerto No. 2; the complete dramatic symphony by Hector Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona and John McCollum as soloists; Sibelius' Symphony No. 4 in A Minor, and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, the Mexican composer-conductor who was the Berkshire Music Center's guest teacher of composition this Summer.

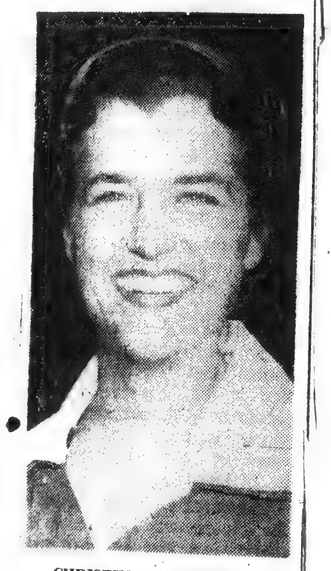
HERE AND THERE—CBS-TV wants comedian Ed Wynn to do an afternoon children's show in the Fall . . . Greatest single week's volume of business on a straight-film policy has been chalked up by "From Here to Eternity," which grossed $173,000 in its first week at the Capitol in New York . . . Ray Bolger's new TV program will have its premiere over ABC on Thursday night, Oct. 8, at 8:30.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will return to the Broadway stage in the late Fall.

PASTE OVER

Cir. (S 89,838)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 23 1953

Only a few in the audiences at the opera, "Richard the Lion Hearted," as presented by the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, realized that the lyric soprano who performed so splendidly in the role of "Laurette," the daughter of the British nobleman Sir Hugh



CHRISTINA CARDILLO

Williams, was one of Berkshire's won. The talented Christina Cardillo, a sister of Pasquale, the BSO clarinetist, is a North Adams resident. Her musical career began at Tanglewood some eight years ago. Since then she has enjoyed success in the United States and abroad.

While a scholarship student at the New England Conservatory at Boston, Christina was soloist with the Boston Symphony and Pops on many occasions. At Symphony Hall, she was heard with the BSO in Schubert's "Mass in C" and Brahm's "Requiem." For the past two years she has been in Milano, Italy, on scholarship to study under Franco Ferraris. There she was featured in operas at the Summer Theater. She returned to this country only six weeks ago.

Prior to her sailing, Miss Cardillo was offered a scholarship at Florence and a radio network contract at Pompeii. However, these were declined inasmuch as she had her heart set on a particular audition that she will make in New York City next month. Already metropolitan music critics have predicted a bright future for the North Adams girl.

The Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge will feature "Bunty Pulls the Strings," a Graham Moffat comedy, this week. Fresh from her success in "Affairs of State" at the Playhouse, Gaye Jordan will have the leading role. Other favorites in the cast will be John W. Austin, William Swan, Deirdre Owens. Betty Bunce is returning to Stockbridge for a role in this play. Staying on from the cast of "Gigi" will be Viola Roache.

Much to the pleasure of Berkshire summer theater followers it has been announced by director William Miles that he intends to extend the season at Stockbridge an extra week. The bonus production will be a romantic comedy, "Bell, Book and Candle," by John van Druten. Remaining as the cast will be Gaye Jordan. William Roerick, William Swan and Stuart Germain.

E. H. T.

Cir. (D 280,526) (S 303,360)
This Clipping From
WASHINGTON, D. C.
TIMES-HERALD
AUG 23 1953

GOTHAM LETTER

Vacationing Critic Sees Coney Island In Tanglewood

BY JOHN CHAPMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.

THE summer theatrical experience of this paid playgoer and devotee of the entertainment arts have been few, because of a vacation, and disappointing, because of—well, because. I have never been a one to take a busman's holiday or a postman's day off and flitter about in the country theaters seeing packaged Pinzas and other attractions.

The only two shows I wanted to see I was forced by time and circumstances to miss—Shirley Booth in "The Time of the Cuckoo" in Central City, Colo., and Wally Cox as Erwin, the greeting-card poet of "Three Men on a Horse," in Westport, Conn., and other way stations.

After having come down out of the Adirondacks, we thirsted for culture, so a week ago Saturday we charged up to Tanglewood, Mass., the magnificent Berkshire mountains property of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Very often I had read of the summer festival of music given there each year; had read of the thousands who hear the week end concerts in the big music shed and of the additional thousands who sit on acres and acres of lawn in front of the shed and hear the performance in the great outdoors. It was high time I went to this Lewisohn stadium with grass, so we went.

WELL, it was like Coney Island with French horns. It was the temple of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, bellies, bottoms and babies. Strewn on the greensward were sunbathers with and without blankets under them, in a kaleidoscope of costumes.

The older ones slept; the youthful ones necked with an indifference to propriety that would dismay a Jones Beach guard, and the babies roughhoused and scampered. Nobody in the big yard seemed to be listening to the music—but after all it was only a nice concert by the students' symphony orchestra under the direction of the emi nment Carlos Chavez.

There were many strangely clad and strangely shaped sunbathers at Tanglewood. Always a keen observer of the female figure, I thought for a moment that I had discovered at the Boston symphony's Camp Karefree a new type of woman—a lass in brown slacks who was very curvy but with most of her curves low and on the outside. Upon further observation, however, I noticed that she was a regular-issue girl who happened to be carrying a cello in a brown canvas case.

This was a disappointment. So was Tanglewood.

THE Broadway news for this

Cir. (S 223,266)
This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
AUG 23 1953

Chautauqua's Many Years; 'Tanglewood' Crescendo; Lyric 'Song of Norway'

This date in music: 1904, William Primrose born in Glasgow. He became leader of the Primrose Quartet, playing the viola, and is known for recordings and concertizing, in America and abroad. He has been principal viola player with NBC Symphony.

By E. V. W.

THE 18TH SEASON of Chautauqua Institution is marked to- [illegible] in the Amphitheater under direction [illegible] utauqua Symphony Orchestra. [illegible] the 100th anniversary of the [illegible] 75th anniversary of Thomas [illegible] ric light and inception of the [illegible] hautauqua since the founding [illegible]

Pa[illegible] gifts also include composi- Hi[illegible]n; and the veteran Pierre Fr[illegible]nteux. Choral conductor in wi[illegible]anglewood," Hugh Ross, die[illegible]ted the choral section of the de[illegible]sic Center in six Festival con- "D[illegible]ts. The opera department di- sin[illegible]tor, Boris Goldovsky.

du[illegible]

op[illegible]

* * *

Highly Successful Berkshire Season; 117,950 Attend

THE ANNUAL Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., which closed recently, was the most successful thus far for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its music school, Berkshire Music Center, according to Manager George E. Judd. In the six weeks, July 11 through Aug. 16. Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950 as compared with 104,875 in 1952. The year 1950 set a previous record when the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he had directed for 25 years.

THE STUDENT BODY in the Music Center, chosen from some 1,500 applicants, numbered 397. There were 292 full-time students from 40 states and the District of Columbia, New York leading with 76; Massachusetts next with 33 and Michigan with 18. Seven foreign countries — Canada, Israel, Italy, Japan, Korea, Mexico and Sweden were represented. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Music Center School attracted 8,400 and brought school receipts of $20,000, as against $13,000 in 1952 when 6,000 attended.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY returned to Symphony Hall, headquarters for recordings following the final "Tanglewood" concert in the great Shed. On Aug. 18, Orchestra Director Charles Munch, director also of the Berkshire Festival and conductor of many of the concerts, flew to Nice, France, for vacation until the Orchestra begins its 73d season in Boston Oct. 9. During the season in "Tanglewood," guest conductors of the Symphony were Leonard Bernstein, whose musi-

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)
This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 23 1953

Berkshire Music Festival Ends Successful Season

The 16th annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood has just ended, and its success merely confirms the undeniable truth that it is now one of the world's outstanding celebrations of great music, deserving a place beside those at Salzburg and Bayreuth.

Munch

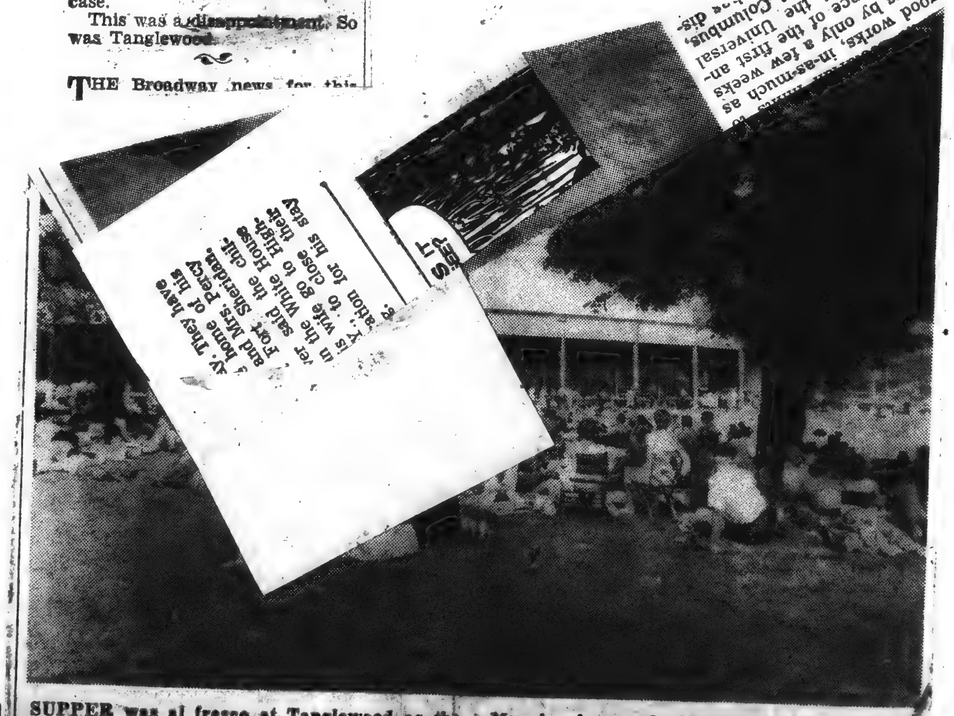
In the six weeks from July 11 through Aug. 16, the Festival concert attendance totaled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 last year, 112,650 in 1951 and 113,300 in 1950, a record year in which the late Serge Koussevitsky conducted his last performance with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9,425 over last year. And the gala "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 persons this year, as against 6,000 in 1952.

On the musical side, Charles Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music included in the Festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony had never performed before—Bach's Cantata No. 28 with chorus and soloists, which Hugh Ross conducted; Mozart's Divertimento in D for Strings; Haydn's "Theresa" Mass; Darious Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde"

New to Tanglewood audiences were the following: Lukas Foss' cantata, "A Parable of Death," which had its New England premiere on July 26, with Vera Zorina as narrator; Richard Strauss' "Divertimo;" Lukas Foss' revised Piano Concerto No. 2; the complete dramatic symphony by Hector Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," with Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona and John McCollum as soloists; Sibelius' Symphony No. 4 in A Minor, and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, the Mexican composer-conductor who was the Berkshire Music Center's guest teacher of composition this Summer.

HERE AND THERE—CBS-TV wants comedian Ed Wynn to do an afternoon children's show in the Fall . . . Greatest single week's volume of business on a straight-film policy has been chalked up by "From Here to Eternity," which grossed $173,000 in its first week at the Capitol in New York . . . Ray Bolger's new TV program will have its premiere over ABC on Thursday night, Oct. 8, at 8:30.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will return to the Broadway stage in the late Fall.



SUPPER was al fresco at Tanglewood as the crowds gathered for concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Conductor Charles Munch. A record attendance in the big Shed was chalked up by this year's festival, which ran from early July and has just closed.

[48]

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 46,046) (S 173,079)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 23 1953

Week at Annual Berkshire Music Festival Delights Critic

By RUTH TRIPP

THE little hills rejoice on every side."

So writes David in his 65th Psalm. And to hear these words in the old Lenox Congregational Church on the final beautiful Sunday of the Berkshire Festival of 1953 was to hear my extraordinary week there summarized.

I had only to look through the small panes of the meeting house window to see the burial ground where Serge Koussevitzky was laid to rest. His grave has a modest marker and near it is placed a small marble tablet, an expression of gratitude from the members of the Israel Symphony.

During the morning service, the pastor announced that through the kindness of Mme. Koussevitzky, the choir of the Russian Orthodox Cathedral of New York will come to Lenox next Saturday to sing a concert in the old church. In two years, the church will observe its sesquicentennial in the present edifice, although the church society was established long before with the founding of the town of Lenox. During the years, the church has been heated solely by two huge pot-bellied stoves at the rear of the auditorium. The forthcoming concert will raise funds to install a modern heating system.

The Berkshire Festival has done much for Lenox and the surrounding area, and the people of the area have done much for the Festival. The Psalmist is right.

Munch Is Leading Figure

The big figure of the Festival is Charles Munch. The final concert last Sunday afternoon left no doubt of that fact. He conducted Ravel's "La Valse" in what can be called its consummate performance. The audience rose to its feet, cheering. And this after a splendid and showy feat by the young American pianist Seymour Lipkin, playing Ravel's pianoforte concerto for the left hand. Here again, the orchestra and soloist were guided by the master hand of Munch.

We had heard before intermission a suave performance of Schubert's "Unfinished" and some deeply moving Wagner scores: the "Love Death," the Siegfried Idyll, and three excerpts from "Die Meistersinger."

After an absence of three seasons, I found it fascinating to go about with my ear tuned to the overtones of the Festival, vibrating in every direction. Sunday intermission was devoted to leave-taking and near me I heard, "If I can get this cast off my foot, I'll be in Morocco for the winter. Otherwise I'll go to Hawaii to be nearer my doctor." The reply, "Well, look me up on your way through California." This Berkshire Festival is taking on an international aspect.

But to go back to the day of my arrival, on Tuesday, I have to revert to 1782 and the music of the Belgian composer Gretry. The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center assisted by the Center Orchestra presented a lively performance of "Richard Coeur de Lion." The text by Sedaine had been translated by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell and the opera was conducted by Goldovsky.

In his inimitable fashion and in his best manner, he gave us a briefing. The score used by the orchestra was the original one, loaned from the archives of a museum in Belgium.

The singing and acting were excellent. Edith Fischer, soprano, of Providence was a member of the cast. Special praise is due the stagecraft of this piece as we saw it. Sets and lighting effects were completely professional. Goldovsky was in rare form as a conductor and this performance gave me a fine start for the week.

Informal Routine at Inn

At the inn where I stayed, a most informal and charming routine prevailed. The "devoted inn-keeper" has but one thought in mind, to make her guests happy. Imagine my surprise (when at breakfast), I was introduced to John Kim, an assistant conductor of the Korean Symphony. He was a student at the Berkshire Center and was living at the inn.

We talked about his work and he said his orchestra had numbered 81 but that now it was down to 60 because the Communists had captured some of the players.

I asked him if he would return to Korea. His reply was decisive and cheerful. "Oh, yes. We will still play." I asked him where and he said, "Mostly in Pusan." He pronounced it as if it were spelled Busan.

He had a 9 o'clock class and went along. At lunch time I saw him again, studying scores while he munched his sandwich in the Tanglewood Cafeteria.

Aaron Copland was moderator of the composers' forum Wednesday evening in the Chamber Music Hall. Here we heard the most controversial accomplishment of the week. How could it have been otherwise? We had a string quartet by Charles Wilson; woodwind trios by Edward Miller (well written and fortunately short); two parts of a string quintet by Malcolm Peyton; a suite from the ballet "Trichotomy" by Richard Halsey, and "Captain Ahab" for narrator and orchestra by Sherron McClellan Adrian.

Much Imitation

There was much imitation of Bartok, Berg and Copland, some of it pretty poor and all of it obvious. The "Trichotomy" was the least interesting because it was spread too thin. The subtitles, "Mercury," "Salt" and "Sulphur" revealed plainly that it was only a concoction. However, "Captain Ahab" was extremely interesting. The narrator was Mr. Silverstein of the drama department faculty at Brandeis University. The Adrian score was dramatic and forceful. I wished that we could have had Mr. Silverstein read the Melville text and then have heard the music. We heard them simultaneously.

After the concert the moderator asked for questions. Hearing none, he observed, "No questions about this questionable music?" My impression of the composers I heard at Tanglewood was not reassuring. I had the impression that some of them were more concerned with trying to look like composers than to settle in and learn the craft. I may not have attended the most representative session.

Thursday brought "Tanglewood on Parade" and a simultaneous concert in all directions. I chose to hear the student orchestra, at six, in the Shed. Harold Blumenfeld conducted Prokofieff's "Lieutenant Kije" with good, substantial style.

Uziahu Wiesel, 'cellist, played the Dvorak Concerto in B minor and the orchestra was conducted by Erno Daniel. This was very musical, although a little weak in spots.

The outstanding performance was that conducted by Herbert Blomstedt, a student conductor from Sweden. He chose Debussy's "Prelude a l'Apres-Midi d'un Faune." The orchestra gave him splendid co-operation because he gave them inspired direction. This was the outstanding student performance of the final week for me.

The last number was Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso" conducted with a sure hand by Robert Mandell.

The big concert at 8 in the shed was magnificently presented. Munch conducted a thoroughly satisfactory first half. We had Handel's "Water Music" and Beethoven's Violin Concerto, Op. 61, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Mature musicianship and artistic control featured this portion of the program and conservative elegance would best describe the style.

The second half of the program featured Leonard Bernstein conducting Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" (Act II). Soloists were Leontyne Price and William Warfield with the chorus from the Berkshire Center trained by Hugh Ross.

Bernstein was thoroughly in accord with the score and we heard what would amount to the best concert version possible of this unique work.

Miss Price sang "Summertime" as I had never heard it before. Her voice is pure and beautiful. Warfield took the roles of both Porgy and Sporting Life and made both realistic. The "Buzzard" song was thrilling. Bernstein did a wonderful job and the audience was thrilled.

Bernstein Shows Progress

Bernstein's conducting on Saturday night showed the measure of his progress. In the Brahms Symphony II, there was profound musicianship and a maturity which speaks promisingly of the stature he is attaining. He also gave us a rewarding performance of the Sibelius fourth symphony which had the peculiar advantage of a reading from one unusually sensitive to the modern idiom. As a result, the work sounded prophetic, when considered in relation to the date of its writing.

Also at this concert we heard "Symphonia India" by Carlos Chavez, who was a member of the faculty at the Center. I had heard Chavez conduct the National Symphony, as a guest, in Washington and also in Boston when Koussevitzky was host to so many famous conductors.

It would be expected that, being in the area, he would conduct his own work. I have a very good idea that Chavez chose to be a member of the audience to hear this brilliant work interpreted.

The fire and vigor which Leonard Bernstein generated with the assistance of the virtuoso group he conducted was thrilling, and here again, we had cheers from the audience.

The most serious and the heaviest work of this series was presented Friday evening when "A German Requiem" by Brahms was performed. Munch conducted the orchestra and chorus and the soloists were Lois Marshall, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone. The chorus was from the Center and gave an excellent account of its training.

From Toronto

Miss Marshall comes from Toronto. At the inn where I stayed were two energetic teachers from the same city who had come over to hear her sing. They were members of a walking club and as a part of the club's activity they had spent the previous week walking through the Green Mountains. They had come across some mutual friends recently back from Melbourne and all were agreed that the Berkshire Festival had been all right.

I enjoyed Miss Marshall's singing and marveled at her accomplishment achieved against the handicap of polio. Mr. Warfield was at his best in the second solo he had, and the choral ensemble, with two exceptions, was fine. Brahms makes severe demands on his chorus in the matter of entrances against orchestral odds.

The devotion of the Munch interpretation was one of the high points of the Festival and I thought back to the "Requiem" performances I have heard under Koussevitzky's baton in Symphony Hall and somehow the continuity of things of major importance seemed assured.

There will be younger conductors at Tanglewood in another decade to show the accomplishment Bernstein is showing. (I saw him his first season as a student conductor at the Berkshire Music Center).

There will be the high standards of achievement by Koussevitzky and Munch for these young people to aim at, and surrounding it all will be the "little hills" of Tanglewood and the inspiration they afford.

Cir. (D 8,364)
This Clipping From
GLOUCESTER, MASS.
TIMES
AUG 20 1953

Boston Symphony Attracts Average Audience of 4360

LENOX—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its music director Charles Munch, conducting, closed the 16th Berkshire Festival, the 14th since the Boston Symphony participated, in the hills of Western Massachusetts with a program devoted to the symphonic works of Schubert, Wagner and Ravel.

Remarking that the season has been the most successful for the orchestra and its music school, the Berkshire Music Center, Manager George E. Judd listed as causes for gratification "the increasing awareness of music patrons of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from Connecticut, Hudson and Mohawk valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane; the acoustical marvels of the 6,000-seat Music Shed and the 1,152-seat Theatre-Concert Hall with their open sides which permit music lovers to overflow onto the lawns of the Tanglewood estate so that no one need be turned away; the stimulating and varied programs; the excellent press and national radio coverage by a major network; the high standard of students enrolled in the school for its eleventh season; and the favorable Berkshire weather."

In six weeks, from July 11 through August 16, the Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; 113,300 in 1950, a record year when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. The audience at student performances was 43,825, an increase of 9,425 over the 34,400 a year ago. The gala "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 persons this year, as against 6,000 in 1952.

The Festival early began upsetting records. Preliminary concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, programs devoted to Bach, Mozart and Haydn in the small-capacity Theatre-Concert Hall attracted a total of 26,150 persons (1952: 19,700; 1951, 22,900; 1950, 23,500).

An average attendance of 4,360 persons attended each performance this year, which means that more than 3,000 persons per concert have sat on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or under the sun to listen to music that, until just a few years ago, could have been classified as only for special tastes. So popular, indeed, have these "small" concerts proved that the orchestra management is faced with the problem of whether or not to move them next season entirely to the large-capacity Music Shed. The brace of Bach concerts July 11-12 saw an attendance of 7,200, the largest opening Festival week-end crowd on record. The Mozart concerts, which over the years have proved the most popular in this series, were long sold out in advance. Box office receipts for these preliminary concerts totaled $58,235 an increase of 35% compared to those of 1952.

The Music Shed series (July 31-August 16) saw three weekends of three concerts each. The opening performance, July 31, attracted 10,300 persons, the largest first night in the Festival's history; despite rain threats the first Sunday afternoon program conducted by Pierre Monteux on August 2, drew 9,900, for a new record: the weekend's total 31,000 set a new high for the opening weekend. Series B (August 7-9) witnessed a near record 11,400 persons on August 8 when Leonard Bernstein conducted a memorial program for Dr. Koussevitzky, and despite a rain threat that held the Sunday afternoon August 9 figure to 9,100, established an attendance of 28,000 for the weekend. Series C (August 14-16), with favorable weather, drew 32,800 highlights being the Saturday night August 15 concert of Leonard Bernstein with an attendance of 13,100 a season's high.

[49]

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N.
NEWS (B'klyn Sec.
AUG 23

Local Musical Festivals Have Loyal Backers

By FRANK KELLY

Every Summer connoisseurs of classical music go into rapture over the music festivals at Bayreuth, Germany, and Tanglewood, Mass. They spend all kinds of money to hear the music presented at these festivals.

As far as a lot of Brooklyn and Queens residents are concerned, it's just a waste of time and money.

They both like music. Mr. and Mrs. August Lindenmann of Ridgewood, Queens, are ardent patrons of the Music Grove in Forest Park.

They have their own festival every week at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and Forest Park, Queens, and they're free.

Whole Family Goes

Harry and Dorothy Goldfarb, 3115 Brighton Fourth St., Brooklyn, have been attending the Prospect Park concerts for about 10 years. Their daughter, Marilyn, has been going since she was old enough to waddle across the floor.

"Who wants to go to Tanglewood?" Harry said. "They're a darn formal. Besides, we can appreciate the music of the masters just as much here without going into needless expense."

The August Lindenmanns, 59-04 Myrtle Ave., Ridgewood, Queens, also vouch for the park concerts. "Who wants to spend a lot of time traveling when we can just hop across the street to the Music Grove in Forest Park and hear what we like?" Lindenmann said. "Of course, we have our differences in taste. My wife likes anything, but I go in for groups."

The older generation is not the only group that favors the free concerts. Paula Mellendorf, 16, of 1468 E. 19th St., Brooklyn, a senior at Madison High School, prefers the park concerts to the others.

She Likes Dodgers, Too.

She said, "Although this is only the first year that I've gone to them at Prospect Park, I'm sure that they are almost as good as the others. Besides, who wants to leave Brooklyn, where we not only have concerts but the Dodgers?"

Of course, as far as music goes, there are some people who go because of necessity. Benedict Robbins of 97-11 118th St., Richmond Hill is one.

"My wife is the one who appreciates music in our family," he related. "Every time there is a concert scheduled she makes me take her and the kids. I usually have other things to do around the house but she makes me come anyway."

The Parks department has been putting on these concerts since before the turn of the century, which gives it about 40 years more experience than the Tanglewood group. It has to give way to the Bayreuth Festival in experience, however since that has been in business longer.

In Queens, Mrs. Mary O'Grady does the preliminary work in setting up the season's concerts and supervises them when they get under way.

The supervisory work includes printing the programs, setting up mikes and making sure the seating arrangements are okay. Mrs. Anita Reagan is the Parks Department supervisor for Brooklyn.

Cir. (D 653,252) (S 982,681)
This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 23 1953

Miles Kastendieck: Over-Capacity Crowds At Berkshire Festival

WITH the Berkshire Festival concluding its most successful season, this Tanglewood "madness" must have some method in it. The second big weekend was supposed to have been the high spot, but what happened this last weekend matched the other.

MILES KASTENDIECK

In the case of the former what was being played aroused interest; in the latter how the music fared made the difference. Charles Munch probably did more in the final concert to make people want to return than at any other time.

When at his finest, Munch compares favorably with the greatest conductors. He showed his prowess and depth of feeling in a program of familar music by Schubert, Wagner, and Ravel. Probably the secret lay in his being in just the right mood.

With the Boston Symphony responding in the fullness of its powers, the result was worth making a special trip to Tanglewood no matter what the program.

Over Capacity

To hear the B.S.O. has undoubtedly accounted for the upsurge in attendance at the festival this year. That desire coupled with just being at Tanglewood because it is a beautiful spot draws a great many people. The program policy may be a secondary matter.

Nevertheless, with the pre-shed concerts attracting an average of 3,000 people per concert beyond the capacity of the Theatre-Concert Hall, some change is in order for next season.

In passing it is worth noting that Munch this year included a number of works not previously performed by the Boston Symphony. It is worth suggesting that more attention might be given to works by American composers—even to having an entire program devoted to them.

Thing to Do

Whatever evolves, the fact remains that over 13,000 more people attended this year than last year, that the opening performance drew the largest first-night audience in festival history, that the total of 15 concerts grossed more than $300,000 to set another record.

It is apparent that "going to Tanglewood" is the thing. Since each weekend had its rewarding moments, festival crowds in coming years should not diminish in size.

The challenge now is to sustain the interest of those who have already come by planning programs judiciously in the future. Those this year had their provocative element.

Program Ends On Top Note

W. Hartford News
Aug. 19/53

A record crowd of over twelve thousand (fourteen thousand Sunday)! — including your Mr. and Mrs. News Reporter — shouted their enthusiastic approval of the final Saturday evening concert of the Boston Symphony and conductor Leonard Bernstein at Tanglewood this season. And, as if this weren't enough, there was a tumultous ten minute acclamation for school faculty member Carlos Chavez whose "Sinfonia India" — scored for water-gourds, train whistles, rasps, rattles, Indian drums, nails in bottles, rocks in automobile hub caps, firecrackers and a hundred piece symphony orchestra that is letter perfect and spirit willing-turned the balmy Berkshires into a steaming Mayan jungle, throbbing with the stark urgency of primitive man. High priest Bernstein lashed the orchestra into a sophisticated frenzy, and on the last wild crescendo came through with a clenched fist haymaker that would have knocked out Joe Louis in his prime. When he turned about to face the audience, no one would have been more than mildly surprised if he had held aloft the bleeding heart of some sacrificial offering to the Feathered Serpent. What he did hold in his hands was the obvious admiration of the mighty Boston band, and the virtual adulation of the audience.

Sibelius Fourth

The evening opened with the symphony many regarded as Sibelius' masterpiece his fourth (in A minor.)

Much great music seems to swell in a series of great tonal or thematic waves with the overpowering movement of a full sea. The Sibelius' Fourth, however, seems to this listener more like one giant wave that rolls on and on, combing here, swirling around the rocks there, flattening a bit, building up, tossing fragments of melodic spume, topping itself with fresh clean white caps, and then surging up on the coral beach, running into pools, and finally meeting evaporation on the sands. The Fourth is integrated in a marvelous way. There is always music, shifting from choir to choir, from solo instrument to section, sometimes almost imperceptibly. The first movement has touches of Brahms, but without his sentimentality. It was done with matchless perfection by the orchestra. The second movement continued the pattern.

The third movement, however, broke the spell. If what had preceded seemed analogous to the progress of one great wave of music, this movement seemed a shelf-load of bottles filled with fragments of last year's hurricanes from all the seven seas. It seemed more inventive for inventiveness' sake; and to be frank, by the time the fourth movement came to its dramatic end, I'd had it — too much of a good thing. But the miracle of the first movement, particularly as handled with such consumate skill by Bernstein and the Boston, will always be stop-short memory to the 12,100 who heard it last Saturday night.

Following the intermission, the concert concluded with Brahms Second; we're sorry not to be able to report on this as on wings of previous song we hit the homeward trail beforetimes. — R.N.B.

Cir. (D 94,031) (S 88,228)
This Clipping From MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS
AUG 23 1953

Final Pop Concert Will Feature Noted Miami 'Cellist Jean Bedetti

By EDWARD IRELAND
Miami Daily News Staff Writer

Miami's own Jean Bedetti, one of the nation's top-ranking 'cellists, will be guest soloist with the University of Miami Summer Symphony Orchestra at the 10th and final Pop Concert of the season tonight at the Miami Beach Municipal Auditorium.

John Bitter, the orchestra's No. 1 conductor, back from a four-weeks vacation, will occupy the podium.

Another big turn-out of music lovers is expected tonight and should swell total attendance for the ten concerts this summer to close to 30,000, putting the series over the top for the first time since the Pop programs were inaugurated three years ago.

JEAN BEDETTI

JOHN BITTER

French 'Cello Favorite

Bitter has lined up another fine program in keeping with the easy-listening policy which has proved such a success with Pop patrons this summer.

Bedetti, who has made frequent appearances here in recital and with the University Symphony, will play Camille Saint-Saens' Concerto in A minor.

This work of the French master is well established in the concert repertoire and has been a favorite with 'cello virtuosos since it was first performed in 1873. It is in one movement, but has three distinct sections.

The French-born Bedetti, who formerly held the chair of first 'cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has just returned to Miami from Tanglewood, where he took part in the Berkshire Music Festival concerts under the direction of Charles Munch.

Dvorak's Slavonic Dances

For his opening selection tonight, Bitter has chosen a hardy favorite from the orchestral fireworks department — Franz von Suppe's "The Light Cavalry Overture," which probably is only outranked in popularity by the same composer's "Poet and Peasant Overture."

The orchestra also will be heard in the first movement (Allegro moderato) of Franz Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, unquestionably the most popular of all symphonic works.

Another highlight of the evening's music will be two of Anton Dvorak's Slavonic Dances—No. 1 in C-major, and No. 3 in A-flat major.

Dvorak wrote these dances originally for piano (four hands), and their popularity was so great that their orchestration by the composer was compulsory.

Another of the younger Johann Strauss' delightful Viennese waltzes also has been included — this time the gay and tuneful "Tales from the Vienna Woods."

Rounding out the program will be Tchaikovsky's Overture Solenelle, 1812, which remains one of the composer's most popular works though he said of it "I wrote it without much love, on which account it is probably without much artistic value."

To Sing With Band

Miami singers Beverly and Ted Morrill, a husband and wife duo, will be heard with Caesar La Monaca at his Bayfront Park band concert next Friday evening. Both have made numerous appearances together at Florida State University, where they majored in music.

Also on the same program will be the young tenor's sister, Harriette Morrill, who is a senior at Miami Senior High School and who also intends to make a career of music.

They will sing solos and duets from Romberg's "Student Prince." The three are studying with Netta Syes Morris.

Music At Noon

The Miami Public Library, 1 Biscayne Blvd., lists the following recorded programs for its Music at Noon series this week:

TOMORROW: Brahms - Trio in E-flat (Horn Trio). Rudolf Serkin, piano; Adolf Busch, violin, and Audrey Brain, horn.

Brahms — Alto Rhapsody. Marian Anderson, contralto.

TUESDAY: Kabalevsky — Symphony No. 2 in C-minor. Orchestra of the Academy of Santa Cevilia, Rome.

Greig — Symphonic Dances. Fabien Sevitzky conducting the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra.

THURSDAY: Rossini — Overtures - Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra.

Schubert — Symphony No. 2 in B flat major. Howard Barlow conducting the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra.

FRIDAY: Beethoven — Quartet No. 13 in B-flat major. Budapest String Quartet.

Mozart — Symphony No. 28. Fritz Stien conducting Berlin Instrumental College Orchestra.

These noon-hour concerts of fine recorded music are open to the public.

Concert Time Poll

Looking ahead to next season's Pop Concerts, and to help solve one of the most annoying problems with which the conductor has to cope, the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra is polling Pop patrons on whether they would prefer to have the programs begin as now at 8 p.m., or at 8:30 p.m.

[50]

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)
This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 23 1953

Tanglewood Concerts Spur Musical Revolution in America

(Donald H. White, singer and critic of New York City and South Dartmouth, again covered the Berkshire Music Center a Tanglewood this Summer for The Standard-Times. He discusses the various features of this famous festival in the following article, written after his return from Lenox. The author has been recently granted a study scholarship with the Metropolitan Opera staff by the Kathryn Turney Long Courses of New York. He made his successful Town Hall debut there last January).

By DONALD H. WHITE

A visit to Tanglewood, Summer home of the Boston Symphony, is productive of a host of various impressions both musical and philosophical. Of the latter, we are reminded of the idea formulated gradually during our attendance at the final week of the festival: A revolution is taking place in the field of America's musical field.

White

Time was when 16th-Century madrigals were sole property of the pedagogues at collegiate libraries, the gathering places of "intelligentsia." Now, at Tanglewood, such music is enjoyed greatly AND understood by a Summer crowd on the lawn of a once privately-owned Berkshire mansion.

Operas like Mozart's "Titus" and Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" slumbered unperformed and obscure in the music libraries of Europe and the United States. Now, through the aegis of Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood Opera Department, they wake to new glories and a vogue undreamed of by their composers.

Ovation Given

Brahms was considered dull and "intellectual" not so long ago. But we were in an audience which gave an ovation to his "German Requiem" at the Berkshire Music Center which would have been unthinkable in the early years of the present century.

That Tanglewood, in its role of leading and most unique American Summer festival, has played a great part in this surge toward classical music is in line with the original intention of its founders. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951, was anxious to create a place where a great orchestra could give Summer concerts in combination with a professional music center for student participation and study.

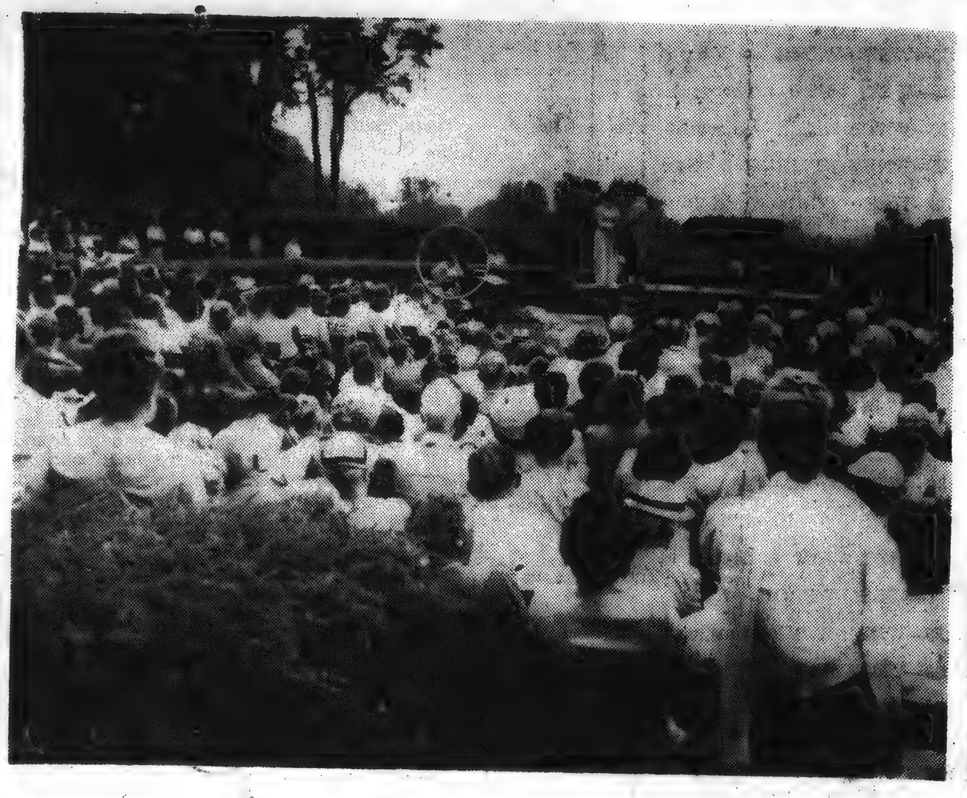
Summer music used to be limited to the environs of operetta, an occasional opera overture, symphony movements (in easily-administered doses) and much light ballet and arias of the "Celeste Aida" quality. Tanglewood changed all this in its programs under Koussevitzky.

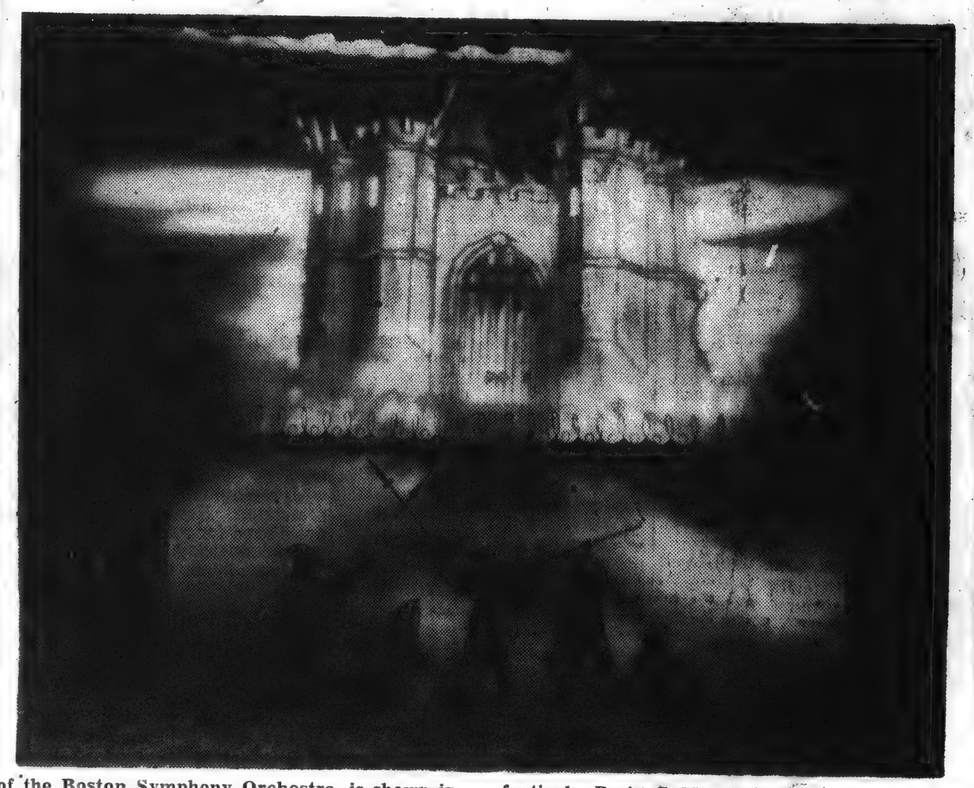
The Boston Symphony plays the same kind of repertoire it offers in Winter quarters, at Symphony Hall. Strauss' "Don Quixote," the Brahms Second, Wagner works unadulterated, the Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet"—these are to be found yearly on the programs at Tanglewood. And the works "An ovation was re-

Crescendo!

Accelerando!

Appassionato . . . soulfully gentlemen!





Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is shown in a series of rare informal photos taken during rehearsals of the orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. Other Tanglewood activities are shown in the two pictures above. Top photo shows the outdoor presentation of Chabrier's "Incomplete Education," staged Aug. 13 as part of the Tanglewood on Parade festival. Boris Goldovsky, circled, who has appeared in New Bedford, accompanies the duet by John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich. Lower photo shows a scene from Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted," also presented at Tanglewood. Stunning effect was achieved by light projection.

Allegro vivace . . . quickly, double basses, with feeling.

Careful, violins!

The woodwinds enter on cue.

Berkshire twilight. This was conducted by Herbert Blomstedt, surprisingly in control of the genre score which can puzzle far older musicians.

Each of these student conductors has his own special mannerisms and technical baton style. They may be mannered or withdrawn or as agile and acrobatic as a circus performer in beckoning response from their young colleagues. It is fascinating to watch their gradual development from mere neophyte conductors to budding virtuosi.

Later, on the broad lawn in front of the high-gabled, mid-Victorian mansion that was once a private "cottage," the Madrigal Chorus under student conductors offered an unusual informal concert. The dark, somber tones of "Lasciate mi Morire" in Monteverdi's setting evoked exquisitely the approaching Summer evening.

Satiric Comments

Hugh Ross, the very British director of the choral department offered slightly satiric comments on the music. He closely resembles a British regimental officer and one could almost see him in the bearskin shako affected by such notables. His accent is appropriately clipped and urbane.

The evening concert of "Tanglewood on Parade" featured a concert performance of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" (Act 2). Opening with a foamy and energetic reading of Handel's "Water Music," Mr. Munch continued with the Beethoven Violin Concerto, played by Isaac Stern. This was an exquisite realization of really great violin playing. Never violent in his attack, completely at ease with the problems of bowing and finger dexterity, Stern showed his virtuosity repeatedly and gained great response from his audience.

This was a welcome contrast to the steamboat tempi of the "Water Music," stirred up so briskly by conductor Munch. When the Negro soloists in the Gershwin work, William Warfield and Leontyne Price, made their appearance and Bernstein took over the podium, a treat was in store. Never before had Tanglewood audiences heard a Broadway opus (though ennobled by the title, "opera") done in the sacrosanct precincts of the Boston Symphony. It was worth the hearing, indeed. Bernstein extracted every drop of modern rhythm and pseudo-jazz tempo from its colorful pages. The soloists were cast perfectly and repeated the triumphs they have had in Europe recently with this opera.

A concert by the students orchestra offers the final movement from Mahler's "Fourth Symphony" with Anne English as soloist. This Nahant girl was heard in New Bedford last season at the Jewish Community Center. A Tanglewood student this Summer, she showed unusual tonal beauty and grasp of the German text of this ephemeral music. Earlier in the week she had appeared in the concerts given by the Opera Department I (orchestra) may be seen the conductorial gestures in miniature of their teachers—Bernstein, Munch and others. From these embryonic musicians will come tomorrow's baton wielders.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual display day for the entire center, was this year filled with an embarrassment of musical riches. Since it is impossible to be in several places at once, we again chose the student orchestra for our investigation of Tanglewood features necessarily orchestral.

The center is a place for lovers of the symhonic work in all its myriad forms and assertions. The appearance on its programs of virtually every major work in any modern repertoire is living proof of an electicism unequaled anywhere else in the United States.

To hear the future first desk men of our leading instrumental groups (and such these students become with monotonous regularity) is like attending a forecast of events. Here they play with youth and talent still fresh (as Charles Munch urged in his directions.

Appearing as guest conductor with the student orchestra was Carlos Chavez of Mexico, minister of fine arts there and conductor of the Mexico Symphony. Guest composer at Tanglewood this year, his "Sinfonia India" was performed on the Saturday night program by the Boston Symphony under Bernstein's baton.

Composer Conducts

At this concert, Chavez led another of his tone-poems — the "Sinfonia Antigona." Based on mythology, it is an orchestral work in the style of Schoenberg and Messiaen. Massively written in exploration of the mysterious new paths of modern tonality, the score is a striding, melodic thing with a unique individuality of orchestral writing. There is virile musical purpose visible in every nuance of its music. Solo passages for wind and brass abound in the colorful atmosphere.

The Chavez "Sinfonia India" was interpreted by Leonard Bernstein in a thunderously applauded performance Saturday evening. Full of native sincerity and innocent of the quirks and morasses of so many 20th-Century works, it ends with a violent report like that of a great cannon. The composer was honored by repeated calls to the stage where he bowed arm in arm with the visibly-elated Bernstein.

The activities of the Opera Department were displayed notably both in the informal "garden performances" and at opera scenes presented in the Theater-Concert Hall. Again under his broad sun umbrella upheld by a lieutenant, genial Boris Goldovsky was a spontaneous humorist who enlivened the proceedings repeatedly with greatly-enjoyed remarks.

The major scene in the gardens was Chabrier's long-ignored "Incomplete Education," a frothy piece of delicious operatic comedy with featured John McCollum, tenor, Lee Cass (of New Bedford's "Messiah" last Christmas) and Sara Mae Endich.

When the two young lovers were late in appearing for their part in the production, Mr. Goldovsky, with the welcome informality which pervades so much of the Tanglewood routine, asked the audience if they would like a little talk. When they immediately acquiesced, he proceeded to discuss the history of the work with continued instances of his agile wit and provocative accent.

Although a storm was brewing noticeably in the Berkshire skies over Lake Mahkeenac, Goldovsky permitted his singers complete freedom to continue the piece. Only when the rains began to fall did the audience become restive for the speedy completion of the performance. And just at this time, a line occured in the dialogue which could not have been better timed: "The powers of a storm are amazing!" This proved an ironic reality as the opera speeded to its close.

The final Sunday concert of the last series contained a note of nostalgia for the great audience of 13,100. Munch conducted an incandescent performance of the Schubert "Unfinished" Symphony. Later, a familiar symphonic synthesis of Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" Prelude and Liebestod was heard. The tempi chosen were too slow for our taste; this music may be drawn out and great masses of climax can be built up but the seething and gradual crescendo suffers from a lack of continual "drive."

Once More Silent

The prophetic strains of Honing performance by this symphony.

Today Tanglewood is once more a silent place. The thousands who filled its theaters and auditoriums are back in their everyday existences, with their normal problems to face.

over press wires to every leading publication in the country.

This is proof of the catholicity of an orchestra's ability but also proof of its audiences' cultural acceptance. No musical group can long survive with empty houses and red ink on the account book. This one is more secure than ever because its programs are increasingly well-attended and its spell is cast easily upon willing listeners. 126,000 of whom have officially attended the festival this year.

The three actual Boston Symphony programs which are the climax of each week's activities are only the visible professional workings of the center. If one is to really investigate what goes on behind the scenes, it is necessary to attend the student affairs, opera scenes, presentations and choral concerts which are open only to contributors to the Friends of the Boston Symphony.

There need be no great and impressive donation to this organization, created to help defray the expenses of this gigantic undertaking. A small sum buys entrance to as many as 36 student concerts throughout the season, some of which are so professional in caliber as to make the listener startled.

Primary Goal

Early in Tanglewood's history, Dr. Koussevitzky stated, "The primary object of this school is to train young musicians both as performers and as composers that they may be at one and the same time givers and receivers, administering the sacrament of

RICHARD ALDRICH'S

Cir. (100,823)
This Clipping From
Saturday Review of Literature
NEW YORK, N. Y.
1953

Recordings in Review

Some Enchanted Music

BERLIOZ: "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony. Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Margaret Roggero, contralto, Leslie Chabay, tenor, Yi-Kwei-Sze, bass, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (RCA Victor LM 6011, $11.14.)

—Fred Fehl.

Charles Munch—"long-delayed triumph."

IN HIS perceptive commentary accompanying this first complete recording of the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, Jacques Barzun observes that "it is the only large work of Berlioz's . . . which makes me feel that I want nothing different, nothing removed, nothing shorter, longer, or in another place." By the same token, it is the one large-scaled Berlioz score which sustains in its totality the imposing poetry present in isolated excerpts. The same cannot be said of other works by Berlioz. In the "Damnation of Faust," for instance, the nimble invention of the "Danses des Sylphes" and the "Menuet des Follets" does not course through the entire score; neither does the atmospheric bewitchery of "The Royal Hunt and Storm" pervade the whole of "Les Troyens." But in "Romeo and Juliet" Berlioz never lets his listeners down. From beginning to end it lives up to the lofty promise of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo or the "Scène d'amour"—which is to say that it is a masterpiece and one of the monuments of Western music.

Toscanini's recording of excerpts from "Romeo" with the NBC Symphony and Munch's similar effort with the Paris Conservatory Orchestra (for London) included, between them, most of the purely orchestral passages in the score. But they omitted all of the vocal sections; that is, the whole of the Prologue, where Berlioz introduces the thematic material he is to develop later on, and the whole of the Finale, where he crowns his "dramatic symphony" with a hymn of reconciliation, much as Beethoven, sixteen years earlier, had ended his Ninth Symphony with an ode to joy. They omitted too the poignant Funeral March, for chorus and orchestra, and the bizarre, but marvelously effective, orchestral fantasia entitled "Romeo at the Tomb of the Capulets," compounded of the half-statements, the suddenly twisting string whiplashes, and the blaring brass invocations which Berlioz so delighted in. This is not to deprecate the beauties of the previously recorded excerpts, but merely to notify the unsuspecting that there is much more to "Romeo and Juliet" than has heretofore been offered on records.

For Charles Munch this is an impressive and long-delayed triumph after a series of false starts in which RCA Victor cast him in roles for which he was indifferently suited. Ever since his first appearances here with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, he has been recognized as a Berlioz interpreter of uncommon gifts, a conductor extraordinarily responsive to the rise and fall of this composer's unique rhetoric, and possessed of an unerring ear for his kaleidoscopic scoring. Never has Munch's identification with the Berlioz idiom been more brilliantly defined than in this recording. From the turbulent eddies of the Introduction to the ringing asseveration of the final chorus, it carries the commanding imprint of a conductor who knows what to ask for and how to get it. Needless to say, the virtuosity of the Boston Symphony requires no endorsement; however, it has seldom been given such an opportunity to show off its sparkling contours. The soloists and chorus do not reach quite the same heights of accomplishment, though their work is always adequate and occasionally—as in Leslie Chabay's trippingly sung "Mab! la messagère"—distinguished.

Considering the unusual proportions of this work, both in the number of performers and in the variety of sounds they produce, RCA Victor's engineers must have experienced more than the normal quota of difficulties; nonetheless, they have obtained a recording of remarkable balance and presence. I am not sure that it embodies the Ideal Dynamic Range Suitable for Home Listening, which is one of the principal virtues claimed for the "new orthophonic recording technique." The neighbors may find the resounding, crackling fortissimos with which this recording abounds anything but ideal; high-fidelity enthusiasts, however, will relish them unreservedly.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD - TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 28 1953

Nicolai Berezowsky Services Tomorrow

Composer With CBS Since 1931

NICOLAI BEREZOWSKY.

Funeral services will be held at noon tomorrow in the Campbell Funeral Church for Nicolai Berezowsky, 53, noted conductor and composer, who was found dead yesterday in his home at 544 E. 86th St.

Since 1931 Mr. Berezowsky had been with the Columbia Broadcasting System. He had also been a guest conductor for the Cincinnati Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the National Symphony in Washington and the Boston Symphony.

Many major orchestras had played his works, which included two operas, four symphonies, seven concertos, three choral pieces and several chamber music compositions.

Born in Russia, he came to this country in 1922 and studied at the Juilliard School of Music. For a time he was a violinist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and later with the Coolidge String Quartet.

In 1944 the National Academy of Arts and Letters conferred its award on him. His work won many other honors, from the Ditson Fund at Columbia University, the Juilliard Publication Contest, the Coolidge Festival Commission, and the League of Composers and Boston Symphony Commissions.

He was an executive director of the League of Composers, a governor of the American Composers Alliance, and a member of the International Society of Contemporary Music and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Judith Randal Berezowsky, and two children by a former marriage, Mrs. Alexander Sprenger and Serge Berezowsky.

This Clipping From VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 26 1953

Berkshire Fest Ends Best Season With 311G Take

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 25.

The 16th annual Berkshire Festival, run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, near here, wound up a week ago with its best season to date, boxoffice and attendance-wise.

The Music Shed series (July 31-Aug. 16) saw three weekends of three concerts each. The opening performance (31) attracted 10,300 persons, the largest first night in the Festival's history. Despite rain threats, the first Sunday afternoon program, conducted by Pierre Monteux Aug. 2, drew 9,900, for a new record, and the weekend's 31,000 total set a new high for opening weekend. Series B (Aug. 7-9) established an attendance record of 28,000 for the weekend. Series C (Aug. 14-16) drew 32,800.

Total paid admissions for the 15 Festival concerts, "Tanglewood on Parade," and three orchestra pension fund rehearsals was $311,600, as against $268,000 for 1952; $253,200 for 1951, and $238,300 for 1950.

Cir. (D 272,693)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
TIMES-PICAYUNE-STATES
AUG 30 1953

THE COLUMN

Men of Note

Composer Stephen Foster wrote his celebrated "Old Folks at Home" before he even saw the South.

That's one of the things pointed out by Percy M. Young in his forthcoming "Biographical Dictionary of Composers," to be published by Thomas Y. Crowell Company in September.

The book reportedly will contain biographies of more than 500 composers from Abel to Wolf-Ferrari, including Americans such as Gershwin, Foster, Copland and Roy Harris. It will emphasize intrinsic performances. All this is evidence that it may be a welcome new kind of music reference dictionary.

* * *

Munch Sucess

The 16th annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by music director Charles Munch, recently closed and is described by manager George E. Judd as the most successful since its inception.

The record year, heretofore, was in 1950, when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. Munch took over the following year and attendance fell off a bit, but moved to a new high during the six-week season this summer, July 11 through Aug. 16.

CHARLES MUNCH

The concerts, which have attracted so much national attention, drew 113,300 persons in 1950, Koussevitzky's last season. Attendance dropped to 112,650 in 1951, then to 104,875 in 1952. But they zoomed to a record 117,950 this summer.

One of the prime indications of this rise in attendance, it would seem, is that the musical public, after a little indecision, has taken Munch to its heart. He certainly is proving himself one of the world's greatest conductors and it is gratifying to see such fine public response.

[52]

Cir. (D 57,751) (S 49,376)
This Clipping From
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 23 1953

Tanglewood Concerts Spur Musical Revolution in America

(Donald H. White, singer and critic of New York City and South Dartmouth, again covered the Berkshire Music Center a Tanglewood this Summer for The Standard-Times. He discusses the various features of this famous festival in the following article, written after his return from Lenox. The author has been recently granted a study scholarship with the Metropolitan Opera staff by the Kathryn Turney Long Courses of New York. He made his successful Town Hall debut there last January).

By DONALD H. WHITE

A visit to Tanglewood, Summer home of the Boston Symphony, is productive of a host of various impressions both musical and philosophical. Of the latter, we are reminded of the idea formulated gradually during our attendance at the final week of the festival: A revolution is taking place in the field of America's musical field.

White

Time was when 16th-Century madrigals were sole property of the pedagogues at collegiate libraries, the gathering places of "intelligentsia." Now, at Tanglewood, such music is enjoyed greatly AND understood by a Summer crowd on the lawn of a once privately-owned Berkshire mansion.

Operas like Mozart's "Titus" and Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" slumbered unperformed and obscure in the music libraries of Europe and the United States. Now, through the aegis of Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood Opera Department, they wake to new glories and a vogue undreamed of by their composers.

Ovation Given

Brahms was considered dull and "intellectual" not so long ago. But we were in an audience which gave an ovation to his "German Requiem" at the Berkshire Music Center which would have been unthinkable in the early years of the present century.

That Tanglewood, in its role of leading and most unique American Summer festival, has played a great part in this surge toward classical music is in line with the original intention of its founders. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951, was anxious to create a place where a great orchestra could give Summer concerts in combination with a professional music center for student participation and study.

Summer music used to be limited to the environs of operetta, an occasional opera overture, symphony movements (in easily-administered doses) and much light ballet and arias of the "Celeste Aida" quality. Tanglewood changed all this in its programs under Koussevitzky.

The Boston Symphony plays the same kind of repertoire for its listeners in Winter quarters, at Symphony Hall. Strauss' "Don Quixote," the Brahms Second, Wagner works unadulterated, the Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" these are upon willing listeners, 126,000 of whom have officially attended seven days of Symphony programs. Some of these are only the visible professional Crescendo!

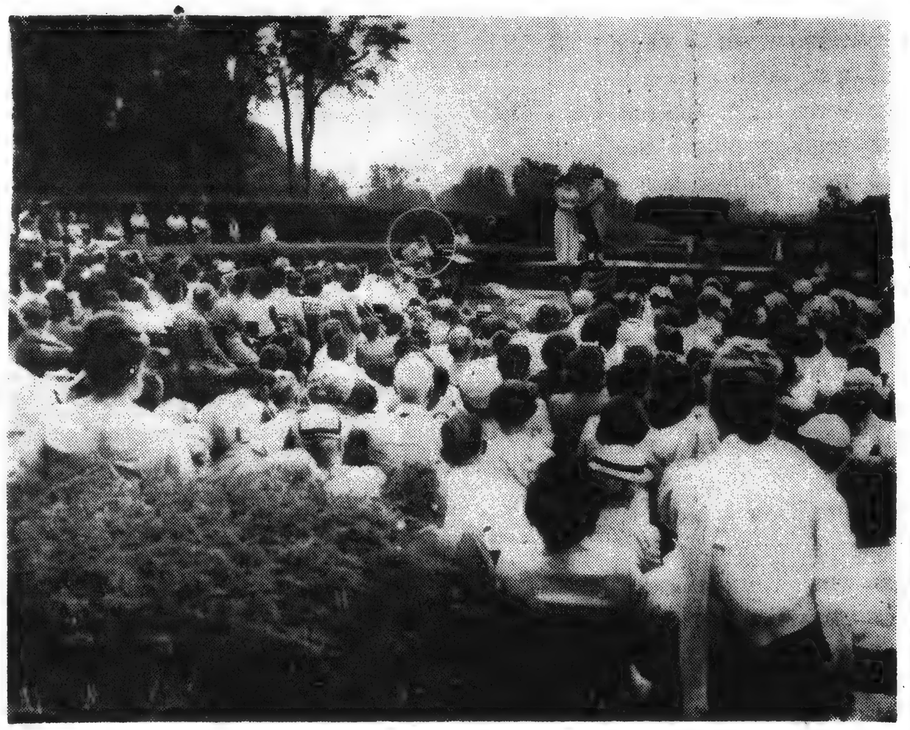
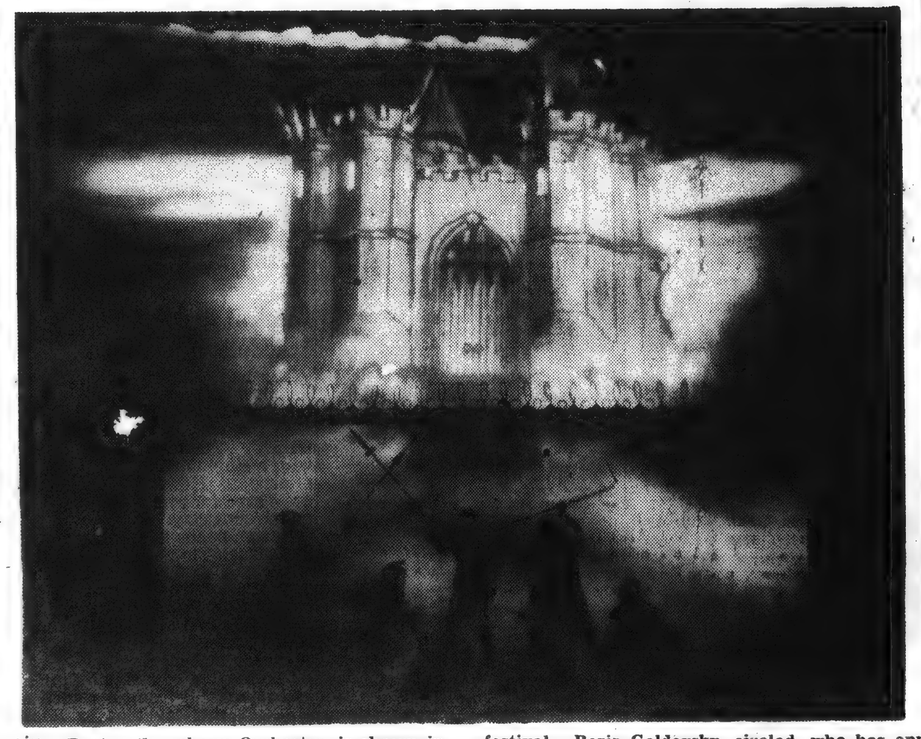
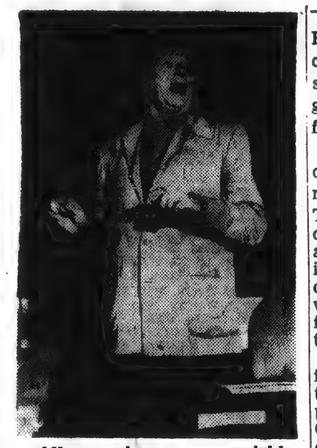
Accelerando!

Appassionato . . . soulfully gentlemen!





Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is shown in a series of rare informal photos taken during rehearsals of the orchestra at [illegible]wood, Lenox. Other Tanglewood activities are shown in the two pictures above. Top photo shows the outdoor presentation of Chabrier's "Incomplete Education," staged Aug. 13 as part of the Tanglewood on Parade festival. Boris Goldovsky, circled, who has appeared in New Bedford, accompanies the duet by John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich. Lower photo shows a scene from Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted," also presented at Tanglewood. Stunning effect was achieved by light projection.



Allegro vivace . . . quickly, double basses, with feeling.

Careful, violins!

The woodwinds enter on cue.

Berkshire twilight. This was conducted by Herbert Blomstedt, surprisingly in control of the genre score which can puzzle far older musicians.

Each of these student conductors has his own special mannerisms and technical baton style. They may be mannered, or withdrawn or as agile and acrobatic as a circus performer in beckoning response from their young colleagues. It is fascinating to watch their gradual development from mere neophyte conductors to budding virtuosi.

Later, on the broad lawn in front of the high-gabled, mid-Victorian mansion that was once a private "cottage," the Madrigal Chorus under student conductors offered an unusual informal concert. The dark, somber tones of "Lasciate mi Morire" in Monteverdi's setting evoked exquisitely the approaching Summer evening.

Satiric Comments

Hugh Ross, the very British director of the choral department offered slightly satiric comments on the music. He closely resembles a British regimental officer and one could almost see him in the bearskin shako affected by such notables. His accent is appropriately clipped and urbane.

The evening concert of "Tanglewood on Parade" featured a concert performance of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" (Act 2). Opening with a foamy and energetic reading of Handel's "Water Music," Mr. Munch continued with the Beethoven Violin Concerto, played by Isaac Stern. This was an exquisite realization of really great violin playing. Never violent in his attack, completely at ease with the problems of bowing and finger dexterity, Stern showed his virtuosity repeatedly and gained great response from his audience.

This was a welcome contrast to the steamboat tempi of the "Water Music," stirred up so briskly by conductor Munch. When the Negro soloists in the Gershwin work, William Warfield and Leontyne Price, made their appearance and Bernstein took over the podium, a treat was in store. Never before had Tanglewood audiences heard a Broadway opus (though ennobled by the title, "opera") done in the sacrosanct precincts of the Boston Symphony. It was worth the hearing, indeed. Bernstein extracted every drop of modern rhythm and pseudo-jazz tempo from its colorful pages. The soloists were cast perfectly and repeated the triumphs they have had in Europe recently with this opera.

A concert by the students orchestra offers the final movement from Mahler's "Fourth Symphony" with Anne English as soloist. This Nahant girl was heard in New Bedford last season at the Jewish Community Center. A Tanglewood student this Summer and gradual [illegible] night program by the Boston Symphony under Bernstein's baton.

Composer Conducts

At this concert, Chavez led another of his tone-poems — the "Sinfonia Antigona." Based on mythology, it is an orchestral work in the style of Schoenberg and Messiaen. Massively written in exploration of the mysterious new paths of modern tonality, the score is a striding, melodic thing with a unique individuality of orchestral writing. There is virile musical purpose visible in every nuance of its music. Solo passages for wind and brass abound in the colorful atmosphere.

The Chavez "Sinfonia India" was interpreted by Leonard Bernstein in a thunderously applauded performance Saturday evening. Full of native sincerity and innocent of the quirks and morasses of so many 20th-Century works, it ends with a violent report like that of a great cannon. The composer was honored by repeated calls to the stage where he bowed arm in arm with the visibly-elated Bernstein.

The activities of the Opera Department were displayed notably both in the informal "garden performances" and at opera scenes presented in the Theater-Concert Hall. Again under his broad sun umbrella upheld by a lieutenant, genial Boris Goldovsky was a spontaneous humorist who enlivened the proceedings repeatedly with greatly-enjoyed remarks.

The major scene in the gardens was Chabrier's long-ignored "Incomplete Education," a frothy piece of delicious operatic comedy with featured John McCollum, tenor, Lee Cass (of New Bedford's "Messiah" last Christmas) and Sara Mae Endich.

When the two young lovers were late in appearing for their part in the production, Mr. Goldovsky, with the welcome informality which pervades so much of the Tanglewood routine, asked the audience if they would like a little talk. When they immediately acquiesced, he proceeded to discuss the history of the work with continued instances of his agile wit and provocative accent.

Although a storm was brewing noticeably in the Berkshire skies over Lake Mahkeenac, Goldovsky permitted his singers complete freedom to continue the piece. Only when the rains began to fall did the audience become restive for the speedy completion of the performance. And just at this time, a line occured in the dialogue which could not have been better timed: "The powers of a storm are amazing!" This proved an ironic reality as the opera speeded to its close.

The final Sunday concert of the last series contained a note of nostalgia for the great audience of 13,100. Munch conducted an incandescent performance of the Schubert "Unfinished" Symphony. Later, a familiar symphonic synthesis of Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" Prelude and Liebestod was heard. The tempi chosen were too slow for our taste; this music may be built up but the seething [illegible] can be built up but the seething and [illegible] sensuality [illegible] music [illegible]

TIGHT BINDING
FILMED AS BOUND

[illegible] of an orchestra's ability but also proof of its audiences' cultural acceptance. No musical group can long survive with empty houses and red ink on the account book. This one is more secure than ever because its programs are increasingly well-attended and its spell is cast easily [illegible] to really investigate what goes on behind the scenes, it is necessary to attend the student affairs, opera scenes, presentations and choral concerts which are open only to contributors to the Friends of the Boston Symphony.

There need be no great and impressive donation to this organization, created to help defray the expenses of this gigantic [illegible] administering the sacrament of [illegible]

Primary Goal

Early in Tanglewood's history, Dr. Koussevitzky stated, "The primary object of this school is to train young musicians both as performers and as composers that they may be at one and the same time givers and receivers, [illegible] myriad forms and associations. The [illegible] virtually every major work in any modern repertoire is living proof of an electicism unequaled anywhere else in the United States.

To hear the future first desk men of our leading instrumental groups (and such these students become with monotonous regularity) is like attending a [illegible] Bernstein, Munch and others. From these embryonic musicians will come tomorrow's baton wielders.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual display day for the entire center, was this year filled with an embarrassment of musical [illegible] ample of deep self-association with the music chosen for his section of the program.

Also on the program was Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," especially lovely as heard in the atmosphere of an oncoming [illegible] ductor of the Mexico Symphony. Guest composer at Tanglewood this year, his "Sinfonia India" was performed on the Saturday [illegible] sands who filled its theaters and auditoriums are back in their everyday existences, with their normal problems to face.

RICHARD ALDRICH'S

This Clipping From Saturday Review of Lit
NEW YORK, N.
AUG 29 195

Re

Some Enchante

BERLIOZ: "Romeo phony. Charles the Boston Sym with Margaret Leslie Chabay, t
bass, the Harva
Radcliffe Choral
tor LM 6011, $11

IN HIS perceptiv companying this cording of the "R
Symphony, Jacque that "it is the only lioz . . . which mak want nothing diffe moved, nothing sho another place." By it is the one la score which susta
the imposing poet
lated excerpts. Th said of other work
"Damnation of F
the nimble invent
des Sylphes" and Follets" does not entire score; neith pheric bewitchery
Hunt and Storm" of "Les Troyens and Juliet" Ber listeners down.
end it lives up to the "Queen Ma
"Scène d'amour" that it is a mast
the monuments o
Toscanini's rec from "Romeo" w phony and Munch
the Paris Cons
(for London) inc most of the purel in the score. But the vocal section of the Prologue,
duces the themat develop later on the Finale, where matic symphony reconciliation, m sixteen years ear
Ninth Symphony
They omitted toc neral March, for ra, and the bizar effective, orchest
"Romeo at the lets," compounde ments, the sudd whiplashes, and vocations which
in. This is no beauties of the

Cir. (100,823)
This Clipping From
Saturday Review of Literature
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 29 1953

Recordings in Review

Some Enchanted Music

BERLIOZ: "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony. Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Margaret Roggero, contralto, Leslie Chabay, tenor, Yi-Kwei-Sze, bass, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (RCA Victor LM 6011, $11.14.)

IN HIS perceptive commentary accompanying this first complete recording of the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, Jacques Barzun observes that "it is the only large work of Berlioz's . . . which makes me feel that I want nothing different, nothing removed, nothing shorter, longer, or in another place." By the same token, it is the one large-scaled Berlioz score which sustains in its totality the imposing poetry present in isolated excerpts. The same cannot be said of other works by Berlioz. In the "Damnation of Faust," for instance, the nimble invention of the "Danses des Sylphes" and the "Menuet des Follets" does not course through the entire score; neither does the atmospheric bewitchery of "The Royal Hunt and Storm" pervade the whole of "Les Troyens." But in "Romeo and Juliet" Berlioz never lets his listeners down. From beginning to end it lives up to the lofty promise of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo or the "Scène d'amour"—which is to say that it is a masterpiece and one of the monuments of Western music.

Toscanini's recording of excerpts from "Romeo" with the NBC Symphony and Munch's similar effort with the Paris Conservatory Orchestra (for London) included, between them, most of the purely orchestral passages in the score. But they omitted all of the vocal sections; that is, the whole of the Prologue, where Berlioz introduces the thematic material he is to develop later on, and the whole of the Finale, where he crowns his "dramatic symphony" with a hymn of reconciliation, much as Beethoven, sixteen years earlier, had ended his Ninth Symphony with an ode to joy. They omitted too the poignant Funeral March, for chorus and orchestra, and the bizarre, but marvelously effective, orchestral fantasia entitled "Romeo at the Tomb of the Capulets," compounded of the half-statements, the suddenly twisting string whiplashes, and the blaring brass invocations which Berlioz so delighted in. This is not to deprecate the beauties of the previously recorded excerpts, but merely to notify the unsuspecting that there is much more to "Romeo and Juliet" than has heretofore been offered on records.

—Fred Fehl.

Charles Munch—"long-delayed triumph."

For Charles Munch this is an impressive and long-delayed triumph after a series of false starts in which RCA Victor cast him in roles for which he was indifferently suited. Ever since his first appearances here with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, he has been recognized as a Berlioz interpreter of uncommon gifts, a conductor extraordinarily responsive to the rise and fall of this composer's unique rhetoric, and possessed of an unerring ear for his kaleidoscopic scoring. Never has Munch's identification with the Berlioz idiom been more brilliantly defined than in this recording. From the turbulent eddies of the Introduction to the ringing asseveration of the final chorus, it carries the commanding imprint of a conductor who knows what to ask for and how to get it. Needless to say, the virtuosity of the Boston Symphony requires no endorsement; however, it has seldom been given such an opportunity to show off its sparkling contours. The soloists and chorus do not reach quite the same heights of accomplishment, though their work is always adequate and occasionally—as in Leslie Chabay's trippingly sung "Mab! la messagère"—distinguished.

Considering the unusual proportions of this work, both in the number of performers and in the variety of sounds they produce, RCA Victor's engineers must have experienced more than the normal quota of difficulties; nonetheless, they have obtained a recording of remarkable balance and presence. I am not sure that it embodies the Ideal Dynamic Range Suitable for Home Listening, which is one of the principal virtues claimed for the "new orthophonic recording technique." The neighbors may find the resounding, crackling fortissimos with which this recording abounds anything but ideal; high-fidelity enthusiasts, however, will relish them unreservedly.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 28 1953

Nicolai Berezowsky Services Tomorrow

Composer With CBS Since 1931

Funeral services will be held at noon tomorrow in the Campbell Funeral Church for Nicolai Berezowsky, 53, noted conductor and composer, who was found dead yesterday in his home at 544 E. 86th St.

Since 1931 Mr. Berezowsky had been with the Columbia Broadcasting System. He had also been a guest conductor for the Cincinnati Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the National Symphony in Washington and the Boston Symphony.

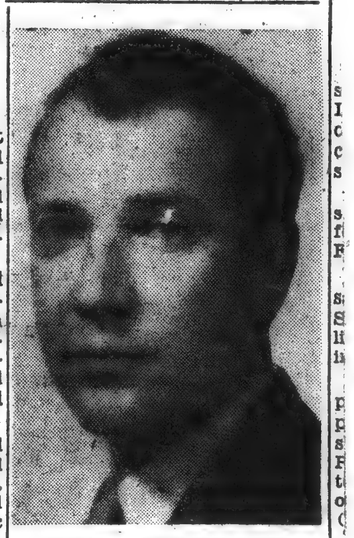
Many major orchestras had played his works, which included two operas, four symphonies, seven concertos, three choral pieces and several chamber music compositions.

Born in Russia, he came to this country in 1922 and studied at the Juilliard School of Music. For a time he was a violinist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and later with the Coolidge String Quartet.

In 1944 the National Academy of Arts and Letters conferred its award on him. His work won many other honors, from the Ditson Fund at Columbia University, the Juilliard Publication Contest, the Coolidge Festival Commission, and the League of Composers and Boston Symphony Commissions.

He was an executive director of the League of Composers, a governor of the American Composers Alliance, and a member of the International Society of Contemporary Music and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Judith Randal Berezowsky, and two children by a former marriage, Mrs. Alexander Sprenger and Serge Berezowsky.



NICOLAI BEREZOWSKY.

This Clipping From VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 26 1953

Berkshire Fest Ends Best Season With 311G Take

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 25.

The 16th annual Berkshire Festival, run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, near here, wound up a week ago with its best season to date, boxoffice and attendance-wise.

The Music Shed series (July 31-Aug. 16) saw three weekends of three concerts each. The opening performance (31) attracted 10,300 persons, the largest first night in the Festival's history. Despite rain threats, the first Sunday afternoon program, conducted by Pierre Monteux Aug. 2, drew 9,900, for a new record, and the weekend's 31,000 total set a new high for opening weekend. Series B (Aug. 7-9) established an attendance record of 28,000 for the weekend. Series C (Aug. 14-16) drew 32,800.

Total paid admissions for the 15 Festival concerts, "Tanglewood on Parade," and three orchestra pension fund rehearsals was $311,600, as against $268,000 for 1952; $253,200 for 1951, and $238,300 for 1950.

Cir. (D 272,693)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
TIMES-PICAYUNE-STATES
AUG 30 1953

THE COLUMN

Men of Note

Composer Stephen Foster wrote his celebrated "Old Folks at Home" before he even saw the South.

That's one of the things pointed out by Percy M. Young in his forthcoming "Biographical Dictionary of Composers," to be published by Thomas Y. Crowell Company in September.

The book reportedly will contain biographies of more than 500 composers from Abel to Wolf-Ferrari, including Americans such as Gershwin, Foster, Copland and Roy Harris. It will emphasize intrinsic performances. All this is evidence that it may be a welcome new kind of music reference dictionary.

* * *

Munch Sucess

The 16th annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by music director Charles Munch, recently closed and is described by manager George E. Judd as the most successful since its inception.

The record year, heretofore, was in 1950, when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. Munch took over the following year and attendance fell off a bit, but moved to a new high during the six-week season this summer, July 11 through Aug. 16.

CHARLES MUNCH

The concerts, which have attracted so much national attention, drew 113,300 persons in 1950, Koussevitzky's last season. Attendance dropped to 112,650 in 1951, then to 104,875 in 1952. But they zoomed to a record 117,950 this summer.

One of the prime indications of this rise in attendance, it would seem, is that the musical public, after a little indecision, has taken Munch to its heart. He certainly is proving himself one of the world's greatest conductors and it is gratifying to see such fine public response.

Cir. (100,823)
This Clipping From
Saturday Review of Literature
NEW YORK, N. Y.
1953

Recordings in Review

Some Enchanted Music

BERLIOZ: "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony. Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Margaret Roggero, contralto, Leslie Chabay, tenor, Yi-Kwei-Sze, bass, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (RCA Victor LM 6011, $11.14.)

—Fred Fehl.

Charles Munch—"long-delayed triumph."

IN HIS perceptive commentary accompanying this first complete recording of the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, Jacques Barzun observes that "it is the only large work of Berlioz's . . . which makes me feel that I want nothing different, nothing removed, nothing shorter, longer, or in another place." By the same token, it is the one large-scaled Berlioz score which sustains in its totality the imposing poetry present in isolated excerpts. The same cannot be said of other works by Berlioz. In the "Damnation of Faust," for instance, the nimble invention of the "Danses des Sylphes" and the "Menuet des Follets" does not course through the entire score; neither does the atmospheric bewitchery of "The Royal Hunt and Storm" pervade the whole of "Les Troyens." But in "Romeo and Juliet" Berlioz never lets his listeners down. From beginning to end it lives up to the lofty promise of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo or the "Scène d'amour"—which is to say that it is a masterpiece and one of the monuments of Western music.

Toscanini's recording of excerpts from "Romeo" with the NBC Symphony and Munch's similar effort with the Paris Conservatory Orchestra (for London) included, between them, most of the purely orchestral passages in the score. But they omitted all of the vocal sections; that is, the whole of the Prologue, where Berlioz introduces the thematic material he is to develop later on, and the whole of the Finale, where he crowns his "dramatic symphony" with a hymn of reconciliation, much as Beethoven, sixteen years earlier, had ended his Ninth Symphony with an ode to joy. They omitted too the poignant Funeral March, for chorus and orchestra, and the bizarre, but marvelously effective, orchestral fantasia entitled "Romeo at the Tomb of the Capulets," compounded of the half-statements, the suddenly twisting string whiplashes, and the blaring brass invocations which Berlioz so delighted in. This is not to deprecate the beauties of the previously recorded excerpts, but merely to notify the unsuspecting that there is much more to "Romeo and Juliet" than has heretofore been offered on records.

For Charles Munch this is an impressive and long-delayed triumph after a series of false starts in which RCA Victor cast him in roles for which he was indifferently suited. Ever since his first appearances here with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, he has been recognized as a Berlioz interpreter of uncommon gifts, a conductor extraordinarily responsive to the rise and fall of this composer's unique rhetoric, and possessed of an unerring ear for his kaleidoscopic scoring. Never has Munch's identification with the Berlioz idiom been more brilliantly defined than in this recording. From the turbulent eddies of the Introduction to the ringing asseveration of the final chorus, it carries the commanding imprint of a conductor who knows what to ask for and how to get it. Needless to say, the virtuosity of the Boston Symphony requires no endorsement; however, it has seldom been given such an opportunity to show off its sparkling contours. The soloists and chorus do not reach quite the same heights of accomplishment, though their work is always adequate and occasionally—as in Leslie Chabay's trippingly sung "Mab! la messagère"—distinguished.

Considering the unusual proportions of this work, both in the number of performers and in the variety of sounds they produce, RCA Victor's engineers must have experienced more than the normal quota of difficulties; nonetheless, they have obtained a recording of remarkable balance and presence. I am not sure that it embodies the Ideal Dynamic Range Suitable for Home Listening, which is one of the principal virtues claimed for the "new orthophonic recording technique." The neighbors may find the resounding, crackling fortissimos with which this recording abounds anything but ideal; high-fidelity enthusiasts, however, will relish them unreservedly.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 28 1953

Nicolai Berezowsky Services Tomorrow

Composer With CBS Since 1931

NICOLAI BEREZOWSKY.

Funeral services will be held at noon tomorrow in the Campbell Funeral Church for Nicolai Berezowsky, 53, noted conductor and composer, who was found dead yesterday in his home at 544 E. 86th St.

Since 1931 Mr. Berezowsky had been with the Columbia Broadcasting System. He had also been a guest conductor for the Cincinnati Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the National Symphony in Washington and the Boston Symphony.

Many major orchestras had played his works, which included two operas, four symphonies, seven concertos, three choral pieces and several chamber music compositions.

Born in Russia, he came to this country in 1922 and studied at the Juilliard School of Music. For a time he was a violinist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and later with the Coolidge String Quartet.

In 1944 the National Academy of Arts and Letters conferred its award on him. His work won many other honors, from the Ditson Fund at Columbia University, the Juilliard Publication Contest, the Coolidge Festival Commission, and the League of Composers and Boston Symphony Commissions.

He was an executive director of the League of Composers, a governor of the American Composers Alliance, and a member of the International Society of Contemporary Music and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Judith Randal Berezowsky, and two children by a former marriage, Mrs. Alexander Sprenger and Serge Berezowsky.

This Clipping From VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 26 1953

Berkshire Fest Ends Best Season With 311G Take

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 25.

The 16th annual Berkshire Festival, run by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, near here, wound up a week ago with its best season to date, boxoffice and attendance-wise.

The Music Shed series (July 31-Aug. 16) saw three weekends of three concerts each. The opening performance (31) attracted 10,300 persons, the largest first night in the Festival's history. Despite rain threats, the first Sunday afternoon program, conducted by Pierre Monteux Aug. 2, drew 9,900, for a new record, and the weekend's 31,000 total set a new high for opening weekend. Series B (Aug. 7-9) established an attendance record of 28,000 for the weekend. Series C (Aug. 14-16) drew 32,800.

Total paid admissions for the 15 Festival concerts, "Tanglewood on Parade," and three orchestra pension fund rehearsals was $311,600, as against $268,000 for 1952; $253,200 for 1951, and $238,300 for 1950.

Cir. (D 272,693)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
TIMES-PICAYUNE-STATES
AUG 30 1953

THE COLUMN

Men of Note

Composer Stephen Foster wrote his celebrated "Old Folks at Home" before he even saw the South.

That's one of the things pointed out by Percy M. Young in his forthcoming "Biographical Dictionary of Composers," to be published by Thomas Y. Crowell Company in September.

The book reportedly will contain biographies of more than 500 composers from Abel to Wolf-Ferrari, including Americans such as Gershwin, Foster, Copland and Roy Harris. It will emphasize intrinsic performances. All this is evidence that it may be a welcome new kind of music reference dictionary.

* * *

Munch Sucess

The 16th annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by music director Charles Munch, recently closed and is described by manager George E. Judd as the most successful since its inception.

The record year, heretofore, was in 1950, when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years. Munch took over the following year and attendance fell off a bit, but moved to a new high during the six-week season this summer. July 11 through Aug. 16.

CHARLES MUNCH

The concerts, which have attracted so much national attention, drew 113,300 persons in 1950, Koussevitzky's last season. Attendance dropped to 112,650 in 1951, then to 104,875 in 1952. But they zoomed to a record 117,950 this summer.

One of the prime indications of this rise in attendance, it would seem, is that the musical public, after a little indecision, has taken Munch to its heart. He certainly is proving himself one of the world's greatest conductors and it is gratifying to see such fine public response.

[52]

When Hawthorne and Melville Were Friends at Tanglewood

By JOHN N. BURK
Program Annotator
Boston Symphony Orchestra

It is sometimes hard, in the frenetic activity of Tanglewood in July and August, to visualize the Tanglewood that was so named by Nathaniel Hawthorne 100 years ago, a place scenically similar but far more placid breeding ground of arts more literary in character. Nothing has helped this visualization so well as the reconstruction, in 1948, of the "Little Red House" at the top of the pasture, where Hawthorne lived and wrote, and which was destroyed by fire in 1891. The National Federation of Music Clubs rebuilt the Little Red House in replica from old photographs and sketches. Hawthorne's letters and notebooks, some of them little known, give a vivid picture of the Tanglewood as seen and (sometimes in spite of himself) enjoyed by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

(Donald H. White, who is acting as special correspondent for The Standard-Times at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, has procured the following informative article on Nathaniel Hawthorne's life in Tanglewood during 1850 and 1851, when he rented the "Little Red House" from the Tappan Family of Highwood, the original owners of the Tanglewood Estate. In its charming and evocative amosphere of early Lenox in the time of Lowell, Melville and Hawthorne, this feature story by John N. Burk, program annotator of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is here presented for the first time to admirers of Hawthorne and the literary era he served so brilliantly).

There is no getting around Hawthorne's expressed opinion of the Berkshire weather—"This is a horrible, horrible, most horrible climate," or his discontent with his cramped quarters in the "Little Red House." A Summer cottage is not to be counted on for comfort in the Winter, when the weather is confining, and when a man has two small children, to whom a third is presently added, and a wife addicted to bric-a-brac. Finding room to turn around is a matter for ingenuity.

Longing for Sea

One could build up a case from various remarks he made, that Hawthorne was unhappy in the Berkshires. But a close examination of his letters and notebooks will make a far more convincing case for the contrary. Sometimes Hawthorne was a restless man, of varying moods. He had his moments of wishing away the hills which were his constant prospect from the Summer of 1850 to November 1851, and longing for the homely familiarity of Salem, the "flat" sea included.

Far more often he was a warmly speculative man, an idle dreamer whose idleness nevertheless bore, at its own pace, literary fruit. When an artist is assembling his material and recording it at his ease, he is fairly sure to be fundamentally content. "The House of the Seven Gables" and the old tales touched with the delight of the teller in his young audience and his natural surroundings are proof of what is more directly to be found in his recorded impressions of the slope which he named "Tanglewood," and which yielded its charm in Winter as well as Summer.

The family of four which arrived on July 5, 1850, included Julian and Una, aged 4 and 5, and a considerable quantity of family belongings. His special need was his mahogany writing desk of many cubbyholes, but Mrs. Hawthorne, whose tastes were decorative, had required a quanity of pictures and small statuary. The Hawthornes were surprised at the diminutive size of their new dwelling. Mrs. Hawthorne called it "the Herman Melville was a frequent visitor to the original of this little red cottage, left, where Nathaniel Hawthorne and his family stayed at Lenox in the Berkshires. Melville was staying at "Arrowhead," his farm in Pittsfield, rode over regularly to see the Salem-born author. At right is the "House of the Seven Gables," in Salem; Hawthorne wrote the book of the same name in the Berkshires. The little red cottage shown here is a replica; the original was destroyed by fire.

rowhead," his farm in Pittsfield, often would turn his horse's head toward Lenox while his Newfoundland dog trotted at his side. Julian remembered the "tremendous stories he used to tell about the South Sea Islands and the whale fishery.

When the narrative inspiration was upon him, he looked like all the things he was describing — savages, sea captains, the lovely Fayaway in her canoe, or the terrible Moby Dick himself." ("Moby Dick" was yet unwritten).

The children adored him and called him "Mr. Omoo," after his own story. He retaliated by calling Una "Onion." But Melville's greatest pleasure was to discuss his thoughts and aims at length with his new friend. "Have ready a bottle of brandy," he once wrote, "for I always feel like drinking that heroic drink when we talk ontological heroics together." The two would seek the privacy of the woodshed and there, side by side upon the work bench, expound views of life sacred to each. Melville spoke to none other so frankly of his dark doubts and pessimisms.

A typical day from Hawthorne's diary of July 1851 shows him walking to the village with his son. The principal errand was always an inquiry at the Post Office. "I got Mr. Tappan's mail and my own, and proceeded homeward, but clambered over the fence and sat down in Love Grove, to read the papers. While thus engaged, a cavalier on horseback came along the road and saluted me in Spanish; to which I replied by touching my hat, and went on with the newspaper. But the cavalier renewing his salutation, I regarded him more attentively, and saw that it was Herman Melville! Whereupon Julian and I hastened to the road, when ensued a greeting, and we all went homeward together, talking as we went. Soon Eugene [illegible] rapidly and was completed before January had passed. Hawthorne's publisher, Ticknor, who was as anxious as the author to bring out another novel, sent him galley proofs in February, which Hawthorne corrected in the Lenox Post Office and mailed back on the same day, and the book appeared in March.

On May 9 a daughter was born to Mrs. Hawthorne, and lay in its little crib in the parents' attic bedroom of the "Little Red House." The father wrote to Bridge, "Mrs. Hawthorne has published a little work, which still lies in sheets but makes some noise in the world; it is a healthy miss, with no present pretentions of beauty." And he wrote to his wife's sister, Elizabeth of his delight at the experience of fatherhood in his 46th year. He called his second daughter "my last and latest, my autumnal flower."

Books Sent

"The Snow Image and Other Twice-Told Tales," compiled from earlier sketches, were dispatched to Ticknor. "The Wonder Book" was written between June 5 and mid-July, an unusual manifestation of Summer activity. He would read to the children each evening what he had written during the day. Julian and Una, who had some literary precocity, recognized themselves in Primrose or Squashblossom, and they were agog when Primrose referred, in the last pages of "The Wonder Book" to "that silent man who lives in the old red house, near Herman Melville's epic "Moby Dick" hadn't been written at the time he was a regular visitor to Nathaniel Hawthorne's Berkshire retreat.

Tanglewood Avenue, and whom we sometimes meet with two children at his side, in the woods or at the lake." The physical lassitude and eager dreaming of the prose poet who allows his surroundings to command his mood is the very basis of "The Wonder Book," which was to be followed two years later by the six additional stories of the "Tanglewood Tales," written under the lingering spell of the Berkshire scene.

At the end of June 1851, Mrs. Hawthorne left for Newton to be with her sister, taking Una and Rose with her. Julian, 5, was left in the care of his father, who filled his diary with the antics of the "old man," as he called him. These two seem to have enjoyed their short respite from feminine control. So far as the small boy was concerned, the constraint having been suddenly removed of tiptoeing while baby slept, the bars were down indeed.

Hawthorne continued in his placid country routine: The two of them would be up at 6; their first chore would be to visit Luther Butler, the neighboring farmer, with a pail to be filled with milk; breakfast followed, prepared by Mrs. Peters, the colored cook who came daily to take care of them, whose loyal attentiveness was concealed by a forbidding manner which held them both in awe. After breakfast Hawthorne would make half-bungled attempts to brush and curl Julian's hair—"frizzling the old gentleman's wig" was his name for this imposed duty.

The larger party of the day was spent in walking to the village or idling about their own domain. Small Julian would attack thistles and mullein stocks with a stick—"My Knight of the Thistle," his father called him — or, with his father's help, fashion a boat from a single one with his jackknife which had been carefully blunted for the purposes of safety), and launch the proud result upon the bosom of Lake Mahkeenac. Supper might be capped by a bowl of "crushed" currants picked from their garden.

"At bed-time I indulged him in what he likes better than almost anything else — a rampageous sham battle—before undressing him; and at 7 o'clock he was finally stowed away." ("Twenty Days With Julian and Bunny: A Diary, by Nathaniel Hawthorne ---privately printed.—Bunny was the pet rabbit.)

The father's relief at the sudden silence was turned to loneliness and self-reproach, and, seated under his lamp, he poured out his feelings as his pen raced across the page. "Let me say outright for once that he is a sweet and lovely little boy, and worthy of all the love that I am capable of giving him. Thank God! God bless him God bless Phoebe for giving him to me! God bless her as the best wife and mother in the world! God bless Una whom I long to see again! God bless little Rosebud! God bless me for Phoebe's and all our sakes! No other man has so good a wife; nobody has better children. Would I were worthier of her and them!"

In spite of these noble sentiments, when another day came around and with it the interminable energies of his son, he found the intrusive chatter a little wearing. "He continues to pester me with his inquiries," wrote the father, and at another time, "He asked me just now, 'What are sensible questions?' with a view to asking me some."

Longed for Sea

The man of letters would have liked to settle under a tree with a newly published and newly arrived novel of Thackeray, borrowed from his landlord, or to have mused uninterrupted, but Julian gave him little peace. Hawthorne laid down his book not too regretfully, for what is the lifeless printed page as compared to the reality of a child's mind, with its unexpected conceits and embroidering imagination? "I read 'Pendennis' till 12, while the old boy amused himself hither and thither. I went and lay under an apple tree. Julian climbed up into the tree and sat astride of a branch. His round, merry face appeared among the green leaves, and a continual stream of babble came dripping down upon me like a Summer shower."

And yet there runs a noticeable thread of depression through these peaceful Summer days. Hawthorne was lonely for his wife. The Berkshire climate had not proved restorative, as he had hoped. He recoiled from the sudden chill which would creep into the air at sundown as the Summer waned. He could never have regretted his two rich Summers at Tanglewood, but just now a restlessness had settled upon him, an imperious desire for a change of scene and climate.

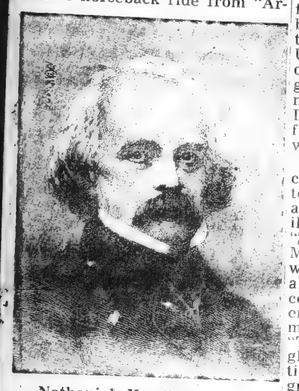
"Oh, for an east wind with a breath of salt sea in it," he wrote. Perhaps the descendant of searovers had remained too long inland. But he and the reading world were the richer for what he had found there.

[illegible] was on the whole content with his prospect of mountains, lake and woods. The boundaries of his world were for a while those of Tanglewood, but why should it be otherwise? The "Little Red House" with its beloved occupants, the barn and chicken coop, the vegetable garden obligingly plowed by his landlord, not the least the beckoning slopes below—these and the noting down of incidents about them were sufficient occupation. After a month he could write to his friend Burchmore that he had not been to the "village," nor seen a newspaper since his arrival. "I find it very agreeable to get rid of politics and the rest of the damnable turmoil that has disturbed me for three or four years past."

Solitude Ended

The solitude was doomed not to last. Lenox had not yet become a fashionable resort, but it had become a retreat for writers, one following another. James Russell Lowell had come to "Berkshire," as it was then called, with his invalid wife; Dr. Holmes had followed Lowell, and James T. Fields in turn had followed in their wake; Longfellow was established at his mansion on the edge of Pittsfield; Catherine Sedgwick, in the twilight of her literary career, conducted her finishing school for young ladies there. There were many other visitors: William Cullen Bryant, Henry Ward Beecher, John Audobon, Mrs. Sigourney and Elihu Burritt.

Hawthorne met Herman Melville that Summer, and in an astonishingly brief time the hopeful young writer of sea stories became the older man's most congenial friend and welcome visitor. Melville, making an afternoon's horseback ride from "Ar-



Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote "The House of the Seven Gables," rich in the spirit of Salem, far inland in the Berkshire hills . . . where he missed the salt air and the sea of his home town.

Drank a Cup

"I asked Mrs. Peters to make some tea for Herman Melville; and so she did, and he drank a cup, but was afraid to drink much, because it would keep him awake. After supper, I put Julian to bed; and Melville and I had a talk about time and eternity, things of this world and of the next, and all possible and impossible matters, that lasted pretty deep into the night. At last he rose, saddled his horse (whom he had put into the barn) and rode off for his own domicile, and I hastened to make the most of what little sleeping time remained for me."

James Russell Lowell was another literary light who found the Berkshires ideal. Like Melville, he was a caller at the Hawthorne home in Lenox.

Hawthorne wrote little in this first Summer except in the Notebooks, whence copious observations were to find use later on. Under the spell of the succession of dry days of a Berkshire August, he wrote, "In the afternoon, nowadays, this valley in which I dwell seems like a vast basin filled with golden sunshine as with wine."

It was in that October that he compared Monument Mountain to a "headless sphinx wrapped in a rich Persian shawl." This simile, too, was to find its way into "The Wonder Book." Monument Mountain presided daily over his willing moods, presenting itself always in some fresh guise, according to the seasons and weather. The same eminence was to make its presence felt through "The Wonder Book" and "Tanglewood Tales," for both collections were thoroughly the outgrowth of idyllic days and rambles from the lake shore to Bald Summit, the highest point of the rising ground on which he dwelt.

"The House of the Seven Gables," written wholly at Tanglewood but based upon memories of Salem, progressed

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 9 - 1953

At Tanglewood: Charles Munch, right, is the conductor of the B[illegible] Symphony Orchestra, and James Fassett produces 'The World Music Festivals' Sundays, heard at 2:30 p.m., WPRO. The series is currently broadcasting Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 172,699)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor
AUG 22 1953

Thousands at Each Concert Reflect Value of Festival

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Mass.

It's the audience that rates the headlines this summer at Tanglewood in the Bay State's Berkshire Hills. There, in the vast reaches of the Shed and on the acres of lawns outside, one sees vivid proof that fine music in America has now become the possession of the many, rather than the prerogative of the privileged few.

It is a thrilling sight, these audiences of eight, ten, or fifteen thousand listeners. Some of them may applaud between movements, others may reach extremes of informal attire, but all—whether connoisseurs or amateurs—are united in a love of good music, and all are earnest and sincere listeners.

Henry Lee Higginson built better than he knew when he founded the Boston Symphony Orchestra. And perhaps the present custodians of the trust are also building better than they know. They are shaping a bit of America at the Berkshire Music Festival, an America in which the people are elevated to higher standards of promise and achievement.

What Symphony Offers

What does the Boston Symphony offer these thousands of vacationists and week end visitors? Let's consider the final three weeks of the six-week festival.

First, there is the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of its kind and scope run by a symphony orchestra anywhere in the world. Almost every day there were performances by ensembles, choral groups, and orchestras. Many of these young students may be among the élite of tomorrow's executants, conductors, and composers. For coaches they have the principals from the orchestra, together with renowned creative and re-creative artists. Often the students turn out work that would grace any concert platform in the country.

There is also the opera department under Boris Goldovsky with its record of noted Tanglewood opera productions. Within eight days (Aug. 3-11) the group gave Gluck's "The Drunkard Reformed," Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue," and Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education" — each having one act—climaxed by an expert and diverting production of "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Grétry.

Superlative Performance

The Boston Symphony maintained and sometimes exceeded its own standards of superlative performance. There were nine concerts, on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. Charles Munch conducted six times, Pierre Monteux once, and Leonard Bernstein twice.

Mr. Munch devoted two concerts each to a single work — the Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" Dramatic Symphony, and the Brahms "German" Requiem. For the rest the conductor gave verveful and clear readings of music by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Strauss, Milhaud, Lukas Foss, Schumann, Hindemith, and Wagner, with particularly felicitous results in Schubert's Symphony No. 5 and the "Unfinished," and a beautiful reading of Samuel Barber's poignant Adagio for Strings.

Tchaikovsky Program

Mr. Monteux's Tchaikovsky program had its own features of individual conception and unconventional emphasis. As for the brilliant Mr. Bernstein, he showed a brand of virtuoso conducting that whipped the players into magical and masterful rendition. Outstanding were his versions of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony and the Sibelius Symphony No. 4. His exciting projection of the folk-flavored Sinfonia India by the Mexican composer, Carlos Chavez, drew the biggest ovation of the series.

Other Bernstein offerings included works by Moussorgsky and Ravel. If the conductor sometimes got in the way of the music by his platform mannerisms, one still left the concerts convinced of his enormous conducting talent.

Splendid individual achievement marked a galaxy of soloists —Zino Francescatti, Lukas Foss (heard in his own revised and much improved Piano Concerto No. 2), Jorge Bolet, Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, Gregor Piatigorsky, Lois Marshall, William Warfield, and Seymour Lipkin.

The choral sections were admirably done by the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

A record number of more than 180,000 persons attended the various events, with box-office receipts well over the $300,000 mark. And these figures, perhaps, sum up the whole story in neat and unmistakable terms.

abeth Sprague Coolidge, (who has done so much to promote chamber music in his vicinity) and are free to the public.

Founded in 1918, the South Mountain Festival this year celebrates its 35th anniversary with an outstanding series of eight concerts and recitals, five of them scheduled for late September, and the last featuring William Masselos, for October 21.

The first recital, on Sunday, Aug. 23, at 4 p. m., will present Carroll Glenn, violin, and Claude Chaison, harpsichord, assisted by a string quartet under the direction of Mary Hill Doolittle. On Sunday, August 30 at the same time, Leonid Hambro, pianst, will play.

All that you need to do if you wish to attend any of these concerts is to write the South Mountain Association, Pittsfield, Mass., asking for tickets and enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope, but this much is necessary or you will not be admitted the day of the concert.

Also this Sunday at 4 p. m., chamber music concerts at the Maverick in Woodstock and Music Mountain, Falls Village.

At the Theatres

Woodstock Playhouse—Aug. 25-30—"I Am a Camera," recent Broadway success.

Berkshire Playhouse—Aug. 24 to Aug. 29—"Bunty Pulls the Strings." This playhouse announces the extension of its season by a week with "Bell, Book and Candle" opening on Labor Day evening, Sept. 7.

Malden Bridge Playhouse—Aug. 26 to Aug. 31—"Detective Story."

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—Aug. 28 and 29, matinee and night, Yvonne Chouteau and Gilbert Reed, Classic Ballet; world premiere of two modern dance group works by Myra Kinch Sahomi Tacchi ana, Japanese dancer.

Cir. (D 196,041) (S 208,081)
This Clipping From PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL
AUG 16 1953

B-MIKE

BY WILLIAM MOYES

REAL B. MIKE: So now they are yackety-yacking over the proposed sports center site at Vanport because of some odor being wafted in that direction from the stockyards. I would much rather watch and listen to Liberace than watch Gorgeous George and his curls or Hans Schnabel and Mr. Moto and friends parade their bald heads, hairy chests and fat, lardy physiques before the TV camera.—S. G., Hillsboro.

★ ★ ★

REAL B. MIKE: Whatever became of Red Foley on the Barn Dance program Saturdays?—Wm. C. Wilson.
Retired w/c health.

★ ★ ★

MOYES: I agree with the gals in my neighborhood. The only difference is that Dave Levin is a real man and doesn't sound like a dying calf. Yep, I'm a gal. I suppose I'll have all the Liberace fans down my neck now.—Mrs. J. G. K., Portland.

★ ★ ★

MOYES: How about a few kind words on George Gobel, the new terrific act on the Sat. Night Revue? This guy has got them all beat.—Bob Cummings, theatrical barber.

★ ★ ★

GOBEL is strictly a post-World War II comic. As the casual, slow-paced monologuist, he didn't don greasepaint until 1946 after spending 3½ years piloting B-26s. No flying jobs available when he got out, so Lt. Gobel turned to the old guitar he had been strumming since he was a kid. He sang hillbilly songs on an early morning radio show and worked a few night clubs. Gradually, the guitar playing and singing were reduced, and his own brand of comedy expanded.

★ ★ ★

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Great Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival, in Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and three works by Wagner, on "World Music Festivals," KOIN at 10:30 a. m.

Wanda Krasoff will be piano soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Julius Rudel on KOIN at 2:30. She will perform the "Variations on a Nursery Tune" for piano and orchestra by Ernst von Dohnanyi.

★ ★ ★

STENDAL'S "The Life of Henry Brulard" comes in for discussion on "Invitation to Learning," KOIN at 7:35 a. m. with host Lyman Bryson and guests Harvey Breidt, assistant book review editor of the New York Times, and Marguerite Richards, professor of French at Rutgers.

CATSKILL, N.Y.
EXAMINER
8/20/53

Players and Pipers . . .

by John and Betty Bagley

The Tanglewood chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last Friday gave a magnificent rendition of "A German Requiem," Brahms' long choral work with text from the Lutheran Bible. Baritone William Warfield, who recently toured Europe in "Porgy and Bess," and Lois Marshall, a young Canadian soprano, sang the solos with distinction.

Continuing his policy of mixing old and new, on Saturday Mr. Munch presented the second symphony of Brahms, the fourth symphony of Sibelius, and the "Sinfonia India" by Mexican composer, Carlos Chavez, which includes folk tunes of Mexican Indians. According to Aaron Sopland, no composer has more successfully solved the problem of the complete amalgamation of folk music into an art form. We regret that we can't give a first-hand report of this piece.

On Sunday, after a restrained performance of the popular "Unfinished" symphony of Schubert; a rather perfunctory rendition of the Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde"; and a competent presentation of Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from "Meistersinger"; Mr. Munch brought us again to the 20th century. With young Seymour Lipkin expertly playing the piano, the orchestra gave us Ravel's concerto for the left hand alone. It is a tour de force, demanding the utmost agility of the left hand, but more than that, it is music with something to say. Composed as the result of a promise to a pianist who had lost an arm during the first World War, it is somber in mood, as if mirroring the pianist's disability.

The concert and season ended with Ravel's vivid choreographic poem, "La Valse." Composing in 1920, just after the war's end, the famous Frenchman wrote the waltz into this piece in as many moods as one can imagine, but below the glittering surface are the grimness and tension of a world in which victory at arms did not solve all problems. This music, as well as the elevation of spirit in the Schubert, affirmation of faith in Brahms' Requiem, and Chavez's celebration of a submerged but rising race, has significance for today.

Rolland Heermance will bring an evening of good music to Greene County on Tuesday, Sept. 1, when he directs the Catskill Valley Chorus in their sixth annual home concert at the Durham Central School. Guest artist for the evening will be Cynthia Britt Eddy, cellist, who has played at the Maverick concerts in Woodstock for several years. Sponsorship tickets, at a cost of $2. for four tickets, can be obtained in advance of the concerts from any member of the chorus, or patron tickets (two for $2.) will be available at the door.

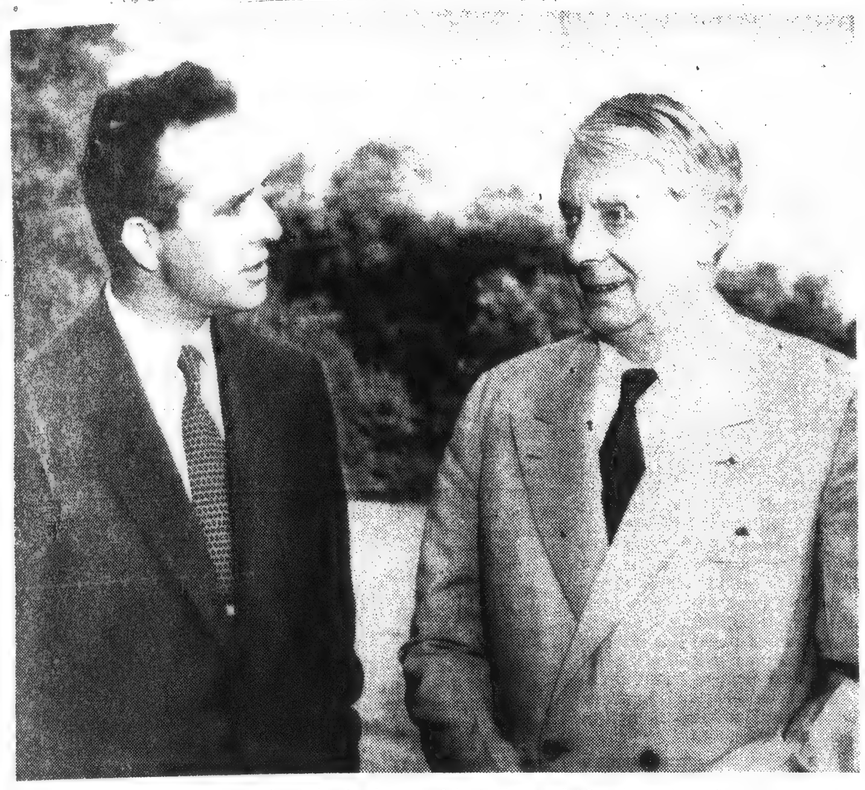
South Mountain chamber music concerts have the enviable distinction of being completely endowed by Mrs. Eliz-

Snares 'Cap
Ruhe 2d in $57,500
Washington Feature

Barnsley 2, Bradford Rovers 1.
Brentford City 2, Chesterfield 0.
Darlington 0, Port Vale 3.
Gateshead 2, Chester 1.
Hartlepools United 0, Crewe Alexandra 0.
Mansfield Town 3, Halifax Town 1.
Rochdale 1, Accrington Stanley 0.
Southport 1, York City 1.
Southern Section
Bristol Rovers 1, Watford 3, Torquay United 1.
Northern Section

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
AUG 9 - 1953



At Tanglewood: Charles Munch, right, is the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and James Fassett produces 'The World Music Festivals' Sundays, heard at 2:30 p.m., WPRO. The series is currently broadcasting Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 196,041) (S 208,081)
This Clipping From PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL
AUG 16 1953

B★MIKE

BY WILLIAM MOYES

REAL B. MIKE: So now they are yackety-yacking over the proposed sports center site at Vanport because of some odor being wafted in that direction from the stockyards.

I would much rather watch and listen to Liberace than watch Gorgeous George and his curls or Hans Schnabel and Mr. Moto and friends parade their bald heads, hairy chests and fat, lardy physiques before the TV camera.—S. G., Hillsboro.

★ ★ ★

REAL B. MIKE: Whatever became of Red Foley on the Barn Dance program Saturdays?—Wm. C. Wilson.

Retired w/c health.

★ ★ ★

MOYES: I agree with the gals in my neighborhood. The only difference is that Dave Levin is a real man and doesn't sound like a dying calf. Yep, I'm a gal. I suppose I'll have all the Liberace fans down my neck now.—Mrs. J. G. K., Portland.

★ ★ ★

MOYES: How about a few kind words on George Gobel, the new terrific act on the Sat. Night Revue? This guy has got them all beat.—Bob Cummings, theatrical barber.

★ ★ ★

GOBEL is strictly a post-World War II comic. As the casual, slow-paced monologuist, he didn't don greasepaint until 1946 after spending 3½ years piloting B-26s. No flying jobs available when he got out, so Lt. Gobel turned to the old guitar he had been strumming since he was a kid. He sang hillbilly songs on an early morning radio show and worked a few night clubs. Gradually, the guitar playing and singing were reduced, and his own brand of comedy expanded.

★ ★ ★

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Great Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival, in Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and three works by Wagner, on "World Music Festivals," KOIN at 10:30 a. m.

Wanda Krasoff will be piano soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Julius Rudel on KOIN at 2:30. She will perform the "Variations on a Nursery Tune" for piano and orchestra by Ernst von Dohnanyi.

★ ★ ★

STENDAL'S "The Life of Henry Brulard" comes in for discussion on "Invitation to Learning," KOIN at 7:35 a. m. with host Lyman Bryson and guests Harvey Breidt, assistant book review editor of the New York Times, and Marguerite Richards, professor of French at Rutgers.

CATSKILL, N.Y.
EXAMINER
12/53

Players and Pipers . . .

by John and Betty Bagley

The Tanglewood chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last Friday gave a magnificent rendition of "A German Requiem," Brahms' long choral work with text from the Lutheran Bible. Baritone William Warfield, who recently toured Europe in "Porgy and Bess," and Lois Marshall, a young Canadian soprano, sang the solos with distinction.

Continuing his policy of mixing old and new, on Saturday Mr. Munch presented the second symphony of Brahms, the fourth symphony of Sibelius, and the "Sinfonia India" by Mexican composer, Carlos Chavez, which includes folk tunes of Mexican Indians. According to Aaron Copland, no composer has more successfully solved the problem of the complete amalgamation of folk music into an art form. We regret that we can't give a first-hand report of this piece.

On Sunday, after a restrained performance of the popular "Unfinished" symphony of Schubert; a rather perfunctory rendition of the Prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde"; and a competent presentation of Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from "Meistersinger"; Mr. Munch brought us again to the 20th century. With young Seymour Lipkin expertly playing the piano, the orchestra gave us Ravel's concerto for the left hand alone. It is a tour de force, demanding the utmost agility of the left hand, but more than that, it is music with something to say. Composed as the result of a promise to a pianist who had lost an arm during the first World War, it is somber in mood, as if mirroring the pianist's disability.

The concert and season ended with Ravel's vivid choreographic poem, "La Valse." Composing in 1920, just after the war's end, the famous Frenchman wrote the waltz into this piece in as many moods as one can imagine, but below the glittering surface are the grimness and tension of a world in which victory at arms did not solve all problems. This music, as well as the elevation of spirit in the Schubert, affirmation of faith in Brahms' Requiem, and Chavez's celebration of a submerged but rising race, has significance for today.

Rolland Heermance will bring an evening of good music to Greene County on Tuesday, Sept. 1, when he directs the Catskill Valley Chorus in their sixth annual home concert at the Durham Central School. Guest artist for the evening will be Cynthia Britt Eddy, cellist, who has played at the Maverick concerts in Woodstock for several years. Sponsorship tickets, at a cost of $2. for four tickets, can be obtained in advance of the concerts from any member of the chorus, or patron tickets (two for $2.) will be available at the door.

South Mountain chamber music concerts have the enviable distinction of being completely endowed by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, (who has done so much to promote chamber music in his vicinity) and are free to the public.

Founded in 1918, the South Mountain Festival this year celebrates its 35th anniversary with an outstanding series of eight concerts and recitals, five of them scheduled for late September, and the last featuring William Masselos, for October 21.

The first recital, on Sunday, Aug. 23, at 4 p. m., will present Carroll Glenn, violin, and Claude Chaison, harpsichord, assisted by a string quartet under the direction of Mary Hill Doolittle. On Sunday, August 30 at the same time, Leonid Hambro, pianst, will play.

All that you need to do if you wish to attend any of these concerts is to write the South Mountain Association, Pittsfield, Mass., asking for tickets and enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope, but this much is necessary or you will not be admitted the day of the concert.

Also this Sunday at 4 p. m., chamber music concerts at the Maverick in Woodstock and Music Mountain, Falls Village.

At the Theatres

Woodstock Playhouse—Aug. 25-30—"I Am a Camera," recent Broadway success.

Berkshire Playhouse—Aug. 24 to Aug. 29—"Bunty Pulls the Strings." This playhouse announces the extension of its season by a week with "Bell, Book and Candle" opening on Labor Day evening, Sept. 7.

Malden Bridge Playhouse—Aug. 26 to Aug. 31—"Detective Story."

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—Aug. 28 and 29, matinee and night, Yvonne Chouteau and Gilbert Reed, Classic Ballet; world premiere of two modern dance group works by Myra Kinch Sahomi Tacchana, Japanese dancer.

Cir. (D 172,699)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor
AUG 22 1953

Thousands at Each Concert Reflect Value of Festival

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Mass.

It's the audience that rates the headlines this summer at Tanglewood in the Bay State's Berkshire Hills. There, in the vast reaches of the Shed and on the acres of lawns outside, one sees vivid proof that fine music in America has now become the possession of the many, rather than the prerogative of the privileged few.

It is a thrilling sight, these audiences of eight, ten, or fifteen thousand listeners. Some of them may applaud between movements, others may reach extremes of informal attire, but all—whether connoisseurs or amateurs—are united in a love of good music, and all are earnest and sincere listeners.

Henry Lee Higginson built better than he knew when he founded the Boston Symphony Orchestra. And perhaps the present custodians of the trust are also building better than they know. They are shaping a bit of America at the Berkshire Music Festival, an America in which the people are elevated to higher standards of promise and achievement.

What Symphony Offers

What does the Boston Symphony offer these thousands of vacationists and week end visitors? Let's consider the final three weeks of the six-week festival.

First, there is the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of its kind and scope run by a symphony orchestra anywhere in the world. Almost every day there were performances by ensembles, choral groups, and orchestras. Many of these young students may be among the élite of tomorrow's executants, conductors, and composers. For coaches they have the principals from the orchestra, together with renowned creative and re-creative artists. Often the students turn out work that would grace any concert platform in the country.

There is also the opera department under Boris Goldovsky with its record of noted Tanglewood opera productions. Within eight days (Aug. 3-11) the group gave Gluck's "The Drunkard Reformed," Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue," and Chabrier's "An Incomplete Education" — each having one act—climaxed by an expert and diverting production of "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by Grétry.

Superlative Performance

The Boston Symphony maintained and sometimes exceeded its own standards of superlative performance. There were nine concerts, on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. Charles Munch conducted six times, Pierre Monteux once, and Leonard Bernstein twice.

Mr. Munch devoted two concerts each to a single work — the Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" Dramatic Symphony, and the Brahms "German" Requiem. For the rest the conductor gave verveful and clear readings of music by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Copland, Ravel, Strauss, Milhaud, Lukas Foss, Schumann, Hindemith, and Wagner, with particularly felicitous results in Schubert's Symphony No. 5 and the "Unfinished," and a beautiful reading of Samuel Barber's poignant Adagio for Strings.

Tchaikovsky Program

Mr. Monteux's Tchaikovsky program had its own features of individual conception and unconventional emphasis. As for the brilliant Mr. Bernstein, he showed a brand of virtuoso conducting that whipped the players into magical and masterful rendition. Outstanding were his versions of the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony and the Sibelius Symphony No. 4. His exciting projection of the folk-flavored Sinfonia India by the Mexican composer, Carlos Chavez, drew the biggest ovation of the series.

Other Bernstein offerings included works by Moussorgsky and Ravel. If the conductor sometimes got in the way of the music by his platform mannerisms, one still left the concerts convinced of his enormous conducting talent.

Splendid individual achievement marked a galaxy of soloists —Zino Francescatti, Lukas Foss (heard in his own revised and much improved Piano Concerto No. 2), Jorge Bolet, Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, Gregor Piatigorsky, Lois Marshall, William Warfield, and Seymour Lipkin.

The choral sections were admirably done by the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

A record number of more than 180.000 persons attended the various events, with box-office receipts well over the $300,000 mark. And these figures, perhaps, sum up the whole story in neat and unmistakable terms.

Fresh from Snares 'Cap
Ruhe 2d in $57,500
Washington Feature

Herman Melville's epic "Moby Dick" hadn't been written at the time he was a regular visitor to Nathaniel Hawthorne's Berkshire retreat.

Dr. Ticknor. "The Wonder Book" was written between June 5 and mid-July, an unusual manifestation of Summer activity. He would read to the children each evening what he had written during the day. Julian and Una, who had some literary proclivity themselves, recognized themselves in Primrose Days With Julian and Bunny: A Diary, by Nathaniel Hawthorne —privately printed.—Bunny was the pet rabbit.)

The man of letters would have liked to settle under a tree with a newly published and newly arrived novel of Thackeray, borrowed from his landlord, or to have mused uninterrupted, but Julian gave him little peace. Hawthorne laid down his book not too regretfully, for what is life without reproach, and under his lamp, he poured the lifeless printed page as compared with milk; breakfast followed. prepared by Mrs. Peters, the colored cook who came daily to take care of them, whose loyal attentiveness was concealed by a formal mien.

tied upon him, an imperious desire for a change of scene and climate.

"Oh, for an east wind with a breath of salt sea in it," he wrote. Perhaps the descendant of seafarers had remained too long inland. But he and the reading world were the richer for what Southampton 4, Bristol City 2.

Southend United 3, Torquay United 1.
Watford 3, Norwich City 1.

Northern Section

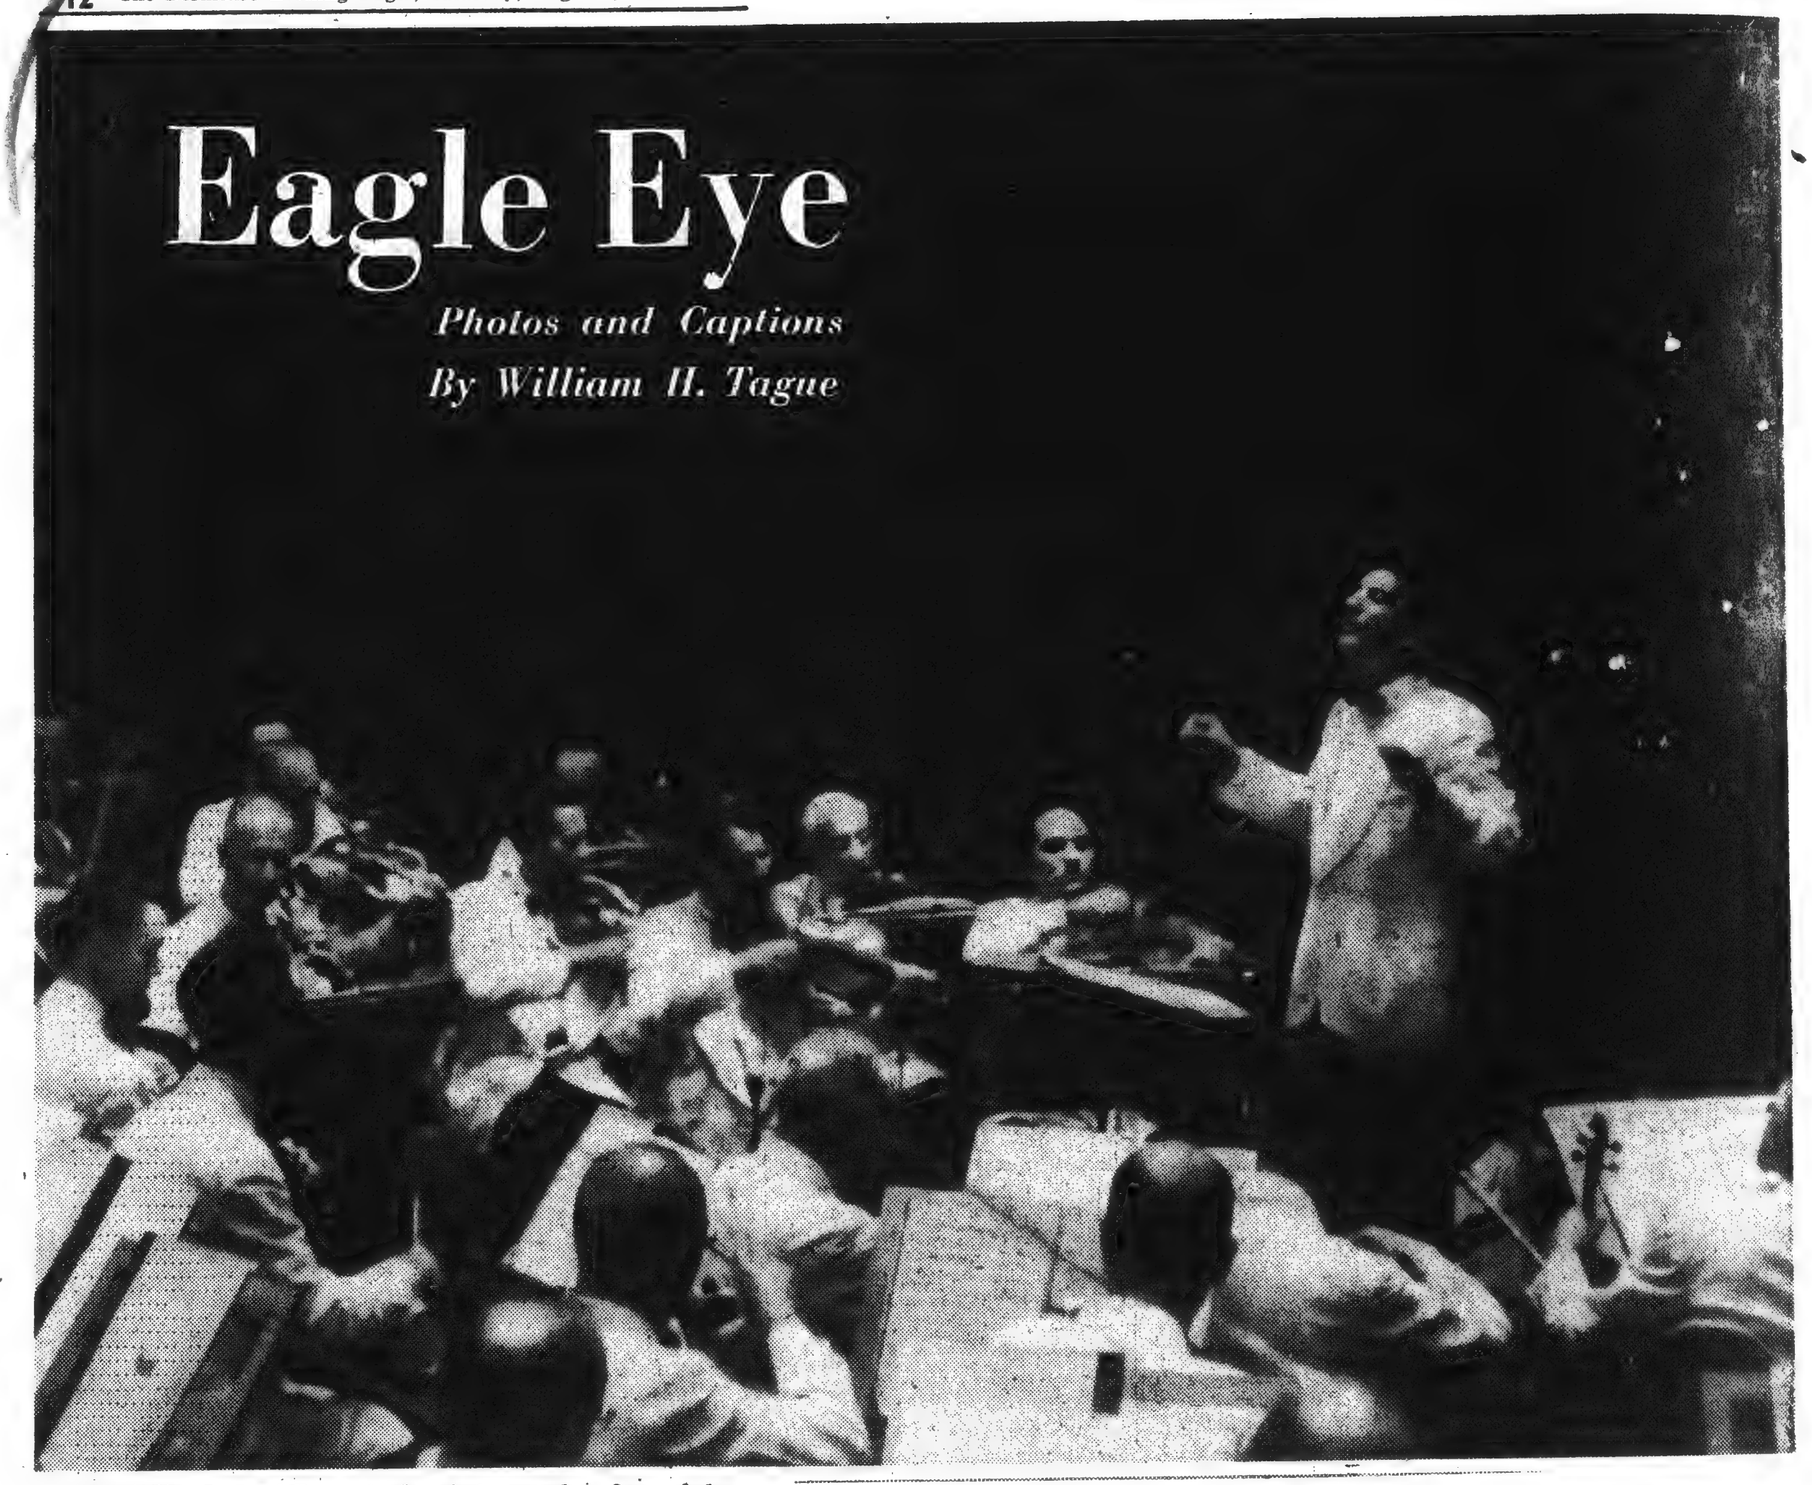
Barnsley 2, Bradford 1.
Barrow 2, Tranmere Rovers 1.
Brandford City 2, Chesterfield 0.
Darlington 2, Chester 1.
Hartlepools United 0, Crewe Alexandra 0.
Mansfield Town 3, Halifax Town 1.
Rochdale 1, Accrington Stanley 0.
Southport United 2, York City 0.

54

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 22 1953

Eagle Eye

Photos and Captions
By William H. Tague



CLIMAX: Leonard Bernstein doesn't just conduct, he explodes. Face raised in rapture, he leads Boston Symphony Orchestra toward final blast in Porgy and Bess, one of the last concerts before Tanglewood closed up shop last week end. This shot was taken under trying conditions through a knot hole at rear of the orchestra.

Cir. (D 643,985) (S 1,124,787)
This Clipping From PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
AUG 24 1953

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 24 1953

Tanglewood Student 'Best Man Singer of '53'

McHenry Boatwright, 28-year-old baritone who studied at the Berkshire Music Center in the past season and sang leading roles in the Berkshire Festival and opera performances, Saturday night was named "The Best Man" singer of 1953 by a jury of musicians at the 24th annual Chicagoland Music Festival. Miss Trudie Tache, 24, soprano, won "The Best Woman" title.

Mr. Boatwright went directly from Tanglewood to Chicago at the close of the Berkshire Festival.

Cir. (D 78,153)
This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
AUG 29 1953

Why Do Women Archers Shoot in Bare Feet?

Most women archers shoot in their barefeet, according to observations of our Roto photographer who took the pictures at the National Archery Tournament in Amherst which appear in the Rotogravure Section of tomorrow's Sunday Republican. He didn't find out why they do. Also in tomorrow's Roto are picture features of the terrible earthquake in Greece, behind the scenes glimpses at the recent Music Festival at Tanglewood, prize-winnig photos in the 12th annual Graflex Photo Cotest, plus others.

John Chapman

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.

THE summer theatrical experiences of this paid playgoer and devotee of the entertainment arts have been few, because of a vacation, and disappointing, because of—well, because. I have never been one to take a busman's holiday or a postman's day off and flitter about in the country theaters seeing packaged Pinzas and other attractions. The only two shows I wanted to see I was forced by time and circumstance to miss—Shirley Booth in "The Time of the Cuckoo" in Central City, Colo., and Wally Cox as Erwin, the greeting-card poet of "Three Men on a Horse," in Westport, Conn., and other way stations.

But I did catch Marilyn Monroe in three long minutes of "Gentleman Prefer Blondes." Since I couldn't see her at the time, I felt that my critical opinion was calm and unprejudiced—and very adverse. We were in a cabin in the Adirondacks with nobody near us but porcupines, and most of the time our battery radio would pick up only two stations—one in Plattsburg, N. Y., and the other quite unaccountably in Wheeling, W. Va. One day the Plattsburg platter-putter announced with the pride of a Ziegfeld that he was now going to offer Miss Monroe singing "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend" from the movie of "GPBS."

* * *

IT WAS lucky that the Plattsburgh jockey had warned us that this was a record; otherwise I would have thought that Miss Monroe had took sick and would have begun to worry. This screen star may be built like a roller coaster and may have a happy smile, but when it comes to singing she is sadder than any of the hillbilly laments I heard from Wheeling.

"Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend" is a lively and amusing song, and Carol Channing gave it enormous bounce and humor in the stage version of the movie; Miss Monroe, in a small and sorrowful voice, made it a dirge. I think she is secretly anti-diamond, and that her singing was subversive.

* * *

AFTER having come down out of the Adirondacks we thirsted for culture so we charged up to Tanglewood, Mass., the magnificent Berkshire mountains property of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Very often I had read of the summer festival of music given there each year; had read of the thousands who hear the week-end concerts in the big music shed and of the additional thousands who sit on acres and acres of lawn in front of the shed and hear the performance in the great outdoors. It was high time I went to this Lewisohn Stadium with grace, so we went.

Well, it was like Coney Island with French horns. Strewn on the greensward were sunbathers in a kaleidoscope of costumes. The older ones slept; the youthful ones necked with an indifference to propriety that would dismay a Jones Beach guard, and the babies roughhoused and scampered. Nobody in the big yard seemed to be listening to the music—but after all it was only a nice concert by the students' symphony orchestra under the direction of the eminent Carlos Chavez.

* * *

THE Broadway news for this week is slim but good. "Guys and Dolls," a splendid musical, returns to town after having spent most of the summer in Washington, D. C., and Rodgers and Hammerstein soon will bring "Oklahoma!" back.

Rodgers and Hammerstein, in their own quest for culture, have bought "Oklahoma!" from the Theater Guild. You wouldn't think it would be worth much, after all these years, but the boys are reported to be paving the Guild $860,000 for what's left of one of their two best shows. (The other one is "Carousel" and I never shall be able to decide which to put in first place.) It has been promised that "Oklahoma!" will be a carefully prepared production; and knowing R. and H., I don't doubt that it will be. When their newly acquired property arrives, they will have four splendid productions running in New York, the other three being "South Pacific," "The King and I" and "Me and Juliet."

Since the creators have acquired "Oklahoma!" they can tinker with it any way they want. I advise them not to change a word or a note of it—but urge them to drop the exclamation point from the title. It has fouled up typewriters and typesetters for years, because there is no sense in having an exclamation point in the middle of a sentence. I warn you, Dick and Oscar, that if you don't do this I am going to start calling you Rodgers and Hammerstein!

[55]

Cir. (D 151,320) (S 257,150)

This Clipping From OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
OKLAHOMAN

AUG 23 1953

Music

By Tracy Silvester

Selection of compositions for a program is becoming increasingly important in the music world today. Most metropolitan newspaper columns have carried material recently on the art of creating satisfying programs for the public. It is high time such a movement got under way. Far too long, artists and programmers have thought of their own desires without a thought for the paying customer.

Everyone has been guilty. Pianists, for some unknown reason, play certain composers to death. Not so long ago, it was unheard of to have a program without four or five Chopin compositions. At one time, so many pianists were doing the Beethoven "Sonata in D Minor," one would have thought that he had written nothing else.

The violinists should not go without censure in the programming field. Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" and Bach's "Chaconne" are overdone a great deal. These two compositions aren't too bad to take on any occasion. However, there are works for which there is no public demand, but which recitalists insist on placing on programs for their own enjoyment. To be sure, some artists will draw an audience no matter what they program, but they are few and far between. Lesser lights would do well to build only on the best so that they may attain the charmed circle of recitalists.

Singers have developed a pattern of smidgin of this, and a soupson of that, all scattered, disorganized. A great number of song cycles, equivalent to the sonata in the instrumental field, could be utilized on vocal programs. The use of great compositions that require dynamic ability and intellectual progress is fast leaving the field.

Every soprano must do the "Ahs, Fors e Lxui" of the "Laughing Song." If the mezzo does not try the "Habanera" she thinks her program is sadly lacking. Let a contralto give a program without "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," and she probably is frustrated for weeks. No tenor can struggle through a concert without at least attempting the "Vesti la Giubba." A baritone is a piker if he doesn't give out with "Largo al Factotum." Are these all the songs they have to give the public?

There are times when we feel that artists on tour from New York design their programs at the lowest IQ level they hope to find on their tour. If they give the same recital in a town of 1,000 as they give to a metropolitan area, they are doing an injustice to both audiences. We don't imply that the smaller community is on a lower level of musical attainment. It is just that more artists are heard in the larger community where opportunity of hearing the same compositions is greater when all artists choose only what is best known in musical literature. Personally, we like all the numbers we have listed as being overdone. We like them so well that only the greatest artists can get away with performing them. What we want to hear at most concerts are the great compositions that do not get too frequent public hearings.

Cir. (D 11,351)

This Clipping From
GREENFIELD, MASS.
RECORDER-GAZETTE

AUG 21 1953

Five Guest Artists In PVMA Concert Program

MARTHA FIELD

ANDREE BERTY

The fifth and final concert of his season's PVMA series at Memorial Hall, Deerfield, Sunday, with five guest artists and a program which includes works by Debussy, Couperin, Hindemith, Haydn and others, promises to be the most interesting of the summer.

Scheduled for the rich and varied musicale is Legrenzi's Trio Sonata in G Minor for violin, cello and piano, The Violin Sonata Opus 11 No. 2 by Hindemith, a cello Sonata in G Major by Sammartini, and Debussy's composition for piano, "Reflets Dans L'eau."

One of the musicale's many high points of interest is the scheduled guest appearance of Andree Berty, french pianist. The artist who studied at the Paris Academy of Music has given many highly praised recitals in Paris and other major cities throughout Europe. A few seasons ago Miss Berty's concerts in New York City won impressive reviews from music critics there.

For this Sunday's concert Miss Berty will offer three solos, Couperin's "Le Tic-Toc-Choc", Debussy's "Reflets Dans L'eau" and the "Etude De Concert" by Pierne.

In a program longer than usually offered in this extremely popular series, Nathan Gottschalk, violinist will be making his third appearance by popular demand.

The gifted head of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music in Ohio will play the violin parts of the Legrenzi trio, and the Haydn Trio in C Major with Mme. Gregoire at the piano and the guest artist Martha Field playing cello. He will also play the Violin Sonata Opus 11, No. 2 by Hindemith and will be accompanied by Mme. Gregoire.

Other guest artists will be Martha Field, cellist, her mother, Mrs. Winifred Field, pianist, both of Ashfield, and Emerson Conzelman, tenor.

ing voice in Paris and Milan following his graduation from Washington University in St. Louis.

His selections will be "Plaisir D'Amour" by Martini, Schumann's "Die Lotus Blume" and Handel's "O Sleep, Why dost thou leave me?"

Good news for the many followers of the summer concert series is that Mme. Gregoire will again play several selections on the beautiful old spinet which is one of the treasurers of Memorial Hall. The instrument, one of three of its kind in the world, was made in London shortly before 1685 by Stephanus Keene and recently restored by Aldei Gregoire.-WM-

Miss Field, a Smith College graduate who majored in music, is a student of the noted first cellist of The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Samuel H. Mayes. The cellist has also received training at the world-famous Tanglewood Berkshire Music Center.

Guest artist Emerson Conzelman made his New York Town Hall debute in 1930 after study-

The Louisville Philharmonic society announced that it has received a $400,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation of New York. This grant, for a period of four years, will be used by the orchestra for a vast program of commissions, recordings and special broadcasts.

In addition, the orchestra will continue its policy of commissioning a work for each of its five pairs of subscription concerts, and presenting two other series: the "Making Music" concerts for younger children, and the "Pops" concerts for teenagers.

The symphonic group, which begins its 17th season in the autumn, will continue to be a member of the Louisville Fund, a community chest of the arts, which conducts an annual campaign for funds to be distributed among more than a dozen cultural groups in Louisville.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, closed its 16th appearance in the Berkshire Festival last week.

This was the 14th in which the Boston Symphony has participated. In six weeks, from July 11 through August 16th, the festival concert attendance totalled 117,950. The audience at student performances was 43,825. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 this year.

With a student body of 397, chosen from 1,500 applicants the activities of the Berkshire Music Center also increased. The student enrollment was composed of 292 full time students from 40 states and the District of Columbia. Seven foreign countries were represented.

The Festival of Berlin will be held on August 30. The opening performance will be a matinee with the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Robert Haeger, playing numbers by Reger and Handel, with Gerda Lammers and Ernst Haefliger as soloists. Also, on the same day, the Staedtische Oper of Berlin will present a new production of "Tales of Hoffman," the U. S. Air Force Band will give an outdoor concert at the Waldbeuhne and Sophocles "Antigone" will be presented at the Schiller theater.

The Ballet Theater, major American group to appear at this year's festival, will present eight ballet performances. Numbers will include "Giselle," "Aleko" and Les Sylphides" and modern ballets by Agnes de Mille and Jerome Robbins. Other American artists appearing during the festival include the chamber music group, The Paganini Quartette and opera star Astrid Varnay.

[56]

Cir. (S 89,838)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 23 1953

Many Works Introduced To Tanglewood Audiences

Music by Lukas Foss, Carlos Chavez, Richard Strauss, Sibelius and Berlioz Heard for First Time; Activities in Various Departments Show Increase

Lenox, Aug. 22—The Berkshire Music Festival of 1953 concluded with triumphant notes for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its musical director Charles Munch. The 16th season of the Festival saw many performance and attendence records shattered. Many great works and as many great artists and soloists were featured at Tanglewood.

Over all, 170,175 attended performances at this year's Festival. The nine major concerts in the music shed drew a record 91,800. The more intimate six "small concerts" of Bach, Mozart and Haydn in the Theater-Concert Hall were attended by 26,150. "Tanglewood On Parade" was enjoyed by 8400, while 43,825 attended student concerts and operas.

Works Introduced

In six weeks, from July 11 through Aug. 16, the Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; 113,300 in 1950, a record year when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years.

On the musical side, Mr. Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music, included in the Festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony Orchestra had never performed before, among them Bach's Cantata No. 28, with chorus and soloists, which Hugh Ross conducted; Mozart's Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136); Haydn's Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists which Mr. Ross led; Darius Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde."

New to Tanglewood audiences were the following: Lukas Foss' cantata, "A Parable of Death," which had its New England premiere, with Vera Zorina narrating, and with tenor solo and chorus; Richard Strauss' Divertimento (after Couperin); Lukas Foss' revised Piano Concerto No. 2, in its first Eastern performance; the complete dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" of Berlioz, with Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum as soloists and the Festival chorus; Sibelius Symphony No. 4 in A minor, and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, by the Mexican composer-conductor who was the Berkshire Music Center's guest teacher of composition this summer.

Friends Increase

Of particular gratification to the Boston Symphony Orchestra management has been the notable increase in interest in the concerts and demonstrations by each of the school's five departments. These are open to all who contribute to the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and their generous contributions from all over the country have helped meet the expenses of the school. Fifty-four such performances have been given during the six-week period, July 10-Aug. 16, as against 38 in 1952.

Membership in the Friends has jumped from 3900 last year to 5472 this season, with receipts from contributions this year totaling $27,637, as against $22,647.80 last year. Thirty-five per cent of the Friends are from Berkshire County, which means that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students. Attendance at Friends' concerts in 1953 totaled 43,825, compared to 34,400 in 1952, an increase of 9425.

School activities have been many and varied. Under the direction of Hugh Ross the choral section performed in six Festival concerts. The opera department, under Boris Goldovsky, performed one major work, Gretry's 18th-century French opera-comique, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," and three rarely-heard one-act operas, and for "Tanglewood On Parade" its associate division gave the premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-acter, "Bad Boys in School."

Other Activities

Composers' forums, with Aaron Copland, Carlos Chavez or Irving Fine of the faculty as moderator, were held weekly for the performance and discussion of students' compositions; chamber music concerts, William Kroll supervising, were given each Sunday morning, and this year overflowed to extra Monday afternoon concerts. The student orchestra, under Leonard Bernstein's direction, gave six programs in the Music Shed, in which a cross-section of orchestra repertoire was performed, from Beethoven to Prokofieff.

The Tanglewood Study Group, under Ingolf Dahl, investigated a vast amount of old music and performed in class concerts, including the premiere at "Tanglewood On Parade" of a new cantata by Allen Sapp, written on commission especially for this group. Extra attractions in 1953 were three chamber music concerts donated by Mrs Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, two organ recitals by E. Power Briggs, and lectures, "Aspects of Music" by faculty members and visitors.

Cir. (D 151,320) (S 257,150)

This Clipping From OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
OKLAHOMAN

Music

By Tracy Silvester

Selection of compositions for a program is becoming increasingly important in the music world today. Most metropolitan newspaper columns have carried material recently on the art of creating satisfying programs for the public. It is high time such a movement got under way. Far too long, artists and programmers have thought of their own desires without a thought for the paying customer.

Everyone has been guilty Pianists, for some unknown reason, play certain composers to death. Not so long ago, it was unheard of to have a program without four or five Chopin compositions. At one time, so many pianists were doing the Beethoven "Sonata in D Minor," one would have thought that he had written nothing else.

The violinists should not go without censure in the programming field. Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" and Bach's "Chaconne" are overdone a great deal. These two compositions aren't too bad to take on any occasion. However, there are works for which there is no public demand, but which recitalists insist on placing on programs for their own enjoyment. To be sure, some artists will draw an audience no matter what they program, but they are few and far between. Lesser lights would do well to build only on the best so that they may attain the charmed circle of recitalists.

Singers have developed a pattern of smidgin of this, and a soupson of that, all scattered, disorganized. A great number of song cycles, equivalent to the sonata in the instrumental field, could be utilized on vocal programs. The use of great compositions that require dynamic ability and intellectual progress is fast leaving the field.

Every soprano must do the "Ahs, Fors e Lxui" of the "Laughing Song." If the mezzo does not try the "Habanera" she thinks her program is sadly lacking. Let a contralto give a program without "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," and she probably is frustrated for weeks. No tenor can struggle through a concert without at least attempting the "Vesti la Giubba." A baritone is a piker if he doesn't give out with "Largo al Factotum." Are these all the songs they have to give the public?

There are times when we feel that artists on tour from New York design their programs at the lowest IQ level they hope to find on their tour. If they give the same recital in a town of 1,000 as they give to a metropolitan area, they are doing an injustice to both audiences. We don't imply that the smaller community is on a lower level of musical attainment. It is just that more artists are heard in the larger community where opportunity of hearing the same compositions is greater when all artists choose only what is best known in musical literature. Personally, we like all the numbers we have listed as being overdone. We like them so well that only the greatest artists can get away with performing them. What we want to hear at most concerts are the great compositions that do not get too frequent public hearings.

Cir. (D 11,351)

This Clipping From
GREENFIELD, MASS.
RECORDER-GAZETTE

AUG 21 1953

Five Guest Artists In PVMA Concert Program

MARTHA FIELD

ANDREE BERTY

The fifth and final concert of his season's PVMA series at Memorial Hall, Deerfield, Sunday, with five guest artists and a program which includes works by Debussy, Couperin, Hindemith Haydn and others, promises to be the most interesting of the summer.

Scheduled for the rich and varied musicale is Legrenzi's Trio Sonata in G Minor for violin, cello and piano. The Violin Sonata Opus 11 No. 2 by Hindemith, a cello Sonata in G Major by Sammartini, and Debussy's composition for piano, "Reflets Dans L'eau."

One of the musicale's many high points of interest is the scheduled guest appearance of Andree Berty, French pianist. The artist who studied at the Paris Academy of Music has given many highly praised recitals in Paris and other major centres throughout Europe. A few seasons ago Miss Berty's concerts in New York City won impressive reviews from music critics there.

For this Sunday's concert Miss Berty will offer three solos, Couperin's "Le Tic-Toc-Choc", Debussy's "Reflets Dans L'eau" and the "Etude de Concert" by Rubine.

In a program longer than usually offered in this extremely popular series Nathan Gottschalk, violinist will be making his third appearance by popular demand.

The gifted head of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music in Ohio will play the violin parts of the Legrenzi trio, and the Haydn Trio in C Major with Mme. Gregoire at the piano and the guest artist Martha Field playing cello. He will also play the Violin Sonata Opus 11, No. 2 by Hindemith and will be accompanied by Mme. Gregoire.

Other guest artists will be Martha Field, cellist, her mother, Mrs. Winifred Field, pianist, both of Ashfield, and Emerson Gorzelman, tenor.

Miss Field, a Smith College graduate who majored in music, is a student of the noted first cellist of The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Samuel H. Mayes. The cellist has also received training at the world-famous Tanglewood Berkshire Music Center.

Guest artist Emerson Conzelman made his New York Town Hall debute in 1930 after studying voice in Paris and Milan following his graduation from Washington University in St. Louis.

His selections will be "Plaisir D'Amour" by Martini, Schumann's "Die Lotus Blume" and Handel's "O Sleep, Why dost thou leave me?"

Good news for the many followers of the summer concert series is that Mme. Gregoire will again play several selections on the beautiful old spinet which is one of the treasurers of Memorial Hall. The instrument, one of three of its kind in the world, was made in London shortly before 1685 by Stephanus Keene and recently restored by Aldei Gregoire.-WM-

The Louisville Philharmonic society announced that it has received a $400,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation of New York. This grant, for a period of four years, will be used by the orchestra for a vast program of commissions, recordings and special broadcasts.

In addition, the orchestra will continue its policy of commissioning a work for each of its five pairs of subscription concerts, and presenting two other series: the "Making Music" concerts for younger children, and the "Pops" concerts for teenagers.

The symphonic group, which begins its 17th season in the autumn, will continue to be a member of the Louisville Fund, a community chest of the arts which conducts an annual campaign for funds to be distributed among more than a dozen cultural groups in Louisville.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, closed its 16th appearance in the Berkshire Festival last week.

This was the 14th in which the Boston Symphony has participated. In six weeks, from July 11 through August 16th, the festival concert attendance totalled 117,950. The audience at student performances was 43,825. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, attracted 8,400 this year.

With a student body of 397, chosen from 1,500 applicants the activities of the Berkshire Music Center also increased. The student enrollment was composed of 292 full time students from 40 states and the District of Columbia. Seven foreign countries were represented.

The Festival of Berlin will be held on August 30. The opening performance will be a matinee with the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Robert Haeger, playing numbers by Reger and Handel, with Gerda Lammers and Ernst Haefliger as soloists. Also, on the same day, the Staedtische Oper of Berlin will present a new production of "Tales of Hoffman," the U. S. Air Force Band will give an outdoor concert at the Waldbeuhne and Sophocles "Antigone" will be presented at the Schiller theater.

The Ballet Theater, major American group to appear at this year's festival, will present eight ballet performances. Numbers will include "Giselle," "Aleko" and Les Sylphides" and modern ballets by Agnes de Mille and Jerome Robbins. Other American artists appearing during the festival include the chamber music group, The Paganini Quartette and opera star Astrid Varnay.

Cir. (S 89,838)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 23 1953

Many Works Introduced To Tanglewood Audiences

Music by Lukas Foss, Carlos Chavez, Richard Strauss, Sibelius and Berlioz Heard for First Time; Activities in Various Departments Show Increase

Lenox, Aug. 22—The Berkshire Music Festival of 1953 concluded with triumphant notes for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its musical director Charles Munch. The 16th season of the Festival saw many performance and attendence records shattered. Many great works and as many great artists and soloists were featured at Tanglewood.

Over all, 170,175 attended performances at this year's Festival. The nine major concerts in the music shed drew a record 91,800. The more intimate six "small concerts" of Bach, Mozart and Haydn in the Theater-Concert Hall were attended by 26,150. "Tanglewood On Parade" was enjoyed by 8400, while 43,825 attended student concerts and operas.

Works Introduced

In six weeks, from July 11 through Aug. 16, the Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; 113,300 in 1950, a record year when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years.

On the musical side, Mr. Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music, included in the Festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony Orchestra had never performed before, among them Bach's Cantata No. 28, with chorus and soloists, which Hugh Ross conducted; Mozart's Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136); Haydn's Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists which Mr. Ross led; Darius Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde."

New to Tanglewood audiences were the following: Lukas Foss' cantata, "A Parable of Death," which had its New England premiere, with Vera Zorina narrating, and with tenor solo and chorus; Richard Strauss' Divertimento (after Couperin); Lukas Foss' revised Piano Concerto No. 2, in its first Eastern performance; the complete dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" of Berlioz, with Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum as soloists and the Festival chorus; Sibelius Symphony No. 4 in A minor, and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, by the Mexican composer-conductor who was the Berkshire Music Center's guest teacher of composition this summer.

Friends Increase

Of particular gratification to the Boston Symphony Orchestra management has been the notable increase in interest in the concerts and demonstrations by each of the school's five departments. These are open to all who contribute to the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and their generous contributions from all over the country have helped meet the expenses of the school. Fifty-four such performances have been given during the six-week period, July 10-Aug. 16, as against 38 in 1952.

Membership in the Friends has jumped from 3900 last year to 5472 this season, with receipts from contributions this year totaling $27,637, as against $22,647.80 last year. Thirty-five per cent of the Friends are from Berkshire County, which means that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students. Attendance at Friends' concerts in 1953 totaled 43,825, compared to 34,400 in 1952, an increase of 9425.

School activities have been many and varied. Under the direction of Hugh Ross the choral section performed in six Festival concerts. The opera department, under Boris Goldovsky, performed one major work, Gretry's 18th-century French opera-comique, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," and three rarely-heard one-act operas, and for "Tanglewood On Parade" its associate division gave the premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-acter, "Bad Boys in School."

Other Activities

Composers' forums, with Aaron Copland, Carlos Chavez or Irving Fine of the faculty as moderator, were held weekly for the performance and discussion of students' compositions; chamber music concerts, William Kroll supervising, were given each Sunday morning, and this year overflowed to extra Monday afternoon concerts. The student orchestra, under Leonard Bernstein's direction, gave six programs in the Music Shed, in which a cross-section of orchestra repertoire was performed, from Beethoven to Prokofieff.

The Tanglewood Study Group, under Ingolf Dahl, investigated a vast amount of old music and performed in class concerts, including the premiere at "Tanglewood On Parade" of a new cantata by Allen Sapp, written on commission especially for this group. Extra attractions in 1953 were three chamber music concerts donated by Mrs Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, two organ recitals by E. Power Briggs, and lectures, "Aspects of Music" by faculty members and visitors.

[56]

TIGHT BINDING

Clr. (D 125,643) (S 37[illegible])

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 19 1953

Radio and Te

By ELIZABETH L. SU

It won't be long now. fred allen way he spells his name. allen is capitals." allen will return to televis program, "judge for yourself," beginni 18 at 10 pm over nbc and channel 4.

The new show will combine the use of panels, talent and audience participation which will enable Allen to fulfill a long-desired opportunity to talk to plain. He's an old hand at this gabbing business and wishes Aug. 18 would hurry up and come.

Last season Allen was scheduled to conduct "Two for the Money" in this Tuesday night spot but poor health forced him out. Herb Shriner was given the emcee chores instead. Shriner will move to Saturdays when he returns from vacation. Both shows are on for the same sponsor.

• • •

Ben Hogan, acclaimed the world's greatest golfer, and fresh from his smashing triumph in the British Open championship, will make a personal appearance on "Top Tunes on TV" Wednesday, July 22. Russ Hodges, famous sportscaster, will be on hand to interview Hogan as the gallant golfer will give his first TV account of his most triumphant golf match.

The entire program, over WNAC-TV at 7:45 p. m., will be revamped in order to present this special salute to Hogan as he personally gives his own account of the British Open. The latest films of Hogan in action on the tough Carnoustie course will be shown. Hogan is the first golfer ever to hold the United States and British Open championships and the United States Masters championship in the same year.

• • •

On Aug. 24 and 26, the Yankee Network announces exclusive addresses by Chief Justice Robert Jackson and Secretary John Foster Dulles to be given when the American Bar Ass'n holds its 1953 convention in Boston. The originating point will be the Hotel Statler and WNAC will make the talks available to the Mutual network from 8:30 to 10 p. m. on both days.

• • •

Bergen Evans, who has many followers because of his quick wit on the "Down You Go" telecasts, has another parlor quiz game ready for televising today. You will see it on Ch. 4 at 7:30 this evening under the title "Super Ghost." Viewers may remember the show from last year. It is based on the well known "ghost" game. Guest "ghoster" today will be a Chicago Alderman, Robert E. Merriam.

Home viewers will be invited to take part in the game and successful ones will share in the cash prizes.

• • •

Dorothy Collins is coming to town. And you will be amazed that this young TV singer is quite a comedienne. As viewers know, no one singer on the Hit Parade telecasts is given the spotlight. The whole program is a showcase of talent and hit tunes of the week are moved on and off with extreme rapidity. In production, the Hit Parade is one of the best, and the cameramen deserve many bows. This staff was behind the wonderful Ford anniversary telecast of last month.

Dorothy is going to show her fans what she can do when she makes an appearance at the Salisbury Frolics the week of July 26 through Aug. 1. In addition to singing some standard and popular songs, she is going to do some of her specialties. And you'll hold your sides when she acts out "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me." The girl has acting talent you never dreamed was in her.

• • •

Smokey, the Wonder Horse, will lead a "helping hoof," instead of the usual "helping hand" when he appears on "Strike It Rich" Tuesday morning, July 28, at 11 on Ch. 7. Smokey will answer "yes" or "no" to questions by shaking his head. He will try to win up to $600 for a needy family unable to visit the show in person.

• • •

There is no dirth of concert music these warm Summer days. Another radio series begins today, the first in eight to from 4 to 5 p features the Hol certs with Bruno ing this first bro Harshaw, Met opera soprano, will sing today. Guest conductors will appear throughout.

Boston's Arthur Fiedler will conduct on Aug. 16, with Morley and Gearhart as piano soloists. Viewers are familiar with the latter as they are featured with Fred Waring during the Fall and Winter telecasts.

• • •

Next Sunday will be a choice listening day for classical music lovers. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Mark 2:30 p. m., on WEEI, in your calendar. "Divertimento," "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev "Classical" Symphony and "Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" comprises the concert.

• • •

And if you like Dixieland jazz music, WBMS will give you your fill Sundays from 6 to 7 p. m. Carl Bortell, who did shows of this type in Michigan, will be host of the new program, which starts today.

• • •

Boston has two new TV stations in the making. WGBH will start plans for activating Channel 2 in the near future. WTAO-TV in Cambridge received its RCA transmitter a few days ago and plans to be on the air the latter part of August with test patterns. WTAO-TV is Boston's first ultra high frequency station. It will operate on Channel 56. RCA expects to ship the station's UHF antenna and auxiliary equipment early next month.

• • •

Jack Pearl (of Vas you dere, Sharlie? fame) returns to WBZ radio next Tuesday at 9 p. m. with his famous sidekick, Cliff Hall. They will do a new quiz-type series titled, "The Baron and the Bee." The pair will be head men in an old-fashioned spelling bee between "improbable competitors."

• • •

Irene Beasley's Grand Slam signs off with the broadcast of Aug. 14. A panel show will replace Irene . . . called "Make Up Your Mind."

• • •

"Meet Dr. Christian" on television tonight when WNAC-TV puts on a film starring Jean Hersholt, with splendid supporting assistance provided by Dorothy Lovell and Robert Baldwin.

• • •

Walt Framer, producer of C.B.S. Television's "Strike It Rich," has learned that, contrary to public opinion, people aren't as selfish as they may seem to be when they appear as contestants on quiz shows. About 25 per cent, says Framer, want the money for someone else.

• • •

Melville Ruick, who stars as Dr. Barton Crane on C. B. S. Television's "City Hospital," enjoys a change of pace when he plays a proper Bostonian in the "Studio One Summer Theatre" presentation of "Shadow of a Man" tomorrow on Channel 7 at 10 p. m.

• • •

Pat Buttram—Now isn't that a pretty picture of me lyin' on a bearskin rug? I was only six weeks old at the time.

Gene Autry—If you were only six weeks old, how come you had a full set of teeth?

Pat Buttram—You got that picture turned the wrong way. You're lookin' at the bear.—CBS Radio's "Gene Autry Show."

Sent radio Coverage.

CBS contacts most credits for this!

PORTSMOUTH, VA.
STAR

JUL 19 1953

BACKYARD MUSIC FESTIVALS

Charles Munch
Tanglewood

Bruno Walter
Salzburg

Malcolm Sargent
Edinburgh

Tanglewood, Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh . . . music lovers the world over hold these names as magic. This summer everyone with a radio in his living room, in his garden or in his automobile can turn on CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals" on Sunday afternoons and, with a little imagination, make a tour of these music centers to hear the world's greatest orchestras, instrumentalists and singers.

Fassett

Conducting this tour is James Fassett, who has been in Europe since May arranging broadcasts from Italy, Norway, Finland, Holland, Austria, Germany and Scotland. To the programs Fassett adds his colorful "sound and word pictures" of the places visited.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons, Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts, beginning Sept. 13, symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter.

Clr. (D 106,391)

This Clipping From
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
PRESS

JUL 25 1953

Conducts Boston Symphony At Berkshire Music Festival

Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire festival in Tanglewood, Mass., is the American contribution to CBS World Music Festivals at 1:30 p. m. (WJEF-2:30). Strauss' "Divertimento," Ravels "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev's "Classical Symphony" and Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" will be played.

Barbara Stanwyck will be interviewed and will introduce the title song from her latest picture on the ABC Music Hall slated at 6:05 p. m. "How to Prepare for Retirement" will be discussed on Chicago Round Table on the 12:30 p. m. NBC program. "The Mona Lisa Murder" occupies the time of Dick Diamond on the CBS series at 6:30 p. m. (WJEF-7:30).

"The Young and Fair" will star Mildred Dunnock in the tale of a teacher's dilemma on TV Playhouse presentation offered at 8 p. m. on channels 7 and 6. Ernest Truex, Freddie Bartholomew and Jack Lemmon co-star in "Grand Cross of the Crescent" on Saturday's Medallion Theater at 9 p. m. on the same channels.

Interviews with ambassadors or foreign ministers of leading Latin-American nations will be heard on the new CBS series, Latin-American Story, set at 11 a. m. Sunday. Helen Claire takes the lead in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" on NBC's Best Plays dramatization at 7:30 p. m. (WOOD-8:30).

Clr. (D 12,338)

This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 21 1953

Festival Concert To Be Broadcast

Because next Sunday's (July 26) Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, it will be given in the Music Shed instead of in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Sunday afternoon concert by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be heard on the air, as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festivals" program, which includes highlights from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., EDT, will be heard on the air, with James Fassett, CBS radio director of music, as commentator.

Broadcast exigencies which make the change of location necessary will necessitate a prompt start of the program at 2:30 p.m.; also will preclude any interruption of the opening orchestral selection on each of the Sunday programs to seat late-comers. Seatholders are cautioned they cannot be seated until after the conclusion of the entire opening number: July 26, "Divertimento (after Couperin), Op. 86, by Richard Strauss runs 20 minutes; Aug. 2: Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings" runs 25 minutes; Aug. 9: Schubert's "Symphony No. 5, in G-flat" runs 24 minutes; Aug. 16: Schubert's "Symphony in B minor (Unfinished)" runs 21 minutes.

Patrons holding seats for the Theatre-Concert Hall on Sunday will be admitted to the reserved seat locations in the Music Shed marked in red on their tickets. General admission seatholders will be seated in unreserved sections of the shed.

Clr. (D 94,036) (S 88,228)

This Clipping From MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS

JUL 26 1953

Music Festival—(WGBS 9) — Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony in program from Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Program opens with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin). James Fassett, who has just returned from European festivals, commentator.

Clr. (D 58,911) (S 65,972)

This Clipping From
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.
PRESS

JUL 26 1953

Boston Symphony Starts Series of 4

Boston—Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS radio's "World Music Festivals" today at 2:30 p. m.

This broadcast will mark the first time that the Boston Symphony has broadcast on CBS radio.

[57]

Clr. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 19 1953

Radio and Television

By ELIZABETH L. SULLIVAN

It won't be long now. fred allen . . . yes, that's the way he spells his name. allen is strictly for "no capitals." allen will return to television with a new program, "judge for yourself," beginning tuesday, aug 18 at 10 pm over nbc and channel 4.

The new show will combine the use of panels, talent and audience participation which will enable Allen to fulfill a long-desired opportunity to talk to plain. He's an old hand at this gabbing business and wishes Aug. 18 would hurry up and come.

Last season Allen was scheduled to conduct "Two for the Money" in this Tuesday night spot but poor health forced him out. Herb Shriner was given the emcee chores instead. Shriner will move to Saturdays when he returns from vacation. Both shows are on for the same sponsor.

• • •

Ben Hogan, acclaimed the world's greatest golfer, and fresh from his smashing triumph in the British Open championship, will make a personal appearance on "Top Tunes on TV" Wednesday, July 22. Russ Hodges, famous sportscaster, will be on hand to interview Hogan as the gallant golfer will give his first TV account of his most triumphant golf match.

The entire program, over WNAC-TV at 7:45 p. m., will be revamped in order to present this special salute to Hogan as he personally gives his own account of the British Open. The latest films of Hogan in action on the tough Carnoustie course will be shown. Hogan is the first golfer ever to hold the United States and British Open championships and the United States Masters championship in the same year.

• • •

On Aug. 24 and 26, the Yankee Network announces exclusive addresses by Chief Justice Robert Jackson and Secretary John Foster Dulles to be given when the American Bar Ass'n holds its 1953 convention in Boston. The origination point will be the Hotel Statler and WNAC will make the talks available to the Mutual network from 8:30 to 10 p. m. on both days.

• • •

Bergen Evans, who has many followers because of his quick wit on the "Down You Go" telecasts, has another parlor quiz game ready for televising today. You will see it on Ch. 4 at 7:30 this evening under the title "Super Ghost." Viewers may remember the show from last year. It is based on the well known "ghost" game. Guest "ghoster" today will be a Chicago Alderman, Robert E. Merriam.

Home viewers will be invited to take part in the game and successful ones will share in the cash prizes.

• • •

Dorothy Collins is coming to town. And you will be amazed that this young TV singer is quite a comedienne. As viewers know, no one singer on the Hit Parade telecasts is given the spotlight. The whole program is a showcase of talent and hit tunes of the week are moved on and off with extreme rapidity. In production, the Hit Parade is one of the best, and the cameramen deserve many bows. This staff was behind the wonderful Ford anniversary telecast of last month.

Dorothy is going to show her fans what she can do when she makes an appearance at the Salisbury Frolics the week of July 26 through Aug. 1. In addition to singing some standard and popular songs, she is going to do some of her specialties. And you'll hold your sides when she acts out "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me." The girl has acting talent you never dreamed was in her.

• • •

Smokey, the Wonder Horse, will lend a "helping hoof," instead of the usual "helping hand" when he appears on "Strike It Rich" Tuesday morning, July 28, at 11 on Ch. 7. Smokey will answer "yes" or "no" to questions by shaking his head. He will try to win up to $500 for a needy family unable to visit the show in person.

• • •

There is no dirth of concert music these warm Summer days. Another radio series begins today, the first in eight to be heard over WBZ from 4 to 5 p. m. Sundays. It features the Hollywood Bowl Concerts with Bruno Walter conducting this first broadcast. Margaret Harshaw, Met opera soprano, will sing today. Guest conductors will appear throughout.

Boston's Arthur Fiedler will conduct on Aug. 16, with Morley and Gearhart as piano soloists. Viewers are familiar with the latter as they are featured with Fred Waring during the Fall and Winter telecasts.

• • •

Next Sunday will be a choice listening day for classical music lovers. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Mark 2:30 p. m., on WEEI, in your calendar. "Divertimento," "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev "Classical" Symphony and "Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" comprises the concert.

• • •

And if you like Dixieland jazz music, WBMS will give you your fill Sundays from 6 to 7 p. m. Carl Bortell, who did shows of this type in Michigan, will be host of the new program, which starts today.

• • •

Boston has two new TV stations in the making. WGBH will start plans for activating Channel 2 in the near future. WTAO-TV in Cambridge received its RCA transmitter a few days ago and plans to be on the air the latter part of August with test patterns. WTAO-TV is Boston's first ultra high frequency station. It will operate on Channel 56. RCA expects to ship the station's UHF antenna and auxiliary equipment early next month.

• • •

Jack Pearl (of Vas you dere, Sharlie? fame) returns to WBZ radio next Tuesday at 9 p. m. with his famous sidekick, Cliff Hall. They will do a new quiz-type series titled, "The Baron and the Bee." The pair will be head men in an old-fashioned spelling bee between "improbable competitors."

• • •

Irene Beasley's Grand Slam signs off with the broadcast of Aug. 14. A panel show will replace Irene . . . called "Make Up Your Mind."

• • •

"Meet Dr. Christian" on television tonight when WNAC-TV puts on a film starring Jean Hersholt, with splendid supporting assistance provided by Dorothy Lovell and Robert Baldwin.

• • •

Walt Framer, producer of C.B.S. Television's "Strike It Rich," has learned that, contrary to public opinion, people aren't as selfish as they may seem to be when they appear as contestants on quiz shows. About 25 per cent, says Framer, want the money for someone else.

• • •

Melville Ruick, who stars as Dr. Barton Crane on C. B. S. Television's "City Hospital," enjoys a change of pace when he plays a proper Bostonian in the "Studio One Summer Theatre" presentation of "Shadow of a Man" tomorrow on Channel 7 at 10 p. m.

• • •

Pat Buttram—Now isn't that a pretty picture of me lyin' on a bearskin rug? I was only six weeks old at the time.

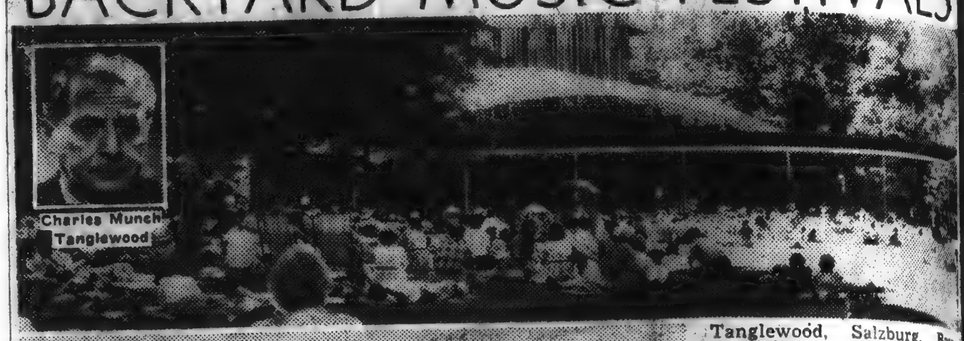
Gene Autry—If you were only six weeks old, how come you had a full set of teeth?

Pat Buttram—You got that picture turned the wrong way. You're lookin' at the bear.—CBS Radio's "Gene Autry Show."

TIGHT BINDING

Clr. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
PORTSMOUTH, VA.
STAR
JUL 19 1953

BACKYARD MUSIC FESTIVALS



Tanglewood, Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh . . . music lovers the world over hold these names as magic. This summer everyone with a radio in his living room, in his garden or in his automobile can turn on CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals" on Sunday afternoons and, with a little imagination, make a tour of these music centers to hear the world's greatest orchestras, instrumentalists and singers.

Fassett

Conducting this tour is James Fassett, who has been in Europe since May arranging broadcasts from Italy, Norway, Finland, Holland, Austria, Germany and Scotland. To the programs Fassett adds his colorful "sound and word pictures" of the places visited.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons, Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts, beginning Sept. 13, symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter.

Clr. (D 106,391)
This Clipping From
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
PRESS
JUL 25 1953

Conducts Boston Symphony At Berkshire Music Festival

Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire festival in Tanglewood, Mass., is the American contribution to CBS World Music Festivals at 1:30 p. m. (WJEF-2:30). Strauss' "Divertimento," Ravels "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev's "Classical Symphony" and Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" will be played.

Barbara Stanwyck will be interviewed and will introduce the title song from her latest picture on the ABC Music Hall slated at 6:05 p. m. "How to Prepare for Retirement" will be discussed on Chicago Round Table on the 12:30 p. m. NBC program. "The Mona Lisa Murder" occupies the time of Dick Diamond on the CBS series a 6:30 p. m. (WJEF-7:30).

"The Young and Fair" will star Mildred Dunnock in the tale of a teacher's dilemma on TV Playhouse presentation offered at 8 p. m. on channels 7 and 6. Ernest Truex, Freddie Bartholomew and Jack Lemmon co-star in "Grand Cross of the Crescent" on Saturday's Medallion Theater at 9 p. m. on the same channels.

Interviews with ambassadors or foreign ministers of leading Latin-American nations will be heard on the new CBS series, Latin-American Story, set at 11 a. m. Sunday. Helon Claire takes the lead in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" on NBC's Best Plays dramatization at 7:30 p. m. (WOOD-8.30).

Clr. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 21 1953

Festival Concert To Be Broadcast

Because next Sunday's (July 26) Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, it will be given in the Music Shed instead of in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Sunday afternoon concert by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will be the first of four Sunday afternoon Festival performances to be heard on the air as the only American event in the network's "World Music Festival" program, which includes eighteen from seven European summer festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood audiences will hear, from 2:30 to 4:00 p.m., EDT, will be heard on the air with James Fassett, CBS radio director of music, as commentator.

Broadcast exigencies which make the change of location necessary will necessitate a prompt start of the program at 2:30 p.m.; also will preclude any interruption of the opening orchestral selection on each of the Sunday programs to seat late-comers. Seatholders are cautioned they cannot be seated until after the conclusion of the entire opening number: Aug. 26: "Divertimento (after Couperin, Op. 86, by Richard Strauss runs 20 minutes; Aug. 2: Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings" runs 35 minutes; Aug. 9: Schubert's "Symphony No. 5, in G-flat" runs 24 minutes; Aug. 16: Schubert's "Symphony in B minor (Unfinished)" runs 21 minutes.

Patrons holding seats for the Theatre-Concert will on Sunday will be admitted to the reserved seat locations in the Music Shed marked in red on their tickets. General admission seatholders will be seated in unreserved sections of the shed.

Clr. (D 94,036) (S 88,228)
This Clipping From MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS
JUL 26 1953

Music Festival—(WGBS 9) — Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony in program from Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Program opens with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin). James Fassett, who has just returned from European festivals, commentator.

Clr. (D 58,911) (S 55,972)
This Clipping From
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.
PRESS
JUL 26 1953

Boston Symphony Starts Series of 4

Boston—Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS radio's "World Music Festivals" today at 2:30 p. m.

This broadcast will mark the first time that the Boston Symphony has broadcast on CBS radio.

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 19 1953

Radio and Television

By ELIZABETH L. SULLIVAN

It won't be long now. fred allen . . . yes, that's the way he spells his name. allen is strictly for "no capitals." allen will return to television with a new program, "judge for yourself," beginning tuesday, aug 18 at 10 pm over nbc and channel 4.

The new show will combine the use of panels, talent and audience participation which will enable Allen to fulfill a long-desired opportunity to talk to plain. He's an old hand at this gabbing business and wishes Aug. 18 would hurry up and come.

Last season Allen was scheduled to conduct "Two for the Money" in this Tuesday night spot but poor health forced him out. Herb Shriner was given the emcee chores instead. Shriner will move to Saturdays when he returns from vacation. Both shows are on for the same sponsor.

• • •

Ben Hogan, acclaimed the world's greatest golfer, and fresh from his smashing triumph in the British Open championship, will make a personal appearance on "Top Tunes on TV" Wednesday, July 22. Russ Hodges, famous sportscaster, will be on hand to interview Hogan as the gallant golfer will give his first TV account of his most triumphant golf match.

The entire program, over WNAC-TV at 7:45 p. m., will be revamped in order to present this special salute to Hogan as he personally gives his own account of the British Open. The latest films of Hogan in action on the tough Carnoustie course will be shown. Hogan is the first golfer ever to hold the United States and British Open championships and the United States Masters championship in the same year.

• • •

On Aug. 24 and 26, the Yankee Network announces exclusive addresses by Chief Justice Robert Jackson and Secretary John Foster Dulles to be given when the American Bar Ass'n holds its 1953 convention in Boston. The origination point will be the Hotel Statler and WNAC will make the talks available to the Mutual network from 9:30 to 10 p. m. on both days.

• • •

Bergen Evans, who has many followers because of his quick wit on the "Down You Go" telecasts, has another parlor quiz game ready for televising today. You will see it on Ch. 4 at 7:30 this evening under the title "Super Ghost." Viewers may remember the show from last year. It is based on the well known "ghost" game. Guest "ghoster" today will be a Chicago Alderman, Robert E. Merriam.

Home viewers will be invited to take part in the game and successful ones will share in the cash prizes.

• • •

Dorothy Collins is coming to town. And you will be amazed that this young TV singer is quite a comedienne. As viewers know, no one singer on the Hit Parade telecasts is given the spotlight. The whole program is a showcase of talent and hit tunes of the week are moved on and off with extreme rapidity. In production, the Hit Parade is one of the best, and the cameramen deserve many bows. This staff was behind the wonderful Ford anniversary telecast of last month.

Dorothy is going to show her fans what she can do when she makes an appearance at the Salisbury Frolics the week of July 26 through Aug. 1. In addition to singing some standard and popular songs, she is going to do some of her specialties. And you'll hold your sides when she acts out "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me." The girl has acting talent you never dreamed was in her.

• • •

Smokey, the Wonder Horse, will lend a "helping hoof," instead of the usual "helping hand" when he appears on "Strike It Rich" Tuesday morning, July 28, at 11 on Ch. 7. Smokey will answer "yes" or "no" to questions by shaking his head. He will try to win up to $500 for a needy family unable to visit the show in person.

• • •

There is no dirth of concert music these warm Summer days. Another radio series begins today, the first in eight to be heard over WBZ from 4 to 5 p. m. Sundays. It features the Hollywood Bowl Concerts with Bruno Walter conducting this first broadcast. Margaret Harshaw, Met opera soprano, will sing today. Guest conductors will appear throughout.

Boston's Arthur Fiedler will conduct on Aug. 16, with Morley and Gearhart as piano soloists. Viewers are familiar with the latter as they are featured with Fred Waring during the Fall and Winter telecasts.

• • •

Next Sunday will be a choice listening day for classical music lovers. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Mark 2:30 p. m., on WEEI, in your calendar. "Divertimento," "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev "Classical" Symphony and "Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" comprises the concert.

• • •

And if you like Dixieland jazz music, WBMS will give you your fill Sundays from 6 to 7 p. m. Carl Bortell, who did shows of this type in Michigan, will be host of the new program, which starts today.

• • •

Boston has two new TV stations in the making. WGBH will start plans for activating Channel 2 in the near future. WTAO-TV in Cambridge received its RCA transmitter a few days ago and plans to be on the air the latter part of August with test patterns. WTAO-TV is Boston's first ultra high frequency station. It will operate on Channel 56. RCA expects to ship the station's UHF antenna and auxiliary equipment early next month.

• • •

Jack Pearl (of Vas you dere, Sharlie? fame) returns to WBZ radio next Tuesday at 9 p. m. with his famous sidekick, Cliff Hall. They will do a new quiz-type series titled, "The Baron and the Bee." The pair will be head men in an old-fashioned spelling bee between "improbable competitors."

• • •

Irene Beasley's Grand Slam signs off with the broadcast of Aug. 14. A panel show will replace Irene . . . called "Make Up Your Mind."

• • •

"Meet Dr. Christian" on television tonight when WNAC-TV puts on a film starring Jean Hersholt, with splendid supporting assistance provided by Dorothy Lovell and Robert Baldwin.

• • •

Walt Framer, producer of C.B.S. Television's "Strike It Rich," has learned that, contrary to public opinion, people aren't as selfish as they may seem to be when they appear as contestants on quiz shows. About 25 per cent, says Framer, want the money for someone else.

• • •

Melville Ruick, who stars as Dr. Barton Crane on C. B. S. Television's "City Hospital," enjoys a change of pace when he plays a proper Bostonian in the "Studio One Summer Theatre" presentation of "Shadow of a Man" tomorrow on Channel 7 at 10 p. m.

• • •

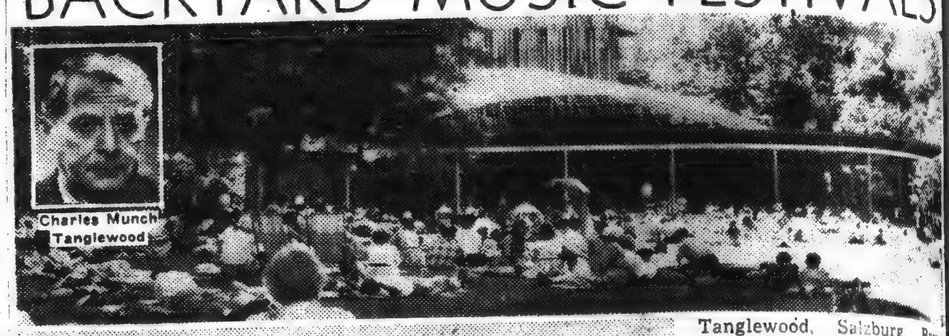
Pat Buttram—Now isn't that a pretty picture of me lyin' on a bearskin rug? I was only six weeks old at the time.

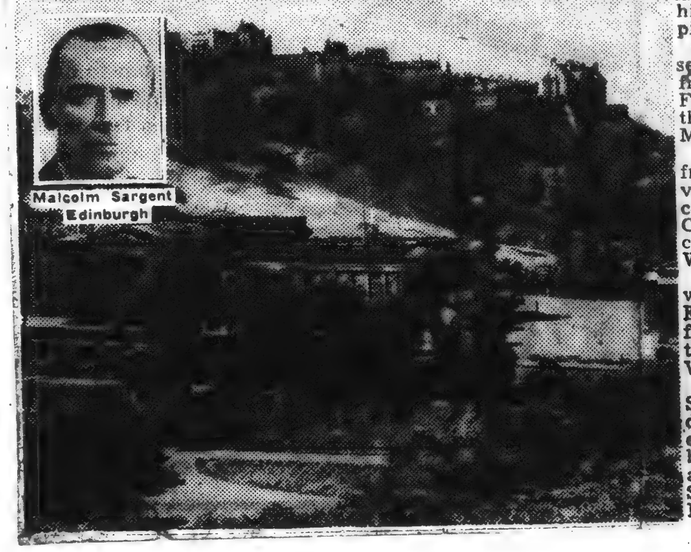
Gene Autry—If you were only six weeks old, how come you had a full set of teeth?

Pat Buttram—You got that picture turned the wrong way. You're lookin' at the bear.—CBS Radio's "Gene Autry Show."

Cir. (D 23,710) (S 23,871)
This Clipping From
PORTSMOUTH, VA.
STAR
JUL 19 1953

BACKYARD MUSIC FESTIVALS





Tanglewood, Salzburg, Bayreuth, Edinburgh . . . music lovers the world over hold these names as magic. This summer everyone with a radio in his living room, in his garden or in his automobile can turn on CBS Radio's "World Music Festivals" on Sunday afternoons and, with a little imagination, make a tour of these music centers to hear the world's greatest orchestras, instrumentalists and singers.

Conducting this tour is James Fassett, who has been in Europe since May arranging broadcasts from Italy, Norway, Finland, Holland, Austria, Germany and Scotland. To the programs Fassett adds his colorful "sound and word pictures" of the places visited.

Beginning Sunday, July 26, Fassett returns for four broadcasts from America's own Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., three conducted by Charles Munch, one by Pierre Monteux.

On August 23 and 30, excerpts from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria will include a concert by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the world's oldest orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter.

On Sept. 6 the CBS Radio series will present the Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, Germany, featuring operas under the direction of the composer's grandsons Wolfgang and Wieland Wagner.

For four broadcasts, beginning Sept. 13, symphonic concerts, dramas, chamber music and operas will be heard from the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival of Music and Drama under the direction of Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Bruno Walter.

Cir. (D 106,391)
This Clipping From
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
PRESS
JUL 25 1953

Conducts Boston Symphony At Berkshire Music Festival

Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire festival in Tanglewood, Mass., is the American contribution to CBS World Music Festivals at 1:30 p. m. (WJEF-2:30). Strauss' "Divertimento," Ravels "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev's "Classical Symphony" and Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" will be played.

Barbara Stanwyck will be interviewed and will introduce the title song from her latest picture on the ABC Music Hall slated at 6:05 p. m. "How to Prepare for Retirement" will be discussed on Chicago Round Table on the 12:30 p. m. NBC program. "The Mona Lisa Murder" occupies the time of Dick Diamond on the CBS series a 6:30 p. m. (WJEF-7:30).

"The Young and Fair" will star Mildred Dunnock in the tale of a teacher's dilemma on TV Playhouse presentation offered at 8 p. m. on channels 7 and 6. Ernest Truex, Freddie Bartholomew and Jack Lemmon co-star in "Grand Cross of the Crescent" on Saturday's Medallion Theater at 9 p. m. on the same channels.

Interviews with ambassadors or foreign ministers of leading Latin-American nations will be heard on the new CBS series, Latin-American Story, set at 11 a. m. Sunday. Helen Claire takes the lead in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" on NBC's Best Plays dramatization at 7:30 p. m. (WOOD-8.30).

Cir. (D 12,338)
This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 21 1953

Festival Concert To Be Broadcast

Because next Sunday's (July ...) Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be broadcast nationally by CBS Radio, it will be in the Music Shed instead of Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Sunday afternoon concert members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will be the first Sunday afternoon [illegible] formances to be heard as the only American network's "World [illegible] program, which includes [illegible] from seven European festivals. The first portion of the program Tanglewood [illegible] hear, from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. will be heard on the James Fassett, CBS [illegible] of music, as commentator.

Broadcast [illegible] make the change necessary will necessitate a start of the program [illegible] also will preclude admittance of the opening orchestral [illegible] on each of the Sunday [illegible] to seat late-comers. [illegible] are cautioned they cannot be seated until after the conclusion of the entire opening number, Richard Strauss' "Divertimento [illegible] Op. 86, by Richard Strauss; [illegible] minutes; Aug. 16, Mozart's "Serenade for [illegible] minutes; Aug. 9, Schubert's Symphony No. 5, [illegible] minutes; Aug. 23, [illegible] "Symphony [illegible] ished)" runs [illegible] minutes.

Patrons holding Theatre-Concert [illegible] will be admitted to [illegible] seat locations [illegible] marked in red. [illegible] General admission [illegible] be seated in the shed.

Cir. (D 94,036) (S 88,228)
This Clipping From MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS
JUL 26 1953

Music Festival—(WGBS 9) — Charles Munch conducts Boston Symphony in program from Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Program opens with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin). James Fassett, who has just returned from European festivals, commentator.

Cir. (D 58,911) (S 55,972)
This Clipping From
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.
PRESS
JUL 26 1953

Boston Symphony Starts Series of 4

Boston—Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS radio's "World Music Festivals" today at 2:30 p. m.

This broadcast will mark the first time that the Boston Symphony has broadcast on CBS radio.

TIGHT BINDING INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 97,494)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
STATES
JUL 25 1953

RADIO, TELEVISION NOTES

Latin American Story Bow

By BOB SUBLETTE

A series of half-hour broadcasts that should be of interest to New Orleanians, The Latin-American Story, will bow on WWL-CBS tomorrow morning at 11.

Bill Costello, CBS radio's White House correspondent, will have charge of the programs, interviewing ambassadors and foreign ministers of the leading Latin American countries.

Among the countries to be represented in discussions on the Sunday morning programs are Bolivia, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Guatemala and Peru.

Another new series bowing on radio tomorrow is Call Me Freedom.

This will be a series presented on WSMB-ABC at 8:30 p. m. in association with the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa.

For the initial broadcast, the story of Charley Leong, a second-generation American of Chinese descent, and how he won a Freedoms Foundation award will be told.

The London Column series will continue on WSMB-ABC tomorrow night at 9:15. Music from The Eisteddford, an annual music festival held in Wales, will be aired.

Alistair Cooke is scheduled to return to this WSMB-ABC time spot on Aug. 9.

The first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., will be broadcast on World Music Festivals tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. on WWL-CBS.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music of the festival.

MRS. N. O. INTERVIEW

Mrs. Beverly LeBlanc Ard, Mrs. New Orleans of 1953, will be interviewed by Jack Dempsey on the latter's Off the Beaten Path program on WTPS tomorrow night at 7.

"What's Ahead for American Youth?" will be the question for the Answers for Americans program on WNOE-MBS tomorrow night at 8:30.

A guest speaker will be a young college honor graduate.

TELEVISION OFFERINGS

The WDSU-TV video offerings tonight and tomorrow will include Hoagy Carmichael spotlighting Jerry Gray and his "band of today" at 7 tonight . . . "Seven Days to Noon," the feature movie tonight at 11:30 . . . The story of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Victory at Sea tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 . . . Ralph Meeker as host on Toast of the Town tomorrow afternoon at 4 and singing star Helen O'Connel, comedian Billy De Wolfe, and dancers Bambi Linn and Red Alexander on the Arthur Murray Party tomorrow night at 11.

PELS VS. BEARS

WTPS will air the games between the New Orleans Pelicans and the Mobile Bears tonight at 8 and tomorrow afternoon at 3. Ted Andrews will be at the mike.

Bill Brengel will broadcast the results of the Tarpon Rodeo from Grand Isle tonight at 8:30 on WWL.

A Tarpon Rodeo Round-Up show, to be recorded tonight at Grand Isle, will be broadcast tomorrow at 12:15 p. m. on WDSU radio.

MYSTERY OFFERINGS

Richard Diamond, Private Detective will tackle the "Mona Lisa Murder" tomorrow evening at 6:30 on WWL-CBS.

An art collector who favors "moderns" is killed. The butler, who favors only traditional academic art, is the chief suspect.

Dick Powell plays the title role.

The Shadow is confronted with a note that "three must die" on WNOE-MBS tomorrow afternoon at 4.

VACATIONLAND, USA

Important tips on what to do in case of an accident while traveling will be given on the WSMB-ABC Vacationland, USA program tomorrow evening at 5:45. Charles Murphy, director of traffic engineering for the Automobile Association of America, will be heard on the show.

Cir. (D 60,162) (S 59,500)
This Clipping From
CHARLESTON, W. VA.
MAIL
JUL 26 1953

RADIO Spotlight

WCHS — Boston Symphony on World Music Festival, 2:30 p. m. . . . June Hutton visits Guy Lombardo, 7 p. m. . . . Robert Q. welcomes Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly, 10 p. m.

WKNA — Tribute to Sigmund Romberg high spot of American Music Hall, 8:05 p. m. . . . Gen. Bonner Fellers, assistant chief of staff for operations and later for personnel under Gen. MacArthur in the Pacific during 1943 and 1944, to replace Paul Harvey, 10:45 p. m.

WTIP — Ceremonies marking opening of 100-bed addition to Charleston Memorial hospital, broadcast following Dodgers-Braves game.

WGKV — Isaac Stern, violinist, guest star on Hollywood Bowl Concerts, 4 p. m. . . . Chopin, Shostakovich and Gould works featured by Paul Strauss conducting NBC Summer Symphony, 5 p. m. . . . Singer Harry Bellafonte guest on Tony Martin Time, 8 p. m. . . . Helen Claire recreates stage role of Broadway production, "Kiss The Boys Goodbye," on Best Plays, 8:30 p. m.

Cir. (S 102,266)
This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
HERALD
JUL 26 1953

NORMAN COUSINS of Norwalk, editor of The Saturday Review of Literature, has chosen Albert Schweitzer's "Out of My Life and Thought" as the book to be discussed on CBS' "Invitation to Learning" at 11:35 A. M. today . . . The annual major league Hall of Fame game from Doubleday Field, Cooperstown, N. Y., baseball's birthplace, between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox will be Mutualized at 1:45 P. M. tomorrow with Dizzy Dean, Al Helfer and Gene Kirby at the mikes . . . Dean will have his name inscribed tomorrow on the Cooperstown museum's honor roll of all-time baseball greats . . . Van Johnson stars in "The Old man's Bride" at 8:30 Thursday night on CBS . . . The story of America is being done in song, based on Julius Mattfeld's book, "Variety Music Cavalcade," at 1 weekdays on WMGM . . . "Hawthorne—TBA" at 7 Saturdays on NBC, the new series with Jim Hawthorne, West Coast comic, and Robert Armbruster's orchestra, is described as a "low-pressure type comedy in the Chicago style," and the term "TBA" is used because it means "to be announced," the most popular listing in radio programs, which figures that "Hawthorne TBA" will be that much more popular.

THIS SUNDAY and the three coming Sundays at 2:30 CBS presents the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.; the concerts, to be done in entirety for 90 minutes, will be played by the Boston Orchestra Sunday, when the conductor will under Charles Munch, except next be Pierre Monteux; James Fassett will be the commentator . . . Today's concert includes R. Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff and Milhaud . . . The NBC Hollywood Bowl concert at 4 today will be conducted by Izler Solomon and will star as soloist the violin virtuoso Isaac Stern, who has a date next Friday night with the Connecticut Pops at Fairfield University Field . . . It's all set for Arturo Toscanini to return to the NBC podium for his 16th season next November . . . Mildred Miller, the mezzo-soprana, will be on the NBC "Telephone Hour" at 9 Monday night . . . "The Glenn Miller Story" is being filmed at Universal with June Allyson as the great bandleader's wife Helen and June (and Dick Powell's) son, Richard Powell, Jr., 2½, as Glenn's son Stevie.

Cir. (D 171,646)
This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS
JUL 25

Boston Symphony to Play

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on World Music Festivals tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock on WFBM-CBS.

The broadcast marks the first time the orchestra has been heard on CBS-Radio, and Host James Fassett, who has returned from visiting the music festivals abroad, will be the commentator.

Munch will open the program with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento," after which he will play Ravel's interpretation of "Le Tombeau de Couperin." Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" will close the program. The work for ballet depicts the creation of the world as interpreted by an aboriginal mind. Milhaud makes use of instrumentation and rhythms he had heard in Harlem, and offers here his first combination of serious music and jazz.

On WIRE-NBC tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the hour-long concerts from the Hollywood Bowl will again be heard. Isaac Stern will be guest violinist and Tyler Solomon conducts the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra.

Following at 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Conductor Paul Strauss will open his second concert with the NBC Summer Symphony with the "American Salute" by Morton Gould. Also on the program will be Shostakovitch's "Symphony No. 1" and "Chopiniana," an orchestral arrangement of several Chopin selections made by Rogal Lewitsky.

* * *

Tonight on WIBC-Mutual, Soprano Helen George returns for her second appearance as featured guest on Chicago Theater of the Air, heard at 8 o'clock. Tenor Earl William will be the "career performer."

Miss George will open the concert with Sigmund Romberg's "Desert Song" and follow with Harm's "Romance." Among other selections will be "Tu N'est Pas Beau" from Offenbach's "Perichole" and "Musetta's Waltz" from Puccini's "La Boheme." Miss George will close the program with a rendition of "The Italian Street Song." William will sing "Flower Song" from Carmen and "A Spirit Flower."

* * *

Popular music is featured on radio tomorrow night when Ballad Singer Harry Bellafonte visits the Tony Martin Show at 7 o'clock on WIRE-NBC. Bella-

" and "Matilda, Mar-gs of gal,"

CBS, do i k wil
n. A
CBS
berly tight works

Can Jerry oday" at 8
on the Paul and Car-
com-

(D 174,820) (S 210,343)
This Clipping From BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
NEWS
JUL 26 1953

...kshire Music Festival—

...ig news on air waves is the return of Arthur Godfrey

radio and t-v

...e big news in radio and ...sion this week is the re... of Arthur Godfrey after an ...ce of almost two months ...ving an operation.

...frey will return to the Ar... Godfrey's Talent Scouts ... at 7:30 p.m. Monday on ... Station WAPI and at 6:30 ... on Channel 13. Beginning ...esday he will be seen on ... Arthur Godfrey and His ...ds" program at 6 p.m. on ...el 13. He will resume his ...ay through Friday "Arthur ...ey Time" daytime show ...ay, Aug. 3. (WAPI radio, 9 ... Monday through Friday, 8 ... Monday through Thurs... ...el 13, television.)

... will broadcast from his ... in Virginia, where he is ...ring from a hip operation. ... Little Godfreys" and other ...m participants will broadcast from the regular New York studios.

ON THE MBS-WILD Game of the Day Monday, Dizzy Dean goes to Cooperstown, N. Y., where he was recently "enshrined" to broadcast the annual Hall of Fame game from Doubleday Field between the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago White Sox. Dizzy will be joined at the annual classic by Al Helfer and Gene Kirby. The Hall of Fame houses a collection of more than 3000 baseball souvenirs, including Babe Ruth's famous No. 3 uniform. It was at Cooperstown that the first game of baseball was played almost a century ago.

The other Games of the Day heard at 1 p.m. on WILD include: Tuesday, Brooklyn-Chicago; Wednesday, Cleveland-New York; Thursday, Giants-Milwaukee, and Friday, Browns-Yankees.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., at 1:30 p.m. Sunday over Radio Station WAPI on CBS's "World Music Festivals." The program will open with Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin) a work for small orchestra which the composer based on a suite of small pieces for Harpsichord by the French composer Francois Couperin.

SINGER HARRY BELLAFONTE, a young newcomer to the recording field, will be a guest on WBRC-NBC radio's Tony Martin Time at 7 p.m. Sunday when Tony spins some of his new RCA Victor Recordings.

An art collector who favors "moderns" is killed and CBS radio's "Richard Diamond, Private Detective, called into the case, discovers he has a butler who favors only traditional academic art, in the "Mona Lisa Murder" at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on Station WAPI.

"The Golden Empress" a musical romance based on the illfated reign of Carlotta and Maximilian in Mexico, will be "The Railroad Hour's" presentation at 7 p.m. Monday on Radio Station WBRC-NBC. Gordon MacRae and Dorothy Warenskjold star in this show.

Fans who like their entertainment with plenty of suspense will not want to miss Escape at 8:30 p.m. Sunday on Station WAPI.

Government geologists find a tale of terror in a weatherbeaten notebook lying in a crevice beside a small stream, in "The Notebook" by William J. Ratcliff at 8:30 p.m. on WAPI on the Escape show.

BASEBALL broadcasts of the Birmingham Barons are presented over WSGN-FM and WILD. The Barons will play a single game with Atlanta Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with Gabby Bell at the mike on WILD and at 2:15 with Bill Ward on WSGN-FM. The Barons will be on the road all the week, games in Memphis Monday through Wednesday, with the broadcasts beginning at 8 p.m. on WILD and at 7:45 p.m. on WAFM. A four-game series with Little Rock begins Thursday, broadcast time, 7:30 p.m., on WILD and 7:15 on WAFM.

An innocent remark made by Jerry North involved him and Pam North in somebody else's family affairs on CBS-WAPI Radio's Mr. and Mrs. North at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Curvaceous Jane Russell, who is currently trying to prove that gentlemen go for brunets as much as blondes in the new film, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will guest as "Lady Editor" on the Bob Hope Daytime Show over NBC-WBRC at 9:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. The programs are repeats of Miss Russell's visits to the comedian's 15-minute daytime show.

Film Star William Powell stars as David Burke, a gentleman with a way of turning a phrase, and a woman's head, in Robert Carson's romantic comedy "Father Comes Home," on WAPI-CBS at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Madeleine Carroll, who has starred in radio, movies and the theater, will be the featured guest on CBS-WAPI Radio's dramatic show at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

...Concert
...e Broadcast
... Sunday's (July 26)
... concert at Tan-
... broadcast nation-
...dio, it will be given
...t instead of in the ... Hall.
... afternoon concert by
...e Boston Symphony
...harles Munch con-
... be the first of four
...hoon Festival per-
... be heard on the air,
...merican event in the
...rld Music Festivals"
...n includes highlights
...ropean summer fes-
...st portion of the pro-
...ood audiences will
... to 4:05 p.m., EDT,
...d on the air, with
..., CBS radio director
...commentator.
...s t exigencies which
... of location nec-
...cessitate a prompt
...ogram at 2:30 p.m.;
...ude any interruption
... orchestral selection
... Sunday programs
...omers. Seatholders
... they cannot be seat-
...the conclusion of the ... number: July 26,
... (after Couperin),
...ard Strauss runs 20
...; Tchaikovsky's
...r Strings" runs 25
...; Schubert's "Sym-
...-flat" runs 24
...16: Schubert's
... minor (Unfin-
...inutes.
... seats for the ...Hall on Sunday
... to the reserved
...the Music Shed
...on their tickets.
...on seatholders will
...eserved sections of

...MASS.
...TER

[58]

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 97,494)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
STATES
JUL 25 1953

RADIO, TELEVISION NOTES

Latin American Story Bow

By BOB SUBLETTE

A series of half-hour broadcasts that should be of interest to New Orleanians. The Latin-American Story, will bow on WWL-CBS tomorrow morning at 11.

Bud Costello, CBS radio's White House correspondent, will have charge of the programs, interviewing ambassadors and foreign ministers of the leading Latin American countries.

Among the countries to be represented in discussions on the Sunday morning programs are Bolivia, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Guatemala and Peru.

Another new series bowing on WWL tomorrow is Call Me Freedom.

This will be a series presented on WSMB-ABC at 8:30 p. m. in association with the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa.

For the initial broadcast, the story of Charley Leong, a second-generation American of Chinese descent, and how he won a Freedoms Foundation award will be told.

The London Column series will continue on WSMB-ABC tomorrow night at 9:15. Music from The Eisteddford, an annual music festival held in Wales, will be aired.

Alistair Cooke is scheduled to return to this WSMB-ABC time spot on Aug. 9.

The first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., will be broadcast on World Music Festivals tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. on WWL-CBS.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music of the festival.

MRS. N. O. INTERVIEW

Mrs. Beverly LeBlanc Ard, Mrs. New Orleans of 1953, will be interviewed by Jack Dempsey on the latter's Off the Beaten Path program on WTPS tomorrow night at 7.

"What's Ahead for American Youth?" will be the question for the Answers for Americans program on WNOE-MBS tomorrow night at 8:30.

A guest speaker will be a young college honor graduate.

TELEVISION OFFERINGS

The WDSU-TV video offerings tonight and tomorrow will include Hoagy Carmichael spotlighting Jerry Gray and his "band of today" at 7 tonight . . . "Seven Days to Noon," the feature movie tonight at 11:30 . . . The story of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Victory at Sea tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 . . . Ralph Meeker as host on Toast of the Town tomorrow afternoon at 4 and singing star Helen O'Connel, comedian Billy De Wolfe, and dancers Bambi Linn and Red Alexander on the Arthur Murray Party tomorrow night at 11.

PELS VS. BEARS

WTPS will air the games between the New Orleans Pelicans and the Mobile Bears tonight at 8 and tomorrow afternoon at 3. Ted Andrews will be at the mike.

Biff Brengel will broadcast the results of the Tarpon Rodeo from Grand Isle tonight at 8:30 on WWL.

A Tarpon Rodeo Round-Up show, to be recorded tonight at Grand Isle, will be broadcast tomorrow night at 12:15 p. m. on WDSU radio.

MYSTERY OFFERINGS

Richard Diamond, Private Detective will tackle the "Mona Lisa Murder" tomorrow evening at 6:30 on WWL-CBS.

An art collector who favors "moderns" is killed. The butler, who favors only traditional academic art, is the chief suspect.

Dick Powell plays the title role.

The Shadow is confronted with a note that "three must die" on WNOE-MBS tomorrow afternoon at 4.

VACATIONLAND, USA

Important tips on what to do in case of an accident while traveling will be given on the WSMB-ABC Vacationland, USA program tomorrow evening at 5:45. Charles Murphy, director of traffic engineering for the Automobile Association of America, will be heard on the show.

Cir. (D 60,162) (S 59,500)
This Clipping From
CHARLESTON, W. VA.
MAIL
JUL 26 1953

RADIO Spotlight

WCHS — Boston Symphony on World Music Festival, 2:30 p. m. . . . June Hutton visits Guy Lombardo, 7 p. m. . . . Robert Q. welcomes Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly, 10 p. m.

WKNA — Tribute to Sigmund Romberg high spot of American Music Hall, 8:05 p. m. . . . Gen. Bonner Fellers, assistant chief of staff for operations and later for personnel under Gen. MacArthur in the Pacific during 1943 and 1944, to replace Paul Harvey, 10:45 p. m.

WTIP — Ceremonies marking opening of 100-bed addition to Charleston Memorial hospital, broadcast following Dodgers-Braves game.

WGKV — Isaac Stern, violinist, guest star on Hollywood Bowl Concerts, 4 p. m. . . . Chopin, Shostakovich and Gould works featured by Paul Strauss conducting NBC Summer Symphony, 5 p. m. . . . Singer Harry Bellafonte guest on Tony Martin Time, 8 p. m. . . . Helen Claire recreates stage role of Broadway production, "Kiss The Boys Goodbye," on Best Plays, 8:30 p. m.

Cir. (S 102,266)
This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
HERALD
JUL 26 1953

NORMAN COUSINS of Norwalk, editor of The Saturday Review of Literature, has chosen Albert Schweitzer's "Out of My Life and Thought" as the book to be discussed on CBS' "Invitation to Learning" at 11:35 A. M. today . . . The annual major league Hall of Fame game from Doubleday Field, Cooperstown, N. Y., baseball's birthplace, between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox will be Mutualized at 1:45 P. M. tomorrow with Dizzy Dean, Al Helfer and Gene Kirby at the mikes . . . Dean will have his name inscribed tomorrow on the Cooperstown museum's honor roll of all-time baseball greats . . . Van Johnson stars in "The Old man's Bride" at 8:30 Thursday night on CBS . . . The story of America is being done in song, based on Julius Mattfeld's book, "Variety Music Cavalcade," at 1 weekdays on WMGM . . . "Hawthorne—TBA" at 7 Saturdays on NBC, the new series with Jim Hawthorne, West Coast comic, and Robert Armbruster's orchestra, is described as a "low-pressure type comedy in the Chicago style," and the term "TBA" is used because it means "to be announced," the most popular listing in radio programs, which figures that "Hawthorne TBA" will be that much more popular.

THIS SUNDAY and the three coming Sundays at 2:30 CBS presents the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.; the concerts, to be done in entirety for 90 minutes, will be played by the Boston Orchestra Sunday, when the conductor will under Charles Munch, except next be Pierre Monteux; James Fassett will be the commentator . . . Today's concert includes R. Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff and Milhaud . . . The NBC Hollywood Bowl concert at 4 today will be conducted by Izler Solomon and will star as soloist the violin virtuoso Isaac Stern, who has a date next Friday night with the Connecticut Pops at Fairfield University Field . . . It's all set for Arturo Toscanini to return to the NBC podium for his 16th season next November . . . Mildred Miller, the mezzo-soprana, will be on the NBC "Telephone Hour" at 9 Monday night . . . "The Glenn Miller Story" is being filmed at Universal with June Allysón as the great bandleader's wife Helen and June (and Dick Powell's) son, Richard Powell, Jr., 2½, as Glenn's son Stevie.

Cir. (D 171,646)
This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS

Boston Symphony to Play

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on World Music Festivals tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock on WFBM-CBS.

The broadcast marks the first time the orchestra has been heard on CBS-Radio, and Host James Fassett, who has returned from visiting the music festivals abroad, will be the commentator.

Munch will open the program with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento," after which he will play Ravel's interpretation of "Le Tombeau de Couperin." Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" will close the program. The work for ballet depicts the creation of the world as interpreted by an aboriginal mind. Milhaud makes use of instrumentation and rhythms he had heard in Harlem, and offers here his first combination of serious music and jazz.

On WIRE-NBC tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the hour-long concerts from the Hollywood Bowl will again be heard. Isaac Stern will be guest violinist and Tyler Solomon conducts the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra.

Following at 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Conductor Paul Strauss will open his second concert with the NBC Summer Symphony with the "American Salute" by Morton Gould. Also on the program will be Shostakovitch's "Symphony No. 1" and "Chopiniana," an orchestral arrangement of several Chopin selections made by Rogal Lewitsky.

* * *

Tonight on WIBC-Mutual, Soprano Helen George returns for her second appearance as featured guest on Chicago Theater of the Air, heard at 8 o'clock. Tenor Earl William will be the "career performer."

Miss George will open the concert with Sigmund Romberg's "Desert Song" and follow with Harm's "Romance." Among other selections will be "Tu N'est Pas Beau" from Offenbach's "Perichole" and "Musetta's Waltz" from Puccini's "La Boheme." Miss George will close the program with a rendition of "The Italian Street Song." William will sing "Flower Song" from Carmen and "A Spirit Flower."

* * *

Popular music is featured on radio tomorrow night when Ballad Singer Harry Bellafonte visits the Tony Martin Show at 7 o'clock on WIRE-NBC. Bella- ... and "Matilda, Mar- ... gs of ...gal,"

...CBS, ...do is ...k will ...n. A ...CBS, ...berly ...tlight ...works Car... ...Jerry ...pday" ... at 8 ...on the ..., Paul ... and Car... ...com-

(D 174,820) (S 210,343)
This Clipping From BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
NEWS
1953

...kshire Music Festival—

...ig news on air waves is the return of Arthur Godfrey

radio and t-v

...e big news in radio and ...ision this week is the re... of Arthur Godfrey after an ...ce of almost two months ...ving an operation.

...frey will return to the Ar... Godfrey's Talent Scouts ... at 7:30 p.m. Monday on ... Station WAPI and at 6:30 ... Channel 13. Beginning ...esday he will be seen on ... Arthur Godfrey and His ...ds" program at 6 p.m. on ...el 13. He will resume his ...ay through Friday "Arthur ...ey Time" daytime show ... Aug. 3. (WAPI radio, 9 ...Monday through Friday ... Monday through Thurs... ...el 13, television ... will broadcast from ... in Virginia, where he ... ...ring from a hip operation. ... Little Godfreys" and other ...m participants will broad... cast from the regular New York studios.

ON THE MBS-WILD Game of the Day Monday, Dizzy Dean goes to Cooperstown, N. Y., where he was recently "enshrined" to broadcast the annual Hall of Fame game from Doubleday Field between the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago White Sox. Dizzy will be joined at the annual classic by Al Helfer and Gene Kirby. The Hall of Fame houses a collection of more than 3000 baseball souvenirs, including Babe Ruth's famous No. 3 uniform. It was at Cooperstown that the first game of baseball was played almost a century ago.

The other Games of the Day heard at 1 p.m. on WILD include: Tuesday, Brooklyn-Chicago; Wednesday, Cleveland-New York; Thursday, Giants-Milwaukee, and Friday, Browns-Yankees.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., at 1:30 p.m. Sunday over Radio Station WAPI on CBS's "World Music Festivals." The program will open with Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin) a work for small orchestra which the composer based on a suite of small pieces for Harpsichord by the French composer Francois Couperin.

SINGER HARRY BELLAFONTE, a young newcomer to the recording field, will be a guest on WBRC-NBC's radio's Tony Martin Time at 7 p.m. Sunday when Tony spins some of his new RCA Victor Recordings.

An art collector who favors "moderns" is killed and CBS radio's "Richard Diamond, Private Detective, called into the case, discovers he has a butler who favors only traditional academic art, in the "Mona Lisa Murder" at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on Station WAPI.

"The Golden Empress" a musical romance based on the ill-fated reign of Carlotta and Maximilian in Mexico, will be "The Railroad Hour's" presentation at 7 p.m. Monday on Radio Station WBRC-NBC. Gordon MacRae and Dorothy Warenskjold star in this show.

Fans who like their entertainment with plenty of suspense will not want to miss Escape at 8:30 p.m. Sunday on Station WAPI.

Government geologists find a tale of terror in a weatherbeaten notebook lying in a crevice beside a small stream, in "The Notebook" by William J. Ratcliff at 8:30 p.m. on WAPI on the Escape show.

BASEBALL broadcasts of the Birmingham Barons are presented over WSGN-FM and WILD. The Barons will play a single game with Atlanta Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with Gabby Bell at the mike on WILD and at 2:15 with Bill Ward on WSGN-FM. The Barons will be on the road all the week, games in Memphis Monday through Wednesday, with the broadcasts beginning at 8 p.m. on WILD and at 7:45 p.m. on WAFM. A four-game series with Little Rock begins Thursday, broadcast time, 7:30 p.m., on WILD and 7:15 on WAFM.

An innocent remark made by Jerry North involved him and Pam North in somebody else's family affairs on CBS-WAPI Radio's Mr. and Mrs. North at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Curvaceous Jane Russell, who is currently trying to prove that gentlemen go for brunets as much as blondes in the new film, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will guest as "Lady Editor" on the Bob Hope Daytime Show over NBC-WBRC at 9:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. The programs are repeats of Miss Russell's visits to the comedian's 15-minute daytime show.

Film Star William Powell stars as David Burke, a gentleman with a way of turning a phrase, and a woman's head, in Robert Carson's romantic comedy "Father Comes Home," on WAPI-CBS at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Madeleine Carroll, who has starred in radio, movies and the theater, will be the featured guest on CBS-WAPI Radio's dramatic show at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 97,494)
This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
STATES
JUL 25 1953

RADIO, TELEVISION NOTES

Latin American Story Bow

By BOB SUBLETTE

A series of half-hour broadcasts that should be of interest to New Orleanians, The Latin-American Story, will bow on WWL-CBS tomorrow morning at 11.

Bill Costello, CBS radio's White House correspondent, will have charge of the programs, interviewing ambassadors and foreign ministers of the leading Latin American countries.

Among the countries to be represented in discussions on the Sunday morning programs are Bolivia, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Guatemala and Peru.

Another new series bowing on radio tomorrow is Call Me Freedom

This will be a series presented on WSMB-ABC at 8:30 p. m. in association with the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa.

For the initial broadcast, the story of Charley Leong, a second-generation American of Chinese descent, and how he won a Freedoms Foundation award will be told.

The London Column series will continue on WSMB-ABC tomorrow night at 9:15. Music from The Eisteddford, an annual music festival held in Wales, will be aired.

Alistair Cooke is scheduled to return to this WSMB-ABC time spot on Aug. 9.

The first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., will be broadcast on World Music Festivals tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. on WWL-CBS.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music of the festival.

MRS. N. O. INTERVIEW

Mrs. Beverly LeBlanc Ard, Mrs. New Orleans of 1953, will be interviewed by Jack Dempsey on the latter's Off the Beaten Path program on WTPS tomorrow night at 7.

"What's Ahead for American Youth?" will be the question for the Answers for Americans program on WNOE-MBS tomorrow night at 8:30.

A guest speaker will be a young college honor graduate.

TELEVISION OFFERINGS

The WDSU-TV video offerings tonight and tomorrow will include Hoagy Carmichael spotlighting Jerry Gray and his "band of today" at 7 tonight . . . "Seven Days to Noon," the feature movie tonight at 11:30 . . . The story of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Victory at Sea tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 . . . Ralph Meeker as host on Toast of the Town tomorrow afternoon at 4 and singing star Helen O'Connel, comedian Billy De Wolfe, and dancers Bambi Linn and Red Alexander on the Arthur Murray Party tomorrow night at 11.

PELS VS. BEARS

WTPS will air the games between the New Orleans Pelicans and the Mobile Bears tonight at 8 and tomorrow afternoon at 3. Ted Andrews will be at the mike.

Bill Brengel will broadcast the results of the Tarpon Rodeo from Grand Isle tonight at 8:30 on WWL.

A Tarpon Rodeo Round-Up show, to be recorded tonight at Grand Isle, will be broadcast tomorrow at 12:15 p. m. on WDSU radio.

MYSTERY OFFERINGS

Richard Diamond, Private Detective will tackle the "Mona Lisa Murder" tomorrow evening at 6:30 on WWL-CBS.

An art collector who favors "moderns" is killed. The butler, who favors only traditional academic art, is the chief suspect.

Dick Powell plays the title role.

The Shadow is confronted with a note that "three must die" on WNOE-MBS tomorrow afternoon at 4.

VACATIONLAND, USA

Important tips on what to do in case of an accident while traveling will be given on the WSMB-ABC Vacationland, USA program tomorrow evening at 5:45. Charles Murphy, director of traffic engineering for the Automobile Association of America, will be heard on the show.

Cir. (D 60,162) (S 59,500)
This Clipping From
CHARLESTON, W. VA.
MAIL
JUL 26 1953

RADIO Spotlight

WCHS — Boston Symphony on World Music Festival, 2:30 p. m. . . . June Hutton visits Guy Lombardo, 7 p. m. . . . Robert Q. welcomes Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly, 10 p. m.

WKNA — Tribute to Sigmund Romberg high spot of American Music Hall, 8:05 p. m. . . . Gen. Bonner Fellers, assistant chief of staff for operations and later for personnel under Gen. MacArthur in the Pacific during 1943 and 1944, to replace Paul Harvey, 10:45 p. m.

WTIP — Ceremonies marking opening of 100-bed addition to Charleston Memorial hospital, broadcast following Dodgers-Braves game.

WGKV — Isaac Stern, violinist, guest star on Hollywood Bowl Concerts, 4 p. m. . . . Chopin, Shostakovich and Gould works featured by Paul Strauss conducting NBC Summer Symphony, 5 p. m. . . . Singer Harry Bellafonte guest on Tony Martin Time, 8 p. m. . . . Helen Claire recreates stage role of Broadway production, "Kiss The Boys Goodbye," on Best Plays, 8:30 p. m.

Cir. (S 102,266)
This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
HERALD
JUL 26 1953

NORMAN COUSINS of Norwalk, editor of The Saturday Review of Literature, has chosen Albert Schweitzer's "Out of My Life and Thought" as the book to be discussed on CBS' "Invitation to Learning" at 11:35 A. M. today . . . The annual major league Hall of Fame game from Doubleday Field, Cooperstown, N. Y., baseball's birthplace, between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox will be Mutualized at 1:45 P. M. tomorrow with Dizzy Dean, Al Helfer and Gene Kirby at the mikes . . . Dean will have his name inscribed tomorrow on the Cooperstown museum's honor roll of all-time baseball greats . . . Van Johnson stars in "The Old man's Bride" at 8:30 Thursday night on CBS . . . The story of America is being done in song, based on Julius Mattfeld's book, "Variety Music Cavalcade," at 1 weekdays on WMGM . . . "Hawthorne—TBA" at 7 Saturdays on NBC, the new series with Jim Hawthorne, West Coast comic, and Robert Armbruster's orchestra, is described as a "low-pressure type comedy in the Chicago style," and the term "TBA" is used because it means "to be announced," the most popular listing in radio programs, which figures that "Hawthorne TBA" will be that much more popular.

THIS SUNDAY and the three coming Sundays at 2:30 CBS presents the famous Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.; the concerts, to be done in entirety for 90 minutes, will be played by the Boston Orchestra Sunday, when the conductor will under Charles Munch, except next be Pierre Monteux; James Fassett will be the commentator . . . Today's concert includes R. Strauss, Ravel, Prokofieff and Milhaud . . . The NBC Hollywood Bowl concert at 4 today will be conducted by Izler Solomon and will star as soloist the violin virtuoso Isaac Stern, who has a date next Friday night with the Connecticut Pops at Fairfield University Field . . . It's all set for Arturo Toscanini to return to the NBC podium for his 16th season next November . . . Mildred Miller, the mezzo-soprana, will be on the NBC "Telephone Hour" at 9 Monday night . . . "The Glenn Miller Story" is being filmed at Universal with June Allyson as the great bandleader's wife Helen and June (and Dick Powell's) son, Richard Powell, Jr., 2½, as Glenn's son Stevie.

Cir. (D 171,646)
This Clipping From
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS
JUL 2

Boston Symphony to Play

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on World Music Festivals tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock on WFBM-CBS.

The broadcast marks the first time the orchestra has been heard on CBS-Radio, and Host James Fassett, who has returned from visiting the music festivals abroad, will be the commentator.

Munch will open the program with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento," after which he will play Ravel's interpretation of "Le Tombeau de Couperin." Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde" will close the program. The work for ballet depicts the creation of the world as interpreted by an aboriginal mind. Milhaud makes use of instrumentation and rhythms he had heard in Harlem, and offers here his first combination of serious music and jazz.

On WIRE-NBC tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the hour-long concerts from the Hollywood Bowl will again be heard. Isaac Stern will be guest violinist and Tyler Solomon conducts the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra.

Following at 4 o'clock on WIRE-NBC, Conductor Paul Strauss will open his second concert with the NBC Summer Symphony with the "American Salute" by Morton Gould. Also on the program will be Shostakovitch's "Symphony No. 1" and "Chopiniana," an orchestral arrangement of several Chopin selections made by Rogal Lewitsky.

* * *

Tonight on WIBC-Mutual, Soprano Helen George returns for her second appearance as featured guest on Chicago Theater of the Air, heard at 8 o'clock. Tenor Earl William will be the "career performer."

Miss George will open the concert with Sigmund Romberg's "Desert Song" and follow with Harm's "Romance." Among other selections will be "Tu N'est Pas Beau" from Offenbach's "Perichole" and "Musetta's Waltz" from Puccini's "La Boheme." Miss George will close the program with a rendition of "The Italian Street Song." William will sing "Flower Song" from Carmen and "A Spirit Flower."

* * *

Popular music is featured on radio tomorrow night when Ballad Singer Harry Bellafonte visits the Tony Martin Show at 7 o'clock on WIRE-NBC. Bellafonte's "Suzanne" and "Matilda, Matilda," will be heard. Martin will spin his recordings of "Dimino," "April in Portugal," and "Begin the Beguine."

At 6 oclock on WFBM-CBS, the music of Guy Lombardo is heard and star of the week will Songstress June Hutton. At 30 o'clock on WFBM-CBS, Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly will share the guest spotlight on Robert Q. Lewis' Waxworks program.

* * *

On TV tonight, Hoagy Carmichael will spotlight Jerry Gray and his "band of today" on Saturday Night Revue at 8 o'clock on WTTV. Others on the show will be Gayla Peevey, Paul Gilbert, Bobby Sargent and Gary Morton. Star-host Carmichael will appear in a "composer's corner" sketch.

D 174,820) (S 210,343)
This Clipping From
RMINGHAM, ALA.
NEWS
UL 26 1953

kshire Music Festival—

ig news on air waves is the return of A radio and t-

big news in radio and sion this week is the re- f Arthur Godfrey after an e of almost two months ing an operation.

frey will return to the Ar- Godfrey's Talent Scouts at 7:30 p.m. Monday on Station WAPI and at 6:30 n Channel 13. Beginning sday he will be seen on Arthur Godfrey and His s" program at 6 p.m. on el 13. He will resume his y through Friday "Arthur y Time" daytime show v. Aug. 3. (WAPI radio, 9 Monday through Friday, 8 Monday through Thurs- el 13, television.)

will broadcast from his in Virginia, where he is ing from a hip operation. ittle Godfreys" and other n participants will broadcast from the regular New York studios.

ON THE MBS-WILD Game of the Day Monday, Dizzy Dean goes to Cooperstown, N. Y., where he was recently "enshrined" to broadcast the annual Hall of Fame game from Doubleday Field between the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago White Sox. Dizzy will be joined at the annual classic by Al Helfer and Gene Kirby. The Hall of Fame houses a collection of more than 3000 baseball souvenirs, including Babe Ruth's famous No. 3 uniform. It was at Cooperstown that the first game of baseball was played almost a century ago.

The other Games of the Day heard at 1 p.m. on WILD include: Tuesday, Brooklyn-Chicago; Wednesday, Cleveland-New York; Thursday, Giants-Milwaukee, and Friday, Browns-Yankees.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four "live" broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., at 1:30 p.m. Sunday over Radio Station WAPI on CBS's "World Music Festivals." The program will open with Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin) a work for small orchestra which the composer based on a suite of small pieces for Harpsichord by the French composer Francois Couperin.

SINGER HARRY BELLAFONTE, a young newcomer to the recording field, will be a guest on WRDC-NBC radio's Tony Martin Time at 7 p.m. Sunday when Tony spins some of his new RCA Victor Recordings.

An art collector who favors "moderns" is killed and CBS radio's "Richard Diamond, Private Detective, called into the case, discovers he has a butler who favors only traditional academic art, in the "Mona Lisa Murder" at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on Station WAPI.

"The Golden Empress" a musical romance based on the ill-fated reign of Carlotta and Maximilian in Mexico, will be "The Railroad Hour's" presentation at 7 p.m. Monday on Radio Station WBRC-NBC. Gordon MacRae and Dorothy Warenskjold star in this show.

Fans who like their entertainment with plenty of suspense will not want to miss Escape at 8:30 p.m. Sunday on Station WAPI.

Government geologists find a tale of terror in a weatherbeaten notebook lying in a crevice beside a small stream, in "The Notebook" cliff at 8: the Escap

BASEBA Birmingha ed over V The Baro game wit 2:30 p.m., mike on V Bill Ward Barons, w the week emphis Monday through Wednesday, with the broadcasts beginning at 8 p.m. on WILD and at 7:45 p.m. on WAFM. A four-game series with Little Rock begins Thursday, broadcast time, 7:30 p.m., on WILD and 7:15 on WAFM.

An innocent remark made by Jerry North involved him and Pam North in somebody else's family affairs on CBS-WAPI Radio's Mr. and Mrs. North at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Curvaceous Jane Russell, who is currently trying to prove that gentlemen go for brunets as much as blondes in the new oners—Tablets

Cir. (D 194,114) (S 293,426)
This Clipping From LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER-JOURNAL
JUL 26 1953

MUSIC ON THE AIR THIS WEEK

By ANGELA PREIS

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. The program includes Divertimento after Couperin by Richard Strauss, Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, Prokofieff's Classical Symphony and Milhaud's La Creation du Monde, WHAS 2:30 today.

SUNDAY

Moods for Sunday: Variations on A Theme of Haydn by Brahms and Symphony No. 1 by Sibelius. WHAS 6 a.m.

This Morning's Music: Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 2 and Dvorak's Symphony No. 1, repeated daily. WFPL 7 a.m.

George Crook, organ recital: Prelude to The Blessed Damozel by Debussy, Prelude and Interlude by Guilmant, Andante Religioso by Thome, July by Howard, Old Kishwaukee River by Harmer and Cherubs at Play by McCollin. WAVE 7:05 a.m.

Wiley College Choir sings Behold The Star by Dawson, Tchaikovsky's Seraphic Song and the Hallelujah Chorus by Handel. WKLO 9:30 a.m.

Masterworks From France: Chabrier's L'Ile Hereuse, Neere, Tyndaris and d'Une Prison by Hahn and Trio for Violin, Viola and Cello by Francaix, repeated daily. WFPL 1 p.m.

Robert Whitney presents The Roman Carnival Overture by Berlioz, La Mer by Debussy and Harry Janos Suite by Kodaly. WHAS 1:30 p.m.

World Music Festivals: Boston Symphony from Berkshire Festival, program given above. WHAS 2:30 p.m.

Masterworks of Music: Donizetti's The Daughter of The Regiment, repeated daily. WFPL 2:30 p.m.

Good Music Hour: Introduction and Rondo by Saint-Saens, Sarasate's Zigeunerweisen and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5. WKYW 3:30 p.m.

Contemporary Music: All-Hindemith program, Sonata in D for Violin and Piano, Quartet No. 3 and Kleine Kammermusik, repeated daily. WFPL 5 p.m.

Serious Music: Much Ado About Nothing Suite by Khrennikov, Prokofieff's Concerto No. 2 for Violin, Rachmaninoff's Suite No. 2 for Two Pianos, Moussorgsky's Ten Songs, Five Novelettes by Glezounov, Le Coq d'Or Suite by Rimski-Korsakov and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5, repeated nightly. WFPL 7 p.m.

MONDAY

Good Music Hour: Bizet's Carmen, concluded. WKYW 1 p.m.

Jerome Hines sings Il Lacerato Spirito from Verdi's Simon Boccanegra and Granada by Lara. WAVE, WAVE-TV 7:30 p.m.

Mildred Miller sings Mendelssohn's On Wings of Song, Mein Madel Hat Einen Rosemund by Brahms, Bless This House by Brahe and Adieu Forets from Tchaikovsky's Joan of Arc. WAVE, 8 p.m.

Music In The Night: Ein Heldenleben by Richard Strauss. WAVE, 9 p.m.

TUESDAY

Good Music Hour: Grand Canyon Suite by Grofe. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: La Mer by Debussy. WAVE, 9:30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY

Good Music Hour: Early Italian music by Palestrina and Gabrieli. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: Acceleration Waltz by Strauss, Grieg's Piano Concerte in A minor, Afternoon of A Faun and Clair de Lune by Debussy. WAVE, 9 p.m.

THURSDAY

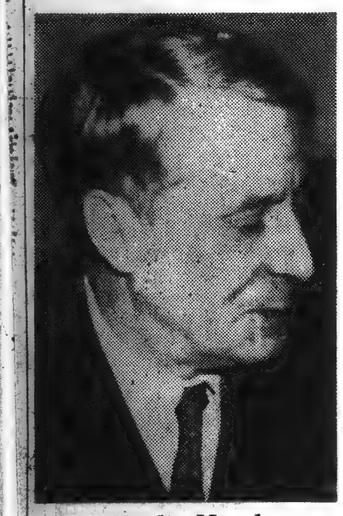
Good Music Hour: Schubert's Symphony No. 8. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: Brahms's Hungarian Dance No. 6 and Ballet Russe by Shostakovich. WAVE, 9:15 p.m.

FRIDAY

Good Music Hour: Excerpts from La Boheme. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: Wine, Women and Song by Strauss and Romeo and Juliet by Berlioz. WAVE, 9 p.m.



Charles Munch
Berkshire conductor

East Africa Food Shortage Likely

Kampala, Uganda, July 25 (AP) —Many parts of British East Africa—particularly Kenya, already torn by Mau Mau violence —face a serious food shortage because of drought, Commerce Commissioner M. A. Maybury announced.

Cir. (D 102,261) (S 105,826)
This Clipping From
KNOXVILLE, TENN.
NEWS-SENTINEL
JUL 26 1953

Pick of the Week's Listening

ARTHUR GODFREY returns to his Talent Scout show at 8:30 p. m. Monday on WNOX. He will be heard from his home in Virginia and the performers, scouts and music will be broadcast, as usual, from New York. Godfrey will resume his Arthur Godfrey Time, Mondays, through Fridays, at 10 a. m. Aug. 3 on WNOX.

Godfrey

* * *

THIS WEEK on Family Skeleton program, Mercedes McCambridge, as Sara Ann Spence, is asked by her bridegroom to marry another man. Sara finds herself facing arrest by the Canadian Mounted Police, at 7:30 p. m. Monday through Friday on WNOX.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., at 2:30 p. m. today, WNOX. The program will include Richard Strauss' Divertimento, the Prokofiev Classical Sympohny and Milhaud's La Creation du Monde.

* * *

MEMORIES of Grace Moore will be broadcast by WNOX at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday. The program will include many of the songs Miss Moore sang. Wednesday night WNOX will broadcast the world premiere of "So This Is Love," by tape recording from 9:30 to 10:30. The broadcast will include interviews with celebrities, music on the street as well as in Tennessee Theater, introductions of stars from the stage, and other events leading up to the showing of the film.

* * *

THE PREMIERE ceremonies preceding the showing of "So This Is Love" will be broadcast by WROL from the stage of Tennessee Theater from 8 to 9 p. m. Wednesday. Mayor George Dempster will introduce Gov. Frank Clement, who in turn will introduce Dr. C. E. Brehm and Kathryn Grayson and other visiting Hollywood personalities.

* * *

SEVEN KNOXVILLIANS will be heard by a nation-wide audience when winners of WROL's talent contest winners compete with talent from three other cities for a place in the national finals. The seven to be heard over WROL at 7 p. m. Saturday, are Gayle Wolfe, soprano; Frank Cox, pianist; Q. Elizabeth Gresham, soprano; Sally Zapter, vocalist, and three who tied for the fifth-round winner. These are Glenn Russell, violinist, and a piano duo, Laura Rainwater and Robert Jenkins. The latter two are from Sevierville.

* * *

THREE Grace Moore scholarship winners will be heard on Al Cory's Back in Your Own Back Yard program at 3:45 p. m. today on WROL. Ramona Perez will sing My Curly Headed Baby; Margaret Ann Kesterson, Ciribiribin and Barbara Lynn Brown, One Night of Love.

* * *

AN ADDRESS by Governor Frank Clement will be heard Thursday at 9:30 p. m. on WROL. The governor will speak on the TVA crisis.

* * *

MAYOR George Dempster will answer questions phoned in by listeners when he is heard Friday at 9 p. m. on WROL.

* * *

SENATORS William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and A. S. Mike Monroney (D., Okla.) will discuss the record of the 83rd Congress on American Forum of the Air at 10:35 p. m. Monday on WROL.

* * *

TWO PROGRAMS on the Grace Moore story will be heard on WKGN at 9:05 p. m. Monday and Tuesday. Personalities connected with the premiere of "So This Is Love" will be interviewed.

* * *

GUESTS on the Meet Mrs. Moore program will be Mrs. Jorge Rodriguez, a newcomer to Knoxville at 11 a. m. Tuesday, WBIR, and Miss Sarah Waller, president of Quota Club, at 11 a. m. Wednesday.

* * *

A SERIES of stories based on incidents from the files of Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge will begin on WBIR at 9:30 p. m. today. The central figure story has been a recipient Freedoms Foundation A

* * *

THE SINGING VALLEY a series about life in Gre will present an annual fe in Wales, on WBIR at 1 today, WBIR.

Drama and Mystery

TODAY: 7:30 p. m. Mona Lisa Murder, with Dick Powell, WNOX.

8:30 p. m.—Kiss the Boys Goodbye, with Helen Claire, WKGN.

9:30 p. m.—The Notebook, WNOX.

MONDAY: 8:30 p. m.—The Automaton, WKGN.

9 p. m.—The Final Day of Gen. Ketchum, WNOX.

WEDNESDAY: 8:30 p. m.—Heroes, with Jean Hersholt, WNOX.

9 p. m.—My Favorite Wife, with Madeleine Carroll, WNOX.

9:05 p. m.—Hop, Skip and Jump, with Audrey Totter, WKGN.

THURSDAY: 8:30 p. m.—Father Came Home, with William Powell, WNOX.

9:30 p. m.—The Girl I Tried To Love, with Cathy and Elliott Lewis, WNOX.

"Is Our International Propaganda Effective" will be subject for Northwestern University Reviewing Stand, to be heard on WKGN at 7 p. m. today.

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
JUL 31 1953

RADIO, and a little TV

By FREDERICK L. RUSHTON

A 10-episode teen-age romance, starring stage and screen actress Rosemary Rice, will begin on WTAG today at 12.15 noon.

The male lead will be played by Michael O'Day. . . . Both actors, now in their early twenties, are veterans of a decade of dramatic experience, and have been featured together on the FBI in Peace and War. . . . Miss Rice is regularly heard as Babby in Brighter Day and O'Day is a member of radio's "Let's Pretend" repertory company. . . . That bottle which television's Garry Moore dropped into Long Island Sound just off Mattituck was found by 8-year-old Paul Rau who promptly brought it to the New York studios and claimed the reward of $100. . . . Young Rau reported he found it about 80 feet from the spot where Moore dropped it. . . . Marlene Dietrich, whose "Time for Love" series resumes Sept. 3, is planning a trip to Paris this Fall to make a motion picture. . . . Right now she is making a number of advance transcriptions to clear the way for her Paris sojourn.

ROSEMARY RICE

In and Out of the Studios: The Boston Symphony Orchestra has selected an all-Tchaikovsky program for its second broadcast Sunday at 2.30 p. m. via WTAG and CBS network direct from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. . . . The orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. . . . Robert Trout is back in the U. S. after a tour of Spain where he attended the famous Pamplona fiesta. . . . Forrest Lewis, currently heard as the mystery man Ecles on Family Skeleton, played a total of 68 different characterizations on the former radio serial, "I Love a Mystery." . . . Barbara Britton, co-star of Mr. and Mrs. North detective dramas, now visiting in New York, will ask the jackpot question of the day as guest on John Reed King's quiz-studded program on WTAG's Give and Take tomorrow at 11:30 a. m.

By the way: For the third time the other night we watched a repeat of Candid Camera's "Talking Postoffice Box" and for the third time found it uproariously funny. . . . Produced by the adept Allen Funt, Candid Camera is one of television's top laugh-producers and we have often wondered why it does not receive more, and more sponsor enthusiasm.

Cir. (D 8,721)
This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
TIMES
JUL 23 1953

First 90 Minutes of Tanglewood Concert Will Be Broadcast

LENOX, Mass., July 23—Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be held in the large Music Shed, instead of in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall as originally scheduled, because the first 90 minutes of the concert will be broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System in its World Music Festivals series.

The part of the program to be played by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch which goes on the air includes Richard Strauss' Divertimento, Op. 86; Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev's Classical Symphony and Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde." Lukas Foss' "Parable of Death" will follow. The concert begins at 2:30.

[59]

Cir. (D 194,114) (S 293,426)
This Clipping From LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER-JOURNAL

MUSIC ON THE AIR THIS WEEK

By ANGELA PREIS

CHARLES MUNCH conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. The program includes Divertimento after Couperin by Richard Strauss, Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, Prokofieff's Classical Symphony and Milhaud's La Creation du Monde, WHAS 2:30 today.

SUNDAY

Moods for Sunday: Variations on A Theme of Haydn by Brahms and Symphony No. 1 by Sibelius. WHAS 6 a.m.

This Morning's Music: Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 2 and Dvorak's Symphony No. 1, repeated daily. WFPL 7 a.m.

George Crook, organ recital: Prelude to The Blessed Damozel by Debussy, Prelude and Interlude by Guilmant, Andante Religioso by Thome, July by Howard, Old Kishwaukee River by Harmer and Cherubs at Play by McCollin. WAVE 7:05 a.m.

Wiley College Choir sings Behold The Star by Dawson, Tchaikovsky's Seraphic Song and the Hallelujah Chorus by Handel. WKLO 9:30 a.m.

Masterworks From France: Chabrier's L'Ile Hereuse, Neere, Tyndaris and d'Une Prison by Hahn and Trio for Violin, Viola and Cello by Francaix, repeated daily. WFPL 1 p.m.

Robert Whitney presents The Roman Carnival Overture by Berlioz, La Mer by Debussy and Harry Janos Suite by Kodaly. WHAS 1:30 p.m.

World Music Festivals: Boston Symphony from Berkshire Festival, program given above. WHAS 2:30 p.m.

Masterworks of Music: Donizetti's The Daughter of The Regiment, repeated daily. WFPL 2:30 p.m.

Good Music Hour: Introduction and Rondo by Saint-Saens, Sarasate's Zigeunerweisen and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5. WKYW 3:30 p.m.

Contemporary Music: All-Hindemith program, Sonata in D for Violin and Piano, Quartet No. 3 and Kleine Kammermusik, repeated daily. WFPL 5 p.m.

Serious Music: Much Ado About Nothing Suite by Khrennikov, Prokofieff's Concerto No. 2 for Violin, Rachmaninoff's Suite No. 2 for Two Pianos, Moussorgsky's Ten Songs, Five Novelettes by Glazounov, Le Coq d'Or Suite by Rimski-Korsakov and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5, repeated nightly. WFPL 7 p.m.

Charles Munch
Berkshire conductor

MONDAY

Good Music Hour: Bizet's Carmen, concluded. WKYW 1 p.m.

Jerome Hines sings Il Lacerato Spirito from Verdi's Simon Boccanegra and Granada by Lara. WAVE, WAVE-TV 7:30 p.m.

Mildred Miller sings Mendelssohn's On Wings of Song, Mein Madel Hat Einen Rosemund by Brahms, Bless This House by Brahe and Adieu Forets from Tchaikovsky's Joan of Arc. WAVE, 8 p.m.

Music In The Night: Ein Heldenleben by Richard Strauss. WAVE, 9 p.m.

TUESDAY

Good Music Hour: Grand Canyon Suite by Grofe. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: La Mer by Debussy. WAVE, 9:30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY

Good Music Hour: Early Italian music by Palestrina and Gabrielli. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: Acceleration Waltz by Strauss, Grieg's Piano Concerto in A minor, Afternoon of A Faun and Clair de Lune by Debussy. WAVE, 9 p.m.

THURSDAY

Good Music Hour: Schubert's Symphony No. 8. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: Brahms's Hungarian Dance No. 6 and Ballet Russe by Shostakovich. WAVE, 9:15 p.m.

FRIDAY

Good Music Hour: Excerpts from La Boheme. WKYW, 1 p.m.

Music In The Night: Wine, Women and Song by Strauss and Romeo and Juliet by Berlioz. WAVE, 9 p.m.

East Africa Food Shortage Likely

Kampala, Uganda, July 25 (AP) —Many parts of British East Africa—particularly Kenya, already torn by Mau Mau violence —face a serious food shortage because of drought, Commerce Commissioner M. A. Maybury announced.

Cir. (D 102,261) (S 105,826)
This Clipping From
KNOXVILLE, TENN.
NEWS-SENTINEL
JUL 26 1953

Pick of the Week's Listening

ARTHUR GODFREY returns to his Talent Scout show at 8:30 p. m. Monday on WNOX. He will be heard from his home in Virginia and the performers, scouts and music will be broadcast, as usual, from New York. Godfrey will resume his Arthur Godfrey Time, Mondays, through Fridays, at 10 a. m. Aug. 3 on WNOX.

Godfrey

* * *

THIS WEEK on Family Skeleton program, Mercedes McCambridge, as Sara Ann Spence, is asked by her bridegroom to marry another man. Sara finds herself facing arrest by the Canadian Mounted Police, at 7:30 p. m. Monday through Friday on WNOX.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., at 2:30 p. m. today, WNOX. The program will include Richard Strauss' Divertimento, the Prokofiev Classical Sympohny and Milhaud's La Creation du Monde.

* * *

MEMORIES of Grace Moore will be broadcast by WNOX at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday. The program will include many of the songs Miss Moore sang. Wednesday night WNOX will broadcast the world premiere of "So This Is Love," by tape recording from 9:30 to 10:30. The broadcast will include interviews with celebrities, music on the street as well as in Tennessee Theater, introductions of stars from the stage, and other events leading up to the showing of the film.

* * *

THE PREMIERE ceremonies preceding the showing of "So This Is Love" will be broadcast by WROL from the stage of Tennessee Theater from 8 to 9 p. m. Wednesday. Mayor George Dempster will introduce Gov. Frank Clement, who in turn will introduce Dr. C. E. Brehm and Kathryn Grayson and other visiting Hollywood personalities.

* * *

SEVEN KNOXVILLIANS will be heard by a nation-wide audience when winners of WROL's talent contest winners compete with talent from three other cities for a place in the national finals. The seven to be heard over WROL at 7 p. m. Saturday, are Gayle Wolfe, soprano; Frank Cox, pianist; Q. Elizabeth Gresham, soprano; Sally Carter, vocalist, and three who tied for the fifth-round winner. These are Glenn Russell, violinist, and a piano duo, Laura Rainwater and Robert Jenkins. The latter two are from Sevierville.

* * *

THREE Grace Moore scholarship winners will be heard on Al Cory's Back in Your Own Back Yard program at 3:45 p. m. today on WROL. Ramona Perez will sing My Curly Headed Baby; Margaret Ann Kesterson, Ciribiribin and Barbara Lynn Brown, One Night of Love.

* * *

AN ADDRESS by Governor Frank Clement will be heard Thursday at 9:30 p. m. on WROL. The governor will speak on the TVA crisis.

* * *

MAYOR George Dempster will answer questions phoned in by listeners when he is heard Friday at 9 p. m. on WROL.

* * *

SENATORS William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and A. S. Mike Monroney (D., Okla.) will discuss the record of the 83rd Congress on

Drama and Mystery

TODAY: 7:30 p. m. Mona Lisa Murder, with Dick Powell, WNOX.

8:30 p. m.—Kiss the Boys Goodbye, with Helen Claire, WKGN.

9:30 p. m.—The Notebook, WNOX.

MONDAY: 8:30 p. m.—The Automaton, WKGN.

9 p. m.—The Final Day of Gen. Ketchum, WNOX.

WEDNESDAY: 8:30 p. m.—Heroes, with Jean Hersholt, WNOX.

9 p. m.—My Favorite Wife, with Madeleine Carroll, WNOX.

9:05 p. m.—Hop, Skip and Jump, with Audrey Totter, WKGN.

THURSDAY: 8:30 p. m.—Father Came Home, with William Powell, WNOX.

9:30 p. m.—The Girl I Tried To Love, with Cathy and Elliott Lewis, WNOX.

American Forum of the Air at 10:35 p. m. Monday on WROL.

* * *

TWO PROGRAMS on the Grace Moore story will be heard on WKGN at 9:05 p. m. Monday and Tuesday. Personalities connected with the premiere of "So This Is Love" will be interviewed.

* * *

GUESTS on the Meet Mrs. Moore program will be Mrs. Jorge Rodriguez, a newcomer to Knoxville at 11 a. m. Tuesday, WBIR, and Miss Sarah Waller, president of Quota Club, at 11 a. m. Wednesday.

* * *

A SERIES of stories based on incidents from the files of Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge will begin on WBIR at 9:30 p. m. today. The central figu story has been a recip Freedoms Foundation A

* * *

THE SINGING VALLI a series about life in Gre will present an annual fe in Wales, on WBIR at 1 today, WBIR.

"Is Our International Propaganda Effective" will be subject for Northwestern University Reviewing Stand, to be heard on WKGN at 7 p. m. today.

Cir. (D 8,721)
This Clipping From
GLENS FALLS, N. Y.
TIMES
JUL 23 1953

First 90 Minutes of Tanglewood Concert Will Be Broadcast

LENOX, Mass., July 23—Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood will be held in the large Music Shed, instead of in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall as originally scheduled, because the first 90 minutes of the concert will be broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System in its World Music Festivals series.

The part of the program to be played by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch which goes on the air includes Richard Strauss' Divertimento, Op. 86; Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Prokofiev's Classical Symphony and Milhaud's "Le Creation du Monde." Lukas Foss' "Parable of Death" will follow. The concert begins at 2:30.

Cir. (D 52,771) (S 102,494)
This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
JUL 31 1953

RADIO, and a little TV

By FREDERICK L. RUSHTON

A 10-episode teen-age romance, starring stage and screen actress Rosemary Rice, will begin on WTAG today at 12:15 noon.

The male lead will be played by Michael O'Day. . . . Both actors, now in their early twenties, are veterans of a decade of dramatic experience, and have been featured together on the FBI in Peace and War. . . . Miss Rice is regularly heard as Babby in Brighter Day and O'Day is a member of radio's "Let's Pretend" repertory company. . . . That bottle which television's Garry Moore dropped into Long Island Sound just off Mattituck was found by 8-year-old Paul Rau who promptly brought it to the New York studios and claimed the reward of $100. . . . Young Rau reported he found it about 80 feet from the spot where Moore dropped it. . . . Marlene Dietrich, whose "Time for Love" series resumes Sept. 3, is planning a trip to Paris this Fall to make a motion picture. . . . Right now she is making a number of advance transcriptions to clear the way for her Paris sojourn.

ROSEMARY RICE

In and Out of the Studios: The Boston Symphony Orchestra has selected an all-Tchaikovsky program for its second broadcast Sunday at 2.30 p. m. via WTAG and CBS network direct from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. . . . The orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. . . . Robert Trout is back in the U. S. after a tour of Spain where he attended the famous Pamplona fiesta. . . . Forrest Lewis, currently heard as the mystery man Ecles on Family Skeleton, played a total of 68 different characterizations on the former radio serial, "I Love a Mystery" . . . Barbara Britton, co-star of Mr. and Mrs North detective dramas, now visiting in New York, will ask the jackpot question of the day as guest on John Reed Kings quiz-stu program on WTAG's Give a Take tomorrow at 11.30 a. m.

By the way: For the third time the other night we watched a repeat of Candid Camera's "Talking Postoffice Box" and for the third time found it uproariously funny. . . . Produced by the inept Allen Funt, Candid Camera is one of television's top laugh-producers and we have often wondered why it does not receive more, sponsor enthusiasm.

Cir. (D 106,4
This Clipping F
TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE
JUL 26 1953

Radio Roundup

Boston Sy
Strauss, Ra

By PHIL BARNEY
Tribune Staff Writer

CHARLES MUNCH will cond
the Boston Symphony Orchestra the first of four live broadca from the Berkshire Festival
Tanglewood, Mass., on Wo
Music Festivals this afterno
(WDAE—2:30 o'clock).

His selections are Divertimen
by Richard Strauss; Le Tombe de Couperin, by Ravel; Prokofie Classical Symphony and La C ation du Monde, by Milhaud.
Paul Strauss is to conduct t
NBC Symphony Orchestra in his s ond concert this afternoon (WF
—WLAK—5 o'clock), opening w
Gould's American Salute, follow by Symphony No. 1 of Shostakovi and Capriniana, orchestral angements by Rogal Lewitsky
Chopin works.

Claire, who created th
Cindy Lou, artful Soutl rmer, in the Broadwa on of Kiss the Boy will play the same pa est Plays radio adapt ight (WFLA—WLAK—ock).

f the Eisteddford, annu
Wales, will be present Column tonight (WSU clock).

ussell, who is current prove that gentlemen
ttes as much as blond film Gentlemen Pref will serve as Lady Edit ek on the Bob Hope Da
w beginning tomorro
WLAK—10:30 o'clock).
iginal musical roman n Empress, based on t reign of Carlotta a n in Mexico, will be t
Hour presentation t ight (WFLA—WLAK—
tarring Gordon MacR
hy Warenskjold.
Hines, Metropolitan O is guest artist on t irestone tomorrow nig
:30 o'clock), singing t
Lacerato Spirito fro canegra, by Verdi, Ro thearted Men and Lara

* * *

HANDL CONDUCT
uqua Symphony Orche ow night (WSUN—8:
Concertato for Orche
nnin, Concertstuck f
Orchestra by Webe r Piano and Orchest with Frank Glaze
Stravinsky's Firebi

odfrey is expected to r Arthur Godfrey Tale
gram tomorrow nig 30 o'clock). He w his home in Vi

102,879) (S 95,953)
Clipping From ORLEANS, LA.
ITEM
26 1953

Of Radi
l Of Fa

ED LIUZZA
al's "Game of the st on Monday will annual Major of Fame game from ield, Cooperstown,
ome of the great time.
g in this year's ex-

Ted Lieuza

by will be on hand plays and provide nd and statistics,
ed by the nation's s writers for Hall
ers, will have his d that day on the r roll of all-time

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 106,476) (S 121,932)

This Clipping From
TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE

JUL 26 1953

Radio Roundup—

Boston Symphony To Present Strauss, Ravel Works Today

By PHIL BARNEY
Tribune Staff Writer

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct Boston Symphony Orchestra in first of four live broadcasts the Berkshire Festival in glewood, Mass., on World ic Festivals this afternoon DAE—2:30 o'clock).

s selections are Divertimento, Richard Strauss; Le Tombeau Couperin, by Ravel; Prokofief's sical Symphony and La Cre- n du Monde, by Milhaud.

aul Strauss is to conduct the C Summer Symphony in his sec- concert this afternoon (WFLA LAK—5 o'clock), opening with ld's American Salute, followed Symphony No. 1 of Shostakovich Chopiniana, orchestral ar- gement by Rogal Lewitsky of al Chopin works.

elen Claire, who created the of Cindy Lou, artful South- charmer, in the Broadway diction of Kiss the Boys dbye, will play the same part the Best Plays radio adapta- tonight (WFLA—WLAK— o'clock).

usic of the Eisteddford, annual al in Wales, will be presented London Column tonight (WSUN 15 o'clock).

ne Russell, who is currently g to prove that gentlemen go brunettes as much as blondes e new film Gentlemen Prefer des, will serve as Lady Editor the week on the Bob Hope Day- Show beginning tomorrow LA—WLAK—10:30 o'clock).

e original musical romance, Golden Empress, based on the ted reign of Carlotta and milian in Mexico, will be the oad Hour presentation to- ow night (WFLA—WLAK—8 ck), starring Gordon MacRae Dorothy Warenskjold.

rome Hines, Metropolitan Op- basso, is guest artist on the e of Firestone tomorrow night LA—8:30 o'clock), singing the Il Lacerato Spirito from m Boccanegra, by Verdi, Rom- 's Stouthearted Men and Lara's ada.

* * *

ALTER HANDL CONDUCTS Chautauqua Symphony Orches- tomorrow night (WSUN—8:30 ck) in Concertato for Orches- by Mennin, Concertstuck for o and Orchestra by Weber, eake for Piano and Orchestra Strauss, with Frank Glazer, ist, and Stravinsky's Firebird e.

thur Godfrey is expected to re- to the Arthur Godfrey Talent ts program tomorrow night AE—8:30 o'clock). He will

A POSER FOR J-J—Moderator Jack Barry, top, and his Juvenile Jury panel, seldom at a loss for words, seem puzzled as they ponder a poser sent in by a listener to their Sunday night broadcast on WFLA. Juvenile Jury members are, center, left to right, Mia-Lan Rogoff, 7; Ronnie Mullozo, 9; Laura Mangels, 7, and bottom, left to right, Douglas Stewart, 5, and Joe Ward, 6.

and Sarasate's Introduction and Tarantelle.

Paul Lavalle will lead Band of America tomorrow night (WFLA —WLAK—9:30 o'clock) in Under the Double Eagle March by J. F. Wagner; Arthur Pryor's The Blue Bells of Scotland, Manhattan Beach March by Sousa, and March and Procession of Bacchus by Delibes.

A May-December romance takes a sinister turn on the Mr. and Mrs. North program Tuesday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

Madeleine Carroll will be guest star in a radio adaptation of the comedy My Favorite Wife on Playhouse on Broadway Wednesday night (WDAE—9 o'clock).

In The Adventures of the Scarlet Pimpernel Wednesday night (WFLA—WLAK—10 o'clock) one of the most valuable leaders of the league is kidnaped.

Paul Olefsky, cellist, will be soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra of Chicago, conducted by Thor Johnson, Wednesday night and Sarasate's Introduction and Tarantelle.

Paul Lavalle will lead Band of America tomorrow night (WFLA —WLAK—9:30 o'clock) in Under the Double Eagle March by J. F. Wagner; Arthur Pryor's The Blue Bells of Scotland, Manhattan Beach March by Sousa, and March and Procession of Bacchus by Delibes.

A May-December romance takes a sinister turn on the Mr. and Mrs. North program Tuesday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

Madeleine Carroll will be guest star in a radio adaptation of the comedy My Favorite Wife on Playhouse on Broadway Wednesday night (WDAE—9 o'clock).

In The Adventures of the Scarlet Pimpernel Wednesday night (WFLA—WLAK—10 o'clock) one of the most valuable leaders of the league is kidnaped.

Paul Olefsky, cellist, will be soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra of Chicago, conducted by Thor Johnson, Wednesday night and the Saint-Saens Concerto in A Minor.

* * *

WILLIAM POWELL will portray a playboy who has been enjoying himself in Europe for 20 years, in Father Came Home, on the Theater broadcast Thursday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

A courier carrying $50,000 for an espionage ring is murdered and the money missing in the case on Counterspy Thursday night (WFLA —WLAK—9:30 o'clock).

Examples of the dramatic artistry of one of the world's foremost living actors, Alec Guinness, will be brought to radio listeners and preserved for posterity on the broadcast of Time Capsule Thursday (WSUN—9:30 o'clock).

Guinness and other performers will be heard in excerpts from Richard III and All's Well That Ends Well, as they are being presented in the current Shakespearean festival in Stratford, Ont. Also on Thursday's program will be Thomas Hay-

Cir. (D 102,879) (S 95,953)

This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
ITEM

JUL 26 1953

ews Of Radio And Television

Hall Of Fame' Ball Game On Air Monday

BY TED LIUZZA

noe-Mutual's "Game of the broadcast on Monday will ight the annual Major ue Hall of Fame game from leday Field, Cooperstown, ., the home of the great ican pastime.

rticipating in this year's ex- ion classic be the Cin- nati Reds the Chica- White Sox, will take field on the of base- historic um.

time is for 11:45 . Sports- rs Al Hel- Dizzy Dean Gene Kirby will be on hand ll the plays and provide background and statistics. n, selected by the nation's and sports writers for Hall me honors, will have his inscribed that day on the um's honor roll of all-time ll greats.

Hall of Fame houses a tion of more than 3000 ll souvenirs including uni-

Ted Liuzza

Isle Tarpon Rodeo will be broadcast at 12:15 p. m. Sunday over WDSU.

Mothers and fathers take heed. Your youths ask the kind of questions from which radio discussion programs can be made, and WNOE-MBS' "Answers for Americans" at 8:30 p. m. Sunday will show it.

This particular broadcast was arranged because of the increasing amount of mailed-in questions the program is receiving from young people. The subject is to be "What's Ahead for American Youth."

Singer Harry Belfonte, a young newcomer to the recording field, will be a guest on "Tony Martin Time" at 7 p. m. Sunday over WDSU-NBC, when Tony spins some of his new RCA-Victor recordings.

MUSIC SUNDAY—High point on Sunday's radio music sced ule:

WWL-CBS, 1:30 p. m., Worl Music Festival, featuring th Boston Symphony Orchestr from the Berkshire Festival i Tanglewood, Mass.

WTIX, 2:05 p. m., Music of th

Grand Isle Tarpon Rodeo and a late news summary will be aired at 9:15 . . . GE Theater presents a comedy, "Hired Mother," at 10:30 . . . Singing star Helen O'Connell, dancers Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander and comedian Billy de Wolfe will guest star on "The Arthur Murray Party at 11. Miss O'Connell will double as hostess for this show in place of Kathryn Murray.

[60]

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUL 26 1953

Radio-TV Music This Week

Looking Ahead With "Burleske"

Walter Hendl's Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra concert Monday (7:30 p.m., WBAP-570) will include a performance of Richard Strauss' "Burleske" for Piano and Orchestra. Hendl has programmed the same work for his 1953-54 Dallas Symphony season with Soloist Donna O'Steen, this year's G. B. Dealey Memorial Award winner.

Hendl's Chautauqua soloist will be Frank Glazer, who will also be heard in the Weber Konzertstueck in F Minor for Piano and Orchestra. The concert will conclude with a Suite from Stravinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu," the 1919 version.

CBS' World Music Festival will originate from the Berkshire Center at Tanglewood Sunday (KRLD, 2:30 p.m.) with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Paul Strauss will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony at 4 p.m. Sunday over WBAP-820 in works of Morton Gould, Shostakovitch and Chopin.

Jerome Hines, basso guest on the Voice of Firestone Monday (WFAA-820 and WFAA-TV, 7:30 p.m.), will sing "Stouthearted Men" from Romberg's "New Moon," the next State Fair Musical. Mildred Miller, the Metropolitan mezzo-soprano, will be heard on the Telephone Hour at 8 p.m. Monday over WFAA-820.

The WRR-FM Sunday music fare will include Honegger's "King David" (2:30 p.m.), Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 7 (5:05 p.m.), Venetian motets (5:30 p.m.) and Schubert's Symphony No. 2 in B Flat Major (6:05 p.m.).

SUNDAY

WORLD MUSIC FESTIVAL: KRLD (CBS), 2:30 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. From the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.
Divertimento After Couperin.....Strauss
Le Tombeau de Couperin.....Ravel
"Classical" Symphony in D Major.....
.....Prokofiev
La Creation du Monde.....Milhaud
PIANO PLAYHOUSE: WFAA-FM (ABC), 3:30 p.m. Louis Ferrante and Louis Teicher, duopianists, and guests.
NBC SUMMER SYMPHONY: WBAP-820 (NBC), 4 p.m. Paul Strauss, conducting.
American Salute.....Gould
Symphony No. 1.....Shostakovitch
Chopiniana.....Chopin-Lewitsky

Cir. (S 34,946)

This Clipping From
PEORIA, ILL.
SUNDAY JOURNAL STAR

JUL 26 1953

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

Propaganda Topic

By B. M. SHEPHERDSON
Radio-TV Editor, Sunday Journal-Star

One of the most controversial subjects of the day, "Is Our International Propaganda Effective?" will be the topic on Northwestern university "Reviewing Stand" (WIRL) at 10:30 this morning and (WGN) at 2:30 this afternoon.

Speakers will be Edward W. Barrett, former assistant secretary of state, whose book, "Truth Is Our Weapon," has just been published, Prof. Martin J. Maloney of the radio and television department, N. U. school of speech, and James N. Tull, former chief of the information division, United States civil service administration in the Ryukyu islands.

• • •

CHARLES MUNCH WILL conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on "World Music Festivals" (WMBD) at 1:30 this afternoon. The program will open with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin), a work for small orchestra which Strauss based on a suite of small pieces for harpsichord by the French composer, Francois Couperin. Ravel's interpretation of the same composer follows in "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

Munch will then conduct the Prokofiev "Classical" symphony in which the radical Prokofiev follows the regular harmonic forms. The work reflects little of the modern complication of his other works. Milhaud's "La Creation du Mone" will close the concert. This work for ballet had its premiere in Paris in 1923. The ballet depicts the creation of the world as interpreted by an aboriginal mind. It makes use of instrumentation and rhythms Milhaud had heard in Harlem and offers his first combination of serious music and jazz.

• • •

"HOW TO PREPARE FOR Retirement" will be the subject of University of Chicago "Round Table" (WMAQ) at 12:30 this afternoon. Speakers, Robert L. B. Roessle, adviser on employe development, employee relations department, Standard Oil Co. of N.J., Charles E. Odell, chief of employee counseling, bureau of employment security, United States department of labor, and Mrs. Elizabeth Breckenridge, executive secretary, Illinois committee on aging.

Aly Ripaa El Ansary of the department of cultural relations in the Egyptian ministry of education, will be a guest of Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright on "It's a Small World" (WMAQ) at 11:15 this morning.

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

8,721)

...pping From
...ALLS, N. Y.
...IMES

...3 1953

...utes of
...od Concert
... Broadcast

... July 23—Sunday
...hire Festival con-
...od will be held in
...Shed, instead of in
...er-Concert Hall as
...uled, because the
...of the concert will
...y the Columbia
...tem in its World
...eries.
...he program to be
...ers of the Boston
...stra under Charles
...es on the air in-
...rauss' Divertimen-
...s "Le Tombeau de
...ievs Classical
...ilhaud's "Le Crea-
...Lukas Foss' "Par-
...ll follow. The con-
...0.

Propasubject ity Re-ard on

...ittle TV
...RUSHTON

..., starring stage and screen
... on WTAG today at 12.15

...SEMARY RICE

...l, "I Love a Mystery."
...ra Britton, co-star on
...Mrs. North detective
...ow visiting in New
... ask the jackpot ques-
...he day as guest on
...ed King's quiz-stunt
... on WTAG's Give and
...norrow at 11:30 a. m.

...e way: For the third
... other night we watched
...t of Candid Camera's
...g Postoffice Box" and
...e third time found it
...lously funny. . . . Pro-
... by the adept Allen Funt,
...d Camera is one of tele-
...s top laugh-producers and
...ave often wondered why
...es not receive more, spon-
...nthusiasm.

Cir. (D 106,476) (S 121,932)

This Clipping From
TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE

JUL 26 1953

Radio Roundup—

...oston Symphony To Present ...trauss, Ravel Works Today

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

By PHIL BARNEY
Tribune Staff Writer

...HARLES MUNCH will conduct ...Boston Symphony Orchestra in ... first of four live broadcasts ...m the Berkshire Festival in ...glewood, Mass., on World ...ic Festivals this afternoon ...DAE—2:30 o'clock).

...is selections are Divertimento, ...Richard Strauss; Le Tombeau ...Couperin, by Ravel; Prokofief's ...ssical Symphony and La Cre... du Monde, by Milhaud.

...aul Strauss is to conduct the ...C Summer Symphony in his sec... concert this afternoon (WFLA ...WLAK—5 o'clock), opening with ...ld's American Salute, followed ...Symphony No. 1 of Shostakovich ... Chopiniana, orchestral ar...gement by Rogal Lewitsky of ...ral Chopin works.

...elen Claire, who created the ...e of Cindy Lou, artful South... charmer, in the Broadway ...oduction of Kiss the Boys ...odbye, will play the same part ...the Best Plays radio adapta... tonight (WFLA—WLAK— ...0 o'clock).

...usic of the Eisteddford, annual ...ival in Wales, will be presented ...London Column tonight (WSUN ...:15 o'clock).

...ne Russell, who is currently ...g to prove that gentlemen go ...brunettes as much as blondes ...he new film Gentlemen Prefer ...ndes, will serve as Lady Editor ...he week on the Bob Hope Day... Show beginning tomorrow ...LA—WLAK—10:30 o'clock).

...e original musical romance, ... Golden Empress, based on the ...ted reign of Carlotta and ...imilian in Mexico, will be the ...road Hour presentation to...row night (WFLA—WLAK—8 ...ock), starring Gordon MacRae ... Dorothy Warenskjold.

...rome Hines, Metropolitan Op... basso, is guest artist on the ...e of Firestone tomorrow night ...LA—8:30 o'clock), singing the ... Il Lacerato Spirito from ...on Boccanegra, by Verdi. Rom... 's Stouthearted Men and Lara's ...nada.

* * *

...ALTER HANDL CONDUCTS ...Chautauqua Symphony Orches... tomorrow night (WSUN—8:30 ...ock) in Concertato for Orches... by Mennin, Concertstuck for ...o and Orchestra by Weber, ...eske for Piano and Orchestra ... Strauss, with Frank Glazer, ...ist, and Stravinsky's Firebird ...e.

...rthur Godfrey is expected to re... to the Arthur Godfrey Talent ...ts program tomorrow night ...AE—8:30 o'clock). He will ...adcast from his home in Vir...

A POSER FOR J-J—Moderator Jack Barry, top, and his Juvenile Jury panel, seldom at a loss for words, seem puzzled as they ponder a poser sent in by a listener to their Sunday night broadcast on WFLA. Juvenile Jury members are, center, left to right, Mia-Lan Rogoff, 7; Ronnie Mullozo, 9; Laura Mangels, 7, and bottom, left to right, Douglas Stewart, 5, and Joe Ward, 6.

and Sarasate's Introduction and Tarantelle.

Paul Lavalle will lead Band of America tomorrow night (WFLA—WLAK—9:30 o'clock) in Under the Double Eagle March by J. F. Wagner; Arthur Pryor's The Blue Bells of Scotland, Manhattan Beach March by Sousa, and March and Procession of Bacchus by Delibes.

A May-December romance takes a sinister turn on the Mr. and Mrs. North program Tuesday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

Madeleine Carroll will be guest star in a radio adaptation of the comedy My Favorite Wife on Playhouse on Broadway Wednesday night (WDAE—9 o'clock).

In The Adventures of the Scarlet Pimpernel Wednesday night (WFLA—WLAK—10 o'clock) one of the most valuable leaders of the league is kidnaped.

Paul Olefsky, cellist, will be soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra of Chicago, conducted by Thor Johnson, Wednesday night (WFLA—WLAK—10:30 o'clock) in the Saint-Saens Concerto in a Minor.

* * *

WILLIAM POWELL will portray a playboy who has been enjoying himself in Europe for 20 years, in Father Came Home, on the Theater broadcast Thursday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

A courier carrying $50,000 for an espionage ring is murdered and the money missing in the case on Counterspy Thursday night (WFLA—WLAK—9:30 o'clock).

Examples of the dramatic artistry of one of the world's foremost living actors, Alec Guinness, will be brought to radio listeners and preserved for posterity on the broadcast of Time Capsule Thursday (WSUN—9:30 o'clock).

Guinness and other performers will be heard in excerpts from Richard III and All's Well That Ends Well, as they are being presented in the current Shakespearean festival in Stratford, Ont. Also on Thursday's program will be Thomas Hay-

Cir. (D 102,879) (S 95,953)

This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
ITEM

JUL 23 1953

...ews Of Radio And Television

...Hall Of Fame' Ball Game On Air Monday

BY TED LIUZZA

...noe-Mutual's "Game of the ... broadcast on Monday will ...light the annual Major ...ue Hall of Fame game from ...bleday Field, Cooperstown, ..., the home of the great ...rican pastime.

...rticipating in this year's ex...ion classic ... be the Cin... nati Reds ... the Chica... White Sox, ... will take ...field on the ... of base... historic ...um.

... time is ... for 11:45 ...n. Sports... ...rs Al Hel... Dizzy Dean ... Gene Kirby will be on hand ...all the plays and provide ... background and statistics. ...an, selected by the nation's ... and sports writers for Hall ...ame honors, will have his ... inscribed that day on the ...um's honor roll of all-time ...ball greats.

...e Hall of Fame houses a ...ction of more than 3000 ...ball souvenirs, including uni... of famous players, fro...

Ted Liuzza

Isle Tarpon Rodeo will be broadcast at 12:15 p. m. Sunday over WDSU.

Mothers and fathers take heed. Your youths ask the kind of questions from which radio discussion programs can be made, and WNOE-MBS' "Answers for Americans" at 8:30 p. m. Sunday will show it.

This particular broadcast was arranged because of the increasing amount of mailed-in questions the program is receiving from young people. The subject is to be "What's Ahead for American Youth."

Singer Harry Belfonte, a young newcomer to the recording field, will be a guest on "Tony Martin Time" at 7 p. m. Sunday over WDSU-NBC, when Tony spins some of his new RCA-Victor recordings.

MUSIC SUNDAY—High point on Sunday's radio music sched...ule:

WWL-CBS, 1:30 p. m., World Music Festival, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.

WTIX, 2:05 p. m., Music of the Grand Isle Tarpon Rodeo and a late news summary will be aired at 9:15 . . . GE Theater presents a comedy, "Hired Mother," at 10:30 . . . Singing star Helen O'Connell, dancers Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander and comedian Billy de Wolfe will guest star on "The Arthur Murray Party at 11. Miss O'Connell will double as hostess for this show in place of Kathryn Murray.

[60]

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL 26 1953

Radio-TV Music This Week

Looking Ahead With "Burleske"

Walter Hendl's Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra concert Monday (7:30 p.m., WBAP-570) will include a performance of Richard Strauss' "Burleske" for Piano and Orchestra. Hendl has programmed the same work for his 1953-54 Dallas Symphony season with Soloist Donna O'Steen, this year's G. B. Dealey Memorial Award winner.

Hendl's Chautauqua soloist will be Frank Glazer, who will also be heard in the Weber Konzertstueck in F Minor for Piano and Orchestra. The concert will conclude with a Suite from Stravinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu," the 1919 version.

CBS' World Music Festival will originate from the Berkshire Center at Tanglewood Sunday (KRLD, 2:30 p.m.) with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Paul Strauss will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony at 4 p.m. Sunday over WBAP-820 in works of Morton Gould, Shostakovitch and Chopin.

Jerome Hines, basso guest on the Voice of Firestone Monday (WFAA-820 and WFAA-TV, 7:30 p.m.), will sing "Stouthearted Men" from Romberg's "New Moon," the next State Fair Musical. Mildred Miller, the Metropolitan mezzo-soprano, will be heard on the Telephone Hour at 8 p.m. Monday over WFAA-820.

The WRR-FM Sunday music fare will include Honegger's "King David" (2:30 p.m.), Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 7 (5:05 p.m.), Venetian motets (5:30 p.m.) and Schubert's Symphony No. 2 in B Flat Major (6:05 p.m.).

SUNDAY

WORLD MUSIC FESTIVAL: KRLD (CBS), 2:30 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. From the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.
Divertimento After Couperin.....Strauss
Le Tombeau de Couperin.....Ravel
"Classical" Symphony in D Major.....Prokofiev
La Creation du Monde.....Milhaud
PIANO PLAYHOUSE: WFAA-570 (ABC), 3:30 p.m. Louis Ferrante and Louis Teicher, duopianists, and guests.
NBC SUMMER SYMPHONY: WBAP-820 (NBC), 4 p.m. Paul Strauss, conducting.
American Salute.....Gould
Symphony No. 1.....Shostakovitch
Chopiniana.....Chopin-Lewitsky

Cir. (S 34,946)

This Clipping From
PEORIA, ILL.
SUNDAY JOURNAL STAR

JUL 26 1953

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

Propaganda Topic

By R. M. SHEPHERDSON
Radio-TV Editor, Sunday Journal-Star

One of the most controversial subjects of the day, "Is Our International Propaganda Effective?" will be the topic on Northwestern university "Reviewing Stand" (WIRL) at 10:30 this morning and (WGN) at 2:30 this afternoon.

Speakers will be Edward W. Barrett, former assistant secretary of state, whose book, "Truth Is Our Weapon," has just been published, Prof. Martin J. Maloney of the radio and television department, N. U. school of speech, and James N. Tull, former chief of the information division, United States civil service administration in the Ryukyu islands.

• • •

CHARLES MUNCH WILL conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on "World Music Festivals" (WMBD) at 1:30 this afternoon. The program will open with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin), a work for small orchestra which Strauss based on a suite of small pieces for harpsichord by the French composer, Francois Couperin. Ravel's interpretation of the same composer follows in "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

Munch will then conduct the Prokofiev "Classical" symphony in which the radical Prokofiev follows the regular harmonic forms. The work reflects little of the modern complication of his other works. Milhaud's "La Creation du Mone" will close the concert. This work for ballet had its premiere in Paris in 1923. The ballet depicts the creation of the world as interpreted by an aboriginal mind. It makes use of instrumentation and rhythms Milhaud had heard in Harlem and offers his first combination of serious music and jazz.

• • •

"HOW TO PREPARE FOR Retirement" will be the subject of University of Chicago "Round Table" (WMAQ) at 12:30 this afternoon. Speakers, Robert L. B. Roessle, adviser on employe development, employee relations department, Standard Oil Co. of N.J.; Charles E. Odell, chief of employee counseling, bureau of employment security, United States department of labor, and Mrs. Elizabeth Breckenridge, executive secretary, Illinois committee on aging.

Aly Ripaa El Ansary of the department of cultural relations in the Egyptian ministry of education, will be a guest of Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright on "It's a Small World" (WMAQ) at 11:15 this morning.

• • •

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

D 8,721)

pping From ALLS, N. Y.
MES

3 1953

utes of od Concert Broadcast

July 23—Sunday shire Festival con- ood will be held in Shed, instead of in ter-Concert Hall as uled, because the of the concert will by the Columbia stem in its World eries.

he program to be ers of the Boston stra under Charles es on the air in- rauss' Divertimen- s "Le Tombeau de iev's Classical lhaud's "Le Crea- Lukas Foss' "Par- l follow. The con- D.

Propa- subject sity Re- ard on a little TV RUSHTON

starring stage and screen on WTAG today at 12.15

ROSEMARY RICE

o serial, "I Love a Myst y." Barbara Britton, co-star on and Mrs. North detective now visiting in New will ask the jackpot ques- of the day as guest on Reed King's quiz-stunts on WTAG's Give and tomorrow at 11:30 a. m.

the way: For the third he other night we watched eat of Candid Camera's ng Postoffice Box" and he third time found it riously funny. . . . Pro- by the adept Allen Funt, d Camera is one of tele- n's top laugh-producers and have often wondered why es not receive more spon- enthusiasm.

Cir. (D 106,476) (S 121,932)

This Clipping From
TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE

JUL 26 1953

Radio Roundup—

oston Symphony To Present trauss, Ravel Works Today

By PHIL BARNEY
Tribune Staff Writer

HARLES MUNCH will conduct Boston Symphony Orchestra in first of four live broadcasts the Berkshire Festival in lewood, Mass., on World c Festivals this afternoon AE—2:30 o'clock).

s selections are Divertimento, Richard Strauss: Le Tombeau Couperin, by Ravel; Prokofiel's sical Symphony and La Cre- du Monde, by Milhaud.

ul Strauss is to conduct the Summer Symphony in his sec- concert this afternoon (WFLA LAK—5 o'clock), opening with d's American Salute, followed mphony No. 1 of Shostakovich Chopiniana, orchestral ar- ement by Rogal Lewitsky of al Chopin works.

elen Claire, who created the of Cindy Lou, artful South- charmer, in the Broadway duction of Kiss the Boys dbye, will play the same part he Best Plays radio adapta- tonight (WFLA—WLAK— o'clock).

sic of the Eisteddford, annual val in Wales, will be presented ondon Column tonight (WSUN 15 o'clock).

ne Russell, who is currently g to prove that gentlemen go runettes as much as blondes e new film Gentlemen Prefer des, will serve as Lady Editor e week on the Bob Hope Day- Show beginning tomorrow LA—WLAK—10:30 o'clock).

e original musical romance, Golden Empress, based on the ted reign of Carlotta and milian in Mexico, will be the oad Hour presentation to- ow night (WFLA—WLAK—8 ck), starring Gordon MacRae Dorothy Warenskjold.

rome Hines, Metropolitan Op- basso, is guest artist on the of Firestone tomorrow night LA—8:30 o'clock), singing the Il Lacerato Spirito from n Boccanegra, by Verdi. Rom- s Stouthearted Men and Lara's ada.

* * *

ALTER HANDL CONDUCTS hautauqua Symphony Orches- omorrow night (WSUN—8:30 ck) in Concertato for Orches- by Mennin, Concertstuck for and Orchestra by Weber, eske for Piano and Orchestra trauss, with Frank Glazer, st, and Stravinsky's Firebird thur Godfrey is expected to re- to the Arthur Godfrey Talent s program tomorrow night E—8:30 o'clock). He will cast from his home in Vir- where he is recovering from cent hip operation.

dred Miller, mezzo soprano of Metropolitan, is guest soloist e Telephone Hour tomorrow (WFLA—WLAK—9 o'clock), ill sing the aria Adieu Forets Tschaikowsky's Joan of Arc ther songs. Donald Voorhees ead the orchestra in Entrance Emperor from Kodaly's folk- Hary Janos, Gade's Jalousie and Sarasate's Introduction and Tarantelle.

A POSER FOR J-J—Moderator Jack Barry, top, and his Juvenile Jury panel, seldom at a loss for words, seem puzzled as they ponder a poser sent in by a listener to their Sunday night broadcast on WFLA. Juvenile Jury members are, center, left to right, Mia-Lan Rogoff, 7; Ronnie Mullozo, 9; Laura Mangels, 7, and bottom, left to right, Douglas Stewart, 5, and Joe Ward, 6.

Paul Lavalle will lead Band of America tomorrow night (WFLA—WLAK—9:30 o'clock) in Under the Double Eagle March by J. F. Wagner; Arthur Pryor's The Blue Bells of Scotland, Manhattan Beach March by Sousa, and March and Procession of Bacchus by Delibes.

A May-December romance takes a sinister turn on the Mr. and Mrs. North program Tuesday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

Madeleine Carroll will be guest star in a radio adaptation of the comedy My Favorite Wife on Playhouse on Broadway Wednesday night (WDAE—9 o'clock).

In The Adventures of the Scarlet Pimpernel Wednesday night (WFLA—WLAK—10 o'clock) one of the most valuable leaders of the league is kidnaped.

Paul Olefsky, cellist, will be soloist with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra of Chicago, conducted by Thor Johnson, Wednesday night the Saint-Saens Concerto in a Minor.

* * *

WILLIAM POWELL will portray a playboy who has been enjoying himself in Europe for 20 years, in Father Came Home, on the Theater broadcast Thursday night (WDAE—8:30 o'clock).

A courier carrying $50,000 for an espionage ring is murdered and the money missing in the case on Counterspy Thursday night (WFLA—WLAK—9:30 o'clock).

Examples of the dramatic artistry of one of the world's foremost living actors, Alec Guinness, will be brought to radio listeners and preserved for posterity on the broadcast of Time Capsule Thursday (WSUN—9:30 o'clock).

Guinness and other performers will be heard in excerpts from Richard III and All's Well That Ends Well, as they are being presented in the current Shakespearean festival in Stratford, Ont. Also on Thursday's program will be Thomas Hay-

And Television

ne' Ball Game On Air Monday

Tarpon Rodeo will be ast at 12:15 p. m. Sun- er WDSU.

rs and fathers take heed. uths ask the kind of from which radio dis- programs can be made, DE-MBS' "Answers for s" at 8:30 p. m. Sunday it.

rticular broadcast was ecause of the increas- mount of mailed-in ques- tions the program is receiving from young people. The subject is to be "What's Ahead for American Youth."

Grand Isle Tarpon Rodeo and a late news summary will be aired at 9:15 . . . GE Theater presents a comedy, "Hired Mother," at 10:30 . . . Singing star Helen O'Connell, dancers, Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander and comedian Billy de Wolfe will guest star on "The Arthur Murray Party at 11. Miss O'Connell will double as hostess for this show in place of Kathryn Murray.

Ted Lloyd

ase- historic m.

time is or 11:45 Sports- s Al Hel- Dizzy Dean

ene Kirby will be on hand l the plays and provide background and statistics. n, selected by the nation's nd sports writers for Hall me honors, will have his inscribed that day on the m's honor roll of all-time ll greats.

Hall of Fame houses a ion of more than 3000 ll souvenirs, including uni- of famous players, trop-

Singer Harry Belfonte, a young newcomer to the recording field, will be a guest on "Tony Martin Time" at 7 p. m. Sunday over WDSU-NBC, when Tony spins some of his new RCA-Victor recordings.

MUSIC SUNDAY—High point on Sunday's radio music sced ule:

WWL-CBS, 1:30 p. m., Worl Music Festival, featuring th Boston Symphony Orchestr from the Berkshire Festival i Tanglewood, Mass.

WTIX, 2:05 p. m., Music of th

[60]

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUL 26 1953

Radio-TV Music This Week

Looking Ahead With "Burleske"

Walter Hendl's Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra concert Monday (7:30 p.m., WBAP-570) will include a performance of Richard Strauss' "Burleske" for Piano and Orchestra. Hendl has programmed the same work for his 1953-54 Dallas Symphony season with Soloist Donna O'Steen, this year's G. B. Dealey Memorial Award winner.

Hendl's Chautauqua soloist will be Frank Glazer, who will also be heard in the Weber Konzertstuesk in F Minor for Piano and Orchestra. The concert will conclude with a Suite from Stravinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu," the 1919 version.

CBS' World Music Festival will originate from the Berkshire Center at Tanglewood Sunday (KRLD, 2:30 p.m.) with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Paul Strauss will conduct the NBC Summer Symphony at 4 p.m. Sunday over WBAP-820 in works of Morton Gould, Shostakovitch and Chopin.

Jerome Hines, basso guest on the Voice of Firestone Monday (WFAA-820 and WFAA-TV, 7:30 p.m.), will sing "Stouthearted Men" from Romberg's "New Moon," the next State Fair Musical. Mildred Miller, the Metropolitan mezzo-soprano, will be heard on the Telephone Hour at 8 p.m. Monday over WFAA-820.

The WRR-FM Sunday music fare will include Honegger's "King David" (2:30 p.m.), Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 7 (5:05 p.m.), Venetian motets (5:30 p.m.) and Schubert's Symphony No. 2 in B Flat Major (6:05 p.m.).

SUNDAY

WORLD MUSIC FESTIVAL: KRLD (CBS), 2:30 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. From the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. Divertimento After Couperin.....Strauss
Le Tombeau de Couperin.....Ravel
"Classical" Symphony in D Major.....Prokofiev
La Creation du Monde.....Milhaud
PIANO PLAYHOUSE: WFAA-570 (ABC), 2:30 p.m. Louis Ferrante and Louis Teicher, duopianists, and guests.
NBC SUMMER SYMPHONY: WBAP-820 (NBC), 4 p.m. Paul Strauss, conducting.
American Salute.....Gould
Symphony No. 1.....Shostakovitch
Chopiniana.....Chopin-Lewitzky

Cir. (S 34,946)

This Clipping From
PEORIA, ILL.
SUNDAY JOURNAL STAR
JUL 26 1953

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

Propaganda Topic

By R. M. SHEPHERDSON
Radio-TV Editor, Sunday Journal-Star

One of the most controversial subjects of the day, "Is Our International Propaganda Effective?" will be the topic on Northwestern university "Reviewing Stand" (WIRL) at 10:30 this morning and (WGN) at 2:30 this afternoon.

Speakers will be Edward W. Barrett, former assistant secretary of state, whose book, "Truth Is Our Weapon," has just been published, Prof. Martin J. Maloney of the radio and television department, N. U. school of speech, and James N. Tull, former chief of the information division, United States civil service administration in the Ryukyu islands.

• • •

CHARLES MUNCH WILL conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on "World Music Festivals" (WMBD) at 1:30 this afternoon. The program will open with Richard Strauss' "Divertimento" (after Couperin), a work for small orchestra which Strauss based on a suite of small pieces for harpsichord by the French composer, Francois Couperin. Ravel's interpretation of the same composer follows in "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

Munch will then conduct the Prokofiev "Classical" symphony in which the radical Prokofiev follows the regular harmonic forms. The work reflects little of the modern complication of his other works. Milhaud's "La Creation du Mone" will close the concert. This work for ballet had its premiere in Paris in 1923. The ballet depicts the creation of the world as interpreted by an aboriginal mind. It makes use of instrumentation and rhythms Milhaud had heard in Harlem and offers his first combination of serious music and jazz.

• • •

"HOW TO PREPARE FOR Retirement" will be the subject of University of Chicago "Round Table" (WMAQ) at 12:30 this afternoon. Speakers, Robert L. B. Roessle, adviser on employe development, employee relations department, Standard Oil Co. of N.J.; Charles E. Odell, chief of employee counseling, bureau of employment security, United States department of labor, and Mrs. Elizabeth Breckenridge, executive secretary, Illinois committee on aging.

Aly Ripaa El Ansary of the department of cultural relations in the Egyptian ministry of education, will be a guest of Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright on "It's a Small World" (WMAQ) at 11:15 this morning.

• • •

Cir. (D 143,029)
This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

WEEKEND RADIO

Gene Autry Moves After 14 Years

Gene Autry and his Melody Ranch Gang in their 14th year of broadcasting hit the radio trail at a new day and time beginning Sunday at 6 p. m. over WGAR. The Autry show has been heard over the CBS network weekly since Jan. 7, 1940, interrupted only by Autry's wartime service with the Army Air Transport Service from 1942 to 1945.

Long a radio cowboy favorite, Autry is a real life cowboy from Tioga, Tex. Encouraged by the late Will Rogers to continue his singing and guitar strumming, he became America's first singing cowboy movie and radio star.

Autry will be "Back in the Saddle Again" with his half-hour format of comedy, music and drama. He is aided by comedian Pat Buttram, the Cass County Boys and the Bluejeans. "Broadway is My Beat," starring Larry Thor, moves into the former Autry spot at 8 p. m. Saturday over WGAR.

Putt-by-Putt Story

Golf enthusiasts will want to listen to the broadcasts of the All-American and World Championship Golf Tournaments on WHK at 7 p. m. Sunday. Sportscaster Harry Wismer will be on the greens and fairways of the Tam O'Shanter Country Club in Chicago to give a putt-by-putt description.

The musical merry-go-round has a brass ring for everyone, whatever the taste may be. Followers of the classics can hear Phillipine-born soprano Diane Moncado in her "career performance" debut over WHK at 10 p. m. Saturday. Mrs. Moncado, wife of guerilla General Hilario Moncado, sings the "One Fine Day" aria from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" with the Theater of the Air summertime concert orchestra. Baritone William Shriner is also featured on the program.

Sunday's classics are highlighted by the second Berkshire Music Festival broadcast from Tanglewood, Mass., over WGAR at 2:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux conducts the all-Tchaikovsky program.

Summer Symphony

Robert Lawrence is guest conductor of the Summer Symphony Orchestra, WTAM at 5 p. m. Sunday. His selections include Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E Flat. This is Lawrence's first appearance with the orchestra.

Met Opera's Jean Madeira, contralto, and tenor Robert Rounseville of the New York City Opera are the featured artists of "Summer in St. Louis," WGAR at 6:30 p. m. Miss Madeira will sing selections from "Carmen." Rounseville offers "Be My Love" and "Then You'll Remember Me" for his portion of the program.

BUSY BEE—Jean Gillespie is a favorite on CBS Radio's "Theater Of Today," "Guiding Light" and "Grand Central Station." What's more, she appears in TV shows now and then.

Cir. (D 261,218)
This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y. NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

Bernstein, Winning Orator, On Radio Sunday Night

By RAY FINCH

JOEL M. BERNSTEIN of Buffalo, national winner of the American Legion's annual oratorical contest, will address a nation-wide radio audience Sunday night on "The Constitution." The youthful speaker will take the place of vacationing ABC commentator Paul Harvey. His address will be heard locally on WKBW at 11 o'clock.

Bernstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bernstein of 151 Hamlin Rd., won the national speaking competition together with a college scholarship last April 20. The program will originate in Chicago, where the local youth also is scheduled to make an address on television. The telecast will not be carried locally.

Joel Bernstein

On his daily afternoon commentary, heard on WKBW at 1:15, Harvey is being replaced by Gunnar Back, well-known reporter and commentator. Harvey returns to the air Aug. 16.

Hear and There

Pierre Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program on WGR Sunday evening at 9:30. The broadcast was recorded at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. . . . Vice President Nixon's address before the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Milwaukee will be a WKBW feature Monday afternoon at 1:30 . . . In observance of the eighth anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima, a devotional program recorded on the Japanese site will be broadcast by WBEN at 9:45 tomorrow morning.

The Sauter-Finnegan Orchestra, fastest-rising band in America, will be heard from the Blue Note in Chicago on WBEN at 12:05 tonight.

After several years as a Saturday evening program, the Gene Autry show is being shifted to Sunday evenings on CBS. WGR, however, will record the program and continue to broadcast it Saturday nights, skipping tonight's show.

Margaret Phillips, well-known for her appearances in TV drama, is co-starred with Paul McGrath in the Best Plays adaptation of "There's Always Juliet" on WBEN Sunday evening at 8:30.

TONIGHT'S FIGHT

There'll be no love lost in the City of Brotherly Love tonight when two whirlwind Philadelphia fighters, Percy Basset and Bolden Abrams, meet in a 10-round featherweight bout to be telecast from the Met Stadium, Philadelphia, at 9 over WXEL.

For Early Birds

For early morning risers, WG presents the Renfro Valley A All-Day Sing at 8:30 a. m. Sunday. Thousands from all over the country gather in the Kentucky Appalachians for this unique American folk song fest. Beginning about midnight the first Saturday in August the singing of hymns and folk songs continues until late Sunday afternoon.

Cleveland's new 50-piece Municipal Band is aired for the first time over WGAR at 4:30 p. m. Sunday. Directed by Milton W. Foy, the program includes Strauss' "Tales of the Vienna Woods" and Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

John Van Druten's 'There's Always Juliet" is the Best Plays production Sunday at 8:30 p. m. on WTAM. Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath portray the English girl and American architect who fall in love over a cup of tea.

New Quiz Show

"How's the Family" quiz show makes its radio bow over WHK at 9:30 p. m. Sunday. Emcee Marshall Kent asks questions based on family situations suggested by listeners. The finalists participate in a two-minute sketch about home life and the best actor gets a chance at the jackpot prize.

The children have a treat in store Sunday at 12:30 p. m. when WGAR's Fairytale Theater dramatizes "The Trumpeter of Krakow."

Judy Tillman, substituting for vacationing Joan Miller, acts as narrator. The cast includes Jim Crankshaw, Alan Howes, Herb Schmitt, William Wright and Nora Pollock.

Cir. (D 196,041) (S 208,081)
This Clipping From
PORTLAND, ORE. OREGON JOURNAL
AUG 2 1953

B-MIKE

BY WILLIAM MOYES

MOYES: Sure feel sorry for W. Y., poor young wife her side, but would she trade places with us? No, she puts up with one man, we with dozens—and thank God we don't have to be bothered with them except when we are working.—Virginia N., Portland.

★ ★ ★

MOYES:—Why the heck did KOIN have to put Robert Q's Waxworks on at such an outrageous hour as 10:30—and on Sundays, too? I used to listen to it at 8:30 in the middle of the week. Why did they have to change it?—P. A. F.

★ ★ ★

PIERRE MONTEUX will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program in the second of four broadcasts over KNX-CBS Radio from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on KOIN at 10:30 a. m.

Monteux has selected two Tchaikovsky works, the "Serenade for Strings in C" and the "Symphony No. 5 in E minor." James Fassett is commentator.

★ ★ ★

WHEN AN EX-CONVICT is invited into the home of his younger brother, it sets the scene for the case called "Murder in the Vacant Room," "True Detective Mysteries," KPOJ at 2:30.

★ ★ ★

ROBERT LAWRENCE will direct the NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra in a concert on KGW at 7:30 p. m. The program will open with Hector Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" overture. The "Symphony No. 39 in E-Flat Major" by Mozart will follow. For the second half of the program Lawrence has chosen the suite from Ravel's ballet "Mother Goose" and Offenbach's overture to "La Belle Helene."

Guest artists on the Concert Hour, KGW at 8:30 p. m., will be Heitor Villa-Lobos, Brazilian composer; pianist Paulena Carter and Soprano Georgia Laster. Villa-Lobos will conduct one of his own works.

★ ★ ★

TV PROGRAMS—Boy Scout Jamboree, 1 p. m. . . . Theatre at 5, "The Wine of St. Albans." . . . Studio One at 7, "Shadow of a Man." . . . TV Theatre at 8, "The Cipher," . . . Texas Rasslin' at 11:15 with Dizzy Davis vs. Duke Keomuka.

Journal

Cir. (D 102,261) (S 105,826)
This Clipping From
KNOXVILLE, TENN. NEWS-SENTINEL
AUG 2 - 1953

Pick of the Week's Listening

WALTER ABEL, the visiting movie star who canceled a plane reservation to stay in Knoxville Friday and appear on a program in behalf of retarded children, will be heard on the WNOX Forum Tuesday at 10 p. m.

Cliff Allen is moderator for the radio station and other guests are Dr. S. A. Webster, chief clinical psychologist at Eastern State Hospital; Mrs. Lillian Pedigo, supervisor of special education for Knox County Schools; Ted Ballard, also of the County School system; and Mrs. Dorothea Forester, president of the Knox County Council for Retarded Children. The program was taped before Mr. Abel, who came for the premiere of the Grace Moore movie, left the city.

* * *

AN ALL-Tschaikowsky program will be the offering of Pierre Monteux who conducts the second of the summer series from the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony. The WNOX program at 2:30 will bring Serenade for Strings and the Symphony No. 5 in E Minor.

* * *

THE NBC Summer Symphony, under the direction of Robert Lawrence, an American conductor, will be heard over WROL at 5 today. The music includes Berlioz' Beatrice and Benedict, Ravel's Mother Goose Suite; and the [illegible] at 6 p. m. over WNOX. The program was formerly heard at 8:30.

* * *

A HANDFUL of ever-blooming favorites by songwriter Harry Warren will be in the spotlight at 8:05 p. m. on WBIR's American Music Hall.

* * *

SPORTS ENTHUSIASTS will want to listen to WKGN at 7 p. m. for Harry Wismer's resume of the All-American Golf Tournament from the Tam O' Shanter Club in Chicago.

* * *

HOW'S THE Family?—a mirthful man and wife quiz show becomes a regular program on WKGN at 9:30 tonight. Husbands and wives compete as opponents with questions based on family situations. Marshall Kent is quizmaster.

* * *

AT 9 P. M. tomorrow WBIR will carry Vice President Richard Nixon's speech to the 54th Annual Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

* * *

GUESTS OF Mrs. Ellie Moore and WBIR Monday at 11 a. m. will be Boy Scouts Hal Clements, Ralph Smith and Tom Hodge who will report on their trip to the Jamboree in California.

* * *

THE USUAL NBC Monday night music lineup will bring the following stars to WROL:

Baritone Thomas L. Thomas at 8:30; pianist Grant Johanneson at 9 playing the Liszt arrangement of Schubert's Wanderer Fantasy and several Chopin selections.

Paul LaValle's band will give the foremost service songs a rehearing at 9:30.

[61]

Cir. (D 143,029)
This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

WEEKEND RADIO

Gene Autry Moves After 14 Years

Gene Autry and his Melody Ranch Gang in their 14th year of broadcasting hit the radio trail at a new day and time beginning Sunday at 6 p. m. over WGAR. The Autry show has been heard over the CBS network weekly since Jan. 7, 1940, interrupted only by Autry's wartime service with the Army Air Transport Service from 1942 to 1945.

Long a radio cowboy favorite, Autry is a real life cowboy from Tioga, Tex. Encouraged by the late Will Rogers to continue his singing and guitar strumming, he became America's first singing cowboy movie and radio star.

Autry will be "Back in the Saddle Again" with his half-hour format of comedy, music and drama. He is aided by comedian Pat Buttram, the Cass County Boys and the Bluejeans. "Broadway is My Beat," starring Larry Thor, moves into the former Autry spot at 8 p. m. Saturday over WGAR.

Putt-by-Putt Story

Golf enthusiasts will want to listen to the broadcasts of the All-American and World Championship Golf Tournaments on WHK at 7 p. m. Sunday. Sportscaster Harry Wismer will be on the greens and fairways of the Tam O'Shanter Country Club in Chicago to give a putt-by-putt description.

The musical merry-go-round has a brass ring for everyone, whatever the taste may be. Followers of the classics can hear Phillipine-born soprano Diane Moncado in her "career performance" debut over WHK at 10 p. m. Saturday. Mrs. Moncado, wife of guerilla General Hilario Moncado, sings the "One Fine Day" aria from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" with the Theater of the Air summertime concert orchestra. Baritone William Shriner is also featured on the program.

Sunday's classics are highlighted by the second Berkshire Music Festival broadcast from Tanglewood, Mass., over WGAR at 2:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux conducts the all-Tchaikovsky program.

Summer Symphony

Robert Lawrence is guest conductor of the Summer Symphony Orchestra, WTAM at 5 p. m. Sunday. His selections include Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E Flat. This is Lawrence's first appearance with the orchestra.

Met Opera's Jean Madeira, contralto, and tenor Robert Rounseville of the New York City Opera are the featured artists of "Summer in St. Louis," WGAR at 6:30 p. m. Miss Madeira will sing selections from "Carmen." Rounseville offers "Be My Love" and "Then You'll Remember Me" for his portion of the program.

BUSY BEE—Jean Gillespie is a favorite on CBS Radio's "Theater Of Today," "Guiding Light" and "Grand Central Station." What's more, she appears in TV shows now and then.

Cir. (D 281,218)
This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS
AUG 1 - 1953

Bernstein, Winning Orator, On Radio Sunday Night

By RAY FINCH

JOEL M. BERNSTEIN of Buffalo, national winner of the American Legion's annual oratorical contest, will address a nation-wide radio audience Sunday night on "The Constitution." The youthful speaker will take the place of vacationing ABC commentator Paul Harvey. His address will be heard locally on WKBW at 11 o'clock.

Bernstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bernstein of 151 Hamlin Rd., won the national speaking competition together with a college scholarship last April 20. The program will originate in Chicago, where the local youth also is scheduled to make an address on television. The telecast will not be carried locally.

Joel Bernstein

On his daily afternoon commentary, heard on WKBW at 1:15, Harvey is being replaced by Gunnar Back, well-known reporter and commentator. Harvey returns to the air Aug. 16.

Hear and There

Pierre Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program on WGAR Sunday evening at 9:30. The Best [illegible] at 8:30 cast was recorded at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. . . . Vice President Nixon's address before the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Milwaukee will be a WKBW feature Monday afternoon at 1:30 . . . In observance of the eighth anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima, a devotional program recorded on the Japanese site will be broadcast by WBEN at 9:45 tomorrow morning.

The Sauter-Finnegan Orchestra, fastest-rising band in America, will be heard from the Blue Note in Chicago on WBEN at 12:05 tonight.

After several years as a Saturday evening program, the Gene Autry show is being shifted to Sunday evenings on CBS. WGR, however, will record the program and continue to broadcast it Saturday nights, skipping tonight's show.

Margaret Phillips, well-known for her appearances in TV drama, is co-starred with Paul McGrath in the Best Plays adaptation of "There's Always Juliet" on WBEN [illegible] at 8:30

TONIGHT'S FIGHT

There'll be no love lost in the City of Brotherly Love tonight when two whirlwind Philadelphia fighters, Percy Basset and Bolden Abrams, meet in a 10-round featherweight bout to be telecast from the Met Stadium, Philadelphia, at 9 over WXEL.

For Early Birds

For early morning risers, WG presents the Renfro Valley A All-Day Sing at 8:30 a. m. Sunday. Thousands from all over the country gather in the Kentucky Appalachians for this unique American folk song fest. Beginning about midnight the first Saturday in August the singing of hymns and folk songs continues until late Sunday afternoon.

Cleveland's new 50-piece Municipal Band is aired for the first time over WGAR at 4:30 p. m. Sunday. Directed by Milton W. Foy, the program includes Strauss' "Tales of the Vienna Woods" and Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

John Van Druten's 'There's Always Juliet" is the Best Plays production Sunday at 8:30 p. m. on WTAM. Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath portray the English girl and American architect who fall in love over a cup of tea.

New Quiz Show

"How's the Family" quiz show makes its radio bow over WHK at 9:30 p. m. Sunday. Emcee Marshall Kent asks questions based on family situations suggested by listeners. The finalists participate in a two-minute sketch about home life and the best actor gets a chance at the jackpot prize.

The children have a treat in store Sunday at 12:30 p. m. when WGAR's Fairytale Theater dramatizes "The Trumpeter of Krakow."

Judy Tillman, substituting for vacationing Joan Miller, acts as narrator. The cast includes Jim Crankshaw, Alan Howes, Herb Schmitt, William Wright and Nora Pollock.

Cir. (D 196,041) (S 208,081)
This Clipping From PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL
AUG 2 1953

B-MIKE

BY WILLIAM MOYES

MOYES: Sure feel sorry for W. Y.. poor young wife her side, but would she trade places with us? No, she puts up with one man, we with dozens—and thank God we don't have to be bothered with them except when we are working.—Virginia N., Portland.

★ ★ ★

MOYES:—Why the heck did KOIN have to put Robert Q's Waxworks on at such an outrageous hour as 10:30—and on Sundays, too? I used to listen to it at 8:30 in the middle of the week. Why did they have to change it?—P. A. F.

★ ★ ★

PIERRE MONTEUX will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program in the second of four broadcasts over KNX-CBS Radio from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on KOIN at 10:30 a. m.

Monteux has selected two Tchaikovsky works, the "Serenade for Strings in C" and the "Symphony No. 5 in E minor." James Fassett is commentator.

★ ★ ★

WHEN AN EX-CONVICT is invited into the home of his younger brother, it sets the scene for the case called "Murder in the Vacant Room," "True Detective Mysteries," KPOJ at 2:30.

★ ★ ★

ROBERT LAWRENCE will direct the NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra in a concert on KGW at 7:30 p. m. The program will open with Hector Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" overture. The "Symphony No. 39 in E-Flat Major" by Mozart will follow. For the second half of the program Lawrence has chosen the suite from Ravel's ballet "Mother Goose" and Offenbach's overture to "La Belle Helene."

Guest artists on the Concert Hour, KGW at 8:30 p. m., will be Heitor Villa-Lobos, Brazilian composer; pianist Paulena Carter and Soprano Georgia Laster. Villa-Lobos will conduct one of his own works.

★ ★ ★

TV PROGRAMS—Boy Scout Jamboree, 1 p. m. . . . Theatre at 5, "The Wine of St. Albans." . . . Studio One at 7, "Shadow of a Man." . . . TV Theatre at 8, "The Cipher." . . . Texas Rasslin' at 11:15 with Dizzy Davis vs. Duke Keomuka.

Journal

Cir. (D 102,261) (S 105,826)
This Clipping From
KNOXVILLE, TENN.
NEWS-SENTINEL
AUG 2 - 1953

Pick of the Week's Listening

WALTER ABEL, the visiting movie star who canceled a plane reservation to stay in Knoxville Friday and appear on a program in behalf of retarded children, will be heard on the WNOX Forum Tuesday at 10 p. m.

Cliff Allen is moderator for the radio station and other guests are Dr. S. A. Webster, chief clinical psychologist at Eastern State Hospital; Mrs. Lillian Pedigo, supervisor of special education for Knox County Schools; Ted Ballard, also of the County School system; and Mrs. Dorothea Forester, president of the Knox County Council for Retarded Children. The program was taped before Mr. Abel, who came for the premiere of the Grace Moore movie, left the city.

* * *

AN ALL-Tschaikowsky program will be the offering of Pierre Monteux who conducts the second of the summer series from the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony. The WNOX program at 2:30 will bring Serenade for Strings and the Symphony No. 5 in E Minor.

* * *

THE NBC Summer Symphony, under the direction of Robert Lawrence, an American conductor, will be heard over WROL at 5 today. The music includes Berlioz' Beatrice and Benedict, Ravel's Mother Goose Suite; and the [illegible] at 6 p. m. over WNOX. The program was formerly heard at 8:30.

* * *

A HANDFUL of ever-blooming favorites by songwriter Harry Warren will be in the spotlight at 8:05 p. m. on WBIR's American Music Hall.

* * *

SPORTS ENTHUSIASTS will want to listen to WKGN at 7 p. m. for Harry Wismer's resume of the All-American Golf Tournament from the Tam O' Shanter Club in Chicago.

* * *

HOW'S THE Family?—a mirthful man and wife quiz show becomes a regular program on WKGN at 9:30 tonight. Husbands and wives compete as opponents with questions based on family situations. Marshall Kent is quizmaster.

* * *

AT 9 P. M. tomorrow WBIR will carry Vice President Richard Nixon's speech to the 54th Annual Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

* * *

GUESTS OF Mrs. Ellie Moore and WBIR Monday at 11 a. m. will be Boy Scouts Hal Clements, Ralph Smith and Tom Hodge who will report on their trip to the Jamboree in California.

* * *

THE USUAL NBC Monday night music lineup will bring the following stars to WROL:

Baritone Thomas L. Thomas at 8:30; pianist Grant Johanneson at 9 playing the Liszt arrangement of Schubert's Wanderer Fantasy and several Chopin selections.

Paul LaValle's band will give the foremost service songs a rehearing at 9:30.

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
AUG 9 1953

Radio-TV M

Kilgore Soloist

Van Cliburn, 1952 winner of G. B. Dealey Memorial Award, [illegible] be soloist with Wa[illegible] the Chautauqua Sy[illegible]hestra at 7:30 p.m. M[illegible] WBAP-820.

[illegible] will play the Tchaikov[illegible]n B Flat Minor for Pi[illegible]estra. A native of [illegible] was heard last sea[illegible] Dallas Symphony, He[illegible] as a part of his Dea[illegible]

Korsakov's "Sched[illegible] make up the orchest[illegible] the weekly broadc[illegible] Chautauqua Institute MILLER'S "Borodi[illegible] Viola and Orchest[illegible] on the Sunday broa[illegible] NBC Summer Sy[illegible] composer conductin[illegible] on WBAP-820. Carlo[illegible] be soloist.

[illegible]ranos will take ov[illegible]al programs Monda[illegible]e Conner will be hear[illegible]e of Firestone at 7:[illegible] WFAA-820, and on th[illegible] one-half hour later[illegible]son will be the Tele[illegible]soloist. At 7 p.m., Dor[illegible]kjold stars with Gor[illegible] on the Railroad Hour[illegible]20.

[illegible]regor Piatigorsky and [illegible]asquale will be heard

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Clr. (D 76,911) (S 132,777)
This Clipping From
TULSA, OKLA. WORLD
AUG 2 1953

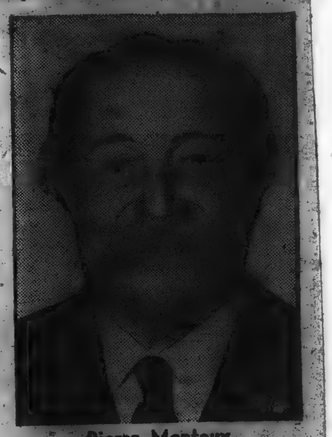
Music On the Air

Summer Music Festival

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the [illegible] Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on the Summer Music Festival at 1:30 p. m. Sunday over CBS and KTUL.

Monteux will open the program with the Tchaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tchaikovsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.



Pierre Monteux

American Music Hall

Hit songs by Harry Warren that have kept America singing and dancing for years will be used on the ABC Radio "American Music Hall," broadcast over KRMG on Sunday at 6:05 p. m.

"Lullaby of Broadway," "I Only Have Eyes for You," "Forty-Second Street" and "I'll String Along With You" will get star billing on the two-hour musical show.

NBC Summer Symphony

Robert Lawrence will direct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra in the concert at 4 p. m. Sunday over KVOO. This will be Lawrence's first appearance as director of the NBC musicians.

Lawrence was critic, writer and teacher before turning his complete attention to conducting. He conducted largely for ballet and until last season was director of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Symphony orchestra. He also has conducted in many European countries.

The program will open with Hector Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" overture. The Symphony No. 39 in E-Flat major by Mozart will follow. For the second half of the program Lawrence has chosen the suite from Ravel's ballet "Mother Goose" and Offenbach's infectiously gay overture to "La Belle Helene."

Chautauqua Symphony

Excerpts from Richard Wagner's comic opera "Die Meistersinger" will highlight the Chautauqua Symphony orchestra broadcast at 7:30 p. m. Monday over KRMG.

Among the other musical presentations will be the overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" and Tchaikovsky's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D major with Mischa Mischakoff as violin soloist.

The hour and a half musical also includes Strauss' tone poem, [illegible] opus 20.

[illegible] Hour

[illegible] immortal works of [illegible] Mendelssohn's "Elijah" inspiration for Lawrence's original romance. [illegible] of Song," starring [illegible]acRae and Dorothy [illegible] the Railroad Hour [illegible] Telephone Hour broadcast at 8 p. m. Monday over NBC and KVOO. He will feature three numbers, assisted by Donald Voorhees and the Bell Telephone orchestra.

For his major work, Johannesen has chosen the brilliant final part of Fantasy in C major, also known as "The Wandered." Originally composed by Schubert for piano solo, the music so intrigued Franz Liszt that he rewrote the score for piano and orchestra—the form in which it will be performed on this program.

Johannesen also will play two of Chopin's most famous compositions. The first one will be the familiar "Berceuse," or "Cradle Song" and the second will be the vibrant "Revolutionary Etude."

Voorhees and the orchestra will highlight the concert with "Hungarian Dance" from the Suite entitled, "Ruralia Hungarica," written by the contemporary Hungarian composer, Ernest Dohanyi. This suite is based on old folk melodies of Hungary.

The orchestra will open the program with a medley of songs written some years ago by Fritz Kreisler from the musical comedy, "Apple Blossoms."

Enchanted Hour

Two Dvorak compositions are to be featured by the Enchanted Hour at 7:30 p. m. over Mutual and KAKC. Henry Weber conducts the orchestra for Dvorak's "Furiant" and "Schatz Waltzes." Soloist Raymond Sharp will be heard singing Malette's "David and Goliath" plus three other selections.

This Clipping From
HOUSTON, TEX. CHRONICLE
AUG 2 1953

Radio Starbeams

Gene Autry Show On Sunday Now

Cowboy Gene Autry is moving his Melody Ranch gang into the schedule tonight.

For 14 years, Autry and his bunch have been regular features on the coast-to-coast airways, and for the past couple of years they've held down a Saturday night spot on the network.

But starting today, they'll take up permanent residence at 8:30 p.m. on CBS-KTRH.

It was on his radio show that Autry introduced some of the tunes that were later top hits in the nation—"Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Peter Cottontail," and his theme, "Back in the Saddle Again."

Along with the cowboy star will be Comedian Pat Buttram, the Cass County Boys and the Bluejeans.

* * *

A series of five broadcasts featuring music written for and inspired by the Catholic church will be presented, starting today, on the Catholic Hour, 1 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

The series marks the fiftieth anniversary of the "Motu Proprio" on sacred music by Pope Pius X, which set down principles regarding sacred music for formal liturgical ceremonies of the church.

Among the choral groups to be heard are the Sistine Chapel choir, directed by Msgr. Dominic Bartolucci; the Welsh Chorale, and the Trappist Monks choir of Cistercian Abbey in France.

* * *

Latin American Story: Bill Costello interviews Fernando Berckemeyer, Peruvian ambassador; 11 a.m., CBS-KTRH.

* * *

Game of the Day: Chicago at Washington in the American League; 1 p.m., MBS-KTHT.

* * *

World Music Festival: Pierre Monteaux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program, including his Serenade for String Orchestra in C major, and Symphony No. 5 in E minor; 1:30 p.m., CBS-KTRH.

* * *

Best Plays: Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath in "There's Always Juliet," the love story of an American architect and an English girl; 7:30 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Barrie Craig: A beautiful woman's eagerness to confess to a murder arouses Barrie's suspicion in "The Golden Bullet," 9 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Robert Q. Lewis Waxworks: Composer Richard Rodgers visits with Robert Q.; 10:30 p.m., CBS-KTRH.

Clr. (S 22,515)
This Clipping From
WILMINGTON, DEL. STAR
AUG 2 - 1953

Music Festival Program Again At Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on "World Music Festivals" over CBS Radio today.

Soprano Elaine Malbin will be soloist on "The Music Room," and will present songs in English, Spanish and Italian.

Jean Madeira and Robert Rounseville will be soloists under the baton of Edwin MacArthur in excerpts from Bizet's "Carmen" and other operatic arias on "Summer in St. Louis," now heard on Sunday afternoons.

Details of CBS Radio music programs follow:

TODAY

9:00-9:15 a. m.—"The Music Room"—Elaine Malbin, soprano soloist.
Lilliyay ..... Warlock
Coplas de cero dulce ..... Obradors
Senza Mama, mio caro bambino, from "Suor Angelica" ..... Puccini
Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child ..... Trad.
9:30-10:00 a. m.—E. Power Biggs Organ Program (from Busch-Reisinger Museum, Cambridge, Mass., via WEEI, Boston):
Pastorial in C major ..... Zipoli
Suite of Three ..... Bach
Sinfonia to Cantata No. 104
Chorale prelude, "All Glory Be to God"
Sinfonia to Cantata No. 156
Concerto No. 3 in G major ..... Soler
11:00-11:30 a. m.—Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Program. J. Spencer Cornwall, conductor. Alexander Schreiner, organist. Via KSL, Salt Lake City.
Give Unto the Meek ..... Mozart
Save Us, Oh Lord ..... Matthews
Sing to the Lord ..... Pitoni
Come, Thou Fount ..... Wyeth-Cornwall
Hallelujah, from "Mount of Olives" ..... Beethoven
Organ: Tuba Tune ..... Lang
Night ..... Jenkins
Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me ..... Gould
2:30-4:00 p. m.—"World Music Festivals"—Pierre Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. James Fassett, music commentator.
Serenade for Strings in C major ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 5 in E minor ..... Tchaikovsky
6:30-7:00 p. m.—"Summer in St. Louis"—Jean Madeira, soprano, and Robert Rounseville, tenor, with St. Louis Opera Orchestra conducted by Edwin MacArthur. Via KMOX, St. Louis.
Strike Up the Band ..... Gershwin
A Wonderful Guy ..... Rodgers
Habanera and Seguidilla, from "Carmen" ..... Bizet
I Whistle a Happy Tune ..... Rodgers
Then You'll Remember Me, from "The Bohemian Girl" ..... Balfe

WEDNESDAY

12:00-12:30 p. m.—Grant Park Symphony Orchestra, from Chicago, Mr. Maurice Abravanel, conductor, Louis Kaufman, violin soloist. Via WBBM, Chicago.
Overture to "Oberon" ..... Weber
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in E minor ..... Mendelssohn
Emperor Waltz ..... Strauss
Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" ..... Rossini

This Clipping From
DALLAS, TEX. NEWS
AUG 9 1953

Radio-TV Music This Week

gore Soloist

n Ciburn, 1952 winner of the . Dealey Memorial Award in s, will be soloist with Walter ll and the Chautauqua Sym- y Orchestra at 7:30 p.m. Mon- over WBAP-820.

iburn will play the Tchaikovsky erto in B Flat Minor for Piano Orchestra. A native of Kil- , he was heard last season the Dallas Symphony, Hendl ducting, as a part of his Dealey .

nsky-Korsakov's "Scheherae- " will make up the orchestral ion of the weekly broadcast the Chautauqua Institute in York.

ANK MILLER'S "Bordin" asy for Viola and Orchestra be heard on the Sunday broad- of the NBC Summer Sym- y, the composer conducting, p.m. on WBAP-820. Carlton ey will be soloist.

est sopranos will take over musical programs Monday Nadine Conner will be heard e Voice of Firestone at 7:30 over WFAA-820, and on the station one-half hour later, ara Gibson will be the Tele- Hour soloist. At 7 p.m., Dor- Warenskjold stars with Gor- MacRae on the Railroad Hour WFAA-820.

LIST Gregor Piatigorsky and de Pasquale will be soloists in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at 2:30 p.m. Sunday on KRLD. Charles Munch will conduct.

SUNDAY

WORLD MUSIC FESTIVAL: KRLD (CBS), 2:30 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch; Gregor Piatigorsky, cello; Joseph de Pasquale, viola. From the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.
Symphony No. 5 in B Flat Major..... Schubert
Adagio for Strings..... Barber
Don Quixote..... Strauss

NBC-TV RECITAL HALL: WBAP-TV (NBC), 3 p.m. Duo-pianists Arthur Gold and Robert Fizdale Variations on a Theme of Beethoven..... Saint-Saens
L'Embarquement Pour Cythere..Poulenc
Prasidna from "Scaramouche"..Milhaud
Pour une la Nuit Soit Propice, from [illegible]
[illegible] Antique Epigraphs".....Debussy

PIANO PLAYHOUSE: WFAA 570 (ABC), 5:30 p.m. Duo-pianists Ferrante and Teicher and guests

NBC SUMMER SYMPHONY: WBAP 820 (NBC), 4 p.m. Frank Miller, conducting. Carlton Cooley, viola.
Overture to "Der Fliegende Hollaender".....Wagner
"Bordin" Fantasy for Viola and Orchestra.....Miller
Symphony No. 3 in A Minor ("Scottish").....Mendelssohn

220 West 19th St., New York 11, N. Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860

Denver, Colo.
Post
8/2/53

Monteux Conducts

An all-Tschaikowsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS Radio's World Music Festivals Sunday (KLZ, 12:30 p. m.).

Clr. (1,706,593)
This Clipping From
TIME MAGAZINE
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 3 - 1953

Program Preview

For the week starting Friday, July 31. Times are E.D.T., subject to change.

RADIO

Invitation to Learning (Sun. 11:35 a.m., CBS). Discussion of Katherine Mansfield's stories, with Author James Michener.

World Music Festivals (Sun. 2:30 p.m., CBS). Berkshire Festival; Pierre Monteux conducting Tchaikovsky.

Summer in St. Louis (Sun. 6:30 p.m., CBS). Music from Carmen.

Best Plays (Sun. 8:30 p.m., NBC). Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath in There's Always Juliet.

TELEVISION

TV Soundstage (Fri. 9:30 p.m., NBC). Jack Lemmon in One Swell Guy.

Medallion Theater (Sat. 10 p.m., CBS). Claude Rains in The Man Who Liked Dickens.

American Forum of the Air (Sun. 5:30 p.m., NBC). "Is U.M.T. Necessary?"

Robert Montgomery Presents (Mon. 9:30 p.m., NBC). John Newland in Duet for Two Hands.

Studio One (Mon. 10 p.m., CBS). Paul Gallico's The Roman Kid.

Clr. (D 294,747)
This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO PRESS
AUG 1 - 1953

NOTES AND SKETCHES: T. R. Evans, music man and choral director, may be the new musical director at Lakewood Methodist Church; announcement is due middle of the month. . . . Crooner Don Grace, who is

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Circ. (D 76,911) (S 132,777)
This Clipping From TULSA, OKLA.
WORLD
AUG 2 1953

Music On the Air

Summer Music Festival

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the [illegible] Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on the Summer Music Festival at 1:30 p. m. Sunday over CBS and KTUL.

Monteux will open the program with the Tchaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tchaikovsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.

Pierre Monteux

American Music Hall

Hit songs by Harry Warren that have kept America singing and dancing for years will be used on the ABC Radio "American Music Hall," broadcast over KRMG on Sunday at 6:05 p. m. "Lullaby of Broadway," "I Only Have Eyes for You," "Forty-Second Street" and "I'll String Along With You" will get star billing on the two-hour musical show.

NBC Summer Symphony

Robert Lawrence will direct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra in the concert at 4 p. m. Sunday over KVOO. This will be Lawrence's first appearance as director of the NBC musicians.

Lawrence was critic, writer and teacher before turning his complete attention to conducting. He conducted largely for ballet and until last season was director of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Symphony orchestra. He also has conducted in many European countries.

The program will open with Hector Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" overture. The Symphony No. 39 in E-Flat major by Mozart will follow. For the second half of the program Lawrence has chosen the suite from Ravel's ballet "Mother Goose" and Offenbach's infectiously gay overture to "La Belle Helene."

Chautauqua Symphony

Excerpts from Richard Wagner's comic opera "Die Meistersinger" will highlight the Chautauqua Symphony orchestra broadcast at 7:30 p. m. Monday over KRMG.

Among the other musical presentations will be the overture to "Russian and Ludmilla" and Tchaikovsky's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D major with Mischa Mischakoff as violin soloist.

The hour and a half musical also includes Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan," opus 20.

Railroad Hour

One of the immortal works of music, Felix Mendelssohn's "Elijah," is the inspiration for Lawrence and Lee's original romance. "On Wings of Song," starring Gordon MacRae and Dorothy Warenskjold on the Railroad Hour at 7 p.m. Monday over KVOO and NBC.

MacRae's solos are the title number, "On Wings of Song," "Must I Then?" "It is Enough," from "Elijah" and "Spring Song," in which Miss Warenskjold joins in for the obbligato. Her solo is "I Would That My Love." In duet the artists sing "The Wedding March," "On Wings of Song" and "Shepherds Song."

The Carmen Dragon orchestra and the Norman Luboff chorus are featured in excerpts from "Midsummer's Night Dream" and "Elijah," respectively.

The story has composer Felix Mendelssohn, played by MacRae, making a deathbed promise to his father to write a musical monument to him. While he is searching in vain for the proper text, Felix meets and marries lovely Cecile, played by Miss Warenskjold. She is a constant inspiration to him.

At the age of 36, Mendelssohn is discouraged and feels drained of ideas. Nowhere he travels can he find what he seeks. But at last, the great composer realizes

Telephone Hour

American pianist, Grant Johannesen, will be guest soloist on the Telephone Hour broadcast at 8 p. m. Monday over NBC and KVOO. He will feature three numbers, assisted by Donald Voorhees and the Bell Telephone orchestra.

For his major work, Johannesen has chosen the brilliant final part of Fantasy in C major, also known as "The Wandered." Originally composed by Schubert for piano solo, the music so intrigued Franz Liszt that he rewrote the score for piano and orchestra—the form in which it will be performed on this program.

Johannesen also will play two of Chopin's most famous compositions. The first one will be the familiar "Berceuse," or "Cradle Song" and the second will be the vibrant "Revolutionary Etude."

Voorhees and the orchestra will highlight the concert with "Hungarian Dance" from the Suite entitled, "Ruralia Hungarica," written by the contemporary Hungarian composer, Ernest Dohanyi. This suite is based on old folk melodies of Hungary.

The orchestra will open the program with a medley of songs written some years ago by Fritz Kreisler from the musical comedy, "Apple Blossoms."

Enchanted Hour

Two Dvorak compositions are to be featured by the Enchanted Hour at 7:30 p. m. over Mutual and KAKC. Henry Weber conducts the orchestra for Dvorak's "Furiant" and "Schatz Waltzes." Soloist Raymond Sharp will be heard singing Malotte's "David and Goliath" plus three other selections.

Circ. (D 185,208) (S 207,800)
This Clipping From HOUSTON, TEX.
CHRONICLE
AUG 2 1953

Radio Starbeams

Gene Autry Show On Sunday Now

Cowboy Gene Autry is moving his Melody Ranch gang into the schedule tonight.

For 14 years, Autry and his bunch have been regular features on the coast-to-coast airways, and for the past couple of years they've held down a Saturday night spot on the network.

But starting today, they'll take up permanent residence at 8:30 p.m. on CBS-KTRH.

It was on his radio show that Autry introduced some of the tunes that were later top hits in the nation—"Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Peter Cottontail," and his theme, "Back in the Saddle Again."

Along with the cowboy star will be Comedian Pat Buttram, the Cass County Boys and the Bluejeans.

* * *

A series of five broadcasts featuring music written for and inspired by the Catholic church will be presented, starting today, on the Catholic Hour, 1 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

The series marks the fiftieth anniversary of the "Motu Proprio" on sacred music by Pope Pius X, which set down principles regarding sacred music for formal liturgical ceremonies of the church.

Among the choral groups to be heard are the Sistine Chapel choir, directed by Msgr. Dominic Bartolucci; the Welsh Chorale, and the Trappist Monks choir of Cistercian Abbey in France.

* * *

Latin American Story: Bill Costello interviews Fernando Berckemeyer, Peruvian ambassador; 11 a.m., CBS-KTRH.

* * *

Game of the Day: Chicago at Washington in the American League; 1 p.m., MBS-KTHT.

* * *

World Music Festival: Pierre Monteaux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program, including his Serenade for String Orchestra in C major, and Symphony No. 5 in E minor; 1:30 p.m., CBS-KTRH.

* * *

Best Plays: Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath in "There's Always Juliet," the love story of an American architect and an English girl; 7:30 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Barrie Craig: A beautiful woman's eagerness to confess to a murder arouses Barrie's suspicion in "The Golden Bullet," 9 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Robert Q. Lewis Waxworks: Composer Richard Rodgers visits with Robert Q.; 10:30 p.m., CBS-KTRH.

Cir. (S 22,515)
This Clipping From WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
AUG 2 - 1953

Music Festival Program Again At Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on "World Music Festivals" over CBS Radio today.

Soprano Elaine Malbin will be soloist on "The Music Room," and will present songs in English, Spanish and Italian.

Jean Madeira and Robert Rounseville will be soloists under the baton of Edwin MacArthur in excerpts from Bizet's "Carmen" and other operatic arias on "Summer in St. Louis," now heard on Sunday afternoons.

Details of CBS Radio music programs follow:

TODAY

9:00-9:15 a. m.—"The Music Room"—Elaine Malbin, soprano soloist.
Lilliyay ..... Warlock
Coplas de curo dulce ..... Obradors
Senze Mama, mio caro bambino, from "Suor Angelica" ..... Puccini
Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child ..... Trad.
9:30-10:00 a. m.—E. Power Biggs Organ Program (from Busch-Reisinger Museum, Cambridge, Mass., via WEEI, Boston).
Pastoral in C major ..... Zipoli
Suite of Three ..... Bach
Sinfonia to Cantata No. 106
Chorale prelude, "All Glory Be to God"
Sinfonia to Cantata No. 156
Concerto No. 3 in G major ..... Soler
11:00-11:30 a. m.—Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Program. J. Spencer Cornwall, conductor. Alexander Schreiner, organist. Via KSL, Salt Lake City.
Give Unto the Meek ..... Mozart
Save Us, Oh Lord ..... Matthews
Sing to the Lord ..... Pitoni
Come, Thou Fount ..... Wyeth-Cornwall
Hallelujah, from "Mount of Olives" ..... Beethoven
Organ: Tuba Tune ..... Lang
Night ..... Jenkins
Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me ..... Gould
2:30-4:00 p. m.—"World Music Festivals"—Pierre Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. James Fassett, music commentator.
Serenade for Strings in C major ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 5 in E minor ..... Tchaikovsky
6:30-7:00 p. m.—"Summer in St. Louis"—Jean Madeira, soprano, and Robert Rounseville, tenor, with St. Louis Opera Orchestra conducted by Edwin MacArthur. Via KMOX, St. Louis.
Strike Up the Band ..... Gershwin
A Wonderful Guy ..... Rodgers
Habanera and Seguidilla from "Carmen" ..... Bizet
I Whistle a Happy Tune ..... Rodgers
Then You'll Remember Me, from "The Bohemian Girl" ..... Balfe

WEDNESDAY

10:00-11:00 p. m.—Grant Park Symphony Orchestra, from Chicago, Ill. Maurice Abravanel, conductor. Louis Kaufman, violin soloist. Via WBBM, Chicago.
Overture to "Oberon" ..... Weber
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in E minor ..... Mendelssohn
Emperor Waltz ..... Strauss
Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" ..... Rossini

220 West 19th St., New York 11, N. Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Denver, Colo.
Post
8/2/53

Monteux Conducts

An all-Tschaikowsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS Radio's World Music Festivals Sunday (KLZ, 12:30 p. m.).

Cir. (1,706,593)
This Clipping From
TIME MAGAZINE
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 3 - 1953

Program Preview

For the week starting Friday, July 31. Times are E.D.T., subject to change.

RADIO

Invitation to Learning (Sun. 11:35 a.m., CBS). Discussion of Katherine Mansfield's stories, with Author James Michener.

World Music Festivals (Sun. 2:30 p.m., CBS). Berkshire Festival; Pierre Monteux conducting Tchaikovsky.

Summer in St. Louis (Sun. 6:30 p.m., CBS). Music from Carmen.

Best Plays (Sun. 8:30 p.m., NBC). Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath in There's Always Juliet.

TELEVISION

TV Soundstage (Fri. 9:30 p.m., NBC). Jack Lemmon in One Swell Guy.

Medallion Theater (Sat. 10 p.m., CBS). Claude Rains in The Man Who Liked Dickens.

American Forum of the Air (Sun. 5:30 p.m., NBC). "Is U.M.T. Necessary?"

Robert Montgomery Presents (Mon. 8:30 p.m., NBC). John Newland in Duet for Two Hands.

Studio One (Mon. 10 p.m., CBS). Paul Gallico's The Roman Kid.

Cir. (D 294,747)
This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
AUG 1 - 1953

NOTES AND SKETCHES: T. R. Evans, music man and choral director, may be the new musical director at Lakewood Methodist Church; announcement is due middle of the month. . . . Crooner Don Grace, who is [62]

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 76,911) (S 132,777)
This Clipping From TULSA, OKLA.
WORLD
AUG 2 1953

Music On the Air

Pierre Monteux

Summer Music Festival

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the [illegible] Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on the Summer Music Festival at 1:30 p. m. Sunday over CBS and KTUL.

Monteux will open the program with the Tchaikovsky Serenade for String Orchestra in C major. This work was one of Tchaikovsky's own favorite compositions, and he conducted it many times, including performances in 1891 in New York and Baltimore.

James Fassett, producer and music commentator, will interview some of the important musical figures connected with the festival and offer a word and sound picture of some of the daily activities at the festival school.

American Music Hall

Hit songs by Harry Warren that have kept America singing and dancing for years will be used on the ABC Radio "American Music Hall," broadcast over KRMG on Sunday at 6:05 p. m.

"Lullaby of Broadway," "I Only Have Eyes for You," "Forty-Second Street" and "I'll String Along With You" will get star billing on the two-hour musical show.

NBC Summer Symphony

Robert Lawrence will direct the NBC Summer Symphony orchestra in the concert at 4 p. m. Sunday over KVOO. This will be Lawrence's first appearance as director of the NBC musicians.

Lawrence was critic, writer and teacher before turning his complete attention to conducting. He conducted largely for ballet and until last season was director of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Symphony orchestra. He also has conducted in many European countries.

The program will open with Hector Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" overture. The Symphony No. 39 in E-Flat major by Mozart will follow. For the second half of the program Lawrence has chosen the suite from Ravel's ballet "Mother Goose" and Offenbach's infectiously gay overture to "La Belle Helene."

Chautauqua Symphony

Excerpts from Richard Wagner's comic opera "Die Meistersinger" will highlight the Chautauqua Symphony orchestra broadcast at 7:30 p. m. Monday over KRMG.

Among the other musical presentations will be the overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla" and Tchaikovsky's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D major with Mischa Mischakoff as violin soloist.

The hour and a half musical also includes Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan," opus 20.

Railroad Hour

One of the immortal works of music, Felix Mendelssohn's "Elijah," is the inspiration for Lawrence and Lee's original romance. "On Wings of Song," starring Gordon MacRae and Dorothy Warenskjold on the Railroad Hour at 7 p.m. Monday over KVOO and NBC.

MacRae's solos are the title number, "On Wings of Song," "Must I Then?" "It is Enough," from "Elijah" and "Spring Song," in which Miss Warenskjold joins in for the obbligato. Her solo is "I Would That My Love." In duet the artists sing "The Wedding March," "On Wings of Song" and "Shepherds Song."

The Carmen Dragon orchestra and the Norman Luboff chorus are featured in excerpts from "Midsummer's Night Dream" and "Elijah," respectively.

The story has composer Felix Mendelssohn, played by MacRae, making a deathbed promise to his father to write a musical monument to him. While he is searching in vain for the proper text, Felix meets and marries lovely Cecile, played by Miss Warenskjold. She is a constant inspiration to him.

At the age of 36, Mendelssohn is discouraged and feels drained of ideas. Nowhere he travels can he find what he seeks. But at last, the great composer realizes

Telephone Hour

American pianist, Grant Johannesen, will be guest soloist on the Telephone Hour broadcast at 8 p. m. Monday over NBC and KVOO. He will feature three numbers, assisted by Donald Voorhees and the Bell Telephone orchestra.

For his major work, Johannesen has chosen the brilliant final part of Fantasy in C major, also known as "The Wandered." Originally composed by Schubert for piano solo, the music so intrigued Franz Liszt that he rewrote the score for piano and orchestra—the form in which it will be performed on this program.

Johannesen also will play two of Chopin's most famous compositions. The first one will be the familiar "Berceuse," or "Cradle Song" and the second will be the vibrant "Revolutionary Etude."

Voorhees and the orchestra will highlight the concert with "Hungarian Dance" from the Suite entitled, "Ruralia Hungarica," written by the contemporary Hungarian composer, Ernest Dohanyi. This suite is based on old folk melodies of Hungary.

The orchestra will open the program with a medley of songs written some years ago by Fritz Kreisler from the musical comedy, "Apple Blossoms."

Enchanted Hour

Two Dvorak compositions are to be featured by the Enchanted Hour at 7:30 p. m. over Mutual and KAKC. Henry Weber conducts the orchestra for Dvorak's "Furiant" and "Schatz Waltzes." Soloist Raymond Sharp will be heard singing Malette's "David and Goliath" plus three other selections.

220 West 19th St., New York 11, N Y
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860

Denver, Colo.
Post
8/2/53

Monteux Conducts

An all-Tschaikowsky program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in the second of four broadcasts by the Boston Symphony orchestra from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on CBS Radio's World Music Festivals Sunday (KLZ, 12:30 p. m.).

Cir. (D 294,747)
This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
AUG 1 - 1953

NOTES AND SKETCHES: T. R. Evans, music man and choral director, may be the new musical director at Lakewood Methodist Church; announcement is due middle of the month. . . . Crooner Don Grace, who is

Cir. (D 186,208) (S 207,860)
This Clipping From HOUSTON, TEX.
CHRONICLE
AUG 2 1953

Radio Starbeams

Gene Autry Show On Sunday Now

Cowboy Gene Autry is moving his Melody Ranch gang into the schedule tonight.

For 14 years, Autry and his bunch have been regular features on the coast-to-coast airways, and for the past couple of years they've held down a Saturday night spot on the network.

But starting today, they'll take up permanent residence at 8:30 p.m. on CBS-KTRH.

It was on his radio show that Autry introduced some of the tunes that were later top hits in the nation—"Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Peter Cottontail," and his theme, "Back in the Saddle Again."

Along with the cowboy star will be Comedian Pat Buttram, the Cass County Boys and the Bluejeans.

* * *

A series of five broadcasts featuring music written for and inspired by the Catholic church will be presented, starting today, on the Catholic Hour, 1 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

The series marks the fiftieth anniversary of the "Motu Proprio" on sacred music by Pope Pius X, which set down principles regarding sacred music for formal liturgical ceremonies of the church.

Among the choral groups to be heard are the Sistine Chapel choir, directed by Msgr. Dominic Bartolucci; the Welsh Chorale, and the Trappist Monks choir of Cistercian Abbey in France.

* * *

Latin American Story: Bill Costello interviews Fernando Berckemeyer, Peruvian ambassador; 11 a.m., CBS-KTRH.

* * *

Game of the Day: Chicago at Washington in the American League; 1 p.m., MBS-KTHT.

* * *

World Music Festival: Pierre Monteaux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Tchaikovsky program, including his Serenade for String Orchestra in C major, and Symphony No. 5 in E minor; 1:30 p.m., CBS-KTRH.

Shore is guest of honor; 7 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Best Plays: Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath in "There's Always Juliet," the love story of an American architect and an English girl; 7:30 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Barrie Craig: A beautiful woman's eagerness to confess to a murder arouses Barrie's suspicion in "The Golden Bullet," 9 p.m., NBC-KPRC.

* * *

Robert Q. Lewis Waxworks: Composer Richard Rodgers visits with Robert Q.; 10:30 p.m., CBS-KTRH.

Cir. (1,706,593)
This Clipping From
TIME MAGAZINE
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 3 - 1953

Program Preview

For the week starting Friday, July 31. Times are E.D.T., subject to change.

RADIO

Invitation to Learning (Sun. 11:35 a.m., CBS). Discussion of Katherine Mansfield's stories, with Author James Michener.

World Music Festivals (Sun. 2:30 p.m., CBS). Berkshire Festival; Pierre Monteux conducting Tchaikovsky.

Summer in St. Louis (Sun. 6:30 p.m., CBS). Music from Carmen.

Best Plays (Sun. 8:30 p.m., NBC). Margaret Phillips and Paul McGrath in There's Always Juliet.

TELEVISION

TV Soundstage (Fri. 9:30 p.m., NBC). Jack Lemmon in One Swell Guy.

Medallion Theater (Sat. 10 p.m., CBS). Claude Rains in The Man Who Liked Dickens.

American Forum of the Air (Sun. 5:30 p.m., NBC). "Is U.M.T. Necessary?"

Robert Montgomery Presents (Mon. 8:30 p.m., NBC). John Newland in Duet for Two Hands.

Studio One (Mon. 10 p.m., CBS). Paul Gallico's The Roman Kid.

Cir. (S 22,515)
This Clipping From WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
AUG 2 - 1953

Music Festival Program Again At Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second of four broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., on "World Music Festivals" over CBS Radio today.

Soprano Elaine Malbin will be soloist on "The Music Room," and will present songs in English, Spanish and Italian.

Jean Madeira and Robert Rounseville will be soloists under the baton of Edwin MacArthur in excerpts from Bizet's "Carmen" and other operatic arias on "Summer in St. Louis," now heard on Sunday afternoons.

Details of CBS Radio music programs follow:

TODAY

9:00-9:15 a. m.—"The Music Room"—Elaine Malbin, soprano soloist.
Lillygay ..... Warlock
Coplas de curo dulce ..... Obradors
Senza Mama, mio caro bambino, from "Suor Angelica" ..... Puccini
Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child ..... Trad.
9:30-10:00 a. m.—E. Power Biggs Organ Program (from Busch-Reisinger Museum, Cambridge, Mass., via WEEI, Boston).
Pastoral in C major ..... Zipoli
Suite of Three ..... Bach
Sinfonia to Cantata No. 106
Chorale prelude, "All Glory Be to God"
Sinfonia to Cantata No. 156
Concerto No. 3 in G major ..... Soler
11:00-11:30 a. m.—Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Program. J. Spencer Cornwall, conductor. Alexander Schreiner, organist. Via KSL, Salt Lake City.
Give Unto the Meek ..... Mozart
Save Us, Oh Lord ..... Matthews
Sing to the Lord ..... Pitoni
Come, Thou Fount ..... Wyeth-Cornwall
Hallelujah, from "Mount of Olives" ..... Beethoven
Organ: Tuba Tune ..... Lang
Night ..... Jenkins
Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me ..... Gould
2:30-4:00 p. m.—"World Music Festivals"—Pierre Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. James Fassett, music commentator.
Serenade for Strings in C major ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 5 in E minor ..... Tchaikovsky
6:30-7:00 p. m.—"Summer in St. Louis"—Jean Madeira, soprano, and Robert Rounseville, tenor, with St. Louis Opera Orchestra conducted by Edwin MacArthur. Via KMOX, St. Louis.
Strike Up the Band ..... Gershwin
A Wonderful Guy ..... Rodgers
Habanera and Seguidilla from "Carmen" ..... Bizet
I Whistle a Happy Tune ..... Rodgers
Then You'll Remember Me, from "The Bohemian Girl" ..... Balfe

WEDNESDAY

10:00-11:00 p. m.—Grant Park Symphony Orchestra, from Chicago, Ill. Maurice Abravanel, conductor, Louis Kaufman, violin soloist. Via WBBM, Chicago.
Overture to "Oberon" ..... Weber
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in E minor ..... Mendelssohn
Emperor Waltz ..... Strauss
Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" ..... Rossini

(D 299,461) (S 516,479)
This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
AUG 16 19

Berkshire Festival on WGAR Program

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the World Music Festivals program from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., over WGAR at 3:30 today.

The orchestra offers the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor (unfinished), three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

This Clipping From MEMPHIS, TENN.
PRESS-SCIMITAR
AUG 8 - 1953

Sen. Karl E. Mundt

"Should Congressional Investigating Committees Be Merged?" The proposal for a merger will be discussed on the American Forum of the Air tomorrow by Sen. Karl E. Mundt (Rep., S. D.) and Rep Emanuel Cellar (Dem., N. Y.). The program will be on WMCT television at 3:30 p.m. and on WMC radio at 6:30 p.m. Sen. Mundt is a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the Government Operations Committee. Rep. Cellar is a member of the House Judiciary Committee.

Radio Tonight

6:30—Six acts from Memphis are heard on the Hot Talent USA program on WMC and the NBC network, with the Memphians competing against talent in Tulsa, Okla., Mankato, Minn. and Peoria, Ill. The Memphis segment originates from the Malco Theater at 5:30 p.m. and is fed to the network an hour later. Local talent participating includes Pat Walker, tenor; Mary Louise Repult, lyric soprano; Harry Dice, baritone; Beri Ol'swanger and the Ol' Swingers, consisting of Nell Sharp, Nita Nance and Betty Huffman; Mrs. Rhey Wilson, the "Aunt Bazey" of the Juniper Junction program on WMC and WMCT, and The Three Bops, composed of Paul Pritchartt, Peter Norfleet and Dr. William Long.

Winner on the theater stage earlier will receive a $100 savings bond. A jury in New York selects the winning city to send its top talent to New York for the finals next month. Final winners there will be given a trip to Hollywood and auditions for a job.

7:00—Nicholas Montsarrat, author of "The Cruel Sea," is a guest on Twenty Questions, WHBQ.

8:30—Cowboy Copas and Martha Carson are featured on Grand Ole Opry, WMC.

11:35 — Theodore Roosevelt III tells his philosophy of life on This I Believe, WREC.

T-V Specials—WMCT

6:00—Sammy Kaye begins his new television show at this time with Felicia Saunders as vocalist on the opening program.

7:00—David Rose and his orchestra are spotlighted on Saturday Night Revue by Hoagy Carmichael, host and star.

Radio Tomorrow

9:00—Rev. Noel Smith, editor of the Baptist Bible Tribune, will speak on "The One and Only Gospel," Church of the Air, WREC. . . . Methodist Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta will speak on "Giving Life the Right Drive," National Radio Pulpit, WMC. . . . Gene Lockhart in "I Ought to Go Home Now," Hour of St. Francis, WHHM. This drama tells of one man's struggle to answer the question, "Can I take a drink, or do I have to leave it alone?"

9:30—Dr. Norman Vincent Peale will tell his listeners about "Getting Rid of Your Unhappy Thoughts," Art of Living, WMC. An article by Dr. Peale appears in The Press-Scimitar every Monday.

10:30—Gerald Moore will play a Handel sonata and Frank Froba a popular classic on Piano Tones, WHBQ.

11:30—"Egypt and the Destiny of the People of Israel" will be discussed by Maurice Samuel, author, and Prof. Mark Van Doren, poet, on Words We Live By, WMC.

12:30—Mr. President will thwart a scheme to corner the gold market in a story called "Black Friday," WMPS.

1:30—Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on World Music Festivals, WREC. Charles Munch will conduct. The program will begin with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B flat major and follow with the Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, contemporary American composer.

3:30—Dinah Shore will be grand marshal of the parade at the Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, WMC.

4:00—The NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Frank Miller's "Borodin Fantasy for Viola and Orchestra," with Carlton Cooley as soloist, WMC. Other works on the program will be Wagner's overture to "The Flying Dutchman" and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony.

5:30—Summer in St. Louis will present Eileen Schauler, soprano, and Lawrence Brooks, baritone, who are currently appearing at the St. Louis Municipal Opera, WREC.

6:00—A mad scientist who seeks a secret power to suppress nations and men is the central figure in "Kidnaped Equation," The Shadow, WHBQ. . . . Memphis Forum topic: "The Effect of Senator Taft's Death," WHHM.

6:30—Dick Powell in "The Wheat Germ Case," WREC. . . . "I Ought to Go Home Now," starring Gene Lockhart in a temperance drama on The Hour of St. Francis, WHHM.

7:00—"Old Betsy" happens to be a fiddle, not as famous as the one Nero used, but rare enough to get involved in "The Case of the Fabulous Fiddle," Nick Carter thriller, WHBQ. . . . Henri Rene, orchestra leader, will be Tony Martin's guest, WMC.

7:30—A weird story of underworld loyalty is told in "Detecting the Pearl River Band Murders," True Detective, WHBQ.

8:45—Charles L. Curtiss, assistant administrator for administrative services in the Veterans Administration, will speak on "Helping the VA to Help You," WMPS.

9:00—Merriment turns to murder at a costume party where Barrie Craig is an unwelcome guest, in "Murder Masquerade," starring William Gargan, WMC.

10:00—Rabbi Leon Fram of Temple Israel, Detroit, on Message of Israel, WMPS.

T-V Tomorrow

11:30—"Facts on Faith," second in a series of quiz-style programs sponsored by the Catholic Hour, will have as guests Dr. N. M. MacNeil, a Philadelphia physician; Peggy Ann McCay, t-v actress, and Paul Hume, music critic of the Washington Post whose caustic letter from former President Truman catapulted him into the spotlight several years ago. Moderator is Rev. Urbag Nagle.

7:30—Ed Begley will star in "Ernie Barger is Fifty," on the Television Playhouse. This is the story of a man who, at 50, makes the frightening discovery that he is no longer needed by anyone.

9:45—Henry Fonda will head the list of guests on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town. The program also will include vocalists, instrumentalists and animal acts, topped by The Aquacade with 17 girls and a diving comedy team.

11:30 — Arthur Gold and Robert Fizdale, duo-pianists who appeared in Memphis several years ago, will be heard on the Recital Hall.

BRUNO COMEAU
SOUS-CHEF DE L'INFORMATION - CITY EDITOR
LE DROIT - OTTAWA
TELEPHONE 3-4061 4-0970

ROIT, OTTAWA, LE J[illegible] 6 AOUT 1953

Radio-Cinéma

de Lion" de Grétry

Voici les programmes pour la fin de semaine prochaine à Berkshire:

Vendredi, le 7 août, 8 h. 30 p.m. — CHARLES MUNCH

"Roméo et Juliet", Dramatic Symphony — Berlioz

Solistes:
Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum et le Berkshire Festival Chorus

Samedi, le 8 août, 8 h. 30 p.m. — LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Koussevitzky Memorial Concert

Prélude à "Khovanstchina" — Moussorgsky

"Shéhérazade" pour Soprano et Orchestre — Ravel

Soliste: Jennie Tourel

Symphonie No. 2 ("Resurrection") — Mahler

Solistes: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green et le Berkshire Festival Chorus

Dimanche, le 9 août. 2 h. 30 p.m. — CHARLES MUNCH

Symphonie No. 5, en Si bémolle — Schubert

Adagio pour Strings — Barber

"Don Quichotte" (avec solo de violoncelle. — Strauss

Solistes: Grégor Piatigorsky et Joseph De Pasquale.

Lenox Mass., à 8.30 lundi le 10 août et mardi le 11 août dans la salle du "Théâtre Concert". Tous les sièges sont réservés.

La première de l'opéra de Grétry, qui sera donnée en anglais, scénario de J. M. Sedaine traduit par MM. Goldovsky et Sarah Caldwell, eut sa première à Paris le 21 octobre, 1784; la première américaine eut lieu à Boston en 1797; subséquement en 1798 et 1800 respectivement, Philadelphie et New York l'entendirent.

La radio transmettra dimanche après-midi, le réseau Columbia, le concert auquel prendront part Gregor Piatigorsky, violoncelliste et l'orchestre symphonique de Boston sous la direction de Charles Munch dans le concerto de Darius Milhaud; Joseph Pasquale, l'altiste de la symphonie, le joindra dans une performance du "Don Quichote" de R. Strauss.

Cir. (D 88,446) ($ 127,157)
This Clipping From
YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO
VINDICATOR
AUG 20 1953

Will Broadcast Color TV over Nation Aug. 30

(By The Associated Press)

New York, Aug. 20—The National Broadcasting Co. plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country beginning Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said Wednesday that Radio Corp. of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June, programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting in September.

Cir. (D 99,199)
This Clipping From
RICHMOND, VA.
NEWS-LEADER
AUG 20 1953

NBC to Start Color Video On August 30

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)— The National Broadcasting Company plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting August 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June, but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corporation of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June, programs including "Howdy Doody," "Bob and Ray," "Gabby Hayes" and "Meet the Veep" have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white.

The new series of NBC tests is to start with "Kukla, Fran and Ollie," in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced plans to approve the new compatible color television which also can be received in black and white. No date has been set for the start of regular commercial operations.

Cir. (D 88,472)
This Clipping From CINCINNATI, OHIO
TIMES-STAR
AUG 20 1953

NBC Sets Date For TV in Color Across Country

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)— The National Broadcasting Co. plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corp. of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

[63]

(D 299,461) (S 516,479)
This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
AUG 16 1953

Berkshire Festival on WGAR Program

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the World Music Festivals program from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., over WGAR at 2:30 today.

The orchestra offers the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor (unfinished), three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

This Clipping From MEMPHIS, TENN.
PRESS-SCIMITAR
AUG 8 - 1953

Sen. Karl E. Mundt

"Should Congressional Investigating Committees Be Merged?" The proposal for a merger will be discussed on the American Forum of the Air tomorrow by Sen. Karl E. Mundt (Rep., S. D.) and Rep Emanuel Cellar (Dem., N. Y.). The program will be on WMCT television at 3:30 p.m. and on WMC radio at 6:30 p.m. Sen. Mundt is a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the Government Operations Committee. Rep. Cellar is a member of the House Judiciary Committee.

Radio Tonight

6:30 — Six acts from Memphis are heard on the Net Talent USA program on WMC and the NBC network, with the Memphians competing against talent in Tulsa, Okla, Mankato, Minn. and Peoria, Ill. The Memphis segment originates from the Malco Theater at 5:30 p.m. and is fed to the network an hour later. Local talent participating includes Pat Walker, tenor; Mary Louise Repult, lyric soprano; Harry Dice, baritone; Berl Olswanger and the Ol' Swingers, consisting of Nell Sharp, Nita Nance and Betty Huffman; Mrs. Rhey Wilson, the "Aunt Bunny" of the Juniper Junction program on WMC and WMCT, and The Three Bops, composed of Paul Pritchartt, Peter Norfleet and Dr. William Long.

Winner on the theater stage earlier will receive a $100 savings bond. A jury in New York selects the winning city to send its top talent to New York for the finals next month. Final winners there will be given a trip to Hollywood and auditions for a job.

7:00—Nicholas Montsarrat, author of "The Cruel Sea," is a guest on Twenty Questions, WHBQ.

8:30—Cowboy Copas and Martha Carson are featured on Grand Ole Opry, WMC.

11:55 — Theodore Roosevelt III tells his philosophy of life on This I Believe, WREC.

T-V Specials—WMCT

6:00—Sammy Kaye begins his new television show at this time with Felicia Saunders as vocalist on the opening program.

7:00—David Rose and his orchestra are spotlighted on Saturday Night Revue by Hoagy Carmichael, host and star.

Radio Tomorrow

9:00—Rev. Noel Smith, editor of the Baptist Bible Tribune, will speak on "The One and Only Gospel," Church of the Air, WREC. . . . Methodist Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta will speak on "Giving Life the Right Drive," National Radio Pulpit, WMC. . . . Gene Lockhart in "I Ought to Go Home Now," Hour of St. Francis, WHHM. This drama tells of one man's struggle to answer the question, "Can I take a drink, or do I have to leave it alone?"

9:30—Dr. Norman Vincent Peale will tell his listeners about "Getting Rid of Your Unhappy Thoughts," Art of Living, WMC. An article by Dr. Peale appears in The Press-Scimitar every Monday.

10:30—Gerald Moore will play a Handel sonata and Frank Froba a popular classic on Piano Tones, WHBQ.

11:30—"Egypt and the Destiny of the People of Israel" will be discussed by Maurice Samuel, author, and Prof. Mark Van Doren, poet, on Words We Live By, WMC.

12:30—Mr. President will thwart a scheme to corner the gold market in a story called "Black Friday," WMPS.

1:30—Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on World Music Festivals, WREC. Charles Munch will conduct. The program will begin with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B flat major and follow with the Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, contemporary American composer.

3:30—Dinah Shore will be grand marshal of the parade at the Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, WMC.

4:00—The NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Frank Miller's "Borodin Fantasy for Viola and Orchestra," with Carlton Cooley as soloist, WMC. Other works on the program will be Wagner's overture to "The Flying Dutchman" and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony.

5:30—Summer in St. Louis will present Eileen Schauler, soprano, and Lawrence Brooks, baritone, who are currently appearing at the St. Louis Municipal Opera, WREC.

6:00—A mad scientist who seeks a secret power to suppress nations and men is the central figure in "Kidnaped Equation," The Shadow, WHBQ. . . . Memphis Forum topic: "The Effect of Senator Taft's Death," WHHM.

6:30—Dick Powell in "The Wheat Germ Case," WREC. . . . "I Ought to Go Home Now," starring Gene Lockhart in a temperance drama on The Hour of St. Francis, WHHM.

7:00—"Old Betsy" happens to be a fiddle, not as famous as the one Nero used, but rare enough to get involved in "The Case of the Fabulous Fiddle," Nick Carter thriller, WHBQ. . . . Henri Rene, orchestra leader, will be Tony Martin's guest, WMC.

7:30—A weird story of underworld loyalty is told in "Detecting the Pearl River Band Murders," True Detective, WHBQ.

8:45—Charles L. Curtiss, assistant administrator for administrative services in the Veterans Administration, will speak on "Helping the VA to Help You," WMPS.

9:00—Merriment turns to murder at a costume party where Barrie Craig is an unwelcome guest, in "Murder Masquerade," starring William Gargan, WMC.

10:00—Rabbi Leon Fram of Temple Israel, Detroit, on Message of Israel, WMPS.

T-V Tomorrow

11:30—"Facts on Faith," second in a series of quiz-style programs sponsored by the Catholic Hour, will have as guests Dr. N. M. MacNeil, a Philadelphia physician; Peggy Ann McCay, t-v actress, and Paul Hume, music critic of the Washington Post whose caustic letter from former President Truman catapulted him into the spotlight several years ago. Moderator is Rev. Urbag Nagle.

7:00—Ed Begley will star in "Ernie Barger is Fifty," on the Television Playhouse. This is the story of a man who, at 50, makes the frightening discovery that he is no longer needed by anyone.

9:45—Henry Fonda will head the list of guests on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town. The program also will include vocalists, instrumentalists and animal acts, topped by The Aquacade with 17 girls and a diving comedy team.

11:30 — Arthur Gold and Robert Fizdale, duo-pianists who appeared in Memphis several years ago, will be heard on the Recital Hall.

LE DROIT, OTTAWA, LE JEUDI 6 AOUT 1953

Radio-Cinéma

Festival Berkshire

"Richard Coeur de Lion" de Grétry

BERKSHIRE, Mass. — "Richard Coeur-de-Lion", opéra en trois actes écrit peu de temps avant la Révolution française par le prolifique compositeur André Ernest-Modeste Grétry, sera donné par les étudiants du "Department IV", classe d'opéra sous la direction de Boris Goldovsky du centre de Musique de Berkshire, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass., à 8.30 lundi le 10 août et mardi le 11 août dans la salle du "Théâtre Concert". Tous les sièges sont réservés.

La première de l'opéra de Grétry, qui sera donnée en anglais, scénario de J. M. Sedaine traduit par MM. Goldovsky et Sarah Caldwell, eut sa première à Paris le 21 octobre, 1784; la première américaine eut lieu à Boston en 1797; subséquement en 1798 et 1800 respectivement, Philadelphie et New York l'entendirent.

La radio transmettra dimanche après-midi, le réseau Columbia, le concert auquel prendront part Gregor Piatigorsky, violoncelliste et l'orchestre symphonique de Boston sous la direction de Charles Munch dans le concerto de Darius Milhaud; Joseph Pasquale, l'altiste de la symphonie, le joindra dans une performance du "Don Quichote" de R. Strauss.

Voici les programmes pour la fin de semaine prochaine à Berkshire:

Vendredi, le 7 août, 8 h. 30 p.m. —
CHARLES MUNCH
"Roméo et Juliet", Dramatic Symphony — Berlioz
Solistes:
Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum et le Berkshire Festival Chorus

Samedi, le 8 août, 8 h. 30 p.m. —
LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Koussevitzky Memorial Concert
Prélude à "Khovanstchina" — Moussorgsky
"Shéhérazade" pour Soprano et Orchestre — Ravel
Soliste: Jennie Tourel
Symphonie No. 2 ("Resurrection") — Mahler
Solistes: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green et le Berkshire Festival Chorus

Dimanche, le 9 août. 2 h. 30 p.m. —
CHARLES MUNCH
Symphonie No. 5, en Si bémolle — Schubert
Adagio pour Strings — Barber
"Don Quichotte" (avec solo de violoncelle. — Strauss
Solistes: Gregor Piatigorsky et Joseph De Pasquale.

Cir. (D 88,446) (S 127,157)
This Clipping From
YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO
VINDICATOR
AUG 20 1953

Will Broadcast Color TV over Nation Aug. 30

(By The Associated Press)

New York, Aug. 20—The National Broadcasting Co. plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country beginning Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said Wednesday that Radio Corp. of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June, programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting in September.

Cir. (D 99,199)
This Clipping From RICHMOND, VA.
NEWS-LEADER
AUG 2 1953

NBC to Start Color Video On August 30

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)—The National Broadcasting Company plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting August 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June, but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corporation of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June, programs including "Howdy Doody," "Bob and Ray," "Gabby Hayes" and "Meet the Veep" have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white.

The new series of NBC tests is to start with "Kukla, Fran and Ollie," in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white. No date has been set for the start of regular commercial operations.

Cir. (D 190,472)
This Clipping From CINCINNATI, OHIO
TIMES-STAR
AUG 20 1953

NBC Sets Date For TV in Color Across Country

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)— The National Broadcasting Co. plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corp. of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep, have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

Cir. (D 299,461) (S 516,478)
This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
AUG 16 1953

Berkshire Festival on WGAR Program

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the World Music Festivals program from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., over WGAR at 2:30 today.

The orchestra offers the Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B minor (unfinished), three works by Richard Wagner, the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyl" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

This Clipping From MEMPHIS, TENN.
PRESS-SCIMITAR
AUG 8 - 1953

Sen. Karl E. Mundt

"Should Congressional Investigating Committees Be Merged?" The proposal for a merger will be discussed on the American Forum of the Air tomorrow by Sen. Karl E. Mundt (Rep., S. D.) and Rep Emanuel Cellar (Dem., N. Y.). The program will be on WMCT television at 3:30 p.m. and on WMC radio at 6:30 p.m. Sen. Mundt is a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the Government Operations Committee. Rep. Cellar is a member of the House Judiciary Committee.

Radio Tonight

6:30 — Six acts from Memphis are heard on the Net Talent USA program on WMC and the NBC network, with the Memphians competing against talent in Tulsa, Okla, Mankato, Minn. and Peoria, Ill. The Memphis segment originates from the Malco Theater at 5:30 p.m. and is fed to the network an hour later. Local talent participating includes Pat Walker, tenor; Mary Louise Repult, lyric soprano; Harry Dice, baritone; Berl Olswanger and the Ol' Swingers, consisting of Nell Sharp, Nita Nance and Betty Huffman; Mrs. Rhey Wilson, the "Aunt Buney" of the Juniper Junction program on WMC and WMCT, and The Three Bops, composed of Paul Pritchartt, Peter Norfleet and Dr. William Long.

Winner on the theater stage earlier will receive a $100 savings bond. A jury in New York selects the winning city to send its top talent to New York for the finals next month. Final winners there will be given a trip to Hollywood and auditions for a job.

7:00—Nicholas Montsarrat, author of "The Cruel Sea," is a guest on Twenty Questions, WHBQ.

8:30—Cowboy Copas and Martha Carson are featured on Grand Ole Opry, WMC.

11:55 — Theodore Roosevelt III tells his philosophy of life on This I Believe, WREC.

T-V Specials—WMCT

6:00—Sammy Kaye begins his new television show at this time with Felicia Saunders as vocalist on the opening program.

7:00—David Rose and his orchestra are spotlighted on Saturday Night Revue by Hoagy Carmichael, host and star.

Radio Tomorrow

9:00—Rev. Noel Smith, editor of the Baptist Bible Tribune, will speak on "The One and Only Gospel," Church of the Air, WREC. . . . Methodist Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta will speak on "Giving Life the Right Drive," National Radio Pulpit, WMC. . . . Gene Lockhart in "I Ought to Go Home Now," Hour of St. Francis, WHHM. This drama tells of one man's struggle to answer the question, "Can I take a drink, or do I have to leave it alone?"

9:30—Dr. Norman Vincent Peale will tell his listeners about "Getting Rid of Your Unhappy Thoughts," Art of Living, WMC. An article by Dr. Peale appears in The Press-Scimitar every Monday.

10:30—Gerald Moore will play a Handel sonata and Frank Froba a popular classic on Piano Tones, WHBQ.

11:30—"Egypt and the Destiny of the People of Israel" will be discussed by Maurice Samuel, author, and Prof. Mark Van Doren, poet, on Words We Live By, WMC.

12:30—Mr. President will thwart a scheme to corner the gold market in a story called "Black Friday," WMPS.

1:30—Gregor Piatigorsky will be cello soloist and Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on World Music Festivals, WREC. Charles Munch will conduct. The program will begin with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B flat major and follow with the Adagio for Strings by Samuel Barber, contemporary American composer.

3:30—Dinah Shore will be grand marshal of the parade at the Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, WMC.

4:00—The NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Frank Miller's "Borodin Fantasy for Viola and Orchestra," with Carlton Cooley as soloist, WMC. Other works on the program will be Wagner's overture to "The Flying Dutchman" and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony.

5:30—Summer in St. Louis will present Eileen Schauler, soprano, and Lawrence Brooks, baritone, who are currently appearing at the St. Louis Municipal Opera, WREC.

6:00—A mad scientist who seeks a secret power to suppress nations and men is the central figure in "Kidnaped Equation," The Shadow, WHBQ. . . . Memphis Forum topic: "The Effect of Senator Taft's Death," WHHM.

6:30—Dick Powell in "The Wheat Germ Case," WREC. . . . "I Ought to Go Home Now," starring Gene Lockhart in a temperance drama on The Hour of St. Francis, WHHM.

7:00—"Old Betsy" happens to be a fiddle, not as famous as the one Nero used, but rare enough to get involved in "The Case of the Fabulous Fiddle," Nick Carter thriller, WHBQ. . . . Henri Rene, orchestra leader, will be Tony Martin's guest, WMC.

7:30—A weird story of underworld loyalty is told in "Detecting the Pearl River Band Murders," True Detective, WHBQ.

8:45—Charles L. Curtiss, assistant administrator for administrative services in the Veterans Administration, will speak on "Helping the VA to Help You," WMPS.

9:00—Merriment turns to murder at a costume party where Barrie Craig is an unwelcome guest, in "Murder Masquerade," starring William Gargan, WMC.

10:00—Rabbi Leon Fram of Temple Israel, Detroit, on Message of Israel, WMPS.

T-V Tomorrow

11:30—"Facts on Faith," second in a series of quiz-style programs sponsored by the Catholic Hour, will have as guests Dr. N. M. MacNeil, a Philadelphia physician; Peggy Ann McCay, t-v actress, and Paul Hume, music critic of the Washington Post whose caustic letter from former President Truman catapulted him into the spotlight several years ago. Moderator is Rev. Urbag Nagle.

7:00—Ed Begley will star in "Ernie Barger is Fifty," on the Television Playhouse. This is the story of a man who, at 50, makes the frightening discovery that he is no longer needed by anyone.

9:45—Henry Fonda will head the list of guests on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town. The program also will include vocalists, instrumentalists and animal acts, topped by The Aquacade with 17 girls and a diving comedy team.

11:30 — Arthur Gold and Robert Fizdale, duo-pianists who appeared in Memphis several years ago, will be heard on the Recital Hall.

LE DROIT, OTTAWA, LE JEUDI 6 AOUT 1953

Radio-Cinéma

Festival Berkshire

"Richard Coeur de Lion" de Grétry

BERKSHIRE, Mass. — "Richard Coeur-de-Lion", opéra en trois actes écrit peu de temps avant la Révolution française par le prolifique compositeur André Ernest-Modeste Grétry, sera donné par les étudiants du "Department IV", classe d'opéra sous la direction de Boris Goldovsky du centre de Musique de Berkshire, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass., à 8.30 lundi le 10 août et mardi le 11 août dans la salle du "Théâtre Concert". Tous les sièges sont réservés.

La première de l'opéra de Grétry, qui sera donnée en anglais, scénario de J. M. Sedaine traduit par MM. Goldovsky et Sarah Caldwell, eut sa première à Paris le 21 octobre, 1784; la première américaine eut lieu à Boston en 1797; subséquement en 1798 et 1800 respectivement, Philadelphie et New York l'entendirent.

La radio transmettra dimanche après-midi, le réseau Columbia, le concert auquel prendront part Gregor Piatigorsky, violoncelliste et l'orchestre symphonique de Boston sous la direction de Charles Munch dans le concerto de Darius Milhaud; Joseph Pasquale, l'altiste de la symphonie, le joindra dans une performance du "Don Quichote" de R. Strauss.

Voici les programmes pour la fin de semaine prochaine à Berkshire:

Vendredi, le 7 août, 8 h. 30 p.m. —
CHARLES MUNCH
"Roméo et Juliet", Dramatic Symphony — Berlioz
Solistes:
Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum et le Berkshire Festival Chorus

Samedi, le 8 août, 8 h. 30 p.m. —
LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Koussevitzky Memorial Concert
Prélude à "Khovanstchina" — Moussorgsky
"Shéhérazade" pour Soprano et Orchestre — Ravel
Soliste: Jennie Tourel
Symphonie No. 2 ("Resurrection") — Mahler
Solistes: Jennie Tourel, Theresa Green et le Berkshire Festival Chorus

Dimanche, le 9 août. 2 h. 30 p.m. —
CHARLES MUNCH
Symphonie No. 5, en Si bémolle — Schubert
Adagio pour Strings — Barber
"Don Quichotte" (avec solo de violoncelle. — Strauss
Solistes: Gregor Piatigorsky et Joseph De Pasquale.

Cir. (D 88,446) (S 127,157)
This Clipping From
YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO
VINDICATOR
AUG 30 1953

Will Broadcast Color TV over Nation Aug. 30

(By The Associated Press)

New York, Aug. 20—The National Broadcasting Co. plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country beginning Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said Wednesday that Radio Corp. of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June, programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting in September.

Cir. (D 99,199)
This Clipping From
RICHMOND, VA.
NEWS-LEADER

NBC to Start Color Video On August 30

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)—The National Broadcasting Company plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting August 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June, but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corporation of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June, programs including "Howdy Doody," "Bob and Ray," "Gabby Hayes" and "Meet the Veep" have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white.

The new series of NBC tests is to start with "Kukla, Fran and Ollie," in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white. No date has been set for the start of regular commercial operations.

Cir. (D 180,472)
This Clipping From CINCINNATI, OHIO
TIMES-STAR
AUG 20 1953

NBC Sets Date For TV in Color Across Country

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)— The National Broadcasting Co. plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corp. of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

[63]

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 104,936) (S 165,81)
This Clipping From
NASHVILLE, TENN.
MORNING TENNESSEAN
1953

adio and TV Roundup

Most Folks Have A Television Set

Over Half of U. S. Families Reported To Be Owners; Stations on Increase

y JANE CARTER

A new television set is delivered to a home somewhere in the United States on the average of every six seconds—and the habits of the family receiving it are turned topsy turvy.

Credited with making the greatest impact on the American home since the invention of the automobile, TV is still expanding at a rapid rate.

Miss Carter

And TV is already in 55 per cent of the nation's homes and available to about 80 per cent of the nation's population, according to Wayne Oliver of the Associated Press.

More than 60 new stations are scheduled to go on the air by the end of the year.

Locally WSIX and WLAC, recently granted permits by the Federal Communications Commission, hope to be in this group, beginning telecasting by November.

TV's greatest effect to date has been on the family's living habits, particularly when the set is new.

Let Other Things Go

When WSM-TV began broadcasting three years ago, Nashvillians reported they "just let things go and watched TV." There were fewer trips to the neighborhood movie, the radio was moved from the living room and the TV set occupied the place of honor. Books and magazines were left unread, dishwashing put off until morning—and the family activities generally revolved around the TV set.

As the family gets used to its set things follow a more normal pattern. Still TV has its effects on the family and industry, as well. However, results have not been as drastic as some expected.

While evening radio listening has taken a severe downswing because of TV, its daytime programming has met the challenge successfully, Oliver says. The total business of all radio stations has continued to increase with the number of sets across the country estimated at 110,000,000, against the 65,000,000 six years ago.

Reading Is Stimulated

Some critics have said TV will result in a nation of illiterates because it discourages reading. However, the American Library association reports that after the novelty begins to fade, TV sends many persons to libraries for books on subjects they have seen on television.

The movie industry has felt television's impact. Attendance is estimated to have declined from 90,000,000 persons per week in 1946 to 45,000,000 last year. But there has been an upswing this year that may have brought the total back to around 54,000,000.

Coming Attractions

United Nations General assembly broadcasts begin tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. over WSM-TV. They are scheduled for one week only, Monday through Friday . . . GI musicians in Korea presented on Horace Heidt's the American Way (Thursday, 9 p.m., WLAC). . . . "What Have We Learned From Korea?" is discussion topic on America's Town Meeting (Tuesday, 8 p.m., WSIX). . . "A Smuggler's Secret" scheduled on The Shadow (today, 4:30 p.m., WMAK). . . . Same station's Chicago Theater of the Air (today, 8 p.m.,) features Wilhelm Silber, who spent most of his youth in concentration camps, in his radio debut.

Peter Lorre stars in "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes" on Playhouse on Broadway (Wednesday 9 p.m., WLAC). . . Robert Montgomery Players tomorrow, 7:30 p.m., WSM-TV) staging "Pierce 3101", melodrama of a man who contrives an almost perfect crime against his wife . . . Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program of Wagner and Schubert on World Music Festivals (today, 1:30 p.m., WLAC) . . . Alistair Cooke reports on his recent 10,000 mile trip across the country (today, 9:15 p.m., WSIX) . . . Vincent Youman's music, "Tea For Two," "Time on My Hands" and "The Carioca" scheduled on American Music Hall (today, 6:05 p.m., WSIX).

Montgomery

A New TV Service

Column has received an advertisement from "Audience Representatives, Inc.," a new television service. The pamphlet instructs listeners to call a New York phone number if on any given evening they find they will be unable to see one of their favorite television programs. The service says it will "supply a trained substitute who will watch your TV program for you. The following day your representative will file a complete report listing his reactions in detail—the number of times he laughed, cried or applauded for you."

Now we can all stop watching TV. And when anyone asks how you enjoyed such-and-such a program, just pull out your Audience Representative's account. The reaction will probably be startling but at least your friend won't ask

Cir. (D 192,402) (S 241,691)
This Clipping From
MEMPHIS, TENN.
COMMERCIAL APPEAL
AUG 20 1953

BLACK, WHITE VERSION OF COLOR TV PENDING

Home Sets Won't Pick Up All Of Planned NBS Tests

NEW YORK, Aug. 19. — (AP) — Starting Aug. 30, television viewers throughout the country will be able to see a black and white version of the proposed new compatible color television.

Radio Corp. of America and its National Broadcasting Co. will network a number of programs in color, although they can be received only in black and white by the public.

An NBC spokesman disclosed Wednesday that since last June several programs, including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and meet the Veep, had gone out in color. However, less than a half dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental authorization from the Federal Communications Commission starting sometime in September.

The FCC has announced it proposes to authorize the new color method on compatible standards, that would permit existing sets to receive color telecasts in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

The new series of NBC tests will start with Kukla Fran and Ollie and their forthcoming telecast with the Boston Symphony.

Cir. (D 33,690)
This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
AUG 20 1953

RADIO

WFAS 123 or 1230 — WFAS FM 103 9 mc

WFAS	1230	WABC	770	WINS	1010
WNBC	660	WCBS	880	WMGM	1050
WOR	710	WMCA	570	WQXR	1560

AM and FM PROGRAMS broadcast simultaneously Monday through Saturday 7:00 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.—SUNDAYS 9:00 A.M. to 9:0 P.M. NEWS SCHEDULE (Mondays thru Saturdays) 7:00, 7:45, 8:55, 9:55, 10:55, 11:55 A.M., 12:45, 1:55, 2:55, 3:55, 4:45, 5:55, 6:55, 7:55 8:45 P.M. Sundays 9:55, 11:55 A.M., 12:55, 1:55, 4:55, 6:55 P.M.

8:30—WCBS "Spring Over Brooklyn," with Alan Young.
8:50—WABC Revolutionary War drama, "Lafayette in America."
9:00—WNBC "Case of the Juror's Jeopardy," mystery drama.
9:30—WABC Madame Olga Koussevitzky, head of the Berkshire Music Center, and others.
10:45—WCBS Beardsley Ruml, economist, discusses idea for future Federal budget.

Friday:
3:00—WABC U.N. session.

TODAY

4:45-WFAS—Newscast
WNBC—Woman In My House
5:00-WFAS—Sports Page
WNBC—Plain Bill
WOR—The B-Bar-B
WCBS—News
WABC—Big Jon & Sparkie
5:05-WCBS—John H. Faulk
5:15-WFAS—Cocktail Time
WNBC—Front Page Farrell
WABC—John Conte
5:30-WFAS—Song Shop
WNBC—Lorenzo Jones
WOR—Keynote Ranch
5:45-WNBC—Doctor's Wife
5:55-WFAS—Newscast
WCBS—This I Believe
WOR—Cecil Brown
6:00-WFAS—Today in Sports
WNBC—News
WOR—News, Liye Van
WABC—Geo. H. Combs
WCBS—Allan Jackson
6:15-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WOR—Dorothy & Dick
WCBS—Curt Massey
WABC—Bob Sherwood
WNBC—Sports, Bill
6:25-WNBC—Herb Sheldon
6:30-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WOR—News
WCBS—You and the World
WNBC—Tex and Jinx
6:45-WOR—Sports
WCBS—Lowell Thomas
WNBC—News
6:55-WFAS—Newscast
7:00-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WNBC—Serenade
WOR—Fulton Lewis Jr
WABC—Headline Edition
WCBS—Family Skeleton
7:15-WOR—Henry Gladstone
WABC—Elmer Davis
WCBS—Johnny Mercer
7:20-WOR—Answer Man
7:30-WFAS—Serenade
WNBC—News
WOR—Gabriel Heatter
WABC—Space Rangers
7:45-WOR—Tittus Moody
WNBC—One Man's
WCBS—E. R. Murrow
7:55-WFAS—Newscast
WABC—News
8:00-WFAS—Music
WNBC—Roy Rogers
WCBS—Meet Millie
WOR—Official Detective
WABC—City By-Line
8:15-WABC—Serenade Room
8:30-WFAS—Sports Page
WNBC—Father Knows Best
WOR—Adventurer
WCBS—Theater
WABC—Heritage
8:45-WFAS—Newscast
9:00-WFAS—Rendezvous
WOR—News
WABC—Mike Malloy
WCBS—Romance
WNBC—Counter Spy
9:05-WOR—Rod & Gun Club
9:30-WNBC—Eddie Cantor
WCBS—On Stage
WOR—Eugenie Baird
WABC—Time Capsule
9:55-WFAS—Newscast
WNBC—Judy Canova
WOR—Frank Edwards
WABC—News
WCBS—Horace Heidt
10:15-WOR—Newsreel
WABC—Geo. H. Combs
10:30-WNBC—News
WOR—Weather
WCBS—News
10:35-WOR—Shop Shop
WCBS—Cedric Adams
WNBC—Jane Pickens
10:45-WNBC—Beardsley Ruml
10:55-WABC—News
WOR—Sports
11:00-WABC—News
WCBS—News
WOR—News, Lyle Van
WNBC—News
11:15-WCBS—Galen Drake
WOR—Kyle MacDonnell
WNBC—Skitch Henderson
WABC—Virginia Graham
11:30-WCBS—Music
12:00-WCBS—News; Music
WNBC—News; Music
WABC—Birdland
WOR—News; Music

Cir. (D 151,320) (S 257,150)
This Clipping From
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
OKLAHOMAN
AUG 20 1953

Color on TV Won't Cause Much Sparkle

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—Starting August 30, television viewers throughout the country will be able to see a black and white version of the proposed new compatible color television.

Radio Corp. of America and the National Broadcasting Co. will network a number of programs in color, although they can be received only in black and white by the public.

An NBC spokesman disclosed Wednesday that since last June several programs, including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep, had gone out in color. However, less than a half dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The Columbia Broadcasting system has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental authorization from the federal communications commission starting sometime in September.

The FCC has announced it proposes to authorize the new color method on compatible standards, that would permit existing sets to receive color telecasts in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

The new series of NBC tests will start with Kukla Fran and Ollie and their forthcoming telecast with the Boston symphony.

RCA and NBC have been making tests of network transmissions of compatible color since 1950, and viewers here and in several other cities have seen occasional color telecasts—as black and white—for several months.

Cir. (D 95,436) (S 101,540)
This Clipping From
NORFOLK, VA.
VIRGINIAN-PILOT
AUG 21 1953

NBC to Beam Color-TV Shows All Over Nation

New York, Aug. 20 (AP) — The National Broadcasting Company plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting August 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corporation of America and NBS will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

Cir. (D 250,095)
This Clipping From ATLANTA, GA.
JOURNAL
AUG 20 1953

Color TV Telecasts Black, White for Public

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The National Broadcasting Co., plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said Wednesday that radio Corporation of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

* * *

SINCE JUNE programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

[64]

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 104,936) (S 165,81)

This Clipping From
NASHVILLE, TENN.
MORNING TENNESSEAN

Radio and TV Roundup

Most Folks Have A Television Set

Over Half of U. S. Families Reported To Be Owners; Stations on Increase

by JANE CARTER

[illegible] has been an upswing this [illegible] that may have brought the [illegible] back to around 54,000,000.

Coming Attractions

United Nations General asse[illegible] broadcasts begin tomorrow [illegible] 2:30 p.m. over WSM-TV. They [illegible] scheduled for one week only, Mon[illegible]day through Friday . . . GI mu[illegible]sicians in Korea presented on Hor[illegible]ace Heidt's the American Wa[illegible] (Thursday, 9 p.m., WLAC). . . "What Have We Learned From Korea?" is discussion topic on America's Town Meeting (Tue[illegible]day, 8 p.m., WSIX). . . "A Smug[illegible]'s Secret" scheduled on The Shadow (today, 4:30 p.m., WMAK). . . Same station's Chicago The[illegible]ter of the Air (today, 8 p.m.,) features Wilhelm Silber, who spent most of his youth in con[illegible]centration camps, in his radio de[illegible]but.

Miss Carter

Peter Lorre stars in "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes" on Playhouse on Broadway (Wednesday 9 p.m., WLAC). . . Robert Montgomery Players tomorrow 7:30 p.m., WSM-TV) staging "Pierce 3101", melodrama of a man who contrives an almost perfect crime against his wife . . . Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program of Wagner and Schubert on World Music Festivals (today, 1:30 p.m., WLAC) . . . Alistair Cooke reports on his recent 10,000 mile trip across the country (today, 9:15 p.m., WSIX) . . . Vincent Youman's music, "Tea For Two," "Time on My Hands" and "The Carioca" scheduled on American Music Hall (today, 6:05 p.m., WSIX).

Montgomery

A New TV Service

Column has received an advertisement from "Audience Representatives, Inc.," a new television service. The pamphlet instructs listeners to call a New York phone number if on any given evening they find they will be unable to see one of their favorite television programs. The service says it will "supply a trained substitute who will watch your TV program for you. The following day your representative will file a complete report listing his reactions in detail—the number of times he laughed, cried or applauded for you."

Now we can all stop watching TV. And when anyone asks how you enjoyed such-and-such a program, just pull out your Audience Representative's account. The reaction will probably be startling but at least your friend won't ask

Cir. (D 192,402) (S 241,691)

This Clipping From MEMPHIS, TENN.
COMMERCIAL APPEAL

BLACK, WHITE VERSION OF COLOR TV PENDING

Home Sets Won't Pick Up All Of Planned NBS Tests

NEW YORK, Aug. 19. — (AP) — Starting Aug. 30, television viewers throughout the country will be able to see a black and white version of the proposed new compatible color television.

Radio Corp. of America and its National Broadcasting Co. will network a number of programs in color, although they can be received only in black and white by the public.

An NBC spokesman disclosed Wednesday that since last June several programs, including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and meet the Veep, had gone out in color. However, less than a half dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental authorization from the Federal Communications Commission starting sometime in September.

The FCC has announced it proposes to authorize the new color method on compatible standards, that would permit existing sets to receive color telecasts in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

The new series of NBC tests will start with Kukla Fran and Ollie and their forthcoming telecast with the Boston Symphony.

Cir. (D 33,690)

This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN

AUG 20 1953

RADIO

WFAS	1230	WABC	770	WINS	1010
WNBC	660	WCBS	880	WMGM	1050
WOR	710	WMCA	570	WQXR	1560

WFAS 123 or 1230 — WFAS FM 103 9 mc

AM and FM PROGRAMS broadcast simultaneously Monday through Saturday 7:00 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.—SUNDAYS 9:00 A.M. to 9:0 P.M. NEWS SCHEDULE (Mondays thru Saturdays) 7:00, 7:45, 8:5 9:55, 10:55, 11:55 A.M., 12:45, 1:55, 2:55, 3:55, 4:45, 5:55, 6:55, 7:5 8:45 P.M. Sundays 9:55, 11:55 A.M., 12:55, 1:55, 4:55, 6:55 P.M.

8:30—WCBS "Spring Over Brooklyn," with Alan Young.
8:30—WABC Revolutionary War drama, "Lafayette in America."
9:00—WNBC "Case of the Juror's Jeopardy," mystery drama.
9:30—WABC Madame Olga Koussevitzky, head of the Berkshire Music Center, and others.
10:45—WCBS Beardsley Ruml, economist, discusses idea for future Federal budget.

Friday:
3:00—WABC U.N. session.

TODAY

4:45-WFAS—Newscast
WNBC—Woman in My House
5:00-WFAS—Sports Page
WNBC—Plain Bill
WOR—The B-Bar-B
WCBS—News
WABC—Big Jon & Sparkie
5:05-WCBS—John H. Faulk
5:15-WFAS—Cocktail Time
WNBC—Front Page Farrell
WABC—John Conte
5:30-WFAS—Song Shop
WNBC—Lorenzo Jones
WOR—Keynote Ranch
5:45-WNBC—Doctor's Wife
5:55-WFAS—Newscast
WCBS—This I Believe
WOR—Cecil Brown
6:00-WFAS—Today in Sports
WNBC—News
WOR—News, Live Van
WABC—Geo. H. Combs
WCBS—Allan Jackson
6:15-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WOR—Dorothy & Dick
WCBS—Curt Massey
WABC—Bob Sherwood
WNBC—Sports, Bill
6:25-WNBC—Herb Sheldon
6:30-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WOR—News
WCBS—You and the World
WNBC—Tex and Jinx
6:45-WOR—Sports
WCBS—Lowell Thomas
WNBC—News
6:55-WFAS—Newscast
7:00-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WNBC—Serenade
WOR—Fulton Lewis Jr
WABC—Headline Edition
WCBS—Family Skeleton
7:15-WOR—Henry Gladstone
WABC—Elmer Davis
WCBS—Johnny Mercer
7:20-WOR—Answer Man
7:30-WFAS—Serenade
WNBC—News
WOR—Gabriel Heatter
WABC—Space Rangers
7:45-WOR—Tittus Moody
WNBC—One Man's
WCBS—E. R. Murrow
7:55-WFAS—Newscast
WABC—News
8:00-WFAS—Music
WNBC—Roy Rogers
WCBS—Meet Millie
WOR—Official Detective
WABC—City By-Line
8:15-WABC—Serenade Room
8:30-WFAS—Sports Page
WNBC—Father Knows Best
WOR—Adventurer
WCBS—Theater
WABC—Heritage
8:45-WFAS—Newscast
9:00-WFAS—Rendezvous
WOR—News
WABC—Mike Malloy
WCBS—Romance
WNBC—Counter Spy
9:05-WOR—Rod & Gun Club
9:30-WNBC—Eddie Cantor
WCBS—On Stage
WOR—Eugenie Baird
WABC—Time Capsule
9:55-WFAS—Newscast
WNBC—Judy Canova
WOR—Frank Edwards
WABC—News
WCBS—Horace Heidt
10:15-WOR—Newsreel
WABC—Geo. H. Combs
10:30-WNBC—News
WOR—Weather
WCBS—News
10:35-WOR—Shop Shop
WCBS—Cedric Adams
WNBC—Jane Pickens
10:45-WNBC—Beardsley Rum
10:55-WABC—News
WOR—Sports
11:00-WABC—News
WCBS—News
WOR—News, Lyle Van
WNBC—News
11:15-WCBS—Gaien Drake
WOR—Kyle MacDonnell
WNBC—Skitch Henderson
WABC—Virginia Graham
11:30-WCBS—Music
12:00-WCBS—News; Music
WNBC—News; Music
WABC—Birdland
WOR—News; Music

Cir. (D 151,320) (S 257,150)

This Clipping From OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
OKLAHOMAN

AUG 20 1953

Color on TV Won't Cause Much Sparkle

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—Starting August 30, television viewers throughout the country will be able to see a black and white version of the proposed new compatible color television.

Radio Corp. of America and the National Broadcasting Co. will network a number of programs in color, although they can be received only in black and white by the public.

An NBC spokesman disclosed Wednesday that since last June several programs, including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep, had gone out in color. However, less than a half dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The Columbia Broadcasting system has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental authorization from the federal communications commission starting sometime in September.

The FCC has announced it proposes to authorize the new color method on compatible standards, that would permit existing sets to receive color telecasts in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

The new series of NBC tests will start with Kukla Fran and Ollie and their forthcoming telecast with the Boston symphony.

RCA and NBC have been making tests of network transmissions of compatible color since 1950, and viewers here and in several other cities have seen occasional color telecasts—as black and white—for several months.

Cir. (D 95,436) (S 101,540)

This Clipping From NORFOLK, VA.
VIRGINIAN-PILOT

AUG 1953

NBC to Beam Color-TV Shows All Over Nation

New York, Aug. 20 (AP) — The National Broadcasting Company plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting August 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corporation of America and NBS will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

Cir. (D 250,095)

This Clipping From ATLANTA, GA.
JOURNAL

AUG 20 1953

Color TV Telecasts Black, White for Public

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The National Broadcasting Co., plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said Wednesday that radio Corporation of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

* * *

SINCE JUNE programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

[64]

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 104,936) (S 165,81-)
This Clipping From
NASHVILLE, TENN.
MORNING TENNESSEAN
1953

Radio and TV Roundup

Most Folks Have A Television Set

Over Half of U. S. Families Reported To Be Owners; Stations on Increase

By JANE CARTER

A new television set is delivered in a home somewhere in the United States on the average of every six seconds and the habits of the family receiving it are turned topsy turvy.

Credited with making the greatest impact on the American home since the invention of the automobile, TV is still expanding at a rapid rate.

Miss Carter

And TV is already in 55 per cent of the nation's homes and available to about 80 per cent of the nation's population, according to Wayne Oliver of the Associated Press.

More than 60 new stations are scheduled to go on the air by the end of the year.

Locally WSIX and WLAC, recently granted permits by the Federal Communications Commission, hope to be in this group, beginning telecasting by November.

TV's greatest effect to date has been on the family's living habits, particularly when the set is new.

Let Other Things Go

When WSM-TV began broadcasting three years ago, Nashvillians reported they "just let things go and watched TV." There were fewer trips to the neighborhood movie, the radio was moved from the living room and the TV set occupied the place of honor. Books and magazines were left unread, dishwashing put off until morning—and the family activities generally revolved around the TV set.

As the family gets used to its set things follow a more normal pattern. Still TV has its effects on the family and industry, as well. However, results have not been as drastic as some expected.

While evening radio listening has taken a severe downswing because of TV, its daytime programming has met the challenge successfully, Oliver says. The total business of all radio stations has continued to increase with the number of sets across the country estimated at 110,000,000, against the 65,000,000 six years ago.

Reading Is Stimulated

Some critics have said TV will result in a nation of illiterates because it discourages reading. However, the American Library association reports that after the novelty begins to fade, TV sends many persons to libraries for books on subjects they have seen on television.

The movie industry has felt television's impact. Attendance is estimated to have declined from 90,000,000 persons per week in 1946-47 to 45,000,000 last year. But Chester Bahn of Film Daily says there has been an upswing this year that may have brought the total back to around 54,000,000.

Coming Attractions

United Nations General assembly broadcasts begin tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. over WSM-TV. They are scheduled for one week only, Monday through Friday . . . GI musicians in Korea presented on Horace Heidt's the American Way (Thursday, 9 p.m., WLAC). . . "What Have We Learned From Korea?" is discussion topic on America's Town Meeting (Tuesday, 8 p.m., WSIX). . . "A Smuggler's Secret" scheduled on The Shadow (today, 4:30 p.m., WMAK). . . . Same station's Chicago Theater of the Air (today, 8 p.m.,) features Wilhelm Silber, who spent most of his youth in concentration camps, in his radio debut.

Montgomery

Peter Lorre stars in "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes" on Playhouse on Broadway (Wednesday 9 p.m., WLAC). . . Robert Montgomery Players tomorrow 7:30 p.m., WSM-TV) staging "Pierce 3101", melodrama of a man who contrives an almost perfect crime against his wife . . . Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program of Wagner and Schubert on World Music Festivals (today, 1:30 p.m., WLAC) . . . Alistair Cooke reports on his recent 10,000 mile trip across the country (today, 5:15 p.m., WSIX) . . . Vincent Youman's music, "Tea For Two," "Time on My Hands" and "The Carioca" scheduled on American Music Hall (today, 6:05 p.m., WSIX).

A New TV Service

Column has received an advertisement from "Audience Representatives, Inc.," a new television service. The pamphlet instructs listeners to call a New York phone number if on any given evening they find they will be unable to see one of their favorite television programs. The service says it will "supply a trained substitute who will watch your TV program for you. The following day your representative will file a complete report listing his reactions in detail—the number of times he laughed, cried or applauded for you."

Now we can all stop watching TV. And when anyone asks how you enjoyed such-and-such a program, just pull out your Audience Representative's account. The reaction will probably be startling but at least your friend won't ask

Cir. (D 33,690)
This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
AUG 20 1953

RADIO

WFAS 123 or 1230 — WFAS FM 103 9 mc

WFAS	1230	WABC	770	WINS	1010
WNBC	660	WCBS	880	WMGM	1050
WOR	710	WMCA	570	WQXR	1560

AM and FM PROGRAMS broadcast simultaneously Monday through Saturday 7:00 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.—SUNDAYS 9:00 A.M. to 9:0[0] P.M. NEWS SCHEDULE (Mondays thru Saturdays) 7:00, 7:45, 8:5[5], 9:55, 10:55, 11:55 A.M., 12:45, 1:55, 2:55, 3:55, 4:45, 5:55, 6:55, 7:5[5], 8:45 P.M. Sundays 9:55, 11:55 A.M., 12:55, 1:55, 4:55, 6:55 P.M.

8:30—WCBS "Spring Over Brooklyn," with Alan Young.
8:30—WABC Revolutionary War drama, "Lafayette in America."
9:00—WNBC "Case of the Juror's Jeopardy," mystery drama.
9:30—WABC Madame Olga Koussevitzky, head of the Berkshire Music Center, and others.
10:45—WCBS Beardsley Ruml, economist, discusses idea for future Federal budget.

Friday:
3:00—WABC U.N. session.

TODAY

4:45-WFAS—Newscast
WNBC—Woman In My House
5:00-WFAS—Sports Page
WNBC—Plain Bill
WOR—The B-Bar-B
WCBS—News
WABC—Big Jon & Sparkie
5:05-WCBS—John H. Faulk
5:15-WFAS—Cocktail Time
WNBC—Front Page Farrell
WABC—John Conte
5:30-WFAS—Song Shop
WNBC—Lorenzo Jones
WOR—Keynote Ranch
5:45-WNBC—Doctor's Wife
5:55-WFAS—Newscast
WCBS—This I Believe
WOR—Cecil Brown
6:00-WFAS—Today in Sports
WNBC—News
WOR—News, Liye Van
WABC—Geo. H. Combs
WCBS—Allan Jackson
6:15-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WOR—Dorothy & Dick
WCBS—Curt Massey
WABC—Bob Sherwood
WNBC—Sports, Bill
6:25-WNBC—Herb Sheldon
6:30-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WOR—News
WCBS—You and the World
WNBC—Tex and Jinx
6:45-WOR—Sports
WCBS—Lowell Thomas
WNBC—News
6:55-WFAS—Newscast
7:00-WFAS—Dinner Concert
WNBC—Serenade
WOR—Fulton Lewis Jr.
WABC—Headline Edition
WCBS—Family Skeleton
7:15-WOR—Henry Gladstone
WABC—Elmer Davis
WCBS—Johnny Mercer
7:20-WOR—Answer Man
7:30-WFAS—Serenade
WNBC—News
WOR—Gabriel Heatter
WABC—Space Rangers
7:45-WOR—Tittus Moody
WNBC—One Man's
WCBS—E. R. Murrow
7:55-WFAS—Newscast
WABC—News
8:00-WFAS—Music
WNBC—Roy Rogers
WCBS—Meet Millie
WOR—Official Detective
WABC—City By-Line
8:15-WABC—Serenade Room
8:30-WFAS—Sports Page
WNBC—Father Knows Best
WOR—Adventurer
WCBS—Theater
WABC—Heritage
8:45-WFAS—Newscast
9:00-WFAS—Rendezvous
WOR—News
WABC—Mike Malloy
WCBS—Romance
WNBC—Counter Spy
9:05-WOR—Rod & Gun Club
9:30-WNBC—Eddie Cantor
WCBS—On Stage
WOR—Eugenie Baird
WABC—Time Capsule
9:55-WFAS—Newscast
WNBC—Judy Canova
WOR—Frank Edwards
WABC—News
WCBS—Horace Heidt
10:15-WOR—Newsreel
WABC—Geo. H. Combs
10:30-WNBC—News
WOR—Weather
WCBS—News
10:35-WOR—Shop Shop
WCBS—Cedric Adams
WNBC—Jane Pickens
10:45-WNBC—Beardsley Ruml
10:55-WABC—News
WOR—Sports
11:00-WABC—News
WCBS—News
WOR—News, Lyle Van
WNBC—News
11:15-WCBS—Gaien Drake
WOR—Kyle MacDonnell
WNBC—Skitch Henderson
WABC—Virginia Graham
11:30-WCBS—Music
12:00-WCBS—News; Music
WNBC—News; Music
WABC—Birdland
WOR—News; Music

Cir. (D 151,320) (S 257,150)
This Clipping From
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
OKLAHOMAN
AUG 20 1953

Color on TV Won't Cause Much Sparkle

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—Starting August 30, television viewers throughout the country will be able to see a black and white version of the proposed new compatible color television.

Radio Corp. of America and the National Broadcasting Co. will network a number of programs in color, although they can be received only in black and white by the public.

An NBC spokesman disclosed Wednesday that since last June several programs, including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep, had gone out in color. However, less than a half dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The Columbia Broadcasting system has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental authorization from the federal communications commission starting sometime in September.

The FCC has announced it proposes to authorize the new color method on compatible standards, that would permit existing sets to receive color telecasts in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

The new series of NBC tests will start with Kukla Fran and Ollie and their forthcoming telecast with the Boston symphony.

RCA and NBC have been making tests of network transmissions of compatible color since 1950, and viewers here and in several other cities have seen occasional color telecasts—as black and white—for several months.

Cir. (D 95,436) (S 101,540)
This Clipping From
NORFOLK, VA.
VIRGINIAN-PILOT
AUG 21 1953

NBC to Beam Color-TV Shows All Over Nation

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—The National Broadcasting Company plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting August 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said yesterday Radio Corporation of America and NBS will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

Since June programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

MI...
COMMERCIAL ...
AUG 20 1953

BLACK, WHITE VERSION OF COLOR TV PENDING

Home Sets Won't Pick Up All Of Planned NBS Tests

NEW YORK, Aug. 19. . . (AP)—Starting Aug. 30, television viewers throughout the country will be able to see a black and white version of the proposed new compatible color television.

Radio Corp. of America and its National Broadcasting Co. will network a number of programs in color, although they can be received only in black and white by the public.

An NBC spokesman disclosed Wednesday that since last June several programs, including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and meet the Veep, had gone out in color. However, less than a half dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental authorization from the Federal Communications Commission starting sometime in September.

The FCC has announced it proposes to authorize the new color method on compatible standards, that would permit existing sets to receive color telecasts in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

The new series of NBC tests will start with Kukla Fran and Ollie and their forthcoming telecast with the Boston Symphony.

Cir. (D 250,095)
This Clipping From ATLANTA, GA.
JOURNAL
AUG 20 1953

Color TV Telecasts Black, White for Public

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The National Broadcasting Co., plans to broadcast color television to all parts of the country starting Aug. 30, but the public will be able to get the shows only in black and white.

An NBC spokesman said a number of programs have been broadcast in color since June but they were not relayed in color across the nation. Less than half a dozen stations were equipped to pass along the color portions of the signals.

The spokesman said Wednesday that radio Corporation of America and NBC will network a number of programs in color by the end of the month.

* * *

SINCE JUNE programs including Howdy Doody, Bob and Ray, Gabby Hayes and Meet the Veep have gone out in color and have been seen by set owners in black and white. The new series of NBC tests is to start with Kukla, Fran and Ollie in a telecast with the Boston Symphony.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced plans to do similar network color telecasts on an experimental basis, starting sometime in September.

The Federal Communications Commission has announced it plans to approve the new compatible color television system which also can be received in black and white, but has set no date for the start of regular commercial operations.

[64]

Many Works Introduced To Tanglewood Audiences

Music by Lukas Foss, Carlos Chavez, Richard Strauss, Sibelius and Berlioz Heard for First Time; Activities in Various Departments Show Increase

Lenox, Aug. 22—The Berkshire Music Festival of 1953 concluded with triumphant notes for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its musical director Charles Munch. The 16th season of the Festival saw many performance and attendence records shattered. Many great works and as many great artists and soloists were featured at Tanglewood.

Over all, 170,175 attended performances at this year's Festival. The nine major concerts in the music shed drew a record 91,800. The more intimate six "small concerts" of Bach, Mozart and Haydn in the Theater-Concert Hall were attended by 26,150. "Tanglewood On Parade" was enjoyed by 8400, while 43,825 attended student concerts and operas.

Works Introduced

In six weeks, from July 11 through Aug. 16, the Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; 113,300 in 1950, a record year when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years.

On the musical side, Mr. Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music, included in the Festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony Orchestra had never performed before, among them Bach's Cantata No. 28, with chorus and soloists, which Hugh Ross conducted; Mozart's Divertimento in D, for Strings (K. 136); Haydn's Theresa Mass, with chorus and soloists which Mr. Ross led; Darius Milhaud's "La Creation du Monde."

New to Tanglewood audiences were the following: Lukas Foss' cantata, "A Parable of Death," which had its New England premiere, with Vera Zorina narrating, and with tenor solo and chorus; Richard Strauss' Divertimento (after Couperin); Lukas Foss' revised Piano Concerto No. 2, in its first Eastern performance; the complete dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" of Berlioz, with Jennie Tourel, Nicola Moscona, John McCollum as soloists and the Festival chorus; Sibelius Symphony No. 4 in A minor, and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez, by the Mexican composer-conductor who was the Berkshire Music Center's guest teacher of composition this summer.

Friends Increase

Of particular gratification to the Boston Symphony Orchestra management has been the notable increase in interest in the concerts and demonstrations by each of the school's five departments. These are open to all who contribute to the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and their generous contributions from all over the country have helped meet the expenses of the school. Fifty-four such performances have been given during the six-week period, July 10-Aug. 16, as against 38 in 1952.

Membership in the Friends has jumped from 3900 last year to 5472 this season, with receipts from contributions this year totaling $27,637.40 as against $22,647.80 last year. Thirty-five per cent of the Friends are from Berkshire County, which means that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students. Attendance at Friends' concerts in 1953 totaled 43,825, compared to 34,400 in 1952; an increase of 9425.

School activities have been many and varied. Under the direction of Hugh Ross the choral section performed in six Festival concerts. The opera department under Boris Goldovsky, performed one major work. Gretry's 18th-century French opera-comique, "Richard the Lion-Hearted," and three rarely-heard one-act operas, and for "Tanglewood On Parade" its associate division gave the premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-acter, "Bad Boys in School."

Other Activities

Composers' forums, with Aaron Copland, Carlos Chavez or Irving Fine of the faculty as moderator, were held weekly for the performance and discussion of students' compositions; chamber music concerts, William Kroll supervising, were given each Sunday morning, and this year overflowed to extra Monday afternoon concerts. The student orchestra, under Leonard Bernstein's direction, gave six programs in the Music Shed, in which a cross-section of orchestra repertoire was performed, from Beethoven to Prokofieff.

The Tanglewood Study Group, under Ingolf Dahl, investigated a vast amount of old music and performed in class concerts, including the premiere at "Tanglewood On Parade" of a new cantata by Allen Sapp, written on commission especially for this group. Extra attractions in 1953 were three chamber music concerts donated by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, two organ recitals by E. Power Briggs, and lectures, "Aspects of Music" by faculty members and visitors.

Musician Relaxes

Joseph de Pasquale and his wife pictured relaxing after the Berkshire Festival at Sarank near Tanglewood. The viola soloist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is shown using his 153-year-old instrument to entertain his daughters, left to right, Elisa, 1½; and Sandra, three. Mrs. de Pasquale is the neice of the late Serge Kousivitzky. The viola which he holds is a Jo Baptiste Cerruti model made in Cremona, Italy in 1800.

Millbrook Round Table

MILLBROOK, NEW YORK, THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1953

OUR AIM FACTS

VOL. XXXXIX, NO. 19

The Berkshire Festival Ends Most Successful Season of 16-year History

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Music Director, Charles Munch, conducting, closed the 16th Berkshire Festival, the fourteenth since the Boston Symphony participated, in the hills of Western Massachusetts Sunday afternoon, with a program devoted to the symphonic works of Schubert, Wagner and Ravel.

Remarking that the season has been the most successful for the orchestra and its music school, the Berkshire Music Center, manager George E. Judd listed as causes for gratification "the increasing awareness of music patrons of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from Connecticut, Hudson and Mohawk valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane; the accoustical marvels of the 6,000-seat Music Shed and the 1,152-seat Theatre-Concert Hall with their open sides which permit music lovers to overflow onto the lawns of the Tanglewood estate so that no one need be turned away; the stimulating and varied programs; the excellent press and national radio coverage by a major network; the high standard of students enrolled in the school for its eleventh season; and the favorable Berkshire weather."

In six weeks, from July 11 thru August 16, the Festival concert attendance totalled 117,950, as compared with 104,875 in 1952; 112,650 in 1951; 113,300 in 1950, a record year when the late Serge Koussevitzky conducted his last performances with the orchestra he headed for 25 years.

The Festival early began upsetting records. Preliminary concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, programs devoted to Bach, Mozart and Haydn in the small-capacity Theatre-Concert Hall attracted a total of 26,150 persons. An average attendance of 4,360 persons attended each performance this year, which means that more than 3,000 persons per concert have sat on the Tanglewood lawns under the stars or under the sun to listen to music that, until just a few years ago, could have been classified as only for special tastes. So popular, indeed, have these "small" concerts proved that the orchestra management is faced with the problem of whether or not to move them next season entirely to the large-capacity Music Shed.

The Music Shed series (July 31-August 16) saw three week ends of three concerts each. The opening performance, July 31, attracted 10,300 persons, the largest first night in the Festival's history; despite rain threats the first Sunday afternoon program, conducted by Pierre Monteux on August 2, drew 9,900, for a new record: the weekend's total 31,000 set a new high for the opening weekend. Series B (August 7-9) witnessed a near record 11,400 persons on August 8 when Leonard Bernstein conducted a memorial program for Dr. Koussevitzky, and despite a rain threat that held the Sunday afternoon August 9 figure to 9,100, established an attendance of 28,000 for the weekend. Series C (August 14-16), with favorable weather, drew 32,800, highlights being the Saturday night August 15 concert of Leonard Bernstein with 12,100 persons and Sunday's concluding concert by Mr. Munch, with an attendance of 13,100, a season's high.

On the musical side, Charles Munch, who has pioneered in introducing so much music, included in the Festival programs a number of works which the Boston Symphony Orchestra had never performed before.

With a student body of 397, chosen from some 1,500 applicants the activities of the Berkshire Music Center also mounted. The student enrollment was composed of 292 full-time students from 40 states and the District of Columbia, New York leading with 76, Massachusetts next with 33, Michigan with 18. Seven foreign countries—Canada, Israel, Italy, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Sweden—were represented. Of these, 273 came with high school diplomas, 175 with college degrees representing 120 different colleges and 126 graduate,

(Continued on page 4)

[65]

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 31 1953

snake was only three feet[illegible]

—o—

FOR THE FIRST time in history, the Tanglewood Music Shed forms the background for a national advertisement. James Fassett, CBS music commentator who set up broadcasting equipment for the Shed series, is shown talking to Miss Lynne Hartman, violin student at the Music Center, and Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, all being gathered about a spanking new Willys sedan parked on the lawn. Willys Motor Company sponsored the broadcasts, and since almost everything else has been parked on that lawn, it's probably all right.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 25 1953

SOCIETY: Record Turnout at Final Castle Hill Concert

By MARJORIE W. SHERMAN

Its successful Summer marked by an audience increase of 50 percent over last year, the Castle Hill Concerts finished the 1953 season on a record note.

There was an all-time high attendance to hear the excellent duo-pianists, Appleton and Field; a record sale of champagne as the guests strolled in the moonlit rose garden at intermission and a record number of lobsters sold to picnickers during the sunset hour supper on the terraced lawns of the Great House.

All these "records" added up to more money for the maintenance as a Community Center of the magnificent house and grounds given by the late Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr.

Mrs. Crane's daughter, Princess Belosselsky, who lives within sight of Castle Hill on a farm where she and Prince Belosselsky raise pheasants and other game birds, is among the sponsors for these concerts. She and her husband rarely miss a concert, and with them for both picnic and music are usually their two daughters, Tatiana and Maria.

The Edward Tafts, who flew back from Ireland in time for the Tanglewood Concerts in the Berkshires, which they helped the late Serge Koussevitsky to establish, were at Castle Hill for this final concert. There, too, were the Ralph Bradleys, who haven't missed a week-end this Summer at Castle Hill. Dr. and Mrs. Henry Saltonstall are others with attendance records at Castle Hill, and Mrs. Alexander Steinert is another faithful friend.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Pier enjoyed the finale, as did the David Crocketts, the William Englishes, the Oliver Wolcotts, the Albert Burrages, the William Phillipses, the Joseph Grews, the Haskell Crockers, the Russell Robbs, the Warren Butlers and the many others on hand for the last Castle Hill week-end until next Summer.

A LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT will be among the judges at the Nahant Flower Show today. Fletcher Steele will pick the prize-winning plan to beautify the circle and two triangles of land at the approach to Nahant.

(Bachrach Photo)

JUNE IS THE MONTH chosen by Miss Robin Ferson Ladd of Boston for her wedding to Donald Spear Lord of Pittsfield.

This unique project will be a feature of the Nahant Flower Show's many classes, and Charles Greenough, Commissioner of Metropolitan Parks and Highways, is cooperating with Mrs. David Sigourney in arranging scale drawings for all competitors to use. The Nahant Garden Club will direct the landscaping of the winning plan.

Working with Mrs. Sigourney, whose enterprising plans for the show even included the cover design of the program, are Mrs. Phillips Roland, Mrs. Laurence Cusick, Miss Lucy Doane, Mrs. James Bangs, Mrs. Fred Timmins, Mrs. Frederick L. Shea, Mrs. Henry McLaughlin, Mrs. Raymond D'Arcy and many others.

A GRADUATION DINNER for 32 nurses, members of the class of 1953 at Faulkner Hospital School of Nursing, will be given Monday by the Faulkner Aid, with Mrs. Philip Richenburg as chairman. The dinner will be held at 6:30 in Chapin House, the student residence.

Sunday, the baccalaureate service will be held in Trinity Church, and Wednesday, Sept. 2, graduation exercises will be held in the auditorium of Simmons College. Charles F. Rowley, hospital corporation president, will conduct the program and Dr. Peter Bertocci will give the graduation address.

(Edwin Gray Photo)

MISS JUNE MILLER, whose engagement to 1st Lt Laredo Clemente of Cuba is announced today by her mother, Mrs. Louise Miller of Falmouth. Miss Miller is a graduate of St. Elizabeth's Hospital School and did post-graduate work at Johns Hopkins Hospital. She is now studying anesthesia at Boston City Hospital. Lt Clemente, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mateo Clemente of Cabaiguan, Cuba, graduated from Havana University and Medical School and before entering the Army completed his third year of surgical residency at Boston City Hospital.

Cir. (D 299,461) (S 516,478)
This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
AUG 23 1953

Pianos Arrive

TANGLEWOOD, Mass.—(INS)—One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (D 168,970) (S 150,268)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
AUG 30 1953

RANDOM LINES: A few Tanglewood tales: all of the madding horde pervading the festival this year did not applaud the rearrangement of melodic weekends. It has been the custom these many years to hear the Boston players in the Shed on Thursdays, Saturdays and Sunday matinees. This year the free Friday was omitted. Instead, the concerts were played on Fridays, Saturdays and Sabbath afternoons. Hence, few had the leisure to foil across to Jacob's Pillow for Mr. Shawn and his dancers; savor an art exhibition or two; daily with chamber music or stalk the Antique in its homey lair. The wails thereof were many, and I would caution the management to heed them . . . The proportion of singing waitresses and viol bus boys was outweighed somewhat by a strange influx of medical students. A pre-med waitress in the Curtis Hotel dining room earned quite a reputation by advising doughty old ladies upon dietary wisdom . . . I picked up a pupil of Aaron Copland in composition, on the trail from Tanglewood to Stockbridge, who informed me that Charles Munch, conductor and god of all thereabouts, never used a straight razor any more. "His hand shakes, you know" . . . Efforts to get a critic or two to the Sunday morning service at Shiloh Baptist Church, Lee, where Dorothy Maynor turned up some years ago . . . George Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: "I'm beginning to like these festivals."

Cir. (S 323,859)
This Clipping From BALTIMORE, MD.
AMERICAN
AUG 30 1953

Louis Azrael Says:

The Culture Business

By LOUIS AZRAEL

LENOX, Mass.—Almost anywhere you go in this Berkshire Mountain region you see signs of its major summer-time activity. You enter, for instance, the drug store on Lenox's main drag.

LOUIS AZRAEL

It is like any other big drug store—a small pharmacy counter in a corner, a soda and sandwich counter, toys, household goods, etc.—except for one thing.

The most prominent display in the store is a display of phonograph records, all spread out on the center counter.

* * *

AND THE KIND of records tells a story. There's Bach and Brahms and Mozart; also Hindemith, Vaughan Williams and a symphony by William Boyce. There is nothing to interest hepcats.

The man who runs the store says these records are, in summers, his fastest selling item. And that's not the only way music contributes to his income. Every evening he supervises a big parking lot a few miles away, at the entrance to the Tanglewood Music Festival grounds.

BIG BUSINESS

This festival is the region's biggest summer-time attraction. But it is far from the only one.

The forested mountains are of modest height, making for serenity rather than excitement. The ponds and the narrow Housatonic River, except where it is rimmed by grubby little industrial towns, suggests placidity, not grandeur. It is mild and lovely country but it offers, in itself, no advantages which cannot be found in many other regions—Western Maryland, for instance—where vacationists are comparatively sparse.

Here, however, vacationists throng by the thousands from all parts of the nation. The numerous hotels are jammed and the way to get dinner at any popular restaurant is to give the head waiter your name and then sit in the bar until he calls you.

* * *

AND THE CHIEF lure, the thing which distinguishes this region from many others with equal or better natural advantages, is—to use a very loose word for it—culture.

They go in for it here in a big way. The Tanglewood Festival, which ended its season during the week end we were there, drew 12,100 persons on its final evening. They filled the seats in the big unwalled shell. They sprawled on the grass beyond the shell. By the thousands, they lay on blankets, looking up toward the skies, and listening to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Leonard Bernstein, play Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Brahms' Second and a new "Sinfonia India" by the Mexican Carlos Chavez.

Some 20 miles away, at Jacob's Pillow, a dance festival in the Ted Shawn Theater was turning customers away. We were there for a matinee and saw an amazing Haitian, Jean Leon Destine, cause the audience to break into fervent "bravos" with his amazing native dancing.

* * *

[66]

Cir. (D 79,206)
This Clipping From
DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL HERALD
AUG 27 1953

A Woman's N. Y.

By Alice Hughes

Soon I'll be meeting my young camper, Jeremiah, as he emerges from the New Hampshire mountains. We plan to motor toward Woods Hole, Mass., put our car on the boat and spend a lazy four hours floating toward my favorite island—Nantucket.

Each year we spend Labor Day week there, thus ending the summer serenely in an atmosphere far removed from New York's hurly-burly. What I like best about Nantucket is its unchanging simplicity and absence of chi-chi.

This summer I spent two weekends at the Berkshire musical festival at Lenox, Mass. Now that this oasis of music has become one of America's most famous, it seems to me to have lost its earlier simplicity and become frankly a tourists' Mecca.

This is understandable, but regrettable. Each September when the boat pulls away from Nantucket Island, I make the same parting wish: that it stay the same next year.

WANTED: A TRAILER

End-of-summer concerns include home renovation. Landlords who haven't painted for the past three years are compelled by law to do so, or else lose the 15% increase they were granted last May first.

There are landlords who prefer to take the latter course because they find it cheaper to lose the increase than to pay for painting and repairs.

Many tenants, myself, included, are finding ourselves in this predicament, which can be a difficult one, if you've ordered new furniture, supplies, etc. for a certain time, depending upon painting to be done before placing the new equipment in the home. This change in timing can cause double work and lots of upset.

Why not live in a trailer? Anything is preferable to painting and re-doing six rooms and moving 3,000 books, hundreds of phonograph records and miles and miles of toy trains and tracks.

WONDER DRUG FOR CATS AND DOGS

Treating dogs and cats with the new antibiotics may produce strange phenomena in your household pets.

Margaret Cooper Gay, author of "How To Live With A Cat" and "How To Raise A Dog" reports that a hormone shot given to her cat, Pickle, caused him to act like a belligerent female, picking fights with other tom cats and even dogs.

Eye, ear, nose and throat disorders of pets respond to penicillin and terramyacin just as they do when prescribed for human beings.

Though the use of these drugs brought up to date, no attempt is new, and the books have been was made to ask James Thurber

LOCAL FOLK

ONE OF THE big sensations at the Tanglewood Festival this year, incidentally, was provided by a Baltimorean. She is Theresa Green, of 1524 North Appleton street.

Miss Green (actually Mrs. Gilbert Coleman) is a twenty-four-year-old colored soprano who once was the soloist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. She sang in the Boston Symphony's rendition of Mahler's "Resurrection Symphony" on August 8 and, according to all reports, brought the Tanglewood audience to one of the highest points of enthusiasm that this season evoked.

Miss Green, with two other Baltimoreans, were resident students at the school which the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted here this summer. The others are Louise French, 3940 Cloverhill road, and Lauraine Levy, 3530 Hilton road.

And at Jacob's Pillow, the dance school is managed by Carol Lynn and the house manager is Harold Abbey, both of Baltimore.

Cir. (D 26,526)
This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 31 1953

snake was only three feet long.

—o—

FOR THE FIRST time in history, the Tanglewood Music Shed forms the background for a national advertisement. James Fassett, CBS music commentator who set up broadcasting equipment for the Shed series, is shown talking to Miss Lynne Hartman, violin student at the Music Center, and Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, all being gathered about a spanking new Willys sedan parked on the lawn. Willys Motor Company sponsored the broadcasts, and since almost everything else has been parked on that lawn, it's probably all right.

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 25 1953

SOCIETY: Record Turnout at Final Castle Hill Concert

By MARJORIE W. SHERMAN

Its successful Summer marked by an audience increase of 50 per cent over last year, the Castle Hill Concerts finished the 1953 season on a record note.

There was an all-time high attendance to hear the excellent programmists, Appleton and Field; a record sale of champagne as the guests strolled in the moonlit rose garden at intermission for a record number of lobsters and picnickers during the sunset hour supper on the terraced lawns of the Great House.

All these "records" added up to more money for the maintenance as a Community Center of the magnificent house and grounds given by the late Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr.

Mrs. Crane's daughter, Princess Belosselsky, who lives within sight of Castle Hill on a farm where she and Prince Belosselsky raise pheasants and other game birds, is among the sponsors for these concerts. She and her husband rarely miss a concert, and with them for both picnic and music are usually their two daughters, Tatiana and Maria.

The Edward Tafts, who flew back from Ireland in time for the Tanglewood Concerts in the Berkshires, which they helped the late Serge Koussevitsky to establish, were at Castle Hill for this final concert. There, too, were the Ralph Bradleys, who haven't missed a week-end this Summer at Castle Hill. Dr. and Mrs. Henry Saltonstall are others with attendance records at Castle Hill, and Mrs. Alexander Steinert is another faithful friend.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Pier enjoyed the finale, as did the David Cheeketts, the William Englishes, the Oliver Wolcotts, the Albert Bancrofts, the William Phillipses, the Joseph Coolidges, the Haskell Coffins, the Russell Robbs, the Warren Baileys and the many others on hand for the last Castle Hill week-end until next Summer.

A LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT will be among the judges at the Nahant Flower Show today. Fletcher Steele will pick the prize-winning plan to beautify the circle and two triangles of land at the approach to Nahant.

(Bachrach Photo)

JUNE IS THE MONTH chosen by Miss Robin Ferson Ladd of Boston for her wedding to Donald Spear Lord of Pittsfield.

This unique project will be a feature of the Nahant Flower Show's many classes, and Charles Greenough, Commissioner of Metropolitan Parks and Highways, is cooperating with Mrs. David Sigourney in arranging scale drawings for all competitors to use. The Nahant Garden Club will direct the landscaping of the winning plan.

Working with Mrs. Sigourney, whose enterprising plans for the show even included the cover design of the program, are Mrs. Phillips Roland, Mrs. Laurence Cusick, Miss Lucy Doane, Mrs. James Bangs, Mrs. Fred Timmins, Mrs. Frederick L. Shea, Mrs. Henry McLaughlin, Mrs. Raymond D'Arcy and many others.

A GRADUATION DINNER for 32 nurses, members of the class of 1953 at Faulkner Hospital School of Nursing, will be given Monday by the Faulkner Aid, with Mrs. Philip Richenburg as chairman. The dinner will be held at 6:30 in Chapin House, the student residence.

Sunday, the baccalaureate service will be held in Trinity Church, and Wednesday, Sept. 2, graduation exercises will be held in the auditorium of Simmons College. Charles F. Rowley, hospital corporation president, will conduct the program and Dr. Peter Bertocci will give the graduation address.

(Edwin Gray Photo)

MISS JUNE MILLER, whose engagement to 1st Lt Laredo Clemente of Cuba is announced today by her mother, Mrs. Louise Miller of Falmouth. Miss Miller is a graduate of St. Elizabeth's Hospital School and did post-graduate work at Johns Hopkins Hospital. She is now studying anesthesia at Boston City Hospital. Lt Clemente, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mateo Clemente of Cabaiguan, Cuba, graduated from Havana University and Medical School and before entering the Army completed his third year of surgical residency at Boston City Hospital.

Cir. (D 186,970) (S 150,268)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
AUG 30 1953

RANDOM LINES: A few Tanglewood tales: all of the madding horde pervading the festival this year did not applaud the rearrangement of melodic weekends. It has been the custom these many years to hear the Boston players in the Shed on Thursdays, Saturdays and Sunday matinees. This year the free Friday was omitted. Instead, the concerts were played on Fridays, Saturdays and Sabbath afternoons. Hence, few had the leisure to foil across to Jacob's Pillow for Mr. Shawn and his dancers; savor an art exhibition or two; dally with chamber music or stalk the Antique in its homey lair. The wails thereof were many, and I would caution the management to heed them . . . The proportion of singing waitresses and viol bus boys was outweighed somewhat by a strange influx of medical students. A pre-med waitress in the Curtis Hotel dining room earned quite a reputation by advising doughty old ladies upon dietary wisdom . . . I picked up a pupil of Aaron Copland in composition, on the trail from Tanglewood to Stockbridge, who informed me that Charles Munch, conductor and god of all thereabouts, never used a straight razor any more. "His hand shakes, you know" . . . Efforts to get a critic or two to the Sunday morning service at Shiloh Baptist Church, Lee, where Dorothy Maynor turned up some years ago . . . George Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: "I'm beginning to like these festivals."

Cir. (D 299,461) (S 516,478)
This Clipping From
CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
AUG 23 1953

Pianos Arrive

TANGLEWOOD, Mass.—(INS)—One of the largest shipments of pianos ever sent to a music event recently arrived for the Berkshire Music Festival. Seventy-two new pianos and two Baldwin electronic organs were loaded on a fleet of trucks which made the 790-mile run to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from the Cincinnati factory of the Baldwin company, which supplies the instruments.

Cir. (S 323,859)
This Clipping From BALTIMORE, MD.
AMERICAN
AUG 30 1953

Louis Azrael Says:

The Culture Business

By LOUIS AZRAEL

LENOX, Mass.—Almost anywhere you go in this Berkshire Mountain region you see signs of its major summer-time activity. You enter, for instance, the drug store on Lenox's main drag.

LOUIS AZRAEL

It is like any other big drug store—a small pharmacy counter in a corner, a soda and sandwich counter, toys, household goods, etc.—except for one thing.

The most prominent display in the store is a display of phonograph records, all spread out on the center counter.

* * *

AND THE KIND of records tells a story. There's Bach and Brahms and Mozart; also Hindemith, Vaughan Williams and a symphony by William Boyce. There is nothing to interest hepcats.

The man who runs the store says these records are, in summers, his fastest selling item. And that's not the only way music contributes to his income. Every evening he supervises a big parking lot a few miles away, at the entrance to the Tanglewood Music Festival grounds.

BIG BUSINESS

This festival is the region's biggest summer-time attraction. But it is far from the only one.

The forested mountains are of modest height, making for serenity rather than excitement. The ponds and the narrow Housatonic River, except where it is rimmed by grubby little industrial towns, suggests placidity, not grandeur. It is mild and lovely country but it offers, in itself, no advantages which cannot be found in many other regions—Western Maryland, for instance—where vacationists are comparatively sparse.

Here, however, vacationists throng by the thousands from all parts of the nation. The numerous hotels are jammed and the way to get dinner at any popular restaurant is to give the head waiter your name and then sit in the bar until he calls you.

* * *

AND THE CHIEF lure, the thing which distinguishes this region from many others with equal or better natural advantages, is—to use a very loose word for it—culture.

They go in for it here in a big way. The Tanglewood Festival, which ended its season during the week end we were there, drew 12,100 persons on its final evening. They filled the seats in the big unwalled shell. They sprawled on the grass beyond the shell. By the thousands, they lay on blankets, looking up toward the skies, and listening to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Leonard Bernstein, play Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Brahms' Second and a new "Sinfonia India" by the Mexican Carlos Chavez.

Some 20 miles away, at Jacob's Pillow, a dance festival in the Ted Shawn Theater was turning customers away. We were there for a matinee and saw an amazing Haitian, Jean Leon Destine, cause the audience to break into frenzied "bravos" with his amazing native dancing.

* * *

→

Cir. (D 79,206)
This Clipping From
DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL HERALD
AUG 27 1953

A Woman's N. Y.

By Alice Hughes

Soon I'll be meeting my young camper, Jeremiah, as he emerges from the New Hampshire mountains. We plan to motor toward Woods Hole, Mass., put our car on the boat and spend a lazy four hours floating toward my favorite island—Nantucket.

Each year we spend Labor Day week there, thus ending the summer serenely in an atmosphere far removed from New York's hurly-burly. What I like best about Nantucket is its unchanging simplicity and absence of chi-chi.

This summer I spent two weekends at the Berkshire musical festival at Lenox, Mass. Now that this oasis of music has become one of America's most famous, it seems to me to have lost its earlier simplicity and become frankly a tourists' Mecca.

This is understandable, but regrettable. Each September when the boat pulls away from Nantucket Island, I make the same parting wish: that it stay the same next year.

WANTED: A TRAILER

End-of-summer concerns include home renovation. Landlords who haven't painted for the past three years are compelled by law to do so, or else lose the 15% increase they were granted last May first.

There are landlords who prefer to take the latter course because they find it cheaper to lose the increase than to pay for painting and repairs.

Many tenants, myself, included, are finding ourselves in this predicament, which can be a difficult one, if you've ordered new furniture, supplies, etc. for a certain time, depending upon painting to be done before placing the new equipment in the home. This change in timing can cause double work and lots of upset.

Why not live in a trailer? Anything is preferable to painting and re-doing six rooms and moving 3,000 books, hundreds of phonograph records and miles and miles of toy trains and tracks.

WONDER DRUG FOR CATS AND DOGS

Treating dogs and cats with the new antibiotics may produce strange phenomena in your household pets.

Margaret Cooper Gay, author of "How To Live With A Cat" and "How To Raise A Dog" reports that a hormone shot given to her cat, Pickle, caused him to act like a belligerent female, picking fights with other tom cats and even dogs.

Eye, ear, nose and throat disorders of pets respond to penicillin and terramyacin just as they do when prescribed for human beings.

Though the use of these drugs brought up to date, no attempt is new, and the books have been was made to ask James Thurber [illegible]

LOCAL FOLK

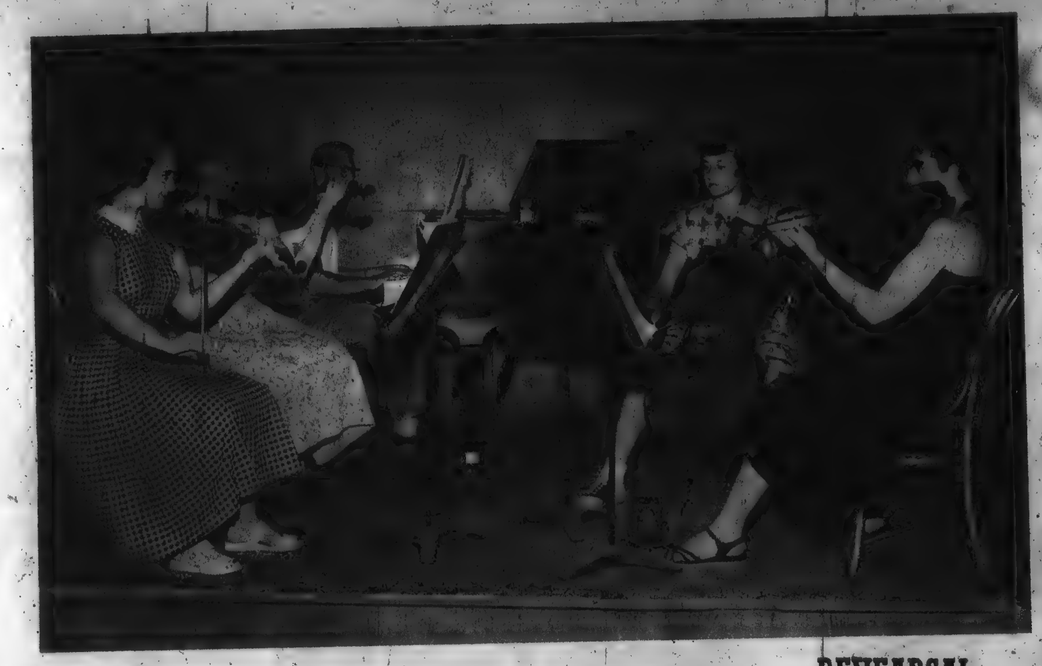
ONE OF THE big sensations at the Tanglewood Festival this year, incidentally, was provided by a Baltimorean. She is Theresa Green, of 1524 North Appleton street.

Miss Green (actually Mrs. Gilbert Coleman) is a twenty-four-year-old colored soprano who once was the soloist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. She sang in the Boston Symphony's rendition of Mahler's "Resurrection Symphony" on August 8 and, according to all reports, brought the Tanglewood audience to one of the highest points of enthusiasm that this season evoked.

Miss Green, with two other Baltimoreans, were resident students at the school which the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted here this summer. The others are Louise French, 3940 Cloverhill road, and Lauraine Levy, 3530 Hilton road.

And at Jacob's Pillow, the dance school is managed by Carol Lynn and the house manager is Harold Abbey, both of Baltimore.

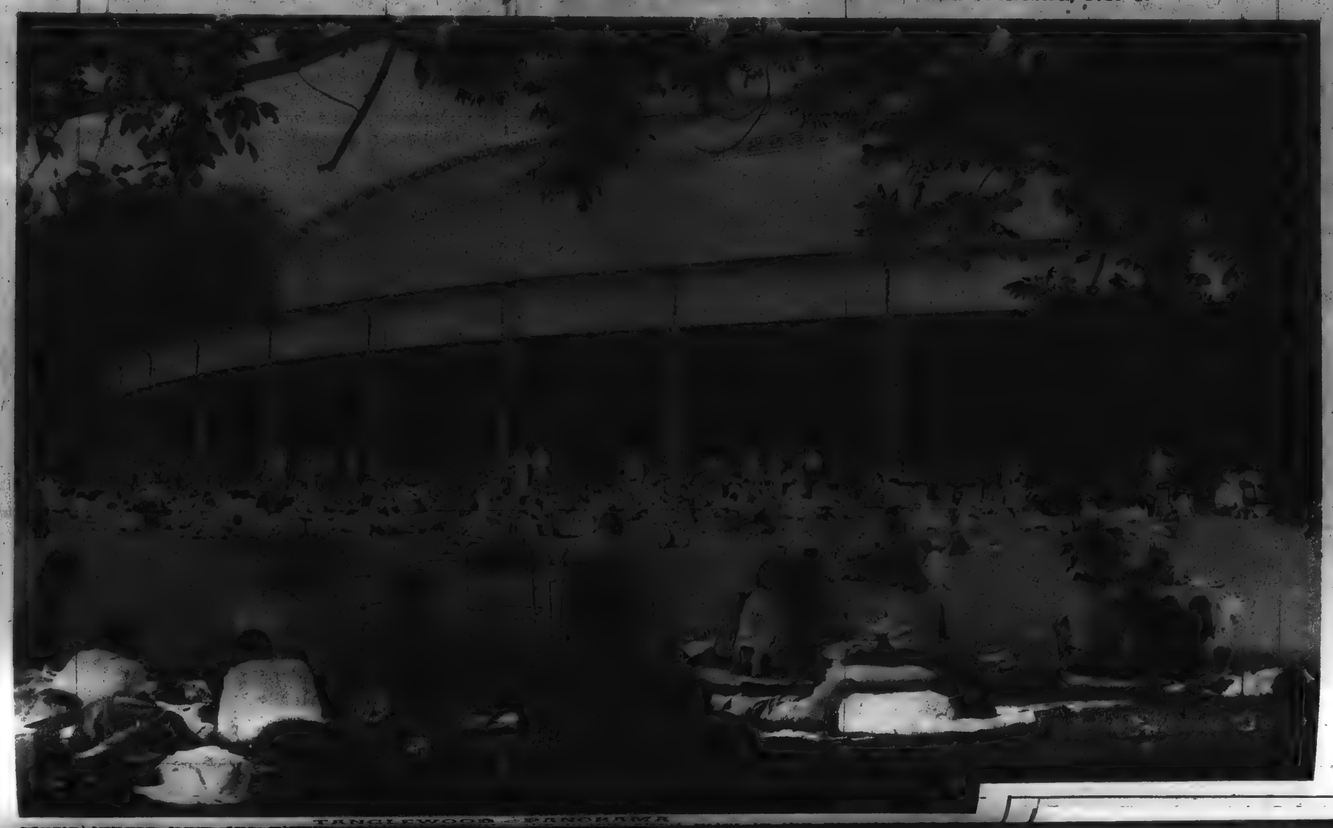
[66]



ON WINGS OF SONG
Interior view of shed shows distinguished conductor, Charles Munch, as he opened the playing of Milhaud's concerto for violincello and orchestra, No. 1.

REHEARSAL
This chamber music rehearsal quintet is comprised of Nancy Heaton, Eaton Falls, Mich., Maxine Kouns, N. Y. C., Gil Kallish, Brooklyn, Camilla Hiller, Appleton, Wis., and Nancy Pease, Springfield.

COSTUME DEPARTMENT
Preparing opera costumes are: left to right, Elsie Lighthart, Maida Burr, Leo Witsen, head costume designer; Cora Kaye, Louise Rodgers and Richard Halsey, composer.



FILMED AS BOUND

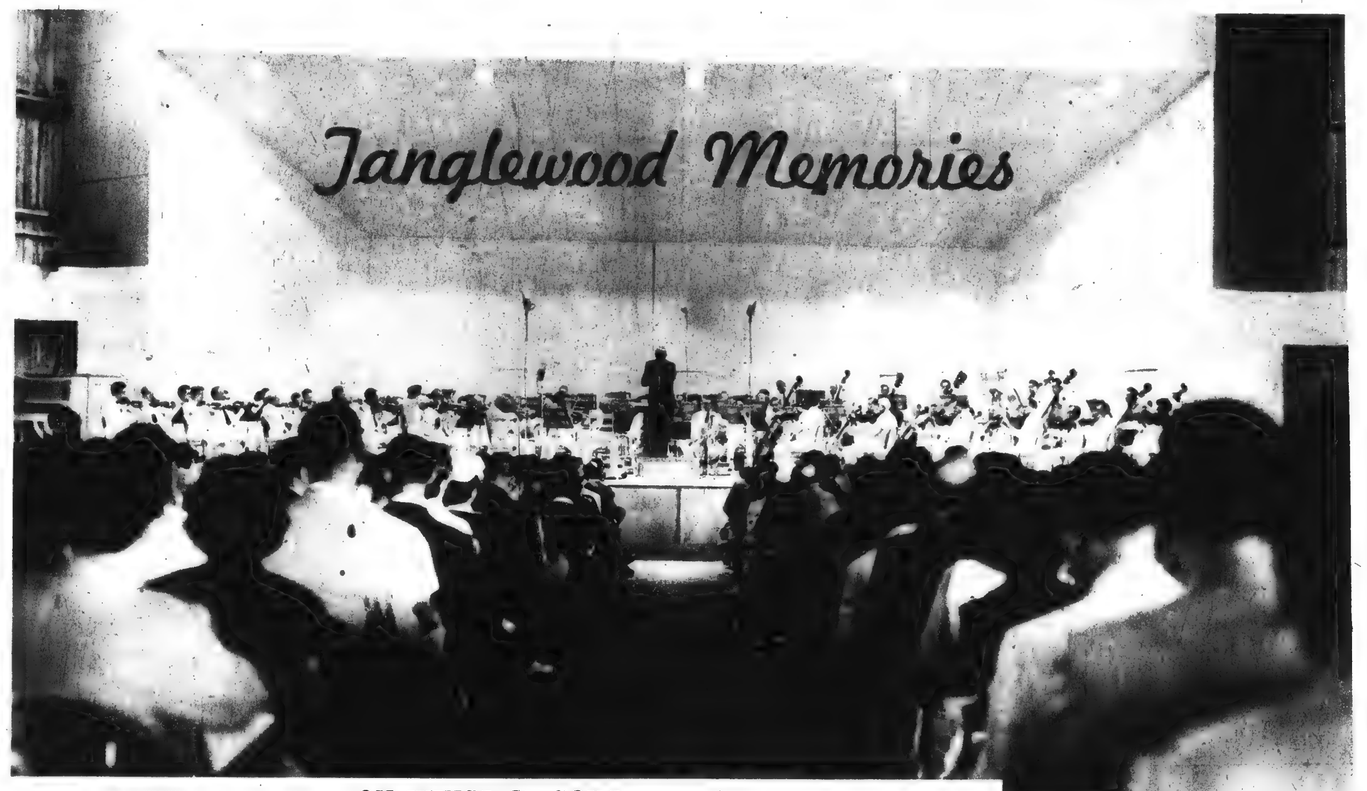
REHEARSAL

This chamber music rehearsal quintet is comprised of Nancy Heaton, Eaton Falls, Mich., Maxine Kouns, N. Y. C., Gil Kallish, Brooklyn, Camilla Hiller, Appleton, Wis., and Nancy Pease, Springfield.

COSTUME DEPARTMENT

Preparing opera costumes are: left to right, Elsie Lighthart, Maida Burr, Leo Witsen, head costume designer; Cora Kaye, Louise Rodgers and Richard Halsey, composer.

Tanglewood Memories



ON WINGS OF SONG

Interior view of shed shows distinguished conductor, Charles Munch, as he opened the playing of Milhaud's concerto for violincello and orchestra, No. 1.

TANGLEWOOD PANORAMA

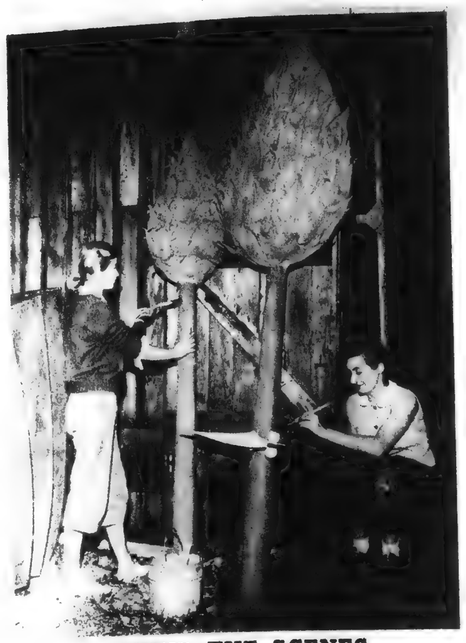
Only a few weeks ago the green valleys and picturesque mountains of Tanglewood in the Berkshires lay under the musical spell of concerts played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Today, Tanglewood drowses in the late summer sun. Gone are the teeming throngs that thrilled to one of the greatest of Festival seasons. Vanished are the glorious voices and symphonies of sound that delighted the ears of listeners. But a thousand memories of Tanglewood remain in the hearts of music lovers to be referred to time and again. The photographic memories of Tanglewood displayed on this page were garnered at the twelfth concert of the season.

Roto photos by Shadbegian

FILMED AS BOUND

TANGLEWOOD PANORAMA

Music lovers from far places relaxed outside the music shed prior to the opening of the season's concert.



BEHIND THE SCENES

Before concert time, Susan Rodgers and Martha Dreyfus prepared props for an opera scheduled for showing at a later date.

TANGLEWOOD MAESTRO

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, makes final check of arrangements before concert.

TIME OUT, FOR A DIP!

— LEFT —

Tanglewood music students found time for regular dips in beautiful Lake Mah-Keenac in the Berkshires.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

SEP 6 - 1953

Around the Nation's Campuses

Asiatic Languages

The University of Toronto is expanding its Department of East Asiatic studies under a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York by strengthening its program of Chinese studies, offering Japanese courses on a graduate and undergraduate level, and inaugurating a program of Indian studies.

Philosophy Degree

Tulane University, New Orleans, will institute a graduate program in philosophy leading to the Doctor of Philosophy degree in its graduate school this fall, bringing to seventeen the number of programs for which this degree is offered at the university.

Foreign Students

Barnard College announces that 6 per cent of its student enrollment during the last academic year consisted of undergraduates from other countries —a total of sixty-seven students from twenty-five countries. The largest contingent was that of eleven girls from China. There was one representative each from Tibet, Nepal, Argentina and Norway. Parents of the students ranged from farmers to United Nations delegates. Interested friends and alumnae of Barnard have contributed funds to make it possible for the foreign students to visit such places as Washington, Williamsburg, Boston and the Berkshire Music Festivals. The Barnard College Club of Fairfield County provided funds for five girls to visit Washington between semesters.

Bina Saksena, of Delhi, India, is one of Barnard's many students from abroad.

General Education

Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, will begin a new general education program this fall to provide a broad foundation in the social studies, natural sciences and humanities for all students.

New Location

The Academy of Advanced Traffic, twenty-four-year-old training school for traffic managers, has moved to larger quarters at 63 Vesey St. The fall term will begin on Sept. 14. Among students now enrolled are two Saudi-Arabians, sent over by their government to study American shipping and transport methods.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Before concert time, Susan Rodgers and Martha Dreyfus prepared props for an opera scheduled for showing at a later date.

TANGLEWOOD MAESTRO

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, makes final check of arrangements before concert.

TIME OUT, FOR A DIP!

— LEFT —

Tanglewood music students found time for regular dips in beautiful Lake Mah-Keenac in the Berkshires.

TANGLEWOOD PANORAMA. Music lovers from far places relaxed outside the music shed prior to the opening of the afternoon's concert.

Cir. (D 331,853) (S 567,298)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

SEP 6 - 1953

Around the Nation's Campuses

Asiatic Languages

The University of Toronto is expanding its Department of East Asiatic studies under a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York by strengthening its program of Chinese studies, offering Japanese courses on a graduate and undergraduate level, and inaugurating a program of Indian studies.

Philosophy Degree

Tulane University, New Orleans, will institute a graduate program in philosophy leading to the Doctor of Philosophy degree in its graduate school this fall, bringing to seventeen the number of programs for which this degree is offered at the university.

Foreign Students

Barnard College announces that 6 per cent of its student enrollment during the last academic year consisted of undergraduates from other countries —a total of sixty-seven students from twenty-five countries. The largest contingent was that of eleven girls from China. There was one representative each from Tibet, Nepal, Argentina and Norway. Parents of the students ranged from farmers to

Bina Saksena, of Delhi, India, is one of Barnard's many students from abroad.

United Nations delegates. Interested friends and alumnae of Barnard have contributed funds to make it possible for the foreign students to visit such places as Washington, Williamsburg, Boston and the Berkshire Music Festivals. The Barnard College Club of Fairfield County provided funds for five girls to visit Washington between semesters.

General Education

Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, will begin a new general education program this fall to provide a broad foundation in the social studies, natural sciences and humanities for all students.

New Location

The Academy of Advanced Traffic, twenty-four-year-old training school for traffic managers, has moved to larger quarters at 63 Vesey St. The fall term will begin on Sept. 14. Among students now enrolled are two Saudi-Arabians, sent over by their government to study American shipping and transport methods.

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 218,362) (S 527,095)

This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
EXAMINER
SEP 4 1953

Cholly Knickerbocker Observes

ter, may soon wed a former GI twenty years her junior.

WEALTHY PATRONS of the Tanglewood Music Festival were shocked to see one of their number bodily ejected from the recent production of Gretry's opera, "Richard, the Lion Hearted" in such an undignified way that it cast a pall over the whole production.

It all came about when Gordon Mendelssohn, the Fisher body heir, arrived with his party at the opera shed five minutes after Tanglewood Director Boris Goldovsky had begun his pre-curtain talk. Mendelssohn found his seats were occupied and was informed by ushers that they were filled on a first come, first-served basis ten minutes before as stipulated in small print on the tickets as a deterrent to late-comers.

The husky music patron voiced his protests loud enough to drown out Goldolsky, and several of his dowager friends echoed him like a Greek chorus. An offer of seats usually reserved for Tanglewood faculty members failed to pacify them, and Mendelssohn was ushered to the gates by a policeman and a trio of ushers. But not until the livid millionaire had informed the audience that his decade-long patronage of Tanglewood was definitely fini.

WASHINGTON RUMOR is that Justice Douglas, who has been gone for weeks, is ill in northern Canada. . . . Again on the sick list: Lord Bertrand Russell. . . .

respis flew to South America here Rudi was called on a mat- concerning the family tate. . . .

Gen. Ira Hamilburg, the tre- ndously affluent New Eng- d industrialist, has moved to s Vegas permanently and en up residence at the swank Rancho Vegas. Reason: he's

Cir. (D 126,983) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
SEP 10 1953

Ross Named Conductor of Cecilia Society

Hugh Ross, famed choral conductor and choral director of the Berkshire Music Center, has been appointed conductor of Boston's Cecilia Society.

Ross assisted Serge Koussevitzky in planning the Berkshire Music Center. He was born in England in 1898 and began his musical career under the guidance of Sir Hugh Allen, president of the Royal College of Music, and under Cecil Sharp. Ross became a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists at the age of 17.

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
SEP 4 - 1953

This Clipping From
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
ITEM
SEP 4 - 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

TESTIVALS AND TANGLEWOOD

More and more is the term Festival becoming an oft-repeated word in the language of North Americans. This past Summer, which experienced a lift in theatre interest and box office receipts also found the regional festival growing in scope and acceptance. Writers, musicians and performers are finding in the large canvas dramatizations of the folk roots and legends of our country a startling response and alertness on the part of local leaders and citizenry alike. Festivals embrace all areas of the arts of Theatre, Dance and Music. In the latter department perhaps none is more successful in its artistic and executive realization than the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * * *

The month just passed, which saw the completion of the Berkshire series, proved a high point in gratification for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Conductor Charles Munch and Associate Leonard Bernstein and all the varied Sponsors, patrons, administrators and friends. For the project in the Berkshire Hills had its greatest season in attendance and artistic fulfillment. And deservedly so for its governors not only present a series of better known works, it treads into experimental paths in the realm of world premieres, and gives breath and movement and opportunity to trained professionals, visiting artists and student performers.

* * * *

The six week season just finished saw an audience of 117,950 attend the festival concerts. Added to this is the 43,000 visitors to the student concerts. And the preliminary works by the chamber music section of the Boston Symphony found the small Theatre concert hall with its open sides taxed to capacity with an extra three thousand sitting under the stars to listen to what in former years was considered "special taste" music.

* * *

The enrollment at the music school found enlistees from forty states and seven foreign countries. The Tanglewood Study Group brought out 105 music teachers and music lovers from such diverse professions as kindergarten teacher, chemist, organ builder and architect.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Truly this venture in mass-reach music is one of eloquent scope and rich in democratic design. It is cradled in the heart of historic country and in its own way has served as an inspiration for music appreciation all over the land.

This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
SEP 4 - 1953

MOORES PLAY SYMPHONY MUSIC

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of the faculty of Davidson College are shown with faculty member Paul Ulanowsky, left, at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewod, Lenox, Mass., where they were students this summer at the school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

DIXIE ALL OVER

Davidson Man And Wife Form Tanglewood Team

BY DON BISHOP

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 12 — Four hundred students of music from 40 states and from such far off countries as Korea, Sweden and Israel have finished their work at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood and have returned to their communities.

Some typical students at Tanglewood this year were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, who are members of the music faculty at Davidson College in North Carolina. He was a clarinet student and she a cellist, and they were among the four husband-and-wife teams included in the enrollment.

Other students included Susan Dayton of Spruce Pine, N. C., a violin student; Lillian Simmons of Rock Hill, S. C., a chorus leader, and Lois McCauley of Chapel Hill, N. C., a soprano who recently returned from a year in Italy on a Fulbright fellowship.

Johnson an Alumnus

A survey made by the music school here disclosed that 10 per cent of the membership of all major symphony orchestras in the United States is composed of former Tanglewood studentse.

And leading symphony conductors, including Thor Johnson, formerly of Winston-Salem, Mount Airy and Chapel Hill, and now conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, are also among the graduates.

The 120,000 week end visitors who came to this small town within easy driving distance of such metropolitan centers as New York and Boston were little aware of the music school when they sat and listened to the music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

To them it was simply an opportunity to hear one of the world's great orchestras and to do so while occupying comfortable seats inside the giant fan-shaped "Shed," or while on the grass outside under the cool, clear skies.

Serious Study

That is the scene that took over on week ends. But during the week there was serious study by the Moores and others who wished to learn from the musical experts who are assembled on the faculty here.

During most of every week day they studied their specialities and related courses. Classes are held in barns, garages, lofts and even in stables.

It was serious study because being admitted to Tanglewood is a great honor. No one is taught to sing, or play an instrument or read music at the Berkshire Music Center. These are things that must already be known. And even then an applicant must survive an elimination which this season saw 1,100 persons seek enrollment where only 400 could be accepted.

The Moores, who also play with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra and in chamber music groups around Charlotte, have returned to Davidson College.

UNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1953 GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS, GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA

Cir. (D 38,740)

This Clipping From MOBILE, ALA.
REGISTER
SEP 13 1953

Berkshire Lists 3 Prize Winners

BOSTON — (UP) — Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced by the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival. The prizes:

The Jascha Heifetz award, $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Leiberman, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky award, $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, Israel; the Wechsler Commission, $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano.

Cir. (D 178,621) (S 246,284)

This Clipping From
NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER
SEP 20 1953

Berkshire festival reported success

An encouraging report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise. Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony.

Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200. Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater-Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.

Cir. (D 76,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
SEP 19 1953

Tanglewood Season Best in History

A report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the Summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise.

Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony. Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200.

Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater - Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.—I. K.

(Copyright 53R).

Cir. (D 24,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
SEP 11 1953

Town Receive Two Compli One Complai

LENOX — Two compli the town from outsiders complaint were among received by the Board of S last night at their weekly One of the compli from James J. Brosnahan, treasurer of the Boston Sy Orchestra, expressing tude of the management sonnel of the orchestra Lenox police for their s operation and assistance concerts just ended." The was addressed to David H. chief of police.

Another compliment was man in New Jersey who heard a great deal about the of Lenox and the Berkshires autumn and wondered if "the mayor of Lenox" would him when the fall colors were at their peak. A letter to be to the man in Pennsylvania plains that usually the colors at their peak around the October but will probably be this year due to the dry

Another letter was from a er in New York who com about the service and methods at a local establishment catering to the summer trade.

The Selectmen approved a quest by the local Community Chest for the use of the Town Sept. 24 for the kickoff meeting the 1953 fund campaign. Also proved were permits for parking the Lee road and Laurel Lake road and an underground cable Stockbridge Street.

[69]

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 215,362) (S 527,095)
This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
EXAMINER
SEP 4 1953

Cholly Knickerbocker Observes

ter, may soon wed a former GI twenty years her junior.

WEALTHY PATRONS of the Tanglewood Music Festival were shocked to see one of their number bodily ejected from the recent production of Gretry's opera, "Richard, the Lion Hearted" in such an undignified way that it cast a pall over the whole production.

It all came about when Gordon Mendelssohn, the Fisher body heir, arrived with his party at the opera shed five minutes after Tanglewood Director Boris Goldovsky had begun his precurtain talk. Mendelssohn found his seats were occupied and was informed by ushers that they were filled on a first come, first-served basis ten minutes before as stipulated in small print on the tickets as a deterrent to latecomers.

The husky music patron voiced his protests loud enough to drown out Goldolsky, and several of his dowager friends echoed him like a Greek chorus. An offer of seats usually reserved for Tanglewood faculty members failed to pacify them, and Mendelssohn was ushered to the gates by a policeman and a trio of ushers. But not until the livid millionaire had informed the audience that his decade-long patronage of Tanglewood was definitely fini.

WASHINGTON RUMOR is that Justice Douglas, who has been gone for weeks, is ill in northern Canada. . . . Again on the sick list: Lord Bertrand Russell. . . .

respis flew to South America here Rudi was called on a matr concerning the family tate. . . .

Gen. Ira Hamilburg, the trendously affluent New Engd industrialist, has moved to s Vegas permanently and en up residence at the swank Rancho Vegas. Reason: he's

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,484)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
SEP 10 1953

Ross Named Conductor of Cecilia Society

Hugh Ross, famed choral conductor and choral director of the Berkshire Music Center, has been appointed conductor of Boston's Cecilia Society.

Ross assisted Serge Koussevitzky in planning the Berkshire Music Center. He was born in England in 1898 and began his musical career under the guidance of Sir Hugh Allen, president of the Royal College of Music, and under Cecil Sharp. Ross became a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists at the age of 17.

Cir. (D 11,756)
This Clipping From
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
ITEM
SEP 4 - 1953

Cir. (D 21,010)
This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
SEP 4 - 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

TESTIVALS AND TANGLEWOOD

More and more is the term Festival becoming an oft-repeated word in the language of North Americans. This past Summer, which experienced a lift in theatre interest and box office receipts also found the regional festival growing in scope and acceptance. Writers, musicians and performers are finding in the large canvas dramatizations of the folk roots and legends of our country a startling response and alertness on the part of local leaders and citizenry alike. Festivals embrace all areas of the arts of Theatre, Dance and Music. In the latter department perhaps none is more successful in its artistic and executive realization than the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

The month just passed, which saw the completion of the Berkshire series, proved a high point in gratification for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Conductor Charles Munch and Associate Leonard Bernstein and all the varied Sponsors, patrons, administrators and friends. For the project in the Berkshire Hills had its greatest season in attendance and artistic fulfillment. And deservedly so for its governors not only present a series of better known works, it treads into experimental paths in the realm of world premieres, and gives breath and movement and opportunity to trained professionals, visiting artists and student performers.

* * *

The six week season just finished saw an audience of 117,950 attend the festival concerts. Added to this is the 43,000 visitors to the student concerts. And the preliminary works by the chamber music section of the Boston Symphony found the small Theatre concert hall with its open sides taxed to capacity with an extra three thousand sitting under the stars to listen to what in former years was considered "special taste" music.

* * *

The enrollment at the music school found enlistees from forty states and seven foreign countries. The Tanglewood Study Group brought out 105 music teachers and music lovers from such diverse professions as kindergarten teacher, chemist, organ builder and architect.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Truly this venture in mass-reach music is one of eloquent scope and rich in democratic design. It is cradled in the heart of historic country and in its own way has served as an inspiration for music appreciation all over the land.

This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
SEP 4 - 1953

MOORES PLAY SYMPHONY MUSIC

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of the faculty of Davidson College are shown with faculty member Paul Ulanowsky, left, at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewod, Lenox, Mass., where they were students this summer at the school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Cir. (D 36,740)
This Clipping From MOBILE, ALA.
REGISTER
SEP 13 1953

Berkshire Lists 3 Prize Winners

BOSTON — (UP) — Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced by the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival. The prizes:

The Jascha Heifetz award, $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Leiberman, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky award, $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, Israel; the Wechsler Commission, $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano.

Cir. (D 178,621) (S 246,284)
This Clipping From
NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER
SEP 20 1953

Berkshire festival reported success

An encouraging report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise. Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony.

Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200. Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater-Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.

UNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1953
GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS, GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA

DIXIE ALL OVER

Davidson Man And Wife Form Tanglewood Team

BY DON BISHOP

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 12 — Four hundred students of music from 40 states and from such far off countries as Korea, Sweden and Israel have finished their work at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood and have returned to their communities.

Some typical students at Tanglewood this year were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, who are members of the music faculty at Davidson College in North Carolina. He was a clarinet student and she a cellist, and they were among the four husband-and-wife teams included in the enrollment.

Other students included Susan Deyton of Spruce Pine, N. C., a violin student; Lillian Simmons of Rock Hill, S. C., a chorus leader, and Lois McCauley of Chapel Hill, N. C., a soprano who recently returned from a year in Italy on a Fulbright fellowship.

Johnson an Alumnus

A survey made by the music school here disclosed that 10 per cent of the membership of all major symphony orchestras in the United States is composed of former Tanglewood studentse.

And leading symphony conductors, including Thor Johnson, formerly of Winston-Salem, Mount Airy and Chapel Hill, and now conduetor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, are also among the graduates.

The 120,000 week end visitors who came to this small town within easy driving distance of such metropolitan centers as New York and Boston were little aware of the music school when they sat and listened to the music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

To them it was simply an opportunity to hear one of the world's great orchestras and to do so while occupying comfortable seats inside the giant fan-shaped "Shed," or while on the grass outside under the cool, clear skies.

Serious Study

That is the scene that took over on week ends. But during the week there was serious study by the Moores and others who wished to learn from the musical experts who are assembled on the faculty here.

During most of every week day they studied their specialities and related courses. Classes are held in barns, garages, lofts and even in stables.

It was serious study because being admitted to Tanglewood is a great honor. No one is taught to sing, or play an instrument or read music at the Berkshire Music Center. These are things that must already be known. And even then an applicant must survive an elimination which this season saw 1,100 persons seek enrollment where only 400 could be accepted.

The Moores, who also play with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra and in chamber music groups around Charlotte, have returned to Davidson College.

Cir. (D 96,447)
This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
SEP 19 1953

Tanglewood Season Best in History

A report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the Summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise.

Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony. Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200.

Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater - Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.—I. K.

(Copyright SR)

Cir. (D 26,55[illegible]
This Clipping Fro[illegible]
PITTSFIELD, MAS[illegible]
BERKSHIRE EAGL[illegible]
SEP 11 195[illegible]

Town Receiv[illegible] Two Complin[illegible] One Complai[illegible]

LENOX — Two comp[illegible] the town from outsider[illegible] complaint we.e [illegible] received by the Boar[illegible] last night at their week[illegible] One of the complain[illegible] from James J. Brosnahan[illegible] treasurer of the Boston [illegible] Orchestra, expressing h[illegible] tude of the management [illegible] sonnel of the orchestra [illegible] Lenox police for their co[illegible] operation and assistance [illegible] concerts just ended." The [illegible] was addressed to David [illegible] chief of police.

Another compliment w[illegible] man in New Jersey who [illegible] heard a great deal about [illegible] of Lenox and the Berksh[illegible] autumn and wondered if [illegible] the mayor of Lenox would [illegible] him when the fall colors [illegible] at their peak. A letter to [illegible] to the man in Pennsylv[illegible] plains that usually the f[illegible] at their peak around the [illegible] October but will probably [illegible] this year due to the dry [illegible]

Another letter was from [illegible] er in New York who co[illegible] about the service and [illegible] methods at a local resta[illegible] catering to the summer [illegible]

The Selectmen approve[illegible] quest by the local Co[illegible] Chest for the use of the [illegible] Sept. 24 for the kickoff [illegible] the 1953 fund campaign. [illegible] proved were permits for [illegible] the Lee road and Lee [illegible] road and an underpass [illegible] Stockbridge Street.

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 215,362) (S 527,095)

This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
EXAMINER

SEP 4 1953

Cholly Knickerbocker Observes

ter, may soon wed a former GI twenty years her junior.

WEALTHY PATRONS of the Tanglewood Music Festival were shocked to see one of their number bodily ejected from the recent production of Gretry's opera, "Richard, the Lion Hearted" in such an undignified way that it cast a pall over the whole production.

It all came about when Gordon Mendelssohn, the Fisher body heir, arrived with his party at the opera shed five minutes after Tanglewood Director Boris Goldovsky had begun his precurtain talk. Mendelssohn found his seats were occupied and was informed by ushers that they were filled on a first come, first-served basis ten minutes before as stipulated in small print on the tickets as a deterrent to latecomers.

The husky music patron voiced his protests loud enough to drown out Goldolsky, and several of his dowager friends echoed him like a Greek chorus. An offer of seats usually reserved for Tanglewood faculty members failed to pacify them, and Mendelssohn was ushered to the gates by a policeman and a trio of ushers. But not until the livid millionaire had informed the audience that his decade-long patronage of Tanglewood was definitely fini.

WASHINGTON RUMOR is that Justice Douglas, who has been gone for weeks, is ill in northern Canada. . . . Again on the sick list: Lord Bertrand Russell. . . .

respis flew to South America here Rudi was called on a matr concerning the family tate. . . .

Gen. Ira Hamilburg, the trendously affluent New Engd industrialist, has moved to s Vegas permanently and en up residence at the swank Rancho Vegas. Reason: he's

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

SEP 10 1953

Ross Named Conductor of Cecilia Society

Hugh Ross, famed choral conductor and choral director of the Berkshire Music Center, has been appointed conductor of Boston's Cecilia Society.

Ross assisted Serge Koussevitzky in planning the Berkshire Music Center. He was born in England in 1898 and began his musical career under the guidance of Sir Hugh Allen, president of the Royal College of Music, and under Cecil Sharp. Ross became a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists at the age of 17.

Cir. (D 11,756)

This Clipping From
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
ITEM

SEP 4 - 1953

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH

SEP 4 - 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

TESTIVALS AND TANGLEWOOD

More and more is the term Festival becoming an oft-repeated word in the language of North Americans. This past Summer, which experienced a lift in theatre interest and box office receipts also found the regional festival growing in scope and acceptance. Writers, musicians and performers are finding in the large canvas dramatizations of the folk roots and legends of our country a startling response and alertness on the part of local leaders and citizenry alike. Festivals embrace all areas of the arts of Theatre, Dance and Music. In the latter department perhaps none is more successful in its artistic and executive realization than the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

The month just passed, which saw the completion of the Berkshire series, proved a high point in gratification for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Conductor Charles Munch and Associate Leonard Bernstein and all the varied Sponsors, patrons, administrators and friends. For the project in the Berkshire Hills had its greatest season in attendance and artistic fulfillment. And deservedly so for its governors not only present a series of better known works, it treads into experimental paths in the realm of world premieres, and gives breath and movement and opportunity to trained professionals, visiting artists and student performers.

* * *

The six week season just finished saw an audience of 117,950 attend the festival concerts. Added to this is the 43,000 visitors to the student concerts. And the preliminary works by the chamber music section of the Boston Symphony found the small Theatre concert hall with its open sides taxed to capacity with an extra three thousand sitting under the stars to listen to what in former years was considered "special taste" music.

* * *

The enrollment at the music school found enlistees from forty states and seven foreign countries. The Tanglewood Study Group brought out 105 music teachers and music lovers from such diverse professions as kindergarten teacher, chemist, organ builder and architect.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

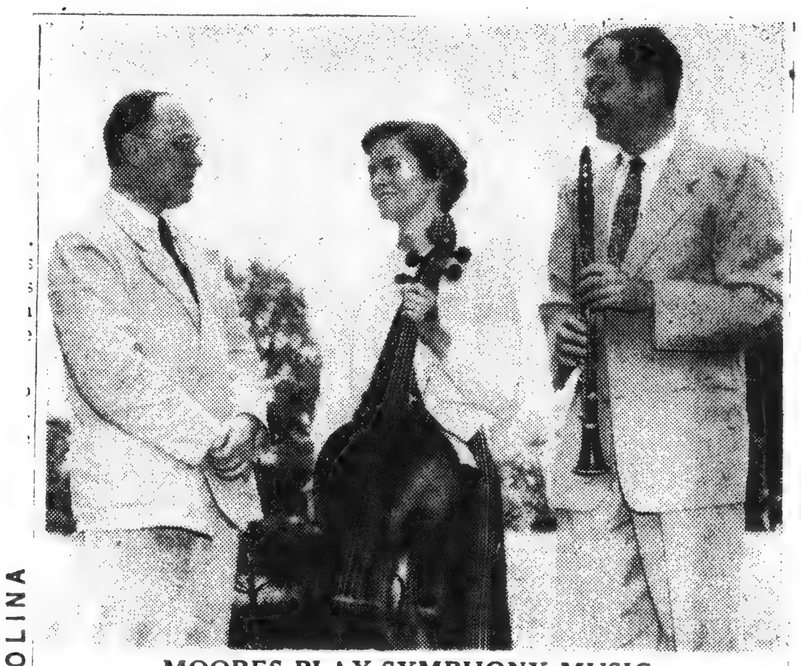
Truly this venture in mass-reach music is one of eloquent scope and rich in democratic design. It is cradled in the heart of historic country and in its own way has served as an inspiration for music appreciation all over the land.

Cir. (D 31,020)

This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN

SEP 4 - 1953



MOORES PLAY SYMPHONY MUSIC

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of the faculty of Davidson College are shown with faculty member Paul Ulanowsky, left, at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewod, Lenox, Mass., where they were students this summer at the school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Cir. (D 35,740)

This Clipping From MOBILE, ALA.
REGISTER

SEP 13 1953

Berkshire Lists 3 Prize Winners

BOSTON — (UP) — Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced by the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival. The prizes:

The Jascha Heifetz award, $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Leiberman, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky award, $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, Israel; the Wechsler Commission, $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano.

Cir. (D 178,621) (S 246,284)

This Clipping From
NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER

SEP 20 1953

Berkshire festival reported success

An encouraging report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise. Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony.

Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200. Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater-Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1953
GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS, GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA

DIXIE ALL OVER

Davidson Man And Wife Form Tanglewood Team

BY DON BISHOP

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 12 — Four hundred students of music from 40 states and from such far off countries as Korea, Sweden and Israel have finished their work at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood and have returned to their communities.

Some typical students at Tanglewood this year were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, who are members of the music faculty at Davidson College in North Carolina. He was a clarinet student and she a cellist, and they were among the four husband-and-wife teams included in the enrollment.

Other students included Susan Deyton of Spruce Pine, N. C., a violin student; Lillian Simmons of Rock Hill, S. C., a chorus leader, and Lois McCauley of Chapel Hill, N. C., a soprano who recently returned from a year in Italy on a Fulbright fellowship.

Johnson an Alumnus

A survey made by the music school here disclosed that 10 per cent of the membership of all major symphony orchestras in the United States is composed of former Tanglewood studentse.

And leading symphony conductors, including Thor Johnson, formerly of Winston-Salem, Mount Airy and Chapel Hill, and now conduetor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, are also among the graduates.

The 120,000 week end visitors who came to this small town within easy driving distance of such metropolitan centers as New York and Boston were little aware of the music school when they sat and listened to the music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

To them it was simply an opportunity to hear one of the world's great orchestras and to do so while occupying comfortable seats inside the giant fan-shaped "Shed," or while on the grass outside under the cool, clear skies.

Serious Study

That is the scene that took over on week ends. But during the week there was serious study by the Moores and others who wished to learn from the musical experts who are assembled on the faculty here.

During most of every week day they studied their specialities and related courses. Classes are held in barns, garages, lofts and even in stables.

It was serious study because being admitted to Tanglewood is a great honor. No one is taught to sing, or play an instrument or read music at the Berkshire Music Center. These are things that must already be known. And even then an applicant must survive an elimination which this season saw 1,100 persons seek enrollment where only 400 could be accepted.

The Moores, who also play with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra and in chamber music groups around Charlotte, have returned to Davidson College.

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

SEP 19 1953

Tanglewood Season Best in History

A report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the Summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise.

Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony. Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200.

Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater - Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.—I. K.

(Copyright SR)

Cir. (D 26,528)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

SEP 19 1953

Town Receives Two Compliments One Complaint

LENOX — Two compliments and one complaint were received by the Board of Selectmen at their meeting last night at the Town Hall.

One of the compliments came from James J. Bozzuto, treasurer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, expressing appreciation of the management of Lenox police for the courtesy and assistance rendered to Boston Symphony patrons during the season just ended.

Another compliment came in a letter from Mrs. Edward Bond, a guest at the Red Lion Inn, who wrote that she and her husband enjoyed their visit to Lenox and the Berkshires during the autumn and wondered if the "powers that be" in Lenox would consider keeping the foliage lights on when the fall colors are at their peak. As it is now, the lights are turned off at 10 p.m.

TIGHT BINDING

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 215,362) (S 527,095)

This Clipping From
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
EXAMINER

SEP 4 1953

Cholly Knickerbocker Obse

pt. 3.—The Express—

ter, may news
twenty any a

WEALTH by—Tanglewood Mu sol shocked to see one o ber bodily ejected from cent production of Gre opera, "Richard, the Lion Hear ed" in such an undignified way that it cast a pall over the whole production.

It all came about when Gordon Mendelssohn, the Fisher body heir, arrived with his party at the opera shed five minutes after Tanglewood Director Boris Goldovsky had begun his pre-curtain talk. Mendelssohn found his seats were occupied and was informed by ushers that they were filled on a first come, first-served basis ten minutes before as stipulated in small print on the tickets as a deterrent to late-comers.

The husky music patron voiced his protests loud enough to drown out Goldolsky, and several of his dowager friends echoed him like a Greek chorus. An offer of seats usually reserved for Tanglewood faculty members failed to pacify them, and Mendelssohn was ushered to the gates by a policeman and a trio of ushers. But not until the livid millionaire had informed the audience that his decade-long patronage of Tanglewood was definitely fini.

Crespis flew to South America where Rudi was called on a matter concerning the family estate. . . .

Gen. Ira Hamilburg, the tremendously affluent New England industrialist, has moved to Las Vegas permanently and taken up residence at the swank El Rancho Vegas. Reason: he's WASHINGTON RUMOR is that Justice Douglas, who has been gone for weeks, is ill in northern Canada. . . . Again on the sick list: Lord Bertrand Russell. . . .

Cir. (D 125,983) (S 379,464)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

SEP 10 1953

Ross Named Conductor of Cecilia Society

Hugh Ross, famed choral conductor and choral director of the Berkshire Music Center, has been appointed conductor of Boston's Cecilia Society.

Ross assisted Serge Koussevitzky in planning the Berkshire Music Center. He was born in England in 1898 and began his musical career under the guidance of Sir Hugh Allen, president of the Royal College of Music, and under Cecil Sharp. Ross became a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists at the age of 17.

Cir. (D 11,756)

This Clipping From
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
ITEM

SEP 4 - 1953

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH

SEP 4 - 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

TESTIVALS AND TANGLEWOOD

More and more is the term Festival becoming an oft-repeated word in the language of North Americans. This past Summer, which experienced a lift in theatre interest and box office receipts also found the regional festival growing in scope and acceptance. Writers, musicians and performers are finding in the large canvas dramatizations of the folk roots and legends of our country a startling response and alertness on the part of local leaders and citizenry alike. Festivals embrace all areas of the arts of Theatre, Dance and Music. In the latter department perhaps none is more successful in its artistic and executive realization than the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

The month just passed, which saw the completion of the Berkshire series, proved a high point in gratification for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Conductor Charles Munch and Associate Leonard Bernstein and all the varied Sponsors, patrons, administrators and friends. For the project in the Berkshire Hills had its greatest season in attendance and artistic fulfillment. And deservedly so for its governors not only present a series of better known works, it treads into experimental paths in the realm of world premieres, and gives breath and movement and opportunity to trained professionals, visiting artists and student performers.

* * *

The six week season just finished saw an audience of 117,950 attend the festival concerts. Added to this is the 43,000 visitors to the student concerts. And the preliminary works by the chamber music section of the Boston Symphony found the small Theatre concert hall with its open sides taxed to capacity with an extra three thousand sitting under the stars to listen to what in former years was considered "special taste" music.

* * *

The enrollment at the music school found enlistees from forty states and seven foreign countries. The Tanglewood Stud: Group brought out 105 music teachers and music lovers from such diverse professions as kindergarten teacher, chemist, organ builder and architect.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Truly this venture in mass-reach music is one of eloquent scope and rich in democratic design. It is cradled in the heart of historic country and in its own way has served as an inspiration for music appreciation all over the land.

Cir. (D 34,020)

This Clipping From
YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN

SEP 4 - 1953

MOORES PLAY SYMPHONY MUSIC

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore of the faculty of Davidson College are shown with faculty member Paul Ulanowsky, left, at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewod, Lenox, Mass., where they were students this summer at the school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

DIXIE ALL OVER

Davidson Man And Wife Form Tanglewood Team

BY DON BISHOP

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 12 — Four hundred students of music from 40 states and from such far off countries as Korea, Sweden and Israel have finished their work at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood and have returned to their communities.

Some typical students at Tanglewood this year were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, who are members of the music faculty at Davidson College in North Carolina. He was a clarinet student and she a cellist, and they were among the four husband-and-wife teams included in the enrollment.

Other students included Susan Deyton of Spruce Pine, N. C., a violin student; Lillian Simmons of Rock Hill, S. C., a chorus leader, and Lois McCauley of Chapel Hill, N. C., a soprano who recently returned from a year in Italy on a Fulbright fellowship.

Johnson an Alumnus

A survey made by the music school here disclosed that 10 per cent of the membership of all major symphony orchestras in the United States is composed of former Tanglewood studentse.

And leading symphony conductors, including Thor Johnson, formerly of Winston-Salem, Mount Airy and Chapel Hill, and now conduetor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, are also among the graduates.

The 120,000 week end visitors who came to this small town within easy driving distance of such metropolitan centers as New York and Boston were little aware of the music school when they sat and listened to the music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

To them it was simply an opportunity to hear one of the world's great orchestras and to do so while occupying comfortable seats inside the giant fan-shaped "Shed," or while on the grass outside under the cool, clear skies.

Serious Study

That is the scene that took over on week ends. But during the week there was serious study by the Moores and others who wished to learn from the musical experts who are assembled on the faculty here.

During most of every week day they studied their specialities and related courses. Classes are held in barns, garages, lofts and even in stables.

It was serious study because being admitted to Tanglewood is a great honor. No one is taught to sing, or play an instrument or read music at the Berkshire Music Center. These are things that must already be known. And even then an applicant must survive an elimination which this season saw 1,100 persons seek enrollment where only 400 could be accepted.

The Moores, who also play with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra and in chamber music groups around Charlotte, have returned to Davidson College.

GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS, GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA
SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1953

Cir. (D 26,526)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

SEP 1 9 1953

Town Receives Two Compliment One Complaint

LENOX — Two compliment one to a from outsiders a compliment was among the received by the Board of Selec last night at their weekly m One of the compliments from James J. Brosnahan, treasurer of the Boston Sym Orchestra, expressing the attitude of the management and sonnel of the orchestra t Lenox police for their splend operation and assistance dur concerts this season. The was addressed to David H. Ma chief of police.

Another compliment was Lian in New Jersey who sa heard a great deal about the of Lenox and the Berkshires autumn and wondered if nigh the mayor of Lenox would him when the fall colors w at their peak. A letter to be to the man in Pennsylvania plains that usually the colo at their peak around the 15t October but will probably be this year due to the dry spe

Another letter was from a or in New York who comp about the service and hos methods at a local establish catering to the summer trade.

The Selectmen approved a quest by the local Comm Chest for the use of the Town Sept. 24 for the kickoff meeting the 1953 fund campaign. Also proved were permits for road the Lee road and Laurel Lake road and an underground cable Stockbridge Street.

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

SEP 19 1953

Tanglewood Season Best in History

A report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the Summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise.

Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony. Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200.

Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater - Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.—I. K.

(Copyright SR)

Cir. (D 35,740)

This Clipping From MOBILE, ALA.
REGISTER

SEP 13 1953

Berkshire Lists 3 Prize Winners

BOSTON — (UP) — Three special cash prizes named for their donors were announced by the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival. The prizes:

The Jascha Heifetz award, $150 each to two violinists, Barbara Leiberman, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Barbara Sorlien, Fargo, N. D.; the Piatigorsky award, $200 to cellist Uziahu Wiesel, Israel; the Wechsler Commission, $300 to Juan Orrego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, for a chamber music composition scored for three violins, one viola, one cello and piano.

Cir. (D 178,621) (S 246,284)

This Clipping From
NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER

SEP 20 1953

Berkshire festival reported success

An encouraging report from the Tanglewood offices of the Berkshire Festival makes unmistakable the fact that the summer past was the most successful in the history of that enterprise. Attendance was up to 117,950, topping by about 5,000 even the gala season of 1950, in which the late Serge Koussevitzky celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Symphony.

Average attendance at the nine concerts in the Music Shed was 10,200. Including the preliminary series given in the smaller Theater-Music Hall, the ticket sale grossed more than $300,000.

TANGLEWOOD

Attendance records broken at weekend symphony concerts

By CHRISTIE BARTER

Lenox, Mass.

FOLLOWING its preliminary series of six chamber concerts by members of the Boston Symphony, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood swung into its final weeks of concerts—nine in all—by the full orchestra. This major series was launched on July 31, with a record crowd of some 10,300 persons attending. Favoring the large turnout were clear skies, cool weather (with encouraging weekend forecasts), and the fact that the Thursday evening concerts of past years had been advanced to Friday evenings this summer as a convenience to the Monday-to-Friday employed. Since the Music Shed, in which these concerts are given, holds only 6,000 people, once a reasonable estimation of festival attendance, the remaining 4,300 stood on the periphery or were simply content to sprawl on the luxuriant grounds, to gaze at the stars, and to listen—or not.

The Friday and Saturday evening concerts, July 31 and Aug. 1, were conducted by the orchestra's regular conductor, Charles Munch. The Sunday afternoon program, Aug. 2, which was broadcast in part over the CBS network, was turned over to Pierre Monteux, who has appeared with the Boston Symphony rather frequently since his retirement from his San Francisco post last year.

Generally speaking, the orchestra's performance under Mr. Monteux was more satisfying. Ensemble playing was at its best. Attacks were clean; instrumental timbres were subtly blended; and careful allowance was made for the shed's bass- and brass-heavy acoustics. The Sunday program, however, was devoted entirely to the better known works of Tchaikovsky and provided only a limited sampling of Monteux's remarkable versatility.

Francescatti as Soloist

Mr. Munch's programs, while containing nothing of startling interest, were varied and suitably representative. On Friday he led the orchestra in Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3; Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor, with Zino Francescatti as soloist; Copland's Appalachian Spring; and Ravel's Bolero. With the recent discovery of Mendelssohn's earlier Violin Concerto in D minor, the E minor Concerto emerges more clearly as the work of a mature artist. Mr. Francescatti handled the solo part with taste and authority.

Aaron Copland's dance piece for Martha Graham has always been a favorite of Tanglewood audiences and, in this performance by Mr. Munch, sounded as fresh as ever. Equally winning was his reading of the Bolero. He exercised the utmost restraint in approaching the heady whirl of its final pages and, as I had remembered from his definitive recording of a few years back, exploited the additive orchestration with maximum effect.

The principal offering in the first half of Saturday evening's program was Lukas Foss's Second Piano Concerto, with the composer as soloist. The work has undergone some revision since its first American performance in Boston in 1951, and in its new form was first given in Los Angeles last June. The first movement has been rewritten with a more extended orchestral introduction and with greater concentration in the expositional sections. The second movement has become more elegiac in character and has been given a new ending. Alterations in the rondo-like third movement are minor. The total effect is one of structural tightening, which in itself has been all to the good, but somehow the composer's highly individual expressive means, which in this work are refined to the point of virtual obscurity, have been further introverted in the revised portions. The Tanglewood audience, whether or not it understood what the composer was driving at, was fascinated by his virtuosity as a pianist and accorded him a well-deserved ovation.

Also included in Mr. Munch's second program of the weekend were Schumann's brooding Manfred Overture, Mendelssohn's buoyantly lyric Italian Symphony, and Hindemith's playful Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber. The opening movement of the Mendelssohn symphony was rather leaden, but the remaining three were given clean-cut, generally well-paced performances. Mr. Munch's fine taste for orchestral color contributed much to his reading of the Hindemith work, particularly in the chinoiserie of the scherzo section.

In the program on Sunday afternoon Mr. Monteux conducted Tchaikovsky's Serenade for String Orchestra, Fifth Symphony, and B flat minor Piano Concerto. Jorge Bolet was the soloist. Whatever one might have thought of an all-Tchaikovsky afternoon, one could not deny the pleasure of its being in such capable hands. The truly lovely Serenade was exquisitely rendered by Mr. Monteux and the orchestra, and the E minor Symphony was made less a gloomy rumination of inscrutable Fate than usual in this conductor's poetically intelligent interpretation. Mr. Bolet, who made his first appearance with the Boston Symphony at a Berkshire Festival concert in the summer of 1951, gave a technically brilliant, though tonally pallid account of the indestructible concerto.

In addition to these programs by the Boston Symphony, the Tanglewood visitor could attend a number of events in which students at the Berkshire Music Center demonstrated their work. Midway in the Tanglewood season, nineteen student concerts had been given, and an equal number were scheduled before Aug. 16, the last day of the festival. By the end of July, these concerts had been attended by an estimated 21,950 persons, as against an attendance of 16,000 a year ago, and friends of the school, numbering approximately 4,000, had contributed over $22,000 to support its activities.

On Aug. 3 the opera department, headed by Boris Goldovsky, presented a bill consisting of Gluck's L'Yvrogne Corrigé (The Drunkard Reformed), which, so far as is known, was its first American production, Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue, and Chabrier's Une Education Manquée (An Incomplete Education). The first was staged by Sarah Caldwell, who is assistant to Mr. Goldovsky, and the others by Mr. Goldovsky himself.

John Brook

The Berkshire Music Center revives Grétry's Richard the Lion-Hearted. In the center group are Lee Cass (Sir Hugh Williams), Richard Cassilly (Richard), Theresa Green (Marguerite), and John McCollum (Blondel)

Although the three operas presented are of French origin, only one, Debussy's poignantly beautiful setting of the Prodigal Son story, was sung in French. The reason for this departure from precedent, as Mr. Goldovsky explained in his introductory statement, was that, although he was a firm believer in opera in English, he felt that the plot of this one was sufficiently well known and needed no further clarification. He also thought that opera in English had made such headway recently that it might even be considered too reactionary not to allow opera its original tongue once in a while.

Since student endeavor at Tanglewood has frequently distinguished itself by its near-professional quality, it was unfortunate that the collaboration of talent in Gluck's The Drunkard Reformed produced disturbingly amateur results. The opera deals with an alcoholic peasant who, at the instigation of his wife and daughter, is submitted to an ordeal in which he and an innkeeper companion are made to believe they are in Hell, standing in judgment before Pluto and his Furies. His fondness for liquor is thus corrected by a primitive sort of shock therapy. He is reconciled with his long-suffering wife, and his daughter, according to plan, is permitted to marry the strolling player who staged the Infernal spectacle.

Giovanni Cardelli's doggerel verse translation of the libretto by Anseaume is highly imaginative and exceedingly witty. Miss Caldwell's staging was neither of these things and tended to be confusingly arbitrary in its use of ensemble. The principal roles were only adequately sung by Beatrice Krebs, Theresa Green, Alvin Edmonson, Paul Huddleston, and Paul Rue.

In the works that followed there was a gratifying turn for the better. Mr. Goldovsky's handling of L'Enfant Prodigue had considerable dignity, with striking tableaux emphasizing the ritualistic traditions that frame the Biblical subject. The three leading singers—Anne English, who was an outstanding Lia, Robert Simpson as Azaël, and Lee Cass as Simeon—showed evidences of careful study of their roles, and they sang uniformly well. Their vocal balance in duet and trio passages could not have been better. The student orchestra, heard only in the Debussy work, was under the direction of Samuel Krachmalnick, who conducted with great sensitivity.

Equally satisfying, from every point of view, was the performance of Chabrier's sparkling, sophisticated Une Education Manquée, sung in the fine English translation of Henry Reese. Mr. Cass made his second appearance of the evening as Pausanias, dealing with the comic pedantry of his role in bold strokes, with never a lapse in style. As the perplexed Gontran de Bois Massif and his exasperated bride, Hélène, John McCollum and Sara Mae Endich were admirably paired. Both were notable for acting skill and vocal strength.

Settings and lighting for all three operas were credited to John Blankenchip, who achieved his greatest success in the Chabrier work with a fanciful evocation of an Empire interior. The handsome costumes were designed by Leo van Witsen. Mr. Goldovsky provided the piano accompaniment in the opening and closing works.

THE second weekend of the full Boston Symphony's concerts was perhaps the biggest of the three. In terms of the size of certain compositions, and the splendor of their performance, this undoubtedly was true. Not often can you hear Berlioz' Romeo and Juliet done complete, Mahler's Resurrection Symphony, and Strauss's Don Quixote in the course of three consecutive concerts, not to mention Ravel's Shéhérazade, sung by Jennie Tourel, and Milhaud's First Cello Concerto, with Gregor Piatigorsky as soloist, along the way.

The huge Resurrection Symphony was the pièce de résistance of the concert on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, which was a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky and was conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The soloists were Miss Tourel and Theresa Green, sopranos, and the chorus that of the Berkshire Festival, prepared by Hugh Ross.

The only just word to apply to Mr. Bernstein's reading of this mercilessly demanding score is—magnificent. Here was a performance of remarkable entity in its over-all conception, of a full and rounded sculptural beauty. At the same time the details were very tidy, the individual voices notably accurate, clean and clear. And the performance had a continuity (not always easy with Mahler) that rode unerringly in a long emotional sweep up to the great climax of the apocalyptic finale. Miss Tourel sang the gorgeous solo of the Urlicht with absolute beauty of tone and style; the work of Miss Green was wholly to her credit, and the festival chorus, superbly trained, responded with a brave assurance and a wide dynamic range.

I am sure that Serge Koussevitzky, could he have heard this triumphant feat of his former protégé, would have been very happy for the faith

(Continued on page 24)

[70]

Letters to the Editor

It Can Be Done

TO THE EDITOR:

Waukesha is a city of approximately 22,000, located in the southeastern quarter of Wisconsin. It is a city, twenty miles from Milwaukee, where one can find contented cows grazing in lush green fields, as well as industrial monsters like the Waukesha Motors plant. It formerly was a world renowned spa, and traces of its 1890 grandeur still remain. The tree-shaded streets are bordered by many old mansions of the past.

Through a lot of hard work, divided among many individuals, the city now has its own symphony orchestra, ninety members strong. The musicians are not only local, but come from all over the state. The ensemble provides opportunity for fine musicians who might otherwise be buried in a small town. They play everything from Bach to Schönberg and play it well.

How can a small community such as Waukesha succeed in a project of this kind when other big cities have failed? First there is the motivating force. Here it is present in the dynamic personality of Milton Weber, who came to Waukesha from Austria. He supports his family by teaching violin at the local Carroll College, and is the personification of energy and vitality. He wields the baton and is the source of encouragement for all the local lovers of music. He donated all of his services during the formative years, setting a fine example for his fellow musicians. The union was persuaded to make a compromise during these early times, and, as a result, a full orchestra was available for rehearsal.

The second brick in the foundation of the symphony is teamwork. The society matron and the stenographer, the industrialist and the housewife—all were called upon and told that this was their symphony. They accepted the responsibility and worked for the common good. Most of the necessary cash outlay was secured by small donations and the balance secured through the now-famous Symphony Fair. Everyone donated, and everyone bought. The children's primitive finger paintings sold faster than old masters. Aunt Sarah donated a jar of her watermelon pickles. The Garden Club gave seedlings and potted plants. The local artists painted posters. The craftsmen created quantities of handwork. Jams, jellies, and rare herbs were there for the gourmet. Before the day ended, the shelves of the big sales pavilion were empty, and everyone was happy. There were also several thousand dollars in the treasury.

The question of a place to perform and rehearse was solved through the co-operation of the school board. The high-school auditorium was made available. The good music, the enthusiastic audience, and the favorable reviews made an unbeatable combination, so that attendance snowballed. Now the college gym is used, and the ensemble still draws capacity crowds.

The skillful choice of music by Mr. Weber has also brought strong support. The programs are varied and contain a touch of everything. Beethoven and Wagner are heard, together with the works of contemporary composers. American composers are frequently represented.

All this has resulted in the fulfillment of an ideal, and further opportunities have been created for a section of America's children. Waukesha has its symphony; cannot similar small communities follow suit?

FRANK H. NELSON
Milwaukee

SUBSCRIBERS . . . . . .

desiring a change in their address should advise the Circulation Department just as soon as such change is known. The Post Office will destroy copies sent to subscriber's old address. To be certain of receiving all issues, please let us have four weeks' notice of such change. Advise old address as well as new one.

San Francisco's 1933 summer symphony season brought together (left to right) Henry Hadley and Alfred Hertz, conductors; Mrs. Leonora Armsby, director; Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor and pianist, and his wife; and Fritz Reiner, conductor

What They Read

Hitler Papers the House . . .

BAYREUTH. — Whatever else the Wagner Year 1933 may have meant to Bayreuth, it will go down on Wagnerian scrolls as the first time in history that the National Government evinced sufficient official interest in its fate to confer on it moral and material support of dignified dimensions. When ticket cancellations began to pour in by the hundreds after Toscanini's retirement, and some of the more disquieting accompaniments of the birth pangs of the new socialism joined hands with the depreciation of the dollar and pound to ban others of the faithful, even the optimists trembled and braced themselves for the shock of a financial catastrophe that touched the irreparable. Chancellor Hitler, however, is an ardent Wagnerian who views Bayreuth as one of the emblems of the national Kultur which must be fostered at all costs. The Government therefore stepped into the breach by acquiring several thousand tickets for distribution among the young political troops. As a result, all the performances were sold out.

. . . But Salzburg Pays Its Way

SALZBURG.—The opening of the Salzburg Festival was anticipated this year with a great deal of apprehension, not only because of the economic crisis, but also because Germany had practically made it impossible for its nationals to cross the border by placing a 1,000-mark visa fee on such trips. Since Germans have made up the bulk of the Salzburg audiences, this move was particularly feared, but in point of fact, other foreign visitors almost compensated for the lack of German tourists, propaganda having been widely distributed in other lands. There was a distinguished audience, including many Americans and English people. Cancellations on the part of the German artists at the last moment might also have tended to throw the festival arrangements into disorder had not substitutes been immediately found.

A Different Iolanthe

In an entrancing setting, the open-air Garden Theatre of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club at Scarsborough-on-Hudson, under the auspices of the Musicians Emergency Fund, the American premiere of Tchaikovsky's one-act opera Iolanthe was given before a distinguished audience. Iolanthe to Americans has ever meant that delectable comic opera by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan. But Tchaikovsky's work of the same name is a very different affair. It is a romantic work, which from this hearing proved to be an ingratiating, typical Russian opera. Sung in its original text by native Russians, it exerted a considerable appeal. It is fluent, melodious music, much of it conventional in treatment. Iolanthe bears the opus number 69, falling between his opera Pique Dame and the string sextet called Souvenir de Florence; in other words, well advanced Tchaikovsky.

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from page 12)

he had reposed in the talent of Mr. Bernstein. The memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony was evoked not only by the dedication of this concert, but also by silent tribute, the audience and musicians standing, which Mr. Bernstein asked by a gesture when first he appeared upon the stage.

The memorial program began with the Prelude to Moussorgsky's Khovanchina (one of the smaller interpretative jewels of Koussevitsky in the old days) and included the Shéhérazade, sung with all of her usual musicianship by Miss Tourel. Following the concert, Mr. Bernstein was presented, in the greenroom, with the Mahler medal of the Bruckner Society of America.

On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 9, Charles Munch conducted his first American performance of Strauss's Don Quixote. He did it in a full-bodied and graphic manner, though seemingly more concerned with symphonic continuity than with a series of vividly outlined dramatic episodes. Certain details, such as the bleating of the sheep, were decidedly realistic, yet I did miss the good, mellow, German sound of brass that Strauss needs; otherwise the tone was rich and silken. Mr. Piatigorsky's way with the cello "title role" hardly needs any description after so many years; it probably is the definitive interpretation of the part today. Joseph De Pasquale, the Boston Symphony's excellent first viola, dealt admirably with the part of Sancho Panza.

Schubert's Fifth Symphony, the one "without trumpets and drums," in a spirited and tidy reading, began the concert. Samuel Barber, who was roundly applauded after the lush work of the Boston Symphony strings in his Adagio, must have been satisfied with what he heard. As for Milhaud's First Cello Concerto, Mr. Piatigorsky tossed it off in virtuoso style, receiving wholly pleasurable collaboration from Mr. Munch and the orchestra. This is a smallish and lightish work, but one well designed for the solo instrument. It thoroughly exemplifies the designations of each movement: Nonchalant, Grave, and Joyeux. The program ended with that Munch favorite, the Second Suite from Roussel's Bacchus et Ariane, which he never fails to make go off like a sky rocket.

Romeo and Juliet Symphony

The Romeo and Juliet symphony, which is wonderful music up to the last half hour and plain dull for the remainder of its course, took all of the concert on Friday evening, Aug. 7. The soloists were Jennie Tourel (Juliet), John McCollum (Romeo), and Nicola Moscona (Friar Laurence). The Berkshire Festival Chorus, again prepared by Hugh Ross, participated.

end was 28,000 persons.

With the revival of Grétry's long-forgotten opera, Richard Coeur-de-Lion, the Berkshire Music Center

The total attendance for this week-added another distinction to its ever-lengthening list of achievements. The work was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Monday night, Aug. 10, and repeated, with slightly altered casting, the following evening. The opera department, conducted by Boris production was by students of the Goldovsky and staged by Sarah Caldwell.

It required heroic measures to put this production together, for Mr. Goldovsky is insistent upon original versions whenever possible. The first score received from a French publisher, reportedly the only one available for modern presentation, had been revised by the nineteenth-century composer Adolphe Adam. Through Darius Milhaud and P. Collaer, head of the Belgian National Radio Broadcasting Institute, Mr. Goldovsky was able to obtain from the City of Brussels the original Grétry manuscript, upon parts of which are the composer's signature. Mr. Goldovsky's insistence upon originals applies to music only; for his productions he demands English texts, and accordingly he and his colleague, Miss Caldwell, themselves prepared a translation.

Grétry was no Mozart, and yet no Rossini, but in Richard Coeur-de-Lion he wrote a decidedly absorbing work. It is a comic opera in about the same dramatic weight, as well, which, considering the craftsmanship of each, is a compliment that works both ways.

While there is a certain brave innocence about Grétry's music today, it is far from quaint or thin. In its own day it must have seemed bold indeed, and in the several-times-repeated love song of Richard, well ahead of its time. The score has substance, a good measure of melodic invention. If the range of harmonic expression is not wide, the play of rhythm is constant, varied and unceasingly vigorous. Indeed, there is a certain clever tension, suspense almost, about story and music, which makes you wonder if Richard Coeur-de-Lion might not be playable in a modern commercial opera house. That is, of course, in a highly stylized production, sung, as here, in English.

The story is relatively simple, a mere framework for the spoken dialogue, the arias, duets and concerted numbers. It tells of how, after years of wandering disguised as a blind singer, Richard's minstrel Blondel finds where his master is imprisoned and, with the help of Richard's beloved, Marguerite of Flanders, and Sir Hugh Williams, an exiled English knight, the king is released.

Production-wise, Richard Coeur-de-Lion stands among the finest of the Center's accomplishments. John Blankenchip's settings, of delightfully primitive perspective, were just right. The use of colored scenic projection upon a screen, made possible a lively approximation of the storming of the castle. Leo Van Witsen had done an exceptionally good job, both of color and design, with the medieval costumes.

The singing in the first performance was superb, with the Blondel of John McCollum and the king of Richard Cassilly blending smoothly in the remarkably second-act duet for two tenors. Theresa Green used her sumptuous soprano voice well as Marguerite; Christine Cardillo as Laurette was both musically and dramatically vivacious, and the smaller roles were most creditably filled. It is further pleasant to report that nearly all the English words could easily be heard.

—CYRUS DURGIN

THE annual gala known as Tanglewood on Parade was held on Thursday, Aug. 13, of the final week of the 1953 Berkshire Festival. It enlisted the participation of the 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center and the full membership of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein sharing the podium and with Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, and William Warfield as soloists. Given as a benefit for the Center, the event included demonstrations of student work, a picnic supper, a concert by the orchestra, the drawing of door prizes (by Anna Russell), and dancing on the lawn.

A short welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department, was followed by the simultaneous offerings of three of the school's departments. A program in the Theatre-Concert Hall presented the world premieres of an opera, Bad Boys in School, by Jan Meyerowitz, and a cantata by Allen Sapp on a text by William Blake. At the same time, in the Music Shed, a student orchestra was led by four student conductors — Harold Blumenfeld, Erno Daniel, Herbert Blomstedt, and Robert Mandell—in works by Prokofieff, Dvorak, Debussy, and Ravel. In the Chamber Music Hall, students in the Center's chamber-music department were heard in music by Brahms, Franck, Hindemith, Jack Urbont, and Tossi Ichiyanagi.

The concluding concerts in this year's festival, on Aug. 14, 15, and 16, were attended by a total of 32,800 persons, bringing the season's total to 117,900, the largest attendance figure in Tanglewood history. The Friday evening program, attended by a smaller-than-usual audience of 7,600, was given over to a performance of Brahm's A German Requiem. Mr. Munch conducted, and Lois Marshall and Mr. Warfield were the soloists. The Boston Symphony was assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, made up of students at the Center.

On Saturday night Mr. Bernstein led the orchestra in a program that included Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Chavez' Sinfonia India, and Brahms's Second Symphony.

Mr. Munch returned to the podium for the Boston Symphony's last concert of the summer series on Sunday afternoon. The program listed Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, Chabrier's Bourrée Fantasque, the Prelude and Love-Death from Wagner's Tristan und Isolde, A Siegfried Idyll, and orchestral excerpts from the third act of Die Meistersinger. Two works by Ravel, the Piano Concerto for the left hand, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and La Valse, concluded the concert.

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Arved Kurtz, Director — Chartered 1878

76th Season: 1953-1954

College and Professional Courses . . . Class and Individual Instruction . . . Daytime or Evening . . . Full or Part-Time

Write for Catalog

114 EAST 85th STREET. — REgent 7-5751. — NEW YORK 28, N. Y.

Letters to the Editor

It Can Be Done

To THE EDITOR:

Waukesha is a city of approximately 22,000, located in the southeastern quarter of Wisconsin. It is a city, twenty miles from Milwaukee, where one can find contented cows grazing in lush green fields, as well as industrial monsters like the Waukesha Motors plant. It formerly was a world renowned spa, and traces of its 1890 grandeur still remain. The tree-shaded streets are bordered by many old mansions of the past.

Through a lot of hard work, divided among many individuals, the city now has its own symphony orchestra, ninety members strong. The musicians are not only local, but come from all over the state. The ensemble provides opportunity for fine musicians who might otherwise be buried in a small town. They play everything from Bach to Schönberg and play it well.

How can a small community such as Waukesha succeed in a project of this kind when other big cities have failed? First there is the motivating force. Here it is present in the dynamic personality of Milton Weber, who came to Waukesha from Austria. He supports his family by teaching violin at the local Carroll College, and is the personification of energy and vitality. He wields the baton and is the source of encouragement for all the local lovers of music. He donated all of his services during the formative years, setting a fine example for his fellow musicians. The union was persuaded to make a compromise during these early times, and, as a result, a full orchestra was available for rehearsal.

The second brick in the foundation of the symphony is teamwork. The society matron and the stenographer, the industrialist and the housewife—all were called upon and told that this was their symphony. They accepted the responsibility and worked for the common good. Most of the necessary cash outlay was secured by small donations and the balance secured through the now-famous Symphony Fair. Everyone donated, and everyone bought. The children's primitive finger paintings sold faster than old masters. Aunt Sarah donated a jar of her watermelon pickles. The Garden Club gave seedlings and potted plants. The local artists painted posters. The craftsmen created quantities of handwork. Jams, jellies, and rare herbs were there for the gourmet. Before the day ended, the shelves of the big sales pavilion were empty, and everyone was happy. There were also several thousand dollars in the treasury.

The question of a place to perform and rehearse was solved through the co-operation of the school board. The high-school auditorium was made available. The good music, the enthusiastic audience, and the favorable reviews made an unbeatable combination, so that attendance snowballed. Now the college gym is used, and the ensemble still draws capacity crowds.

The skillful choice of music by Mr. Weber has also brought strong support. The programs are varied and contain a touch of everything. Beethoven and Wagner are heard, together with the works of contemporary composers. American composers are frequently represented.

All this has resulted in the fulfillment of an ideal, and further opportunities have been created for a section of America's children. Waukesha has its symphony; cannot similar small communities follow suit?

FRANK H. NELSON
Milwaukee

SUBSCRIBERS . . . . . .

desiring a change in their address should advise the Circulation Department just as soon as such change is known. The Post Office will destroy copies sent to subscriber's old address. To be certain of receiving all issues, please let us have four weeks' notice of such change. Advise old address as well as new one.

San Francisco's 1933 summer symphony season brought together (left to right) Henry Hadley and Alfred Hertz, conductors; Mrs. Leonora Armsby, director; Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor and pianist, and his wife; and Fritz Reiner, conductor

What They Read

Hitler Papers the House . . .

BAYREUTH. — Whatever else the Wagner Year 1933 may have meant to Bayreuth, it will go down on Wagnerian scrolls as the first time in history that the National Government evinced sufficient official interest in its fate to confer on it moral and material support of dignified dimensions. When ticket cancellations began to pour in by the hundreds after Toscanini's retirement, and some of the more disquieting accompaniments of the birth pangs of the new socialism joined hands with the depreciation of the dollar and pound to ban others of the faithful, even the optimists trembled and braced themselves for the shock of a financial catastrophe that touched the irreparable. Chancellor Hitler, however, is an ardent Wagnerian who views Bayreuth as one of the emblems of the national Kultur which must be fostered at all costs. The Government therefore stepped into the breach by acquiring several thousand tickets for distribution among the young political troops. As a result, all the performances were sold out.

. . . But Salzburg Pays Its Way

SALZBURG.—The opening of the Salzburg Festival was anticipated this year with a great deal of apprehension, not only because of the economic crisis, but also because Germany had practically made it impossible for its nationals to cross the border by placing a 1,000-mark visa fee on such trips. Since Germans have made up the bulk of the Salzburg audiences, this move was particularly feared, but in point of fact, other foreign visitors almost compensated for the lack of German tourists, propaganda having been widely distributed in other lands. There was a distinguished audience, including many Americans and English people. Cancellations on the part of the German artists at the last moment might also have tended to throw the festival arrangements into disorder had not substitutes been immediately found.

A Different Iolanthe

In an entrancing setting, the open-air Garden Theatre of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club at Scarsborough-on-Hudson, under the auspices of the Musicians Emergency Fund, the American premiere of Tchaikovsky's one-act opera Iolanthe was given before a distinguished audience. Iolanthe to Americans has ever meant that delectable comic opera by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan. But Tchaikovsky's work of the same name is a very different affair. It is a romantic work, which from this hearing proved to be an ingratiating, typical Russian opera. Sung in its original text by native Russians, it exerted a considerable appeal. It is fluent, melodious music, much of it conventional in treatment. Iolanthe bears the opus number 69, falling between his opera Pique Dame and the string sextet called Souvenir de Florence; in other words, well advanced Tchaikovsky.

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from page 12)

he had reposed in the talent of Mr. Bernstein. The memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony was evoked not only by the dedication of this concert, but also by silent tribute, the audience and musicians standing, which Mr. Bernstein asked by a gesture when first he appeared upon the stage.

The memorial program began with the Prelude to Moussorgsky's Khovanchina (one of the smaller interpretative jewels of Koussevitsky in the old days) and included the Shéhérazade, sung with all of her usual musicianship by Miss Tourel. Following the concert, Mr. Bernstein was presented, in the greenroom, with the Mahler medal of the Bruckner Society of America.

On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 9, Charles Munch conducted his first American performance of Strauss's Don Quixote. He did it in a full-bodied and graphic manner, though seemingly more concerned with symphonic continuity than with a series of vividly outlined dramatic episodes. Certain details, such as the bleating of the sheep, were decidedly realistic, yet I did miss the good, mellow, German sound of brass that Strauss needs; otherwise the tone was rich and silken. Mr. Piatigorsky's way with the cello "title role" hardly needs any description after so many years; it probably is the definitive interpretation of the part today. Joseph De Pasquale, the Boston Symphony's excellent first viola, dealt admirably with the part of Sancho Panza.

Schubert's Fifth Symphony, the one "without trumpets and drums," in a spirited and tidy reading, began the concert. Samuel Barber, who was roundly applauded after the lush work of the Boston Symphony strings in his Adagio, must have been satisfied with what he heard. As for Milhaud's First Cello Concerto, Mr. Piatigorsky tossed it off in virtuoso style, receiving wholly pleasurable collaboration from Mr. Munch and the orchestra. This is a smallish and lightish work, but one well designed for the solo instrument. It thoroughly exemplifies the designations of each movement: Nonchalant, Grave, and Joyeux. The program ended with that Munch favorite, the Second Suite from Roussel's Bacchus et Ariane, which he never fails to make go off like a sky rocket.

Romeo and Juliet Symphony

The Romeo and Juliet symphony, which is wonderful music up to the last half hour and plain dull for the remainder of its course, took all of the concert on Friday evening, Aug. 7. The soloists were Jennie Tourel (Juliet), John McCollum (Romeo), and Nicola Moscona (Friar Laurence). The Berkshire Festival Chorus, again prepared by Hugh Ross, participated.

end was 28,000 persons.

With the revival of Grétry's long-forgotten opera, Richard Coeur-de-Lion, the Berkshire Music Center

The total attendance for this week-added another distinction to its ever-lengthening list of achievements. The work was given in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Monday night, Aug. 10, and repeated, with slightly altered casting, the following evening. The opera department, conducted by Boris production was by students of the Goldovsky and staged by Sarah Caldwell.

It required heroic measures to put this production together, for Mr. Goldovsky is insistent upon original versions whenever possible. The first score received from a French publisher, reportedly the only one available for modern presentation, had been revised by the nineteenth-century composer Adolphe Adam. Through Darius Milhaud and P. Collaer, head of the Belgian National Radio Broadcasting Institute, Mr. Goldovsky was able to obtain from the City of Brussels the original Grétry manuscript, upon parts of which are the composer's signature. Mr. Goldovsky's insistence upon originals applies to music only; for his productions he demands English texts, and accordingly he and his colleague, Miss Caldwell, themselves prepared a translation.

Grétry was no Mozart, and yet no Rossini, but in Richard Coeur-de-Lion he wrote a decidedly absorbing work. It is a comic opera in about the sense that The Yeomen of the Guard is a comic opera. It is of about the same dramatic weight, as well, which, considering the craftsmanship of each, is a compliment that works both ways.

While there is a certain brave innocence about Grétry's music today, it is far from quaint or thin. In its own day it must have seemed bold indeed, and in the several-times-repeated love song of Richard, well ahead of its time. The score has substance, a good measure of melodic invention. If the range of harmonic expression is not wide, the play of rhythm is constant, varied and unceasingly vigorous. Indeed, there is a certain clever tension, suspense almost, about story and music, which makes you wonder if Richard Coeur-de-Lion might not be playable in a modern commercial opera house. That is, of course, in a highly stylized production, sung, as here, in English.

The story is relatively simple, a mere framework for the spoken dialogue, the arias, duets and concerted numbers. It tells of how, after years of wandering disguised as a blind singer, Richard's minstrel Blondel finds where his master is imprisoned and, with the help of Richard's beloved, Marguerite of Flanders, and Sir Hugh Williams, an exiled English knight, the king is released.

Production-wise, Richard Coeur-de-Lion stands among the finest of the Center's accomplishments. John Blankenchip's settings, of delightfully primitive perspective, were just right. The use of colored scenic projection upon a screen, made possible a lively approximation of the storming of the castle. Leo Van Witsen had done an exceptionally good job, both of color and design, with the medieval costumes.

The singing in the first performance was superb, with the Blondel of John McCollum and the king of Richard Cassilly blending smoothly in the remarkably second-act duet for two tenors. Theresa Green used her sumptuous soprano voice well as Marguerite; Christine Cardillo as Laurette was both musically and dramatically vivacious, and the smaller roles were most creditably filled. It is further pleasant to report that nearly all the English words could easily be heard.

—CYRUS DURGIN

THE annual gala known as Tanglewood on Parade was held on Thursday, Aug. 13, of the final week of the 1953 Berkshire Festival. It enlisted the participation of the 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center and the full membership of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein sharing the podium and with Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, and William Warfield as soloists. Given as a benefit for the Center, the event included demonstrations of student work, a picnic supper, a concert by the orchestra, the drawing of door prizes (by Anna Russell), and dancing on the lawn.

A short welcoming address by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department, was followed by the simultaneous offerings of three of the school's departments. A program in the Theatre-Concert Hall presented the world premieres of an opera, Bad Boys in School, by Jan Meyerowitz, and a cantata by Allen Sapp on a text by William Blake. At the same time, in the Music Shed, a student orchestra was led by four student conductors — Harold Blumenfeld, Erno Daniel, Herbert Blomstedt, and Robert Mandell—in works by Prokofieff, Dvorak, Debussy, and Ravel. In the Chamber Music Hall, students in the Center's chamber-music department were heard in music by Brahms, Franck, Hindemith, Jack Urbont, and Tossi Ichiyanagi.

The concluding concerts in this year's festival, on Aug. 14, 15, and 16, were attended by a total of 32,800 persons, bringing the season's total to 117,900, the largest attendance figure in Tanglewood history. The Friday evening program, attended by a smaller-than-usual audience of 7,600, was given over to a performance of Brahm's A German Requiem. Mr. Munch conducted, and Lois Marshall and Mr. Warfield were the soloists. The Boston Symphony was assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, made up of students at the Center.

On Saturday night Mr. Bernstein led the orchestra in a program that included Sibelius' Fourth Symphony, Chavez' Sinfonia India, and Brahms's Second Symphony.

Mr. Munch returned to the podium for the Boston Symphony's last concert of the summer series on Sunday afternoon. The program listed Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, Chabrier's Bourrée Fantasque, the Prelude and Love-Death from Wagner's Tristan und Isolde, A Siegfried Idyll, and orchestral excerpts from the third act of Die Meistersinger. Two works by Ravel, the Piano Concerto for the left hand, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and La Valse, concluded the concert.

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Arved Kurtz, Director — Chartered 1878

76th Season: 1953-1954

College and Professional Courses . . . Class and Individual Instruction . . . Daytime or Evening . . . Full or Part-Time

Write for Catalog

114 EAST 85th STREET. — REgent 7-5751. — NEW YORK 28, N. Y.

L'ACTION CATHOLIQUE
Organe de
L'Action Sociale Catholique
Rédaction et Administration
Place Jean-Talon, Québec

L'ACTION CATHOLIQUE

24 PAGES
8 EN COULEURS

Vol. XVII, No 26 — Autorisé comme envoi postal de la deuxième classe, ministère des Postes, Ottawa — "Instaurare omnia in Christo" — Dimanche, 28 juin 1953

En Yougoslavie

Les évêques n'ont pas capitulé devant le maréchal Tito

LES DEPECHES nous ont appris l'adoption par l'Assemblée nationale Yougoslave d'une loi sur les communautés religieuses. Ainsi le gouvernement yougoslave est arrivé apparemment à ses fins, savoir à une "normalisation" de la position juridique de toutes les confessions dans le pays. Nous disons : apparemment, car si l'on jette un regard en arrière sur les trois mois ...tations qui ont précédé la ...osition de la loi, on peut, grâce à d'intéressants recoupements dans les informations des agences et des journaux, aboutir à la constataion suivante: les évêques catholiques yougoslaves n'ont pas capitulé devant le maréchal Tito et la "normalisation" des rapports entre l'Eglise et l'Etat est exclusivement l'oeuvre du gouvernement, sans que les évêques catholiques y aient eu une part positive quelconque.

Une constatation subsidiaire nous montre que si les autres confessions ont participé plus ou moins activement aux pourparlers, elles n'ont pas lieu d'être satisfaites, loin de là, de la teneur définitive que le gouvernement a donné, de sa seule autorité, aux stipulations de la loi sur les communautés religieuses.

Belgrade veut traiter avec les évêques, non avec Rome

PEU de temps après la rupture, par Belgrade, des relations diplomatiques avec le Saint-Siège (le 15 décembre dernier), on pouvait lire, dans la presse officielle yougoslave, des propos surprenants :

Maintenant que l'ingérence du Vatican dans nos affaires intérieures se trouve éliminée, y était-il dit en substance, on peut penser à normaliser les relations de l'Eglise et de l'Etat.

Le gouvernement yougoslave était hanté par cette idée, assez familière à des esprits élevés dans l'orthodoxie, que l'on peut arriver

● Suite à la page 17

TANGLEWOOD : LE PARADIS DE LA MUSIQUE

● A Tanglewood, le nombre des voitures stationnées donne une petite idée du nombre des auditeurs. Le triangle blanc, en forme de piano à queue, c'est la "shed"; au fond, le Stockbridge Bowl. (Lire l'article en page 3).

Le paradis de la musique

TANGLEWOOD

DANS les monts Berkshire, au fond du Massachusetts, à deux cents milles, droit au sud de Montréal, route 7, Koussevitski a fondé il y a quinze ans, quelque chose qui est comme un sanctuaire estival de la musique.

Comme dans les sanctuaires d'oiseaux, la musique y est à l'abri de ce qui pourrait la faire fuir ou la tuer. Tout a commencé en 1936, par le don fait à l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston du magnifique domaine de Tanglewood: deux cents acres de parc solide, entretenu et amélioré pendant plus de cent ans par la famille Tappan, de Boston. Koussevitski, avec son imagination ardente et constructive, vit tout de suite le parti qu'il y aurait à tirer de ce beau domaine, en faveur de la musique.

Il y eut d'abord un court festival d'une semaine; on utilisa un kiosque en bois et une large tente; mais la pluie inonda les auditeurs et imposa plusieurs interruptions pendant certains concerts. D'où la résolution de construire un abri plus sûr.

On ne perdit pas de temps, puisqu'en juin 1938 la grande "Shed" était prête. C'est un bâtiment qui a grande allure, en forme de pointe de tarte, immenses toit supporté par des poutres métalliques et à claire-voie sur trois côtés. Seul son plus petit côté, qui forme l'estrade des musiciens, est complètement fermé. La capacité est de plus de six mille sièges, et l'acoustique est si parfaite qu'elle permet l'audition des plus légers pianissimo à plusieurs mille pieds de leur source, soit dans l'édifice, soit en dehors. Autour de ces sièges, court une large promenade qui permet, aux moments de pluie, d'abriter les milliers d'auditeurs qui écoutent les concerts, étendus sur le gazon.

Depuis, ont été construites: la salle d'opéra (mille sièges) et la salle de musique de chambre (cinq cents sièges), ainsi qu'une scène en plein air pour divers exercices et pour les concerts d'opéra, et une estrade abritée d'un auvent. Et partout quand on parcourt le domaine, on trouve dans ces locaux primitifs de grands Baldwin de concert! Les salles d'opéra et de musique de chambre ont des pans mobiles qui s'enlèvent lorsqu'il fait beau, et qui permettent, par exemple, d'écouter un quatuor en ayant vue sur le Stockbridge Bowl et les grandes montagnes vertes qui l'encerclent.

Si Koussevitski a voulu un festival en pleine nature, il a voulu aussi que Tanglewood serve d'école de musique en plein air. Les professeurs sont surtout des membres de l'Orchestre de Boston; les plus grandes célébrités mondiales y sont invitées à professer: Ibert, Milhaud, Hindemith, Copeland, Messiaen, Piatigorski. . . En fait, Tanglewood est la maison de campagne de l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston, dans l'un des plus merveilleux sites au monde. Il y a plus de trois cents élèves réguliers.

Le profane, le simple auditeur a-t-il sa place dans ce paysage féérique? Oui. A certaines heures, entre les heures de cours et d'étude) le public peut y circuler et y pique-niquer. Le festival offre chaque semaine trois grands concerts de l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston: jeudi et samedi soir, dimanche après-midi. De grands ensembles de musique de chambre quatuors Juilliard, Coolidge) sont aussi fréquemments présentés en des concerts payants.

De plus, les "Amis de Tanglewood" sont admis à tous les concerts donnés par les élèves, sur simple présentation de leur carte. Une souscription de valeur indéterminée au fond des bourses donne droit à cette carte, qui vaut pour la saison. Dans quinze jours, on peut attraper une dizaine de ces concerts pour cinq ou dix dollars!

Le public répond à l'invitation. Les salles sont presque toujours combles. Si on arrive en retard, on doit se trouver un coin debout. Les grands concerts du Festival attirent une dizaine de milliers d'auditeurs, qui viennent de partout. Les plaques de licence d'automobile indiquent tous les Etats et tous les provinces. Mais de New-York, qui est à cent quarante mille, semble venir le gros contingent.

Les voisins, évidemment, après quinze ans de concerts si abondants, sont moins épatés que le premier jour, et plus sensibles aux défauts de l'organisation. Ils trouvent, par exemple que l'atmosphère est un peu trop celle d'une exposition ou d'un field day. Au moment des repas et avant les grands concerts, la foule ressemble, bien qu'en plus distingué, à celle d'une grande foire. Mais que la cloche de locomotive annonce le début du concert, et aussitôt cette foule se révèle faite de mélomanes intelligents, expéditifs à prendre leur siège et très aptes au recueillement requis. Il est très remarquable que dans cette foule, personne ne dérange ses voisins.

Une vacance à Tanglewood est une expérience très enrichissante dans une des régions les plus humanisées de l'Amérique. C'est à la fin de juillet et dans la première quinzaine d'août qu'il y a le plus d'événements intéressants à Tanglewood. Pour s'assurer une pension on peut s'adresser à la Berkshire Conference, Pittsfield, Mass.

René GIRARD, ptre.

● Un concert familier de la chorale, à Tanglewood. Un élève dirige. Le chef de cette section, Hugh Rose, est assis à gauche. On perçoit la familiarité qui s'établit entre les exécutants et les auditeurs.

● A Tanglewood, la grande "shed" qui contient 7,000 sièges et où l'orchestre de Boston donne ses concerts d'été. On compte jusqu'à 10,000 auditeurs — les 3,000 de surplus s'étendent sur le gazon, où l'on entend encore parfaitement la musique.

● Un concert à l'"Opera Hall" de Tanglewood. On saisit parfaitement l'atmosphère des concerts: musique et nature, musique et vacances... Il y a mille auditeurs dans la salle, en plus de ceux qui sont installés sur le gazon.

La chambre d'hotel

du bungalow de toile à la cabine de paquebot

Le Salon annuel des artistes décorateurs français se tient actuellement au Grand Palais de Paris, commencé le 28 avril et se terminera le 7 juin. Les artistes ont choisi comme thème l'aménagement et l'équipement de la chambre d'hôtel d'aujourd'hui. On y trouvera, groupées géographiquement, des "unités de logement" types, dotées d'un ménagement perfectionné; éclairage, installations sanitaires, insonorisation, climatisation, etc. . . depuis la cabine de paquebot jusqu'au bungalow idividuel du village de toile. D'autres éléments importants de l'hôtel seront mis en valeur: halls de réception, salles de repos, bars, terrasses. . . Des vitrines spécialement conçues par les besoins particuliers de l'hôtellerie s'inscriront dans cette architecture intérieure; certaines d'entre elles, réalisées avec le concours de spécialistes du verre et de l'éclairage, permettront d'exposer des oeuvres d'art, et des "souvenirs" pour touristes; d'autres seront réservées aux créations du commerce de luxe, haute couture, articles de voyage, maroquinerie, etc. . . L'Alliance graphique internationale organisera à cette occasion une importante exposition. La Belgique, la Finlande, les Pays Bas, la Suède, la Suisse ont annoncé leur participation. (Ce Salon à coïncidé, dans la dernière semaine d'avril, avec le Salon du Tourisme et de l'Hôtellerie).

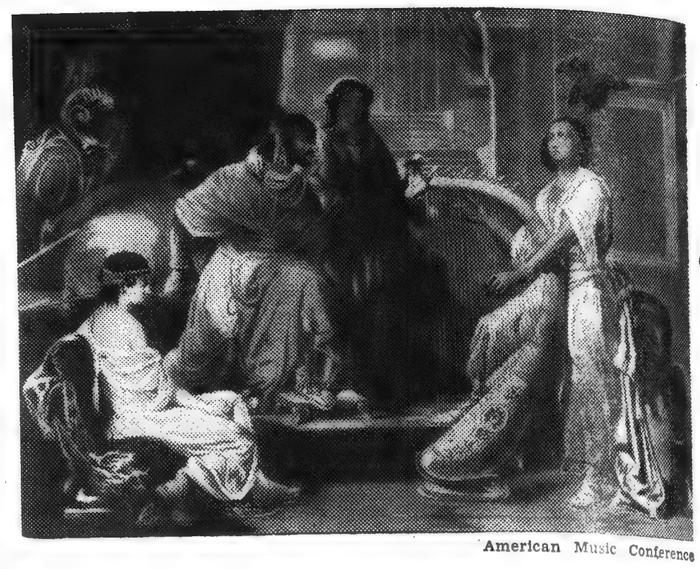
[72]

Le Lingot

Un Journal du Saguenay

La culture est une curiosité désintéressée que l'individu a de soi-même, de son milieu, de ses relations avec l'univers; c'est une recherche de ce qui a été pensé, senti, exprimé avant nous et ailleurs que chez-nous. — André SIEGFRIED

LE LINGOT, ARVIDA, JEUDI 18 DECEMBRE 1952



"David prit une harpe, en joua, et Saül se sentit apaisé et l'Esprit Malin le quitta." Samuel, 1er livre, c. XVI, v. 23.

American Music Conference

UNE INÉGALITÉ SOCIALE DISPARAÎT

LA MUSIQUE VIENT À NOUS

RENÉ GIRARD, prêtre

La Bible nous apprend que Jubal, arrière petit-fils de Caïn, "a été le père de tous ceux qui jouent de la harpe et du chalumeau" (Genèse 4, 21). La musique n'a donc pas mis de temps à venir au monde, après l'arrivée de l'homme. Depuis, le peuple s'est toujours fait sa musique et il parait encore, pour une part, bien satisfait de cet état de chose. Les violoneux, les joueurs d'accordéon-piano et de guitare électrique sont les successeurs modernes des joueurs de chalumeau.

Mais parmi le peuple, certains individus sont devenus extrêmement habiles, et ils ont inventé une musique de plus en plus difficile, si difficile que très peu de gens pouvaient la jouer. Ce qui fit que très peu de gens aussi, relativement, pouvaient l'écouter. On inventait des instruments plus perfectionnés qui donnaient des sons plus purs, mais qui demandaient plus d'habileté. On inventa la notation musicale; puis des gens spécialement doués, souvent d'un très grand génie se sont mis à composer de la musique plus exigeante. Chaque génération osait plus que la précédente.

Le peuple, lui, restait avec ses joueurs de chalumeau et ses violoneux, qui exécutaient des mélodies simples; mais la musique plus travaillée était perdue pour lui, parce qu'il n'y avait que peu d'exécutants assez adroits pour bien jouer cette musique. Seuls les riches pouvaient se payer le luxe de se faire jouer telle musique. Le petit peuple se désintéressa d'une chose qu'il ne connaissait pas: on n'aime que ce que l'on connait. Et la musique classique lui fut étrangère.

La révolution

Récemment, il s'est produit, en plusieurs étapes d'ailleurs, une révolution qui permet à tous de faire conaissance avec la musique des plus grands génies. L'invention du phonographe est à l'origine de cette révolution.

Mais il y a loin du phonographe de Fidèle aux appareils électroniques d'aujourd'hui! Jusqu'à l'application du procédé électrique à l'enregistrement, le phonographe ne se prêtait guère à la reproduction de la grande musique. Cette musique, pour plaire, demande une certaine qualité de son que les premiers phonos ne pouvaient fournir. Puis il leur était impossible de reproduire des ensembles un peu considérables, un orchestre par exemple. Ecoutez les (anciens) disques de Caruso: ils rendent déjà justice à sa voix puissante et si expressive, mais l'orchestre qui l'accompagne semble jouer deux arpents plus loin. Aussi, la meilleure musique enregistrée ne servait que de plaisir de société: on la jouait pour ses hôtes au salon, tout en causant; mais pas pour la musique elle-même.

Lorsque vint, vers 1930, l'enregistrement électrique, la fidélité augmenta considérablement, et il devint intéressant d'écouter sur disques de la musique pour la musique. Mais ce n'était pas encore la "musique vivante".

Depuis le lancement du nouveau disque long-fil, on est parvenu, en moins de cinq ans, à des perfectionnements inespérés, et il est vrai de dire qu'au moyen d'un bon disque et d'un bon appareil de reproduction, la musique enregistrée est vraiment une musique vivante. La preuve, c'est que si vous entendez d'une pièce voisine un bon disque, la seule chose qui va vous faire dire qu'il s'agit d'un enregistrement, c'est la perfection de l'ensemble: parce que vous ne connaissez personne dans les alentours capables de chanter ou de jouer aussi bien que cela.

En effet, le bruit de fond étant éliminé, et l'enregistrement (la reproduction aussi) tenant compte juste des vibrations émises, balançant et rendant fidèlement les sons les plus hauts et les plus bas, on peut dire que la musique jouée devant le micro d'enregistrement est parfaitement restituée, pour notre oreille. Et comme le disque est quelque chose de définitif, qui va durer, et que la concurrence est vive, les enregistrements sont plus soignés en général que ceux de la radio, qui ne servent qu'une fois. (Avis: Il y a cependant des disques négligés: il s'agit de s'en garer!)

La musique vient à nous

Il est donc devenu possible à ceux qui ne pouvaient aller aux concerts d'entendre quand même de la musique classique. C'est maintenant la musique qui vient à nous. La radio nous offre de beaux concerts. Mais le disque est un instrument encore plus souple, car il offre selon les annonces "la musique que nous voulons au moment où nous la voulons". Et lorsqu'on s'achète un disque, on peut le rejouer aussi souvent qu'on le désire, à l'opposé du concert ou de la radio, qui ne nous offrent qu'une occasion fugitive. Cela permet de se familiariser avec les chefs-d'oeuvre, de les approfondir.

La musique devient d'autant plus abordable que le prix des disques a tendance à baisser, même si la qualité du rendement augmente toujours. Un album ancien de quatre disques coûtait $8.00 (il baissa à $5.00); l'équivalent, un disque long-fil de douze pouces se vend entre $5 et $6, et à New York on peut en acheter pour $4, et parfois moins. Deux compagnies viennent de mettre sur le marché des disques dont le prix est encore moindre: Decca offre des long-fil de dix pouces à $2.60 (le prix régulier va de $3.50 à $4.50) et Victor, des disques de sept pouces (seize minutes de jeu) pour $1.60. Et l'on peut escompter de nouvelles baisses.

Tournant plus de deux fois moins vite (33 tours à la minute au lieu de 78) et gravé d'un sillon trois fois plus fin, le nouveau disque inclut sur une même surface beaucoup plus de musique. Le prix de revient est moindre: on peut jouer des oeuvres dont la durée atteint vingt minutes sans interruption; le classement et l'emmagasinage est aussi facilité grandement puisque le nouveau disque se révèle environ huit fois plus compact que l'ancien (sillon trois fois plus mince x lenteur de révolution deux fois plus grande + épaisseur deux fois moindre: 3 x 2 + 2 =8).

Il faut la recevoir

Si la musique vient à nous portée par un médium aussi parfait que le disque actuel il est de toute convenance que nous la recevions selon sa qualité. Cela veut dire que si nous voulons jouir parfaitement de la musique incluse en un disque, nous devrons posséder à cette fin un appareil capable de "lire" et de reconstituer exactement pour nous cette musique dont le disque est porteur.

Je n'entrerai pas ici dans la discussion des appareils de "haute fidélité"; mais je veux signaler qu'il importe de posséder un appareil qui ne soit pas injuste pour le disque. Beaucoup d'amateurs aujourd'hui s'organisent eux-mêmes leur installation à un prix très raisonnable. Il importe surtout que le haut-parleur soit d'une dimension suffisante (10 pouces au moins) et qu'il soit bien emboîté, car sa boite contribue beaucoup à l'ampleur et à la fidélité du son qu'il émet. Les autres éléments de l'installation sont: l'amplificateur, le tourne-disque, le lecteur, la cartouche et l'aiguille. Chacun de ces éléments demande une sérieuse considération. Mon ami C. G. Burke, critique des disques à la revue "High Fidelity", aux Etats-Unis, a composé une étude de cent-vingt pages, intitulée: Home Reproduction and How to improve it", sur la manière de s'organiser. Elle est contenue dans un livre très intéressant intitulé: The Saturday Review Home Book of Recorded Music and Sound Reproduction". Les deux autres parties de ce livre son également fort intéressantes: la première décrit la technique de l'enregistrement des disques, et la dernière, un peu confuse à mon avis, enseigne à juger les disques et à analyser leur musique. (New York, Prentice-Hall).

Les compagnies qui fabriquent des appareils combinés en mettent d'ailleurs d'excellents sur le marché. Sparton annonçait récemment un appareil "Haute Fidélité" pré-fabriqué, à un prix très intéressant, et Sam Goody, à New York, en vend au prix de $160 ou même moins cher lorsque la boiserie n'en est pas finie. Ces instruments dépassent d'emblée en valeur beaucoup d'instruments qui se vendaient (et se vendent?) des $400 et $500, pour la bonne raison qu'on en soigne surtout la partie mécanique et électronique, et qu'on s'en tient, pour l'apparence du meuble, aux règles de la plus sage modestie. l'amateur de musique, quand il s'achète un instrument, ne tient pas à décorer sa maison d'un meuble de millionnaire, mais bien plutôt à se fournir d'un reproducteur aussi parfait que possible pour sa musique.

C'est vraiment la foule maintenant

Si les fabriquants d'appareil ont opéré cette conversion, c'est qu'ils ont constaté que le goût du public tournait vers le mieux. En hommes d'affaires avisés, ils se sont arrangés pour répondre à une demande de plus en plus grande du public. La demande est massive, aujourd'hui.

L'intérêt pour la musique classique enregistrée est si considérable, aux Etats-Unis par exemple, qu'une revue spécialisée qui se consacre à la revue des disques et aux appareils de reproduction a vu son tirage monter de trente mille en deux ans, et les compagnies qui se sont lancées dans la production du disque classique dépassent la centaine. Ce n'est donc pas se singulariser, faire figure d'original, que de s'intéresser à la bonne musique et aux disques, c'est entrer dans le courant.

Une autre façon de constater l'intérêt général qu'éveille la musique dans le monde d'aujourd'hui c'est de noter le nombre de festivals et d'écoles de musique qui fonctionnent à la campagne, en pleine nature, chaque été chez nos voisins et en Europe: Tanglewood, Robin Hood Dell, Ravinia Park, le Centre de la Famille Trapp; Edimbourg, Glyndebourg, Strasbourg, Vienne, Venise ...

L'exemple de Tanglewood nous fera comprendre que c'est vraiment la multitude qui se montre affamée de musique sur le magnifique terrain de ce Festival, dans les Berkshire; pendant six semaines on peut y voir, trois jours par semaine, des milliers de personnes. Les raffinés trouvent que c'est trop genre pique-nique ou exposition. Mais il suffit de voir cette foule, pendant les concerts; sept milles personnes sont assises en grand silence sous le large toit qui recouvre autant de chaises. Et dehors sur la pelouse ou sur des couvertures vous voyez deux ou trois milliers d'autres auditeurs écouter la musique avec autant d'attention et de silence. C'est vraiment serieux, et ce sont tout de même des chiffres impressionnants. Beaucoup viennent de loin, des grandes villes qui sont à deux cent milles ou près. Boston, New York, Philadelphie, pour entendre sous les étoiles Charles Munch et l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston interpréter, Bach, Beethoven, Schumann ou les Contemporains. Il y a quelque mélancolie, l'hiver, à songer à ces belles journées de musique à la campagne — mais on peut se guérir vite de cette mélancolie quand on possède un bon appareil et quelques beaux disques!

Et ces foules de Tanglewood, et ces autres foules invisibles le soir, chacun dans son foyer, qui écoutent les beaux disques, elles sont le témoignage qu'une injustice humaine est en train de disparaître: la grande musique n'est plus le lot exclusif des courtisans et des riches; elle est maintenant accessible aux plus petites gens, qui lui ont déjà fait, à elle et aux consolations qu'elle leur offre, l'accueil le plus intelligent et le plus sympathique.

PAR QUOI COMMENCER?

On a parfois l'impression qu'il faut énormément de disques pour tirer plaisir de la musique enregistrée. Rien n'est plus faux. Car c'est un plaisir bien plus qualitatif que quantitatif. Quand on a trop de disques, on n'épuise pas le contenu de chacun de ces disques, on n'en tire pas le plaisir artistique qu'il est apte à nous procurer. On papillonne. Quelques disques vraiment beaux suffisent pour commencer, auxquels on ajoutera graduellement, selon une sage modération. Il est vrai qu'il se publie ces mois-ci tant de beaux disques que la tentation est grande de dépasser son budget et sa capacité d'absorption! C'est un de mes amis d'Arvida qui me disait l'an dernier: "La passion des disques, c'est un hobby dispendieux!"

Il y a énormément de très belle musique, et l'on est en train de l'enregistrer toute! Comment choisir? Je propose ici aux débutants une liste, qui n'a rien d'exclusif, d'oeuvres très belles et susceptibles de plaire à prime abord. Il s'agit d'oeuvre où l'élément mélodique domine, ce qui les rend chantantes. J'indique la version qui me paraît actuellement la meilleure.

BACH — Un disque intitulé "Music of Jubilee": magnifique. (Columbia, ML-4435)

MOZART — Symphonie Haffner: (Toscanini, N B C. (Victor LM-1038).

Divertissements en Mi Bemol, avec Heifetz, Primrose et Feuerman. (Victor L C T-1021).

HAYDN — Symphonie de l'Horloge (Même disque que la Symphonie Haffner de Mozart.

BEETHOVEN — 2e Concerto pour le piano: Kapell, pianiste et l'Orchestre de la NBC. (Victor, LM-12, 10-pouces).

Symphonie pastorale: (Weingartner et Vienne (Columbia, ML-4506) ou Toscanini et NBC (Victor LCT-1042) Ce sont deux anciens enregistrements repris sur long-fil, mais ce sont vraiment les meilleurs. Klemperer excellent pour la 5e Symphonie, me semble moins bon dans la Pastorale. (Vox PL-6960).

Deux Romances pour violon (Decca, DL-4004, 10-pouces).

SCHUBERT — Troisième Symphonie, orchestre de Cincinnati (London, LLP-405).

SCHUMANN — Son Concerto pour piano, en la, avec Dinu Lipatti: extraordinaire! (Columbia ML-2195, 10-pouces).

PAGANINI. — Onze Caprices, joués par le jeune Michel Robin, alors âgé de 13 ans. (Columbia, ML-2168, 10-pouces).

CHOPIN — Les 24 Préludes (Victor LM-1163) ou les quatre Scherzos (Victor LM-1132), avec Arthur Rubinstein.

Le Deuxième Concerto de Chopin est aussi très chantant. Avec Malcuzinski. (Columbia, ML-4135).

BERLIOZ — Symphonie fantastique. De trois bonnes éditions la meilleure est celle de Pierre Monteux avec son Orchestre de San Francisco (Victor LM-1131).

DEBUSSY — Images, jouées par Gieseking (Columbia, ML-2188).

RACHMANINOFF — Deuxième Concerto, avec Julius Katchen (London, LLP-384).

SMETANA — La Moldau, couplée avec la 1ère Rhapsodie roumaine d'Enesco (Decca, DL-4012).

DE FALLA — Le Tricorne; enregistrement intégral par Ansermet et l'Orchestre de la Suisse romande. (London, LL-598).

R. G.

Grétry Opera Revived at Tanglewood Fete

By Jules Wolffers

LENOX, MASS.—It was not only the music that made news at this summer's Berkshire Festival. The other side of the podium made news of its own, with record-breaking audiences and gate receipts. Over 150,000 admissions were chalked up for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts, plus other Tanglewood events and student concerts sponsored by the affiliated Berkshire Music Center. Total income was well over $350,000, including ticket sales and contributions to the Center's "Friends," which carry admission to student programs and other Tanglewood offerings. This is "big business" for a six-week period, and encouraging for those who want to see the mass American audience share in the experience of hearing fine music.

As usual, Boris Goldovsky's Opera Department made very special news of its own. Four one-act operas were produced —Gluck's The Drunkard Reformed, Debussy's L'Enfant Prodigue, Chabrier's An Incomplete Education, and the first performance of Bad Boys in School, by Jan Meyerowitz.

The last-named, based on a play by Nestroy, formed a part of the annual benefit program lasting an entire day, Tanglewood on Parade, where it had to compete with a lot of rival programs demonstrating the achievements of the various departments of the Center. This was on too lavish a scale to make a detailed consideration possible.

The chief operatic production was Grétry's Richard the Lion-Hearted, dating from 1784. This was the first hearing of the work in the United States since about 1800, when it was, of course, sung in French.

The story concerns the faithful Blondel, a minstrel, who contrives to rescue his imprisoned royal master Richard when the latter is held in durance vile during one of his crusading enterprises. Blondel announces his presence by singing a song of fealty which has become associated with this historic character, O Richard, O mon Roi. The opera also contains some more or less conventional love scenes.

A Historic Opera-Comique

The much written-about but never-heard work received the best of treatment from Goldovsky's talented troupe. For all its anachronisms and naiveté, the opera has much appealing charm and some fine melodies. This score served as one of the models for later French comic opera, and it was a fascinating experience to see the history-making work produced, if today it seems a bit pallid. The whole cast and production crew worked with an esprit de corps that produced first-class results.

Goldovsky, the producer and conductor, used a translation made by himself and Sarah Caldwell, who staged the work. The setting were designed by John Blankenship and successfully employed the projections on slides of Paul Planer, as in the Mozart Titus production last season at the Center. The costumes by Leo Van Witsen were elaborate and in the spirit of the period. The musical preparation had enlisted as assistants Paul Ulanowsky, Felix Wolfes and Ludwig Zirner.

The casts were headed by John McCollum, as Blondel; Theresa Green and Lois McCauley, alternating as Marguerite of Flanders; Richard Cassilly and Alvin Edmondson, heard on separate nights as King Richard. The two young lovers united by the royal beneficence were Christine Cardillo as Laurette and Robert Rue as Florestan. Others roles were assigned to Arlene Stone, Alfred Knopf, Anne English, Rosalind Elias, Robert Simpson, Lee Cass, McHenry Boatwright, Suzanne Der Derian, Paul Huddleston, Richard Brand, Hunter Moore, Wendell Gray, Clifford Orr and Arthur Schoep, besides a mixed chorus of peasants, servants and soldiers.

Orchestral Highlights

As for the parent body, the orchestra presented 15 concerts, the first six devoted to chamber music (reported in the August issue of the Musical Courier). The last nine, with the full orchestra, came on three successive Friday-Saturday-Sunday programs, ending Aug. 16.

SCENE FROM GRETRY'S OPERA, Richard the Lion-Hearted, revived at Berkshire Music Center. L. to r., Laurette (Christine Cardillo) and the minstrel Blondel (John McCollum) in an episode from Act. I. The work was produced by Boris Goldovsky, using the Goldovsky-Caldwell English translation of Sedaine's text; and with scenic projections by Paul Planer.

Charles Munch opened the Shed series in brilliant style with the Beethoven "Leonore" No. 3, the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto (Zino Francescatti, soloist), the Copland "Appalachian Spring," and the Ravel Bolero. The orchestra played splendidly and Mr. Francescatti drew salvos of applause for his smooth and finished rendition.

Lukas Foss was soloist the following night in his own Piano Concerto No. 2, a work that did not receive a uniformly favorable reception when heard last year. Since that time, however, the composer has revised it to its great advantage. Possibly, also, the performance was a better one this time. So here is a reversal of judgment for a composition one now finds imaginative and charming. Program-opener was Schumann's Overture to Manfred, and after-intermission pieces were the Mendelssohn "Italian" Symphony with the Hindemith Symphonic Metamorphosis on Weber Themes, both done in scintillating style.

First of the guest conductors was Pierre Monteux, in an all-Tchaikovsky program. One small bird on this occasion pitted his wee but shrill piping against the whole orchestra. Monteux's Tchaikovsky has its own qualities of emphasis, with particular stress on brass. The audience was enthusiastic. Bolet gave an expressive and powerful projection of the concerto.

The opening program of the second week-end was devoted to the Berlioz Romeo and Juliet dramatic symphony, an especial Munch favorite, which he does very well. Soloists were Jennie Tourel, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, with the choral sections taken by the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

Koussevitzky Memorial Program

Memories of Munch's predecessor were revived the following evening when Leonard Bernstein directed a Koussevitzky memorial concert. After Moussorgsky's Prelude to Khovanstchina, Jennie Tourel made her second series appearance with exquisitely-shaped interpretations of the solo sections from Ravel's Shéhérazade. The conductor achieved magnificent results in the Mahler "Resurrection" Symphony, although his platform mannerisms sometimes got in the way of the music. Miss Tourel again was highly effective, and a young soprano, Theresa Green, made an appealing Tanglewood debut, with the Festival Chorus producing some beautiful timbres. After the program Bernstein received the Mahler Medal from the Bruckner Society of America in an informal backstage presentation.

Munch returned the following afternoon for gratifying results in the Schubert Fifth and a moving rendition of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings. Soloist of the afternoon was Gregor Piatigorsky in his notable reading of Don Quixote, by Strauss, and in the inconsequential but diverting Brazilian-flavored Milhaud Cello Concerto No. 1. The Roussel Second Suite from Bacchus et Ariane closed the concert and series B.

Brahms' Requiem Sung

The final week-end repeated the Munch-Bernstein-Munch pattern. The regular conductor again devoted his opening program to a concert-length work, the Brahms German Requiem, Soloists were Lois Marshall, soprano and William Warfield, baritone, and here the Berkshire Festival Chorus made the last of its many fine appearances.

Bernstein achieved the biggest single audience success of the festival with his exciting reading of the Chavez Sinfonia India. The Mexican composer was present to share in the great ovation evoked by his tricky, folk-flavored composition.

On the other hand, the audience was apathetic to a really splendid read-

(Continued on page 13)

[74]

as the tenor soloist. Bluebeard's Castle by Bartok had a revival under his baton, with Norman Scott as Bluebeard, revealing a fine voice but missing some of the tension of the role, and Martha Lipton as Judith showing much dramatic feeling. Dorati's interpretation was beyond all praise.

Elmendorff conducted the Residentie, with Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau as baritone soloist in Mahler's Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen, sung with musical and poetic mastery. There was a local premiere of the Second Symphony by K. A. Hartmann, lasting only 15 minutes, but showing touching episodes, despite some excesses in expression and overwhelming use of percussion. Paul Klecki conducted the same orchestra in a novelty for the Netherlands, the Primo Concerto per Orchestra by the Italian Goffredo Petrassi, cleverly composed and with charming invention in the Adagio, though the third part has little inspiration. Clara Haskil appeared as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto.

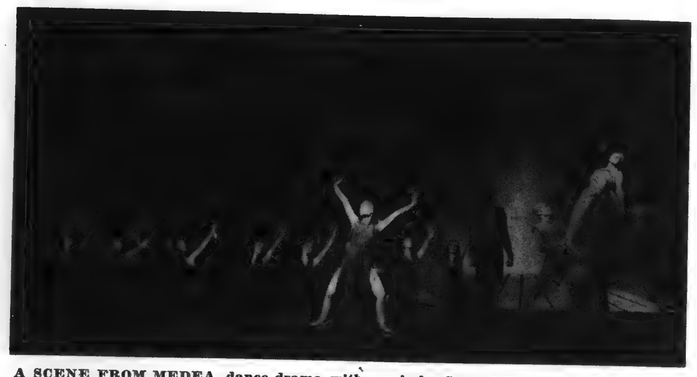
The two orchestras gave closing concerts. That by the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam presented Eugene Ormandy in his Dutch debut (he also led three other Concertgebouw programs, one in Scheveningen). He proved a first class interpreter of the Mendelssohn "Italian" Symphony, and gave a magnificent reading of Hindemith's Mathis der Maler Symphony. Another novelty here was the Sixth Symphony of Prokofieff, revealingly presented.

The closing Residentie concert under Otterloo at the Kurhaus held Falla's El Amor Brujo suite, with Martha Lipton as a deeply dramatic soloist; Ravel's Valses Nobles et Sentimentales; the local premiere of the original Orchestermusik by Gottfried von Einem, and Liszt's A major concerto, finely played by Cor de Groot.

Other Concerts, Ballets and Dramas

Space does not permit detailed reports on the many other outstanding events, such as the Radio Philharmonic Orchestra's two concerts at Haarlem and The Hague, which included a series of seven variations by Dutch composers on the folksong, When It Rains in Winter, with contributions by Cor de Groot, Jurriaen Andriessen, Herman Strategier, Marius Flothuis, Sem Dresden, Karel Mengelberg, and Anthon van der Horst, performed under Eduard Flipse's direction; and Henk Badings' Psalmen-Symphonie, a composition of significance and beauty. Both works were written on commission from the Dutch Radio Union.

The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, under Karl Muenchinger, featured Bach's Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 in one splendid concert, though the Concertgebouw Hall was too large for such works. The Collegium Musicum Italicum, under Renato Fasano, gave a memorable concert of older Italian music by Vivaldi and his contemporaries, also a work by Rossini. The latter group also was heard in a Vivaldi program at Scheveningen. The sextet Alma Musica, of the Netherlands, gave a program including a new work, Le Tombeau de Ravel, by Rudolf Escher, and the D major Concerto by Falla. The Nederlandes Kamerkoor, under Felix de Nobel, presented several morning concerts, one devoted to Lassus, the second to works by des Pres, Frank Martin, Hindemith, Joaquin Rodrigo, Spanish composer (b. 1902) and Marius Flothuis. The Bach Verenigung was heard in a Bach-Handel program at St. Jon's Church, Gouda, and Bach's B minor Mass at the Cathedral in Naarden. Four lieder recitals at the Diligentia were by de los Angeles, including Falla's Canciones; Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, in a Wolf program; Laurens Bogtman, in songs by Martin, Moussorgsky, Fauré and Chabrier; and Fischer-Dieskau in Schubert's Winterreise. In the ballet field, we had performances by the Grand Ballet du Marquis de Cuevas, Ram Gopal and his Indian dancers and musicians, a National Dance Group from Greece, and Roland Petit with his Ballet de Paris. Every man, Hofmannsthal's Der Schwierige an Shakespeare's Tempest were the dramatic offerings.



A SCENE FROM MEDEA, dance drama with music by Samuel Barber, American composer, recently produced by the Cologne Opera, with Lisa Czobel dancing the title role.

MUNICH FESTIVAL PRODUCES RARE OPERAS

By Gisella Selden-Goth

MUNICH.—The Munich Opera Festival covers the same period as that at Bayreuth, but there is little competition between the two. They aim to attract the same international public which visits Bavaria in the summer. Munich offers works carried over from the winter repertory. The casts are local ones, with occasional addition of foreign singers. In Meistersinger, Ferdinand Frantz as Hans Sachs was particularly effective. But the old-fashioned and uninspired stagecraft and mediocre orchestra are less rewarding.

While Bayreuth has Wagner and Salzburg its Mozart as patron saints, Munich has sought to specialize in Richard Strauss—a not illogical idea, since that composer's father played French horn in the orchestra here for nearly half a century and his famous son was born here and died in the nearby mountain resort of Garmisch. This is laudable, but certainly such dated or rather weak operas as Arabella and Capriccio made a poor showing in their proximity to the powerful Elektra, in spite of some occasionally quite beautiful "Straussian" music. In the casts the charming soprano Lisa della Casa (joining the "Met" soon) excelled as Arabella.

Orff's Antigonae Is Powerful

The notable contemporary musical organization of Munich, Musica Viva, may have inspired the inclusion in the festival roster of Carl Orff's Antigonae. One of the leading composers of modern Germany, also esteemed as a theorist, educator and artist of universal culture, he writes the highly sophisticated librettos of his own works. Though the artfully primitive way in which he sets them to music is often subject to controversy, one cannot deny him originality.

Orff's music to Hoelderlin's wonderful German version of Sophocles' tragedy is written for a curiously barbaric orchestra, one without violins, and adding a clangorous instrument, the trautonium, to its already greatly enriched percussion battery. The orchestra underlines with sparse but all the more terrific outbursts the bloody feuds of Oedipus' descendants, while on the other hand it paints a fantastic and shadowy accompaniment for the archaic, and often only recited, arias and choruses.

The production of the one enormous act lasting two and a half hours is novel and imaginative, with inventive abstract staging. It proved one of the festival highlights. Gerhard Lenssen, the Dresden conductor, Heinz Arnold as stage director, and Helmut Juergens as designer, worked together with close understanding to realize the symbolic dream-world of Orff's dramatic conception. The chorus had been remarkably well coached by Herbert Erlenwein for its difficult task, which requires expert mastery of declamation. The exalted Antigonae of Christel Goltz and the monumental Kreon of Henrich Pfanzl maintained a high level in the solo parts.

Werner Egk Works Produced

Much less acclaim was awarded to the attempt to add a modern ballet bill to the program. The one-act scores by Werner Egk, The Chinese Nightingale, and Joan of Zarissa, represented the work of one of the composers sponsored by Musica Viva, but these productions did not prove too interesting. This was in part owing to the insufficiency of the Munich Opera ballet, whose lack of charm and precision were disappointing. Although possessing several accomplished soloists, the ensemble has been little touched as yet by the new afflatus in the other fields of German theatre art.

The festival also included one performance of Pfitzner's Palestrina, written forty years ago, now seldom given in Germany and not at all elsewhere, though considered by many to rank among the great music dramas of our century. The exacting role of Palestrina was sung and acted with conviction by Julius Patzak. Robert Heger conducted an orchestra which lacked the requisite delicacy in sound for a perfect realization.

Calls U. S. Vocal Standards "Best"

Present-day vocal standards are higher today in the United States than in Europe, according to Dr. Andrea Palestrina, voice teacher of New York and Hollywood, who recently returned from two years spent in teaching activities abroad.

He related that as a result of studies of musical conditions in England, France, Belgium, Italy and Austria (while singers appearing there are also heard in Germany and Spain on their tours) he feels confident that his findings apply generally to the European scene.

"The consensus of opinion, I found," said Dr. Palestrina, "is that the best voices and musical training today can be had in the United States. Neither America's territory nor her cultural life were more than superficially disturbed by the results of World War Two. She also benefited by the influx of some of Europe's best teachers and artists, who came here at the beginning of the war and have remained ever since.

"In Europe, on the other hand, many established schools of music were closed, musical conceptions in singing and other fields became more and more loosely defined and many of the great opera houses were bombed out. A new standard of singing was established which has become the present-day European tradition, based on quick and often slipshod productions, presented in any theatre available, suitable to the tastes of the changing occupation forces and the war-disturbed civilian population, who spent a few hours of escape in these houses in order to forget the drabness of life in wartime Europe. The artists, in order to earn their bread under hard conditions, jumped into the breach and turned out music like sausages.

"Thus developed what has become, with a little polishing, the present European 'tradition' in the world of song. This has little to offer in comparison with the great ideals of singing so carefully nurtured from the 18th to the beginning of the 20th centuries, and even earlier. At the same time there was a change in the quality of some of the personnel engaged in the administration and direction of music. In some instances, instead of having a broad and rich cultural background, the managers of today were appointed on the basis of their having political approval because of admirable war records, and their qualifications to be an impresario often leave much to be desired. This, of course, is not true of every operatic or other manager; there are notable exceptions.

"On the other hand, the new generations of artists that have grown up in the United States, when they come to Europe, often set the musical world there on its ears, and in many cases create sensations.

"New" Standards Abroad

"This does not always win more than a grudging admission of their merits, however, from some European managers. When I discussed the triumph of one of the greatest singers of our day—unanimous with press and public—with a director of one of Europe's important opera houses, he said that 'the success of this artist passed all expectations of the management, but he sings in the style of Caruso, which is a little old-fashioned, and which I personally do not like.' When I objected that the press and the public should be the judge of an artist's value, and that in Italy they still sing in this manner, I was astounded to hear him reply, 'In Italy, too, it is only a question of time before the new tradition will take hold.' Such a conversation, I think, is self-explanatory.

"Many European singers who were much heralded have recently sung in America with lukewarm success both with the press and public. When I heard these artists in Europe before they left for their tours of the U. S., I discovered that their reception was equally tepid there. On the other hand, many American singers in Europe have been idolized."

Dr. Palestrina recommended that singers train and prepare themselves for assuming roles in this country, and then go to Europe for the thing it now chiefly has to offer—"many opera houses and the chance for a lot of performances, to gain experience in the field. If a singer is properly prepared," he concluded, "even certain environmental influences that have been responsible for the decadence of the present generation of European vocal artists need not seriously affect him."

TANGLEWOOD

(Continued from page 8)

ing given the Sibelius Symphony No. 4. This brooding, understated work has never been a crowd-pleaser, a fact which does not prevent it from being a masterly creation. The conductor's way with the Brahms Second Symphony laid too much stress on each individual phrase to achieve solid, over-all flow.

To close the weekend, series and festival, Munch gave us more of his fine Schubert, some well-done Wagner and Ravel, with Seymour Lipkin an effective soloist in the Left-hand Concerto, and with the strains of La Valse to send the customers home happy.

West Shore Concerts for 1953-4

ROCKY RIVER, OHIO.—The West Shore Concerts in 1953-4, under Frederick Koch, musical director, will be held on Monday evenings in the Rocky River High School Auditorium, and include the following: Sept. 28, Cleveland Little Symphony, under Louis Lane; Jeanne Douttiel, 17, violinist, soloist; Oct. 26, Arthur Loesser, pianist; Nov. 30, Carl Bobbish and Frederick Koch, duo-pianists, assisting by strings and horn from Cleveland Orchestra; Jan. 18, Joan Terr, pianist, and William Martin, tenor; Feb. 15, Mildred Miller, Metropolitan mezzo-soprano; March 29, Cleveland Philharmonic Orchestra, under F. Karl Grossman. A new commissioned work by a young Cleveland composer will be heard at the opening concert, and each will include some contemporary music.

Workshops for members will be held in chamber music, vocal works, music appreciation, and art survey.

CARL FISCHER
Concert Hall

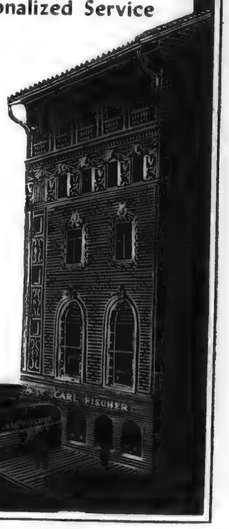
AIR CONDITIONED

Superior Acoustics
Expert Lighting
Professional Stage
Flexible Seating
Beautiful Decor
Personalized Service

Ideal for Concerts, Debuts, Recitals, Forums, Master Classes, Theatrical Readings. Perfect for Auditions, Recording Sessions, Orchestral and Choral Rehearsals.

Important groups meeting here include:

Collegium Musicum
Community Concerts
League of Composers
Little Orchestra Society
National Guild of Piano Teachers
National Music League
New York Flute Club
New York Singing Teachers' Association
Oratorio Society of New York
Society of the Classic Guitar



Managed by
CONCERT HALL BUREAU
165 West 57th Street, New York 19
Plaza 7-2027

[74]

as the tenor soloist. Bluebeard's Castle by Bartok had a revival under his baton, with Norman Scott as Bluebeard, revealing a fine voice but missing some of the tension of the role, and Martha Lipton as Judith showing much dramatic feeling. Dorati's interpretation was beyond all praise.

Elmendorff conducted the Residentie, with Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau as baritone soloist in Mahler's Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen, sung with musical and poetic mastery. There was a local premiere of the Second Symphony by K. A. Hartmann, lasting only 15 minutes, but showing touching episodes, despite some excesses in expression and overwhelming use of percussion. Paul Klecki conducted the same orchestra in a novelty for the Netherlands, the Primo Concerto per Orchestra by the Italian Goffredo Petrassi, cleverly composed and with charming invention in the Adagio, though the third part has little inspiration. Clara Haskil appeared as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto.

The two orchestras gave closing concerts. That by the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam presented Eugene Ormandy in his Dutch debut (he also led three other Concertgebouw programs, one in Scheveningen). He proved a first class interpreter of the Mendelssohn "Italian" Symphony, and gave a magnificent reading of Hindemith's Mathis der Maler Symphony. Another novelty here was the Sixth Symphony of Prokofieff, revealingly presented.

The closing Residentie concert under Otterloo at the Kurhaus held Falla's El Amor Brujo suite, with Martha Lipton as a deeply dramatic soloist; Ravel's Valses Nobles et Sentimentales; the local premiere of the original Orchestermusik by Gottfried von Einem, and Liszt's A major concerto, finely played by Cor de Groot.

Other Concerts, Ballets and Dramas

Space does not permit detailed reports on the many other outstanding events, such as the Radio Philharmonic Orchestra's two concerts at Haarlem and The Hague, which included a series of seven variations by Dutch composers on the folksong, When It Rains in Winter, with contributions by Cor de Groot, Jurriaen Andriessen, Herman Strategier, Marius Flothuis, Sem Dresden, Karel Mengelberg, and Anthon van der Horst, performed under Eduard Flipse's direction; and Henk Badings' Psalmen-Symphonie, a composition of significance and beauty. Both works were written on commission from the Dutch Radio Union.

The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, under Karl Muenchinger, featured Bach's Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 in one splendid concert, though the Concertgebouw Hall was too large for such works. The Collegium Musicum Italicum, under Renato Fasano, gave a memorable concert of older Italian music by Vivaldi and his contemporaries, also a work by Rossini. The latter group also was heard in a Vivaldi program at Scheveningen. The sextet Alma Musica, of the Netherlands, gave a program including a new work, Le Tombeau de Ravel, by Rudolf Escher, and the D major Concerto by Falla. The Nederlandes Kamerkoor, under Felix de Nobel, presented several morning concerts, one devoted to Lassus, the second to works by des Pres, Frank Martin, Hindemith, Joaquin Rodrigo, Spanish composer (b. 1902) and Marius Flothuis. The Bach Verenigung was heard in a Bach-Handel program at St. Jon's Church, Gouda, and Bach's B minor Mass at the Cathedral in Naarden. Four lieder recitals at the Diligentia were by de los Angeles, including Falla's Canciones; Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, in a Wolf program; Laurens Bogtman, in songs by Martin, Moussorgsky, Fauré and Chabrier; and Fischer-Dieskau in Schubert's Winterreise. In the ballet field, we had performances by the Grand Ballet du Marquis de Cuevas, Ram Gopal and his Indian dancers and musicians, a National Dance Group from Greece, and Roland Petit with his Ballet de Paris. Every man, Hofmannsthal's Der Schwierige and Shakespeare's Tempest were the dramatic offerings.

A SCENE FROM MEDEA, dance drama with music by Samuel Barber, American composer, recently produced by the Cologne Opera, with Lisa Czobel dancing the title role.

MUNICH FESTIVAL PRODUCES RARE OPERAS

By Gisella Selden-Goth

MUNICH.—The Munich Opera Festival covers the same period as that at Bayreuth, but there is little competition between the two. They aim to attract the same international public which visits Bavaria in the summer. Munich offers works carried over from the winter repertory. The casts are local ones, with occasional addition of foreign singers. In Meistersinger, Ferdinand Frantz as Hans Sachs was particularly effective. But the old-fashioned and uninspired stagecraft and mediocre orchestra are less rewarding.

While Bayreuth has Wagner and Salzburg its Mozart as patron saints, Munich has sought to specialize in Richard Strauss—a not illogical idea, since that composer's father played French horn in the orchestra here for nearly half a century and his famous son was born here and died in the nearby mountain resort of Garmisch. This is laudable, but certainly such dated or rather weak operas as Arabella and Capriccio made a poor showing in their proximity to the powerful Elektra, in spite of some occasionally quite beautiful "Straussian" music. In the casts the charming soprano Lisa della Casa (joining the "Met" soon) excelled as Arabella.

Orff's Antigonae Is Powerful

The notable contemporary musical organization of Munich, Musica Viva, may have inspired the inclusion in the festival roster of Carl Orff's Antigonae. One of the leading composers of modern Germany, also esteemed as a theorist, educator and artist of universal culture, he writes the highly sophisticated librettos of his own works. Though the artfully primitive way in which he sets them to music is often subject to controversy, one cannot deny him originality.

Orff's music to Hoelderlin's wonderful German version of Sophocles' tragedy is written for a curiously barbaric orchestra, one without violins, and adding a clangorous instrument, the trautonium, to its already greatly enriched percussion battery. The orchestra underlines with sparse but all the more terrific outbursts the bloody feuds of Oedipus' descendants, while on the other hand it paints a fantastic and shadowy accompaniment for the archaic, and often only recited, arias and choruses.

The production of the one enormous act lasting two and a half hours is novel and imaginative, with inventive abstract staging. It proved one of the festival highlights. Gerhard Lenssen, the Dresden conductor, Heinz Arnold as stage director, and Helmut Juergens as designer, worked together with close understanding to realize the symbolic dream-world of Orff's dramatic conception. The chorus had been remarkably well coached by Herbert Erlenwein for its difficult task, which requires expert mastery of declamation. The exalted Antigonae of Christel Goltz and the monumental Kreon of Henrich Pfanzl maintained a high level in the solo parts.

Werner Egk Works Produced

Much less acclaim was awarded to the attempt to add a modern ballet bill to the program. The one-act scores by Werner Egk, The Chinese Nightingale, and Joan of Zarissa, represented the work of one of the composers sponsored by Musica Viva, but these productions did not prove too interesting. This was in part owing to the insufficiency of the Munich Opera ballet, whose lack of charm and precision were disappointing. Although possessing several accomplished soloists, the ensemble has been little touched as yet by the new afflatus in the other fields of German theatre art.

The festival also included one performance of Pfitzner's Palestrina, written forty years ago, now seldom given in Germany and not at all elsewhere, though considered by many to rank among the great music dramas of our century. The exacting role of Palestrina was sung and acted with conviction by Julius Patzak. Robert Heger conducted an orchestra which lacked the requisite delicacy in sound for a perfect realization.

Calls U. S. Vocal Standards "Best"

Present-day vocal standards are higher today in the United States than in Europe, according to Dr. Andrea Palestrina, voice teacher of New York and Hollywood, who recently returned from two years spent in teaching activities abroad.

He related that as a result of studies of musical conditions in England, France, Belgium, Italy and Austria (while singers appearing there are also heard in Germany and Spain on their tours) he feels confident that his findings apply generally to the European scene.

"The consensus of opinion, I found," said Dr. Palestrina, "is that the best voices and musical training today can be had in the United States. Neither America's territory nor her cultural life were more than superficially disturbed by the results of World War Two. She also benefited by the influx of some of Europe's best teachers and artists, who came here at the beginning of the war and have remained ever since.

"In Europe, on the other hand, many established schools of music were closed, musical conceptions in singing and other fields became more and more loosely defined and many of the great opera houses were bombed out. A new standard of singing was established which has become the present-day European tradition, based on quick and often slipshod productions, presented in any theatre available, suitable to the tastes of the changing occupation forces and the war-disturbed civilian population, who spent a few hours of escape in these houses in order to forget the drabness of life in wartime Europe. The artists, in order to earn their bread under hard conditions, jumped into the breach and turned out music like sausages.

"Thus developed what has become, with a little polishing, the present European 'tradition' in the world of song. This has little to offer in comparison with the great ideals of singing so carefully nurtured from the 18th to the beginning of the 20th centuries, and even earlier. At the same time there was a change in the quality of some of the personnel engaged in the administration and direction of music. In some instances, instead of having a broad and rich cultural background, the managers of today were appointed on the basis of their having political approval because of admirable war records, and their qualifications to be an impresario often leave much to be desired. This, of course, is not true of every operatic or other manager; there are notable exceptions.

"On the other hand, the new generations of artists that have grown up in the United States, when they come to Europe, often set the musical world there on its ears, and in many cases create sensations.

"New" Standards Abroad

"This does not always win more than a grudging admission of their merits, however, from some European managers. When I discussed the triumph of one of the greatest singers of our day—unanimous with press and public—with a director of one of Europe's important opera houses, he said that 'the success of this artist passed all expectations of the management, but he sings in the style of Caruso, which is a little old-fashioned, and which I personally do not like.' When I objected that the press and the public should be the judge of an artist's value, and that in Italy they still sing in this manner, I was astounded to hear him reply: 'In Italy, too, it is only a question of time before the new tradition will take hold.' Such a conversation, I think, is self-explanatory.

"Many European singers who were much heralded have recently sung in America with lukewarm success both with the press and public. When I heard these artists in Europe before they left for their tours of the U. S., I discovered that their reception was equally tepid there. On the other hand, many American singers in Europe have been idolized."

Dr. Palestrina recommended that singers train and prepare themselves for assuming roles in this country, and then go to Europe for the thing it now chiefly has to offer—"many opera houses and the chance for a lot of performances, to gain experience in the field. If a singer is properly prepared," he concluded, "even certain environmental influences that have been responsible for the decadence of the present generation of European vocal artists need not seriously affect him."

TANGLEWOOD

(Continued from page 8)

ing given the Sibelius Symphony No. 4. This brooding, understated work has never been a crowd-pleaser, a fact which does not prevent it from being a masterly creation. The conductor's way with the Brahms Second Symphony laid too much stress on each individual phrase to achieve solid, over-all flow.

To close the weekend, series and festival, Munch gave us more of his fine Schubert, some well-done Wagner and Ravel, with Seymour Lipkin an effective soloist in the Left-hand Concerto, and with the strains of La Valse to send the customers home happy.

West Shore Concerts for 1953-4

ROCKY RIVER, OHIO.—The West Shore Concerts in 1953-4, under Frederick Koch, musical director, will be held on Monday evenings in the Rocky River High School Auditorium, and include the following: Sept. 28, Cleveland Little Symphony, under Louis Lane; Jeanne Douttiel, 17, violinist, soloist; Oct. 26, Arthur Loesser, pianist; Nov. 30, Carl Bobbish and Frederick Koch, duo-pianists, assisting by strings and horn from Cleveland Orchestra; Jan. 18, Joan Terr, pianist, and William Martin, tenor; Feb. 15, Mildred Miller, Metropolitan mezzo-soprano; March 29, Cleveland Philharmonic Orchestra, under F. Karl Grossman. A new commissioned work by a young Cleveland composer will be heard at the opening concert, and each will include some contemporary music.

Workshops for members will be held in chamber music, vocal works, music appreciation, and art survey.

CARL FISCHER
Concert Hall

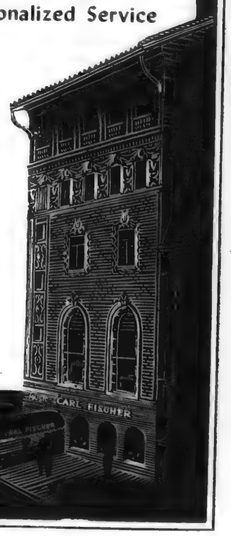
AIR CONDITIONED

Superior Acoustics
Expert Lighting
Professional Stage
Flexible Seating
Beautiful Decor
Personalized Service

Ideal for Concerts, Debuts, Recitals, Forums, Master Classes, Theatrical Readings. Perfect for Auditions, Recording Sessions, Orchestral and Choral Rehearsals.

Important groups meeting here include:

Collegium Musicum
Community Concerts
League of Composers
Little Orchestra Society
National Guild of Piano Teachers
National Music League
New York Flute Club
New York Singing Teachers' Association
Oratorio Society of New York
Society of the Classic Guitar



Managed by
CONCERT HALL BUREAU
165 West 57th Street, New York 19
Plaza 7-2027

[74]

Music in Review

BY TUCKER KEISER

'Romeo and Juliet'

LENOX, Aug. 7—Before an audience estimated at 7500, Charles Munch opened the second week end of music in the Berkshire Festival tonight with a engrossing reading of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," a score that uses to the fullest the large musical forces available at Tanglewood.

This work is the historical link between Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and the music dramas of Richard Wagner.

Last winter Mr. Munch made telling effects in his conducting of the same score in Symphony Hall, but his performance tonight was a more penetrating and polished one. The conductor's conception has grown; there is now a unity which was missing when I last heard him play the piece. The orchestra was more relaxed, and the chorus has a full bodied sound, missing last winter. Mr. Munch was helped in no small manner by a superb trio of soloists.

The two singers from the Metropolitan Opera singing the solo roles were Jennie Tourel, an opulent voiced mezzo-soprano, and Nicola Moscona, a suave voiced bass. Joining Mr. Moscona and Miss Tourel was John McCollum, a student this season at Tanglewood. Mr. McCollum is emerging with each appearance as an artist of first rate potentialities. His Queen Mab aria in the prologue showed that in addition to having a beautifully trained voice, the tenor possesses a flair for dramatics as well.

Berlioz called "Romeo and Juliet" a dramatic symphony. Despite the operatic and oratorio elements in the work, it remains symphonic in form. The composer divides the symphony in two major parts. Taking his cue from Shakespeare, the first part, which is on the short side, becomes a prologue. Here the listener is introduced to the themes which will become so important in Part Two, and the listener is given a summary of the story.

The second part follows the four-movement symphonic scheme. The initial section, an allegro, shows Romeo's sadness in the midst of a ball. The second section, a scherzo, a musical interpretation of the Queen Mab speech sung in the prologue, the third a funeral march for the two lovers, and the final section, a finale, portrays the reconciliation of the two families by Friar Lawrence.

To say that this was a perfect performance would simply be untrue; there were several bad entrances, whooped-up tempos, and a forgotten cue on the part of the conductor to the chorus and the harp at the end of Miss Tourell's solo. However, the over-all effect, the immense feeling imparted, and the grand design more than made up for these minor slips.

Mr. Munch divides the work, not in the logical place at the end of part one, but after the Queen Mab scherzo. This brings intermission at the customary half way mark, but it disturbs the formal and emotional balance.

Incidentally, Mr. Munch, who enjoys singing along as he conducts, was in excellent voice.

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

Lenox Festival

LENOX, Aug. 9—After an emotionally powerful Koussevitzky memorial concert Saturday night under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, any program which followed it Sunday afternoon must be something of an anti-climax. Mr. Munch wisely chose a quiet program for today's concert with the exception of one piece, "Don Quixote" by Richard Strauss. In this work we heard Gregor Piatigorsky as the cello soloist.

The concert began with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B-major. Not as well known as the "Unfinished" or the "Great" in C major, the symphony is a joyous piece constructed along the classical lines of Haydn and Mozart and uses the same instrumentation with the exception of trumpets and drums. There is not much development in the German symphonic tradition, but in its place we have typically Schubertian continuous song. Mr. Munch led the orchestra though a somewhat mannered but agreebly pleasant paced performance.

Although Samuel Barber is a prolific composer, the adagio f strings turns up time and tin again on our symphony program. Originally a slow movement in his Quartet in B Minor, the adagio has a decided romantic flavor. However, its clarity of detail, its economy of means sets it apart from the flambouyant compositions which bear the romantic label.

In Mr. Barber's work, the conductor allowed his marvelous string section one of its rare opportunities to sing with a richness in sound associated with the Boston Symphony in the past. And what is more the conductor held himself in hand through the soul wrenching measures and did not let the music overthrow his emotional equilibrium.

In both Strauss' "Don Quixote" and in the Milhaud Cello Concerto No. 1 in F which followed after intermission, Mr. Piatigorsky was given admirable support. Joseph De Pasquale, the first violist of the Boston Symphony played the brief viola solo parts in the "Don Quixote."

Little need be said about Mr. Piatigorsky's "Don Quixote" except that it remains the best performance of that score today.

More than 11,000 Hear Concert at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10—An audience of more than 11,000, largest of the year, Saturday night gave Leonard Bernstein a standing ovation at the conclusion of a magnificent performance of the Mahler second Symphony in the music shed at Tanglewood. Sharing the plaudits with the youthful maestro were Jennie Tourel, contralto and Theresa Green, soprano, the Berkshire festival mixed chorus and the members of the Boston Symphony orchestra who played individually and collectively in mid-winter season form.

The lengthy Mahler opus, seldom hear in its entirety, provided orchestra, soloists, chorus and conductor with a rich if over-lengthy fare which at all times maintained a high level of quality and occasionally soared to great heights.

Prefacing the major work of the evening, as the first part of the annual Koussevitsky memorial program, were the "Khovanstchina" prelude of Moussorgsky and the "Sheherazade" of Ravel, the latter providing Miss Tourel with a further opportunity to demonstrate her lude by Moussorgsky, three "poems" by Ravel and the tremendous Mahler second symphony. The youthful Bernstein received a standing ovation at the concert's end.

* * *

The goings on at Tanglewood are not in competition with similar activities in the TSV or in other cultural and recreational centers of the region. The Berkshire festival has become, in its relatively short life, an American Salzburg, a sort of tradition or inspiration.

I can recall a pre-World War II festival concert in the tent at Tanglewood, before the days of the music shed. The program was all Wagner. The weather was violent.

As the concert began, thunder rolled ominously in the distance. In the humid heat strings in the fiddle section were popping like corks at a Hollywood wedding. Presently a gentle rain could be heard pattering on the lofty big top. Gradually the rain increased, and with it the noise. Finally it was so loud that Koussevitzky halted the proceedings and gave Nature the baton.

Half an hour later the rain, and apparently the thunder, had vanished leaving a sodden silence in and around the tent.

The maestro patiently brought his men to order and the music began again. Suddenly the tent began to sway and flutter, thunder crashed and lightning flashes penetrated the gloom of the tent. The music stopped.

That violent Wagnerian afternoon probably did more to build the costly music shed than any other single event. The future of the festival looked dim as long as weather could play such an unwelcome role in the sound effects.

* * *

Popularity has brought other problems to Tanglewood, but they are neither violent nor insurmountable. One of stickiest is traffic. The winding Berkshire roads were never intended for heavy automobile traffic. The festival fathers have done their best, the state and local police have added theirs, but still Tanglewood's parking area, after a concert in the shed is a bad place for an impatient man with a tendency towards appoplexy.

In an effort to warn and guide people about this problem, the festival programs contain an entry that might sensibly be applied to other pursuits than concert-going.

The warning can be summed up in the words of the paragraph headings: 1, Follow the Tanglewood Signs. 2, Come Early. 3, Stay Late. 4, Have Patience.

clean technique.

H. T. S.

. . . Summer Symphony

By Howard T. Swain

Twi[illegible] Valley—not far by telescope—an impressive [illegible] of July and August. This is provided by concerts of the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, wood, 80 to 100 feet high, over all of Claremont's Broad either edge of it and you would have a reasonable facsimile

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Albany, N.Y., Wed., Aug. 12, 1953

Berkshire Festival Lists 3 Concluding Concerts

Tre Berkshire Festival will be concluded this weekend with concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The predicted 150,000 season's attenrance, including the festival concerts and 38 demonstrations and concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, will shatter all records for the festival.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon and Leonard Bernstein Saturday nigrt.

Brahm's Friday Night

Friday night's concert will be given over to Brahms' "German Requiem" for chorus and soloists. Lois Marshall, Canadian Soprano, and William Warfield, will be soloists and t he Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will participate.

Mr. Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez at Saturday night's program, which also will include symphonies by Sibelius and Brahms.

At Sunday's concert Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand. Works of Schubert, Chabriet and Wagner also will be performed.

'Tanglewood on Parade'

The concluding concerts will be preceded by "Tanglewood on Parade," a gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Thursday commencing at 6 p. m. The Music Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school of music.

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of the benefit program.

Scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will be presented with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists.

LOIS MARSHALL

NORWALK HOUR, NORWALK, CONN
SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1953

19 STATE MUSICIANS STUDY THIS YEAR AT TANGLEWOOD SCHOOL

Students from 41 states and eleven foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. The institution was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, under Serge Koussevitsky, its music director, and is now in its eleventh six-week session lasting through the end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 16.

The current enrollment of 400 students represents a cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music and opera under a distinguished faculty which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston Orchestra. The symphony's music directcor, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

Nineteen of the students come from Connecticut and there are nineteen foreign students enrolled. Former students are now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia.

Tanglewood on Parade, which was presented on Thursday, which featured Isaac Stern, violinist, Leontyne Price, soprano, baritone and William Warfield, baritone, as stars, moved the 1953 season in the Berkshires toward's its end. A considerable number of Norwalkers are planning to be present for the finale on Sunday, which features a program by Schubert, Chabrier, and Wagner, with Charles Munch conducting.

[75]

Music in Review

BY TUCKER KEISER

'Romeo and Juliet'

LENOX, Aug. 7—Before an audience estimated at 7500, Charles Munch opened the second week end of music in the Berkshire Festival tonight with a engrossing reading of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," a score that uses to the fullest the large musical forces available at Tanglewood.

This work is the historical link between Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and the music dramas of Richard Wagner.

Last winter Mr. Munch made telling effects in his conducting of the same score in Symphony Hall, but his performance tonight was a more penetrating and polished one. The conductor's conception has grown; there is now a unity which was missing when I last heard him play the piece. The orchestra was more relaxed, and the chorus has a full bodied sound, missing last winter. Mr. Munch was helped in no small manner by a superb trio of soloists.

The two singers from the Metropolitan Opera singing the solo roles were Jennie Tourel, an opulent voiced mezzo-soprano, and Nicola Moscona, a suave voiced bass. Joining Mr. Moscona and Miss Tourel was John McCollum, a student this season at Tanglewood. Mr. McCollum is emerging with each appearance as an artist of first rate potentialities. His Queen Mab aria in the prologue showed that in addition to having a beautifully trained voice, the tenor possesses a flair for dramatics as well.

Berlioz called "Romeo and Juliet" a dramatic symphony. Despite the operatic and oratorio elements in the work, it remains symphonic in form. The composer divides the symphony in two major parts. Taking his cue from Shakespeare, the first part, which is on the short side, becomes a prologue. Here the listener is introduced to the themes which will become so important in Part Two, and the listener is given a summary of the story.

The second part follows the four-movement symphonic scheme. The initial section, an allegro, shows Romeo's sadness in the midst of a ball. The second section, a scherzo, a musical interpretation of the Queen Mab speech sung in the prologue, the third a funeral march for the two lovers, and the final section, a finale, portrays the reconciliation of the two families by Friar Lawrence.

To say that this was a perfect performance would simply be untrue; there were several bad entrances, whooped-up tempos, and a forgotten cue on the part of the conductor to the chorus and the harp at the end of Miss Tourell's solo. However, the over-all effect, the immense feeling imparted, and the grand design more than made up for these minor slips.

Mr. Munch divides the work, not in the logical place at the end of part one, but after the Queen Mab scherzo. This brings intermission at the customary half way mark, but it disturbs the formal and emotional balance.

Incidentally, Mr. Munch, who enjoys singing along as he conducts, was in excellent voice.

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

Lenox Festival

LENOX, Aug. 9—After an emotionally powerful Koussevitzky memorial concert Saturday night under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, any program which followed it Sunday afternoon must be something of an anti-climax. Mr. Munch wisely chose a quiet program for today's concert with the exception of one piece, "Don Quixote" by Richard Strauss. In this work we heard Gregor Piatigorsky as the cello soloist.

The concert began with Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in B-major. Not as well known as the "Unfinished" or the "Great" in C major, the symphony is a joyous piece constructed along the classical lines of Haydn and Mozart and uses the same instrumentation with the exception of trumpets and drums. There is not much development in the German symphonic tradition, but in its place we have typically Schubertian continuous song. Mr. Munch led the orchestra though a somewhat mannered but agreebly pleasant paced performance.

Although Samuel Barber is a prolific composer, the adagio for strings turns up time and time again on our symphony programs. Originally a slow movement in his Quartet in B Minor, the adagio has a decided romantic flavor. However, its clarity of detail, its economy of means sets it apart from the flambouyant compositions which bear the romantic label.

In Mr. Barber's work, the conductor allowed his marvelous string section one of its rare opportunities to sing with a richness in sound associated with the Boston Symphony in the past. And what is more the conductor held himself in hand through the soul wrenching measures and did not let the music overthrow his emotional equilibrium.

In both Strauss' "Don Quixote" and in the Milhaud Cello Concerto No. 1 in F which followed after intermission, Mr. Piatigorsky was given admirable support. Joseph De Pasquale, the first violist of the Boston Symphony played the brief viola solo parts in the "Don Quixote."

Little need be said about Mr. Piatigorsky's "Don Quixote" except that it remains the best performance of that score today.

Garcia, who coasted to his 14th victory behind a 93 score.

Stan Musial rapped his 17th home run with a teammate on base in the seventh to help the St. Louis Cardinals defeat the New York Giants 6-2 for a sweep of the three-game series.

Ralph Kiner blasted his 28th round-tripper to lead the Chicago Cubs to a second game 6-5 victory after the Philadelphia Phillies had won the opener 7-0.

Duke Snider clouted his 33rd four-bagger with the bases loaded as the National League-leading Brooklyn Dodgers crushed the Philadelphia	59	47	.557	11

St. Louis	59	47	.557	11
New York	53	52	.505	16½
Cincinnati	49	61	.445	23

Twin State Telescope

. . . Summer Symphony

By Howard T. Swain

Three hours or so from the Twin State Valley—not far by telescope—an impressive spectacle unfolds 15 times during the [illegible] of July and August. This is provided by the Boston Symphony orchestra concerts of the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Throw a roof of steel and wood, 80 to 100 feet high, over all of Claremont's Broad Street park and the streets on either edge of it and you would have a reasonable facsimile of the Tanglewood music shed.

Spread a lawn, 100 yards long, across the wide end of the fan outside the shed and you have the "bleachers." On an average night the shed is filled with 6000 people. Crowds on the lawn outside vary with the weather. Last Saturday night 5500 bleacherites brought the audience total to 11,500.

The current Berkshire festival —the 14th since the Boston orchestra first participated — has been the most successful. Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein have conducted the principal concerts of the season which ends this week end. Last Saturday Bernstein conducted the concert, a memorial for his one-time mentor, the late Serge Koussevitzky. There was a prelude by Moussorgsky, three "poems" by Ravel and the tremendous Mahler second symphony. The youthful Bernstein received a standing ovation at the concert's end.

* * *

The goings on at Tanglewood are not in competition with similar activities in the TSV or in other cultural and recreational centers of the region. The Berkshire festival has become, in its relatively short life, an American Salzburg, a sort of tradition or inspiration.

I can recall a pre-World War II festival concert in the tent at Tanglewood, before the days of the music shed. The program was all Wagner. The weather was violent.

As the concert began, thunder rolled ominously in the distance. In the humid heat strings in the fiddle section were popping like corks at a Hollywood wedding. Presently a gentle rain could be heard pattering on the lofty big top. Gradually the rain increased, and with it the noise. Finally it was so loud that Koussevitzky halted the proceedings and gave Nature the baton.

Half an hour later the rain, and apparently the thunder, had vanished leaving a sodden silence in and around the tent.

The maestro patiently brought his men to order and the music began again. Suddenly the tent began to sway and flutter, thunder crashed and lightning flashes penetrated the gloom of the tent. The music stopped.

That violent Wagnerian afternoon probably did more to build the costly music shed than any other single event. The future of the festival looked dim as long as weather could play such an unwelcome role in the sound effects.

* * *

Popularity has brought other problems to Tanglewood, but they are neither violent nor insurmountable. One of stickiest is traffic. The winding Berkshire roads were never intended for heavy automobile traffic. The festival fathers have done their best, the state and local police have added theirs, but still Tanglewood's parking area, after a concert in the shed is a bad place for an impatient man with a tendency towards appoplexy.

In an effort to warn and guide people about this problem, the festival programs contain an entry that might sensibly be applied to other pursuits than concert-going.

The warning can be summed up in the words of the paragraph headings: 1, Follow the Tanglewood Signs. 2, Come Early. 3, Stay Late. 4, Have Patience.

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Albany, N.Y., Wed., Aug. 12, 1953

Berkshire Festival Lists 3 Concluding Concerts

Tre Berkshire Festival will be concluded this weekend with concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The predicted 150,000 season's attenrance, including the festival concerts and 38 demonstrations and concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, will shatter all records for the festival.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon and Leonard Bernstein Saturday nigrt.

Brahm's Friday Night

Friday night's concert will be given over to Brahms' "German Requiem" for chorus and soloists. Lois Marshall, Canadian Soprano, and William Warfield, will be soloists and t he Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will participate.

Mr. Bernstein will feature the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez at Saturday night's program, which also will include symphonies by Sibelius and Brahms.

At Sunday's concert Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be soloist in the Ravel Concerto for the Left Hand. Works of Schubert, Chabriet and Wagner also will be performed.

'Tanglewood on Parade'

The concluding concerts will be preceded by "Tanglewood on Parade," a gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Thursday commencing at 6 p. m. The Music Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school of music.

The world premieres of "Bad Boys in School," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, and of "A Little Boy Lost," a cantata by Allen Sapp, will be features of the benefit program.

Scenes from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will be presented with Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists.

LOIS MARSHALL

WALK HOUR, NORWALK, CONN
SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1953

19 STATE MUSICIANS STUDY THIS YEAR AT TANGLEWOOD SCHOOL

Students from 41 states and eleven foreign countries are enrolled this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the country's only school of music maintained by a major orchestra. The institution was established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940, under Serge Koussevitsky, its music director, and is now in its eleventh six-week session lasting through the end of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 16.

The current enrollment of 400 students represents a cross-section of advanced music students, teachers and professional musicians, who work in the divisions of orchestra playing and conducting, chamber music and opera under a distinguished faculty which includes such outstanding musicians as Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Carlos Chavez, Boris Goldovsky, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Paul Ulanowsky, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll and first chair players of the Boston Orchestra. The symphony's music diretcor, Charles Munch, is director of the school, and Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

Nineteen of the students come from Connecticut and there are nineteen foreign students enrolled. Former students are now scattered through the U. S., Canada, South America, Europe and Australia.

Tanglewood on Parade, which was presented on Thursday, which featured Isaac Stern, violinist, Leontyne Price, soprano, baritone and William Warfield, baritone, as stars, moved the 1953 season in the Berkshires toward's its end. A considerable number of Norwalkers are planning to be present for the finale on Sunday, which features a program by Schubert, Chabrier, and Wagner, with Charles Munch conducting.

[75]

EXAMINER-RECORDER

"Greene County's First and Foremost Newspaper"

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Catskill, N. Y., July 30, 1953

With Charles Munch conducting the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evening, July 31 and August 1 at 8:30 p. m. and Pierre Monteux as guest conductor on Sunday afternoon, August 2 at 2:30, the major series of the Berkshire Festival opens in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Concert goers who are not fortunate enough to have reserved seats can purchase general admissions for $2.00 on the day of the concert, picnic on the grounds which open at 6 p. m. on concert evenings and at 12:30 on Sundays, and listen to the music under a tree, or under the stars, as the case may be.

Three innovations mark this year's series; the change from Thursday evening to Friday evening concerts; moving up the afternoon hour to 2:30 from 3:00; and the broadcast of the first half of the Sunday programs over CBS from Tanglewood.

The public Saturday morning rehearsals at 10 a. m. are to be continued this year and are very good fun. Because of their informality and frequent breaks. They furnish a fine opportunity to introduce children to a symphony orchestra. Admission to the rehearsals is $1.

Weekend Programs at Tanglewood

Friday, July 31, 8:30 p. m., Charles Munch

- Beethoven Overture to "Leonore," No. 3
- Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E Minor (Soloist: Zino Francescatti)
- Copland "Appalachian Spring"
- Ravel "Bolero"

Saturday, August 1, 8:30 p. m., Charles Munch

- Schumann Overture to "Manfred"
- Foss Piano Concerto No. 2 (Composer as Soloist)
- Mendelssohn Symphony No. 4, "Italian"
- Hindemith Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber

Sunday, August 2, 2:30 p. m. Pierre Monteux

- Tchaikovsky Serenade for Strings
- Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 5, in E Minor
- Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1, in F-flat minor (Soloist Jorge Bolet)

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953

MUSICIANS TO RETIRE—Hippolyte Droeghmans (left), cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1927, and Raymond Allard (right), who joined the orchestra in 1922 as bassoonist, are presented gold watches by Director Charles Munch on the occasion of their retirement, effective at the Sunday close of the Berkshire Festival.

Catskill, N. Y., August 13, 1953

Players and Pipers . . .

by John and Betty Bagley

The eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, starred in the Tanglewood Sunday concert with a mellow and easy performance in Darius Milhaud's first cello concerto and in the Richard Strauss "Don Quixote." Composed in 1934, the concerto is light and almost jazzy in its rhythmic structure and melody, captivating even on a first hearing. The cello part in the tragi-comedy of the Spanish lunatic, Don Quixote, is more subsurvient to the whole orchestra, but still worthy of Mr. Piatigorsky's talent. Joseph de Pasquale, first violinist of the orchestra, gave a fine performance of the solo in which the viola represents Sancho Panza.

"Don Quixote" was followed by the complete contrast of the brief, intensely personal, romantic and beautifully melodious "Adagio for String Orchestra," composed about 1935 by Samuel Barber, who was in the audience and received warm applause.

The concert ended with the "Bacchus et Ariane" ballet composed in 1930 by Albert Roussel, instead of the "Tannhaeuser" overture originally announced. The music vividly describes the colorful revels of Ariadne with the god after the departure of Theseus. Mr. Munch, who at times seems the calmest of conductors, showed in this number that he too can conduct with his whole body when the music demands it.

Preceding the modern music, Mr. Munch and the famous Boston strings, with the help of only a few wood-winds, gave a delightful performance of Schubert's Fifth Symphony. Written when the composer was under 20, this familiar and simple work was so charming as to be worth the full price of admission.

Sunday's concert again reminded us of the superiority of a live performance to any recorded or broadcast music. Familiar with "Don Quixote' only by machine, we found the concert-hall performance much more entertaining and the new compositions more fascinating than they would have been coming through a cone.

The Tanglewood season closes with a full week of activity. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit program, goes on Thursday (rain or shine), opening at 5:45 with simultaneous sessions in the shed and in the Theatre-Concert Hall. From 7:15 to 8:15 time for a lawn party and picnic supper is provided, followed by the evening program including Handel's Water Music, Beetnoven's violin concerto, and Act II of Porgy and Bess with Leonard Bernstine conducting and Leontyne Price and William Warfield as soloists. Drawing for 40 door prizes and waltzing on the lawn conclude the events. Tickets $5, $4, and $3. General admission $2.50.

Friday - Aug. 14, 8:30 - Brahms German Requiem with Lois Marshall, William Warfield and Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Saturday - Aug. 15, 8:30 - Leonard Bernstein conducting Sibelius' Symphony No. 4; Chavez Sinfonia India; and Brahms' Symphony No. 2.

Sunday - August 16 at 2:30 - Charles Munch conducting, Schubert Symphony in B minor (unfinished); Chabrier Bourree Fantasque; three Wagner numbers; Ravel Piano concerto for left hand with Seymour Lipkin; and Ravel's "La Valse."

Radio Théâtre Musique

100,000 personnes au Festival de Tanglewood

Un haut lieu musical en Nouvelle-Angleterre

(Tanglewood) — Dans quelques jours prendront fin les cours et les concerts d'été du Festival de Tanglewood, centre musical dirigé par Charles Munch et soutenu par l'orchestre symphonique de Boston. Pendant les six semaines du Festival, les concerts de fin de semaine donnés par cet orchestre et ceux présentés par les étudiants ont attiré une foule de 100,000 personnes venues de toutes les régions des Etats-Unis et de l'est du Canada. Si Tanglewood, dans sa 14e saison, obtient un tel succès, c'est qu'il ne s'agit pas seulement d'un centre musical, mais d'une haute institution culturelle qui ne trouve d'égal ou d'équivalent ni en Amérique ni en Europe et dont le rayonnement s'étend bien au-delà des Etats-Unis.

Influence de Koussevitsky

Serge Koussevitsky, le regretté directeur de l'orchestre symphonique de Boston, mort en 1950, à qui ne manquait ni le dynamisme ni l'ambition artistique quand il s'agissait du développement musical de la jeunesse, avait rêvé d'un centre d'art où les jeunes musiciens, plus particulièrement ceux se trouvant sur le seuil d'une carrière professionnelle, pourraient entrer en contact avec des maîtres éminents et travailler sous leur direction afin que cette rencontre élargisse leurs horizons d'interprètes et enrichissent leurs conceptions artistiques.

Le "Shed"

Ce projet s'est réalisé en 1940 quand l'immense propriété de Tanglewood au Massachussetts (dans le comté de Berkshire) fut généreusement offerte à l'orchestre de Boston. La résidence de ce splendide domaine dans les Montagnes Vertes de la Nouvelle-Angleterre a été transformée en salle de cours et de conférences. On a construit un amphithéâtre pour les spectacles lyriques et dramatiques, une petite salle pour les séances de musique de chambre et enfin, une vaste salle de concert (un chef d'oeuvre de salle!) unique en son genre pour [illegible] personnes. Le "Shed" (ainsi est appelée cette salle) est en forme de triangle arrondi à la base, et consiste en un toit soutenu par des piliers de telle sorte qu'ils n'obstruent pas la visibilité. L'absence de parois permet aux milliers de personnes qui ne trouvent pas de sièges sous le toit, de prendre place dans l'herbe, sous les étoiles. C'est dans cette salle, comble à chaque fois que l'orchestre de Boston donne ses concerts de fin de semaine. Tous les membres de l'orchestre demeurent à Tanglewood pendant les six semaines du festival et plusieurs d'entre eux font partie du corps enseignant pendant cette période.

Grands maîtres

Le centre musical de Berkshire (ou de Tanglewood, les deux noms sont employés indifféremment) a reçu cette année plus de 400 étudiants venus de 21 pays. Ils ont préparé et présenté devant le public 38 auditions musicales variant de l'opéra à la musique de chambre. Le désir que Koussevitsky avait manifesté à la création de ce centre, s'est réalisé. Olivier Messiaen, Paul Hindemith, Darius Milhaud, Jacques Ibert, Luigi Dallapiccola, Aaron Colpand ont été invités successivement à donner le cours de composition. Cette année le compositeur invité est Carlos Chavez du Mexique. Gregor Piatigorsky dirige la classe de musique de chambre et c'est Charles Munch qui enseigne la direction d'orchestre. La classe d'opéra et de mise en scène permet aux jeunes chanteurs et chanteuses de receuillir un riche enseignement et une très profitable expérience. Ils ont présenté dans les dernières années "Idoménée" et "La Finta Giardinera" de Mozart, "Peter Grimes" de Benjamin Britten (en première américaine), "Le Roi d'Yvetot" de Jacques Ibert et cette année "Richard Coeur-de-Lion" de Grétry ainsi que trois opéras en un acte dont "La Demoiselle Elue" de Debussy. Le but de ces cours n'est, comme l'expliquait son distingué fondateur, n'est pas d'entrer en concurrence avec l'enseignement privé ou celui des conservatoires mais de permettre le travail d'ensemble indispensable à la vraie formation musicale et qui est négligé ou quasi-impossible pendant la saison scolaire.

TROIS CONCERTS

Vendredi 8 août

Munch a dirigé en entier le "Roméo et Juliette" de Berlioz, symphonie dramatique avec choeurs et solos de chant. Les solistes étaient Jennie Tourel, contralto, Nicola Moscona, basse, et John McCollum, ténor, étudiant inscrit aux cours d'été de Tanglewood. L'orchestre y joue le rôle principal. Les voix, semblables à un narrateur, n'interviennent que pour rappeler quelques épisodes du drame de Shakespeare. Jamais ces voix ne sont celles des héros. Les choeurs étaient formés par les élèves des cours de vacances. Sous la compétente direction de Monsieur Munch, [illegible] symphonique renait avec un sang nouveau et des couleurs nouvelles. L'excellent acoustique du "Shed" explique partiellement la popularité de ces concerts.

Samedi, 9 août

Leonard Bernstein, brillant disciple de Munch, était au bâton ce soir (au pupitre plutôt, car il dirige sans bâton). Le programme: Le Prélude de "Khovanstchina" de Moussorgsky, Schéhérazade de Ravel et la 2e symphonie pour choeurs, solistes et orchestre de Mahler. Dès 7 h., les terrains ont commencé à se couvrir d'auditeurs et à 9 h., leur nombre avait atteint 7,000. Jennie Tourel a chanté avec beaucoup de grâce et de raffinement les trois poèmes de Tristan Klingsor: Asie, La flûte enchantée et l'Indifférent, mis en musique par Ravel. Avec fougue et maestria, Bernstein a dirigé, et de mémoire, l'oeuvre grandiose de Mahler dont la durée est de 90 minutes. Jennie Tourel était de nouveau soliste ainsi que Theresa Green, soprano de couleur. Les fluctuations de mouvement et de caractère à l'intérieur des 5 morceaux de cette symphonie, l'élément dramatique, les trouvailles orchestrales et la participation des choeurs et de solistes sont autant de facteurs qui contribuent à en soutenir l'intérêt, en atténuer la durée et la rendre accessible au grand public. L'ovation frénétique qu'a reçu cette symphonie démontre qu'un concert n'implique pas nécessairement un programme populaire et l'élimination systématique des oeuvres contemporaines. A la suite de cette impressionnante exécution, la médaille Bruckner a été offert à Leonard Bernstein par la société Bruckner.

Dimanche, 10 août

Charles Munch dirigeait de nouveau, cet après-midi, devant une salle comble et des terrains inondés d'auditeurs un programme radiodiffusé, comprenant des oeuvres de Schubert, Barber, Strauss, Milhaud et Roussel. Après la 5e symphonie de Schubert, l'adagio pour cordes de Samuel Barber (extrait de son quatuor à cordes) a été chaleureusement applaudie en présence de l'auteur. Gregor Piatigorsky a fait une brillante rentrée comme soliste, après quelques années d'absence, dans "Don Quichotte", variations fantastiques sur un thème au caractère chevaleresque de Richard Strauss. Les solos de viola étaient joués par Joseph de Pasquale, premier viola de l'orchestre de Boston. Piatigorsky a donné une interprétation très vive et fraîche du délicieux concerto pour violon celle de Darius Milhaud. Le concert s'est terminé avec la suite de ballet de Roussel "Bacchus et Ariane". La semaine prochaine, pour la première fois, une artiste canadienne participera aux concerts de Tanglewood. — Lois Marshall, soprano, chantera dans le "Requiem", de Brahms.

NOMBREUSES NATIONALITES AU FESTIVAL DE TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch (centre) directeur musical de l'Orchestre symphonique de Boston et directeur du centre musical de Berkshire, l'école d'été de musique entretenue par l'orchestre conjointement avec le Festival — en compagnie de quelques-uns des étudiants venant de tous les pays. De gauche à droite: le R. P. Michael Pfiotai, Budapest, Hongrie, maintenant professeur au Mount St. Joseph College, à Lackawana, N.Y.; Serge Blanc, Paris, premier violon de l'orchestre des étudiants; Lily Hsia, Shanghai, Chine, dans la classe de l'opéra; M. Munch; John Kin, Pusan, Corée, classe de direction d'orchestre; Juliette Rodrigue, Lachute, Qué., pianiste et organiste; Herbert Blomstedt, Stockholm, Suède, classe de direction d'orchestre.

(Photo John Brook, Boston)

FILMED AS BOUND

TIGHT BINDING

NDARD-TIMES, NEW BEDFORD, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1953

'German Requiem' Stirs Tanglewood Concert Crowd

By DONALD H. WHITE
Standard-Times Special Correspondent

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 15—The moving, noble measures of Brahms' Ein Deutsches Requiem (A German Requiem) opened last night the third and final series of concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra here at Tanglewood in the Berkshires.

Only work on the program, the requiem was given a magnificent reading by Charles Munch, conductor and director of the Berkshire Music Center's varied student and professional activities.

Would that Adolf Hitler had heeded the words of his own tongue that ennoble this work of almost sublime genius. The misguided pagan fuehrer could have profited greatly by the thundering tone of the words of Luther's bible: "But the word of the Lord abides forevermore." Nazi scourges have almost obliterated all existing traces of the once great German national art but the message of Brahms through his "German Requiem" endures after the neo-socialists have perished.

This work might be called a requiem for the German people, harrassed and dejected after political chaos. But the true German musical expression as illustrated so thrillingly in the Brahms opus is still with us in the form of a lasting heritage received from Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner and Strauss.

The requiem needs the services of a great orchestra, a specially skilled professional chorus, a virtuoso conductor, for its perfect realisation. These Tanglewood placed munificently at its disposal. No finer introduction to the abundant beauties of the Series C programs could have been chosen.

Lois Marshall, soprano, revealed a soaring, angelic voice of powerful beauty. Pure in intonation, clean in phrasing her moving solo lines. Brahms had a fine feeling for the female voice, his music is sympathetic to human limitations, unlike that of the later Wagner and Richard Strauss. This helps his vocal interpretors to greater success.

William Warfield, the Negro baritone who sang Porgy in Thursday's Tanglewood on parade offering of Gershwin's opera, was heard in the brief solo baritone part. His manly voice is not yet completely in rapport with the lieder style of the work but he manages to impart much of its lofty atmosphere. The powerful microphones of Hollywood are absent at Tanglewood, however. From his work in the film of "Show Boat," we expected perhaps a more powerful tone. But this singer is dedicated visually to high artistic ideals. That is the important thing.

One could not help but recall the spirit of Serge Koussevitzky, who brought this orchestra to its present glorious fulfillment. We were touched by the thought of his distinguished figure on the podium, his endearing mannerisms, his unique and unswerving devotion to great art.

The final words of the "German Requiem"—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord . . . they rest from their labors . . . their works follow after them" could well be his epitaph and our comfort in losing his crusading personality.

Tanglewood and all it stands for is his bequest to America and a future trust for all of it's musicians yet to come. An impressive ovation followed the Brahms work which was performed with the full chorus of the Berkshire Music Center.

SUNDAY STANDARD-TIMES, NEW BEDFORD, MASS., AUGUST 16

Is Soloist

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Record Season Ends Today At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 15 — The most successful Berkshire Festival in the 16 Summers concerts have been performed in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 14th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, concludes its activities tomorrow with all attendance records shattered.

More than 150,000 music lovers have attended the 15 Festival concerts; the 40 demonstrations of student symphony, chamber music, choral music, opera and study group departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony), and Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" gala, the annual benefit for the school.

The weekend's concluding concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6,000-seat Shed at Tanglewood here are shared by Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the orchestra conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight, Mr. Bernstein's program will comprise symphonies by Sibelius, Chavez and Brahms. Both the Sibelius "Symphony No. 4 in A minor," and the "Sinfonia India" of Carlos Chavez will be new to Tanglewood audiences. The distinguished Mexican composer-conductor, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer, will be in the audience.

Tomorrow afternoon Mr. Munch will have Seymour Lipkin, pianist who is assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the Summer school's conducting department, and to Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster Richard Burgin in its chamber music department, as soloist in the Ravel "Concerto for the Left Hand," a Tanglewood premiere.

Strawhat Business Still Clicking; Westport's Socko Week; Other Marks shire Fest Ends Best ason With 311G Take

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 25.
16th annual Berkshire Fes- un by the Boston Symphony ra at Tanglewood, near ound up a week ago with its ason to date, boxoffice and nce-wise.

Music Shed series (July 31- 6) saw three weekends of oncerts each. The opening nance (31) attracted 10,300 s, the largest first night in stival's history. Despite rain the first Sunday afternoon m, conducted by Pierre Mon- ng, 2, drew 9,900, for a new and the weekend's 31,000 et a new high for opening nd. Series B (Aug. 7-9) es- ed an attendance record of for the weekend. Series C 14-16) drew 32,800.

paid admissions for the 15 l concerts, "Tanglewood on ," and three orchestra per- nd rehearsals, was $31,600, nst $268,000 for 1952, $253, 1951, and $238,300 for 1950.

Ruth White, Birdie.

'Aun" $2.100, Reading
Reading, Pa., Aug. 25.

"Charley's Aunt" broke all records of the Berks Players in its second season at Green Hills Theatre here, with a big $2,100 for five performances. This was second week of the comedy, which racked up a good $1,800 in its first stanza.

The ninth week of summer stock finds Tennessee Williams' "Summer and Smoke" in for five nights, starting tonight (Tues.). The Players are nearly $1,300 ahead of last season.

'Gigi' $5,600, Stockbridge
Stockbridge, Mass., Aug. 25.

Windup of the Berkshire Music Festival in nearby Tanglewood failed to retard business at the Berkshire Playhouse here last week. "Gigi," Anita Loos-Colette comedy, finished the week with a $5,600 take. Featured were Deirdre Owens, William Reerick and Viola Roache.

Director William Miles, following his custom of past three seasons, is featuring Gaye Jordon this week in a play of past generations. This year's museum piece is the Broadway hit of 1911, "Bunty Pulls The Strings," by Graham Moffat. Last season Miss Gordon did Barrie's "The Little Minister" to top business and press raves. Others in "Bunty" are John W. Austin, William Swan, Viola Roache, Archie Smith and Betty Bunce.

NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1953.

Topics of The Times

O Richard, O Mon Roi

Audiences at the Berkshire Music Center were listening last week to an old eighteenth-century French opera called "Richard the Lion-Hearted" by André Grétry, one of fifty-odd operas by this composer, nearly all of which are long since forgotten.

The critics found the work interesting but rather thin fare, and the audiences, combining summer outings with the quest for culture, were, of course, impressed by this bold excursion into romantic history set to music. In the Berkshires, under a roof or under the stars, there was nothing to connect this old opera with grave and terrible events, but there is a curious link with the French Revolution which historians of the period rarely fail to recall. It has to do with the once popular song of the opera beginning, "O Richard, O mon roi, l'univers t'abandonne" — "O Richard, O my king, the whole world is forsaking thee."

Back to 1789

One has to go back to Thursday, Oct. 1, 1789. The revolution is in full swing. King Louis XVI, Queen Marie-Antoinette and the young Dauphin are at Versailles protected by the loyal Guardes du Corps, the bodyguard, Swiss Guards, and the newly arrived Régiment de Flandre. The Guardes du Corps are giving a banquet to the officers of the Flanders regiment and the Swiss Guard in the Salle de l'Opéra. The King and Queen, the latter holding in her arms the Dauphin, enter the hall to greet the guests. The orchestra strikes up "O Richard, O mon roi, l'univers t'abandonne." "The diners, warmed by the music and libations," a literal account of the affair reads, "shouted delirious acclaim, trod under foot the [tricolor] national cockade and took the white cockade [of the Bourbons] or the black cockade of the Queen. By design, toasts to the health of the nation were omitted."

Some Purple Prose

Thomas Carlyle, who is said to have portrayed the French Revolution by lightning flashes, does full justice to this episode in his inimitable purple prose, or "Carlylese," as some would have it. He calls the chapter "O Richard, O My King," from which it is necessary to quote at some length:

"And now suppose this Repast, the solid part of it, transacted; and the first bottle over. Suppose the customary loyal toasts drunk; the King's health, the Queen's with deafening vivats; that of the Nation 'omitted,' or even 'rejected.' Suppose champagne flowing; with pot-valorous speech, with instrumental music; empty featherheads growing ever the noisier, in their own emptiness, in each other's noise. Her Majesty, who looks unusually sad to-night (his Majesty sitting dulled with the day's hunting), is told that the sight of it would cheer her. Behold! She enters there, issuing from her State-rooms, like the Moon from the clouds, this fairest unhappy Queen of Hearts; royal Husband by her side, young Dauphin in her arms! She descends from the Boxes, amid splendour and acclaim; walks queenlike round the Tables; gracefully escorted, gracefully nodding; her looks full of sorrow, yet of gratitude and daring, with the hope of France on her mother-bosom!"

Set to Music

The climax of his fateful counter-revolutionary demonstration came with the music to which Berkshire audiences listened last week with more curiosity than enthusiasm:

"And now, the band striking up, O Richard, O mon roi, l'univers t'abandonne (O Richard, O my king, the world is all forsaking thee)—could man do other than rise to the height of pity, of loyal valour? Could featherheaded young ensigns do other than, by white Bourbon Cockades, handed them from fair fingers; by waving of swords, drawn to pledge the Queen's health; by trampling of National Cockades; by scaling the Boxes, whence intrusive murmurs may come; by vociferation, tripudiation, sound, fury and distraction, within doors and without—testify what tempest-tost state of vacuity they are in? Till champagne and tripudiation do their work; and all lie silent, horizontal; passively slumbering with meed-of-battle dreams!——

"A natural Repast; in ordinary times, a harmless one: now fatal, as that of Thyestes; as that of Job's sons, when a strong wind smote the four corners of their banquet-house! Poor ill-advised Marie-Antoinette with a woman's vehemence, not with a sovereign's foresight! It was so natural, yet so unwise. Next day, in public speech of ceremony, her Majesty declares herself 'delighted with the Thursday.'"

Beginning of the End

This was probably her Majesty's last chance to be delighted. News of the affair at Versailles spread rapidly and added fuel to the revolutionary fires. Feasting at Versailles, famine in Paris! The national colors insulted! The next week saw a great outbreak of the Paris mob, the march of a motley band of people headed by the women of Paris to Versailles, a clash with the guards, an invasion of the palace, the royal family rescued by Lafayette. Then the strange cavalcade escorting the royal family and the National Assembly from Versailles to Paris. It was the beginning of the end for the King, the Queen and the Dauphin.

[78]

TIGHT BINDING

Sculpture Seen at Tanglewood

A Berkshire Tale

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

WHEN I STOPPED in Tanglewood a few weeks ago it was my pleasure to talk with George Judd. Mr. Judd is the manager of the Boston Orchestra, has been in fact, since 1936.

Before I met Mr. Judd I had walked around the grounds, talked to some of the staff and marvelled—as I have done many times before—at the smoothness with which this very big business functions. The grass, in spite of the dry summer and the hordes of feet that had been pressing it down, was soft and rich and a singular green. The hedges were meticulously trimmed but one was impressed by no artificiality in their shape and grooming. The varied structures maintained a dignity of their own and impinged not at all the peace and serenity of the Berkshire evening. The paths were raked and spotless; in fact their neatness caused one to wonder if the small stones which formed their surface were not perhaps fastened in some manner so that they could not be kicked loose. Indeed, in the lull before the evening's audience began to arrive, the whole place had the appearance of an impeccably cared for but never used park; as if it had never been burdened by the careless hands and feet and habits that most visitors bring with them.

But that, of course, is not the fact. Tanglewood has been used, intensely and enormously. How much, you might ask. Well when I first visited the territory in search of the Boston Orchestra there was no Tanglewood as it is presently constituted. The orchestra was housed in a tent. Koussevitzky was conducting a sparkling concert when the elements concocted a more exciting one. The tent was blown approximately from its moorings. For the life of me I can't remember whether the concert was ever concluded or not. There was a lot of frantic scurrying about, an abundance of lightning and thunder. And all in all Koussevitzky and his orchestra were rather badly beaten in the battle of sounds. I do remember that when I hiked back from Lenox the next morning to rescue my car, which had been drowned out in the deluge, I found several hundred other cars which had suffered the same fate. Even in those days the Boston Orchestra's summer season was beginning to be a very big thing.

* * *

WHEN I CAME again to Tanglewood I was a solid married citizen. Tanglewood as it is now was beginning to take shape. The big shed was completed and ready for use, and the school which is known as the Berkshire Music Center was in its first year.

School and summer festival prospered majestically until the whole undertaking was suspended during the war years. Activities were resumed in 1946 and since that date there seems to be no easily perceptible saturation point.

The school enrollment has remained around 400. There have been some 36 teachers on the staff each summer. And the students in late years have been coming from far off places. For example, there is in the school this summer a John Kim from Pusan, South Korea. When he is at home Mr. Kim is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. Mr. Kim has come quite a distance.

The audiences for the nine shed concerts which are played every summer reached up to a 10,000 average in the year when they were resumed after the war years cessation and they have been that large or larger each year since.

The Theater Concert Hall Series was initiated in 1949, six additional concerts each summer. This year's six attracted an audience of more than 26,000. In 1949 upwards of 180,000 heard the fifteen concerts which make up the two series. And this is very, very big business.

* * *

THERE is perhaps no musical undertaking anywhere that is so thoroughly a memorial to one man as is Tanglewood. Koussevitzky dreamed about it, planned for it, labored on it, and pressured it into a kind of rock ribbed permanence. Had Koussevitzky been only a conductor his name would probably be consigned in due time to the musty and unsought annals of men who played or sung and men who conducted orchestras. But, in the case of Tanglewood at least, he was also an architect and a builder. And the monument which he left behind him is not one that will easily be lost sight of.

But Koussevitzky is dead. Tanglewood is alive. And it is not alive simply in schools and concerts. There are buildings and grounds. There are, I suppose, a good hundred appendages of this music business that must be staffed and directed. And all these matters, so far as I know, constitute the vacation which George Judd takes every summer.

Mr. Judd is no longer a man young in years. It was in 1914 that he became secretary to Henry Lee Higginson, the founder of the Boston Orchestra. He assumed the post of assistant manager of the orchestra in 1918. And he has been, as I have previously noted, its manager since 1936.

* * *

MR. JUDD is a slight man of rather patrician aspect. He is unfailingly kind, faultlessly courteous. There is a certain reserve about him that does not repel but rather commands respect. Most people discover that he is one of a breed that is slowly reaching extinction. He is a gentleman. He never deals in personalities. He speaks economically and with authority. And, as much as I am able to judge, he makes no promises that he cannot fulfill.

Yet with all these qualities he does not impress one as the kind of person who could face directly all the slings and arrows that are levelled at managers of orchestras and, as we might put it, never bat an eye. But here is the Boston Orchestra. I suppose it gives more concerts every year and plays to a larger total audience and covers more territory than any other orchestra in the world. And invariably it operates smoothly and effortlessly. That is Mr. Judd's work.

When I was at Tanglewood we were talking about a conductor who functions every year on a murderous schedule but who remains unfailingly interested in new ventures. Said Mr. Judd, "In all the years that I have worked with them I never have really understood the conductor's mind. I have seen so many of them who, even when they have been carrying loads that would flatten out the normal man and drive him to despair, are constantly searching for new and wider fields." I did not reply to Mr. Judd, but I might have, "Have you too, Mr. Judd, something of the conductor in you?"

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON

Universal Symbols Depicted In Stone Carvings by Rood

By Dorothy Adlow

Tanglewood, Mass.

Sculptures are exhibited under ideal conditions at Tanglewood during the weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival. Set up in the formal gardens are five large stone pieces by John Rood of Minneapolis.

The versatile and prolific Mr. Rood has produced a large repertoire of carvings in wood. These were notably decorative and fanciful in character. More recently they have become religious in subject.

Mr. Rood's talents have range, for he has also engaged in the printing and publishing trades, and has taught and written. He has published a book on the subject of his sculptures.

These pieces in Tanglewood show a departure in Mr. Rood's customary procedure. They indicate a new approach for him. On the north shore of Lake Superior he found piles of boulders, water-worn rocks which seemed to change after each storm. In the woods he came upon trees, weather - worn, twisted, rotted. He was inspired by the shapes of rock and wood, molded by forces of nature. He was also attracted to the shapes of bones.

He made drawings of rocks, wood, bones. Gradually he worked their curious and fascinating contours into his sculptures. He tried to introduce something of the character of fortuitous effect, of weirdness and oddity encountered in the forest debris. He conforms with fundamentals of design requisite in a carving, no matter how far he wanders from factual indenments of forest, and there was something large and comic. Mr. Rood was prompted to express, if not to portray, primeval characters like Prometheus. He suggested certain analogies of legendary drama or tragedy with modern life. Envisaged in these five exhibits are archetypal forms and universal symbols.

* * *

A "Winged Figure" symbolizes man climbing out of animal darkness. A "Seated Figure" was suggested by the shape of the thigh bone of a horse and by eroded rock. There are obvious implications on the part of the artist of cycles of growth, evolution, and decay. "Mother Figure," carved in limestone, is a mesh of intertwining [illegible] ures that emerge and [illegible] the spectator walks around the piece.

There is one work with [illegible] cosmic significance, [illegible] to Igor Stravinsky," [illegible] artist tells us, for "pure [illegible] enjoyment." Mr. Rood has [illegible] than the average ability [illegible] part passing delight [illegible] and visual character.

At Tanglewood in addition [illegible] indoor exhibition of [illegible] and drawings by Frank [illegible] Here is a woman of [illegible] whose ideas are aggressive [illegible] plicable to translation [illegible] or stone design. She has [illegible] of her figures in shallow [illegible] the pattern simplified [illegible] ace sensitively and [illegible] tooled. The drawings [illegible] another facet of her [illegible]

Cir. (D 44,046) (S 173,079)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
MAR 22 1953

New Revue for [illegible]

A new revue, [illegible] titled "John Murray [illegible]'s Almanac," is [illegible] play Boston for [illegible] half weeks beginning [illegible] 29, according to [illegible] rk Times. The cast [illegible] de Hermione Gingold, [illegible] Wolfe, and possibly [illegible] xwell. Choreography [illegible]

Season at Tanglewood To Run July 5-Aug. 16

THE 11th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music which the Boston Symphony Orchestra maintains at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be open this summer from July 5 through Aug. 16. The school, held in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts, will have Charles Munch as director, Aaron Copland as assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz as dean.

Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein will be guest conductors of the Festival concerts. These will be given in three weekend series in the Theater and another three in the Shed. The series of Theater concerts will be on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, July 11 and 12, 18 and 19, 25 and 26.

The first pair of concerts will be Bach programs, including "Brandenburg" Concertos 1, 2, 3, 5 (with Lukas Foss), and 6; Suites 2 and 3, and a cantata. Works by Mozart will be played in the second pair; Divertimento, K. 136; Violin Concerto in G (Isaac Stern), Serenade For 13 Wind Instruments, K. 361; "Prague" Symphony, Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," Sinfonia Concertante For Violin and Viola (Stern and de Pasquale), "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and the "Jupiter" Symphony.

Scheduled for the final pair of Theater concerts are Divertimento, Op. 86, Strauss; "Creation du monde," Milhaud; "Le tombeau de Couperin," Ravel;; Cantata, "A Parable of Death," Foss; "St. Theresa Mass" and Symphonies 93 and 100, Haydn.

The Shed Series

The three Shed series will be held Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, beginning July 31. The first program cycle includes Bethoven's "Leonore No. 3" Overture, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, Zinno Francescatti, soloist; Copland's "Appalachian Spring," Ravel's "Bolero," an all-Tschaikowski concert ("Hamlet" Overture, "Mozartiana" Suite, "Romeo and Juliet" Overture, Symphony No. 5), the "Manfred" Overture, Schumann; Piano Concerto, Foss, with the composer as soloist, Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Liszt "Hungarian Waltz."

The concerts of the [illegible] Shed series will offer Ibert's "Water Music," Barber's [illegible] For Strings, Saint-Saens' [illegible] Concerto, with Gregor Piatigorsky; Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, Berlioz; a Koussevitzky [illegible] rial Program, Symphony No. [illegible] Haydn, and Symphony No. [illegible] ("Resurrection") Mahler.

Listed for the final three concerts in the Shed (Aug. 14-16) are "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, Ravel's Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, Seymour Lipkin, soloist; Wagner's Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger"; Concerto for Strings and Brass, Hindemith; Brahms' "Requiem" and Second Symphony, and "Sinfonia India," Chavez.

Feature of School Session

As a special feature of the school session, Carlos Chavez will come from Mexico to join Copland as teacher of composition. The chamber music department will be enlarged under the leadership of Richard Burgin, with William Kroll as associate. Gregor Piatigorsky will be guest instructor for part of the session.

Kroll plans a special course in Beethoven's last four quartets. Ruth Posselt will give lessons in violin and piano sonata literature. The chamber music faculty will include members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and retired members, Jean Bedetti, cello; Fernand Gillet, oboe; Georges Laurant, flute, and William Valkenier, horn.

Bernstein and Monteux will head the conducting and orchestral departments, assisted by Seymour Lipkin and Lukas Foss. Hugh Ross will head the choral music and Boris Goldovsky the opera department. Information about the Festival and the Music Center may be obtained from Symphony Hall, Boston.

Cir. (D 196,884)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
MAR 28 1953

Auditions for Berkshire

Auditions for players of orchestral instruments applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center will be held on Friday, April 10, at Symphony Hall, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Auditions will be held for all orchestral instruments and piano. Tuition scholarships are awarded to advanced students who qualify for admission.

The Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival Concerts. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, is also director of the school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director.

The Department of Instrumental Music will again be headed by Leonard Bernstein, who conduct the student orchestra in each of its weekly concerts.

Those who intend to be present at these auditions should, if possible, notify the school office in advance . . . Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

[79]

TIGHT BINDING

Sculpture Seen at Tanglewood

A Berkshire Tale

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

WHEN I STOPPED in Tanglewood a few weeks ago it was my pleasure to talk with George Judd. Mr. Judd is the manager of the Boston Orchestra, has been in fact, since 1936.

Before I met Mr. Judd I had walked around the grounds, talked to some of the staff and marvelled—as I have done many times before—at the smoothness with which this very big business functions. The grass, in spite of the dry summer and the hordes of feet that had been pressing it down, was soft and rich and a singular green. The hedges were meticulously trimmed but one was impressed by no artificiality in their shape and grooming. The varied structures maintained a dignity of their own and impinged not at all the peace and serenity of the Berkshire evening. The paths were raked and spotless; in fact their neatness caused one to wonder if the small stones which formed their surface were not perhaps fastened in some manner so that they could not be kicked loose. Indeed, in the lull before the evening's audience began to arrive, the whole place had the appearance of an impeccably cared for but never used park; as if it had never been burdened by the careless hands and feet and habits that most visitors bring with them.

But that, of course, is not the fact. Tanglewood has been used, intensely and enormously. How much, you might ask. Well when I first visited the territory in search of the Boston Orchestra there was no Tanglewood as it is presently constituted. The orchestra was housed in a tent. Koussevitzky was conducting a sparkling concert when the elements concocted a more exciting one. The tent was blown approximately from its moorings. For the life of me I can't remember whether the concert was ever concluded or not. There was a lot of frantic scurrying about, an abundance of lightning and thunder. And all in all Koussevitzky and his orchestra were rather badly beaten in the battle of sounds. I do remember that when I hiked back from Lenox the next morning to rescue my car, which had been drowned out in the deluge, I found several hundred other cars which had suffered the same fate. Even in those days the Boston Orchestra's summer season was beginning to be a very big thing.

* * *

WHEN I CAME again to Tanglewood I was a solid married citizen. Tanglewood as it is now was beginning to take shape. The big shed was completed and ready for use and the school which is known as the Berkshire Music Center was in its first year.

School and summer festival prospered majestically until the whole undertaking was suspended during the war years. Activities were resumed in 1946 and since that date there seems to be no easily perceptible saturation point.

The school enrollment has remained around 400. There have been some 36 teachers on the staff each summer. And the students in late years have been coming from far off places. For example, there is in the school this summer a John Kim from Pusan, South Korea. When he is at home Mr. Kim is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. Mr. Kim has come quite a distance.

The audiences for the nine shed concerts which are played every summer reached up to a 10,000 average in the year when they were resumed after the war years cessation and they have been that large or larger each year since.

The Theater Concert Hall Series was initiated in 1949, six additional concerts each summer. This year's six attracted an audience of more than 26,000. In 1949 upwards of 180,000 heard the fifteen concerts which make up the two series. And this is very, very big business.

* * *

THERE is perhaps no musical undertaking anywhere that is so thoroughly a memorial to one man as is Tanglewood. Koussevitzky dreamed about it, planned for it, labored on it, and pressured it into a kind of rock ribbed permanence. Had Koussevitzky been only a conductor his name would probably be consigned in due time to the musty and unsought annals of men who played or sung and men who conducted orchestras. But, in the case of Tanglewood at least, he was also an architect and a builder. And the monument which he left behind him is not one that will easily be lost sight of.

But Koussevitzky is dead. Tanglewood is alive. And it is not alive simply in schools and concerts. There are buildings and grounds. There are, I suppose, a good hundred appendages of this music business that must be staffed and directed. And all these matters, so far as I know, constitute the vacation which George Judd takes every summer.

Mr. Judd is no longer a man young in years. It was in 1914 that he became secretary to Henry Lee Higginson, the founder of the Boston Orchestra. He assumed the post of assistant manager of the orchestra in 1918. And he has been, as I have previously noted, its manager since 1936.

* * *

MR. JUDD is a slight man of rather patrician aspect. He is unfailingly kind, faultlessly courteous. There is a certain reserve about him that does not repel but rather commands respect. Most people discover that he is one of a breed that is slowly reaching extinction. He is a gentleman. He never deals in personalities. He speaks economically and with authority. And, as much as I am able to judge, he makes no promises that he cannot fulfill.

Yet with all these qualities he does not impress one as the kind of person who could face directly all the slings and arrows that are levelled at managers of orchestras and, as we might put it, never bat an eye. But here is the Boston Orchestra. I suppose it gives more concerts every year and plays to a larger total audience and covers more territory than any other orchestra in the world. And invariably it operates smoothly and effortlessly. That is Mr. Judd's work.

When I was at Tanglewood we were talking about a conductor who functions every year on a murderous schedule but who remains unfailingly interested in new ventures. Said Mr. Judd, "In all the years that I have worked with them I never have really understood the conductor's mind. I have seen so many of them who, even when they have been carrying loads that would flatten out the normal man and drive him to despair, are constantly searching for new and wider fields." I did not reply to Mr. Judd, but I might have, "Have you too, Mr. Judd, something of the conductor in you?"

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON

Universal Symbols Depicted In Stone Carvings by Rood

By Dorothy Adlow

Tanglewood, Mass.

Sculptures are exhibited under ideal conditions at Tanglewood during the weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival. Set up in the formal gardens are five large stone pieces by John Rood of Minneapolis.

The versatile and prolific Mr. Rood has produced a large repertoire of carvings in wood. They were notably decorative and fanciful in character. More recently they have become religious in subject.

Mr. Rood's talents have range, for he has also engaged in the printing and publishing trades, and has taught and written. He has published a book on the subject of his sculptures.

These pieces in Tanglewood show a departure in Mr. Rood's customary procedure. They indicate a new approach for him. On the north shore of Lake Superior he found piles of boulders, water-worn rocks which seemed to change after each storm. In the woods he came upon trees, weather - worn, twisted, rotted. He was inspired by the shapes of rock and wood, molded by forces of nature. He was also attracted to the shapes of bones.

He made drawings of rocks, wood, bones. Gradually he worked their curious and fascinating contours into his sculptures. He tried to introduce something of the character of fortuitous effect, of weirdness and oddity encountered in the forest debris. He conforms with fundamentals of design requisite in a carving, no matter how far he wanders from factual inden-

Cir. (D 44,046) (S 173,079)
This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
MAR 22 1953

Season at Tanglewood To Run July 5-Aug. 16

THE 11th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music which the Boston Symphony Orchestra maintains at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be open this summer from July 5 through Aug. 16. The school, held in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts, will have Charles Munch as director, Aaron Copland as assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz as dean.

Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein will be guest conductors of the Festival concerts. These will be given in three weekend series in the Theater and another three in the Shed. The series of Theater concerts will be on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, July 11 and 12, 18 and 19, 25 and 26.

The first pair of concerts will be Bach programs, including "Brandenburg" Concertos 1, 2, 3, 5 (with Lukas Foss), and 6; Suites 2 and 3, and a cantata. Works by Mozart will be played in the second pair; Divertimento, K. 136; Violin Concerto in G (Isaac Stern), Serenade For 13 Wind Instruments, K. 361; "Prague" Symphony, Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," Sinfonia Concertante For Violin and Viola (Stern and de Pasquale), "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and the "Jupiter" Symphony.

Scheduled for the final pair of Theater concerts are Divertimento, Op. 86, Strauss; "Creation du monde," Milhaud; "Le tombeau de Couperin," Ravel; Cantata, "A Parable of Death," Foss; "St. Theresa Mass" and Symphonies 93 and 100, Haydn.

The Shed Series

The three Shed series will be held Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, beginning July 31. The first program cycle includes Bethoven's "Lenore No. 3" Overture, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, Zinno Francescatti, soloist; Copland's "Appalachian Spring," Ravel's "Bolero," an all-Tschaikowski concert ("Hamlet" Overture, "Mozartiana" Suite, "Romeo and Juliet" Overture, Symphony No. 5), the "Manfred" Overture, Schumann; Piano Concerto, Foss, with the composer as soloist; Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony and Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz."

The concerts of the second Shed series will offer Handel's "Water Music," Barber's Adagio For Strings, Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto, with Gregor Piatigorsky; Strauss' "Don Quixote," "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, Berlioz; a Koussevitzky Memorial Program, Symphony No. 102, Haydn, and Symphony No. 2 ("Resurrection") Mahler.

Listed for the final three concerts in the Shed (Aug. 14-16) are "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, Ravel's Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, Seymour Lipkin soloist; Wagner's Prelude and Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyll" and excerpts from Act III of "Die Meistersinger"; Concerto for Strings and Brass, Hindemith; Brahms' "Requiem" and Second Symphony, and "Sinfonia India."

Feature of School Session

A special feature of the session, Carlos Chavez, ... come from Mexico to join ... and as teacher of comp...

The chamber music de... ment will be enlarged under ... leadership of Richard D... with William Kroll as as... Sec... Gregor Piatigorsky will ... guest instructor for part of ... session.

Kroll plans a special course in ... Beethoven's last four quartets. ... Posselt will give lessons in ... and piano sonata l... The chamber music fa... include members of the Bos... Symphony Orchestra ... members, Jean P... tti, ... Fiser and Gillet, ... Laurant, flute, a... boe; ... Valkenier, horn. ... Wil... ... stein and Monte... will ... the conducting an... ches... ... departments, ass... d by ... Seymour Lipkin and L... Foss. ... Ross will head ... choral ... music and Boris Go... the ... opera department. ... mation ... about the Festival a... he Mu... ... Center may be o... ed from ... Symphony Hall, Bos...

Cir. (D 196,884)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
MAR 28 1953

Auditions for Berkshire

Auditions for players of orchestral instruments applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center will be held on Friday, April 10, at Symphony Hall, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Auditions will be held for all orchestral instruments and piano. Tuition scholarships are awarded to advanced students who qualify for admission.

The Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival Concerts. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, is also director of the school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director.

The Department of Instrumental Music will again be headed by Leonard Bernstein, who conduct the student orchestra in each of its weekly concerts.

Those who intend to be present at these auditions should, if possible, notify the school office in advance . . . Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

[79]

TIGHT BINDING

Sculpture Seen at Tanglewood

A Berkshire Tale

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

WHEN I STOPPED in Tanglewood a few weeks ago it was my pleasure to talk with George Judd. Mr. Judd is the manager of the Boston Orchestra, has been in fact, since 1936.

Before I met Mr. Judd I had walked around the grounds, talked to some of the staff and marvelled—as I have done many times before—at the smoothness with which this very big business functions. The grass, in spite of the dry summer and the hordes of feet that had been pressing it down, was soft and rich and a singular green. The hedges were meticulously trimmed but one was impressed by no artificiality in their shape and grooming. The varied structures maintained a dignity of their own and impinged not at all the peace and serenity of the Berkshire evening. The paths were raked and spotless; in fact their neatness caused one to wonder if the small stones which formed their surface were not perhaps fastened in some manner so that they could not be kicked loose. Indeed, in the lull before the evening's audience began to arrive, the whole place had the appearance of an impeccably cared for but never used park; as if it had never been burdened by the careless hands and feet and habits that most visitors bring with them.

But that, of course, is not the fact. Tanglewood has been used, intensely and enormously. How much, you might ask. Well when I first visited the territory in search of the Boston Orchestra there was no Tanglewood as it is presently constituted. The orchestra was housed in a tent. Koussevitzky was conducting a sparkling concert when the elements concocted a more exciting one. The tent was blown approximately from its moorings. For the life of me I can't remember whether the concert was ever concluded or not. There was a lot of frantic scurrying about, an abundance of lightning and thunder. And all in all Koussevitzky and his orchestra were rather badly beaten in the battle of sounds. I do remember that when I hiked back from Lenox the next morning to rescue my car, which had been drowned out in the deluge, I found several hundred other cars which had suffered the same fate. Even in those days the Boston Orchestra's summer season was beginning to be a very big thing.

* * *

WHEN I CAME again to Tanglewood I was a solid married citizen. Tanglewood as it is now was beginning to take shape. The big shed was completed and ready for use and the school which is known as the Berkshire Music Center was in its first year.

School and summer festival prospered majestically until the whole undertaking was suspended during the war years. Activities were resumed in 1946 and since that date there seems to be no easily perceptible saturation point.

The school enrollment has remained around 400. There have been some 36 teachers on the staff each summer. And the students in late years have been coming from far off places. For example, there is in the school this summer a John Kim from Pusan, South Korea. When he is at home Mr. Kim is president and conductor of the Republic of Korea Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. Mr. Kim has come quite a distance.

The audiences for the nine shed concerts which are played every summer reached up to a 10,000 average in the year when they were resumed after the war years cessation and they have been that large or larger each year since.

The Theater Concert Hall Series was initiated in 1949, six additional concerts each summer. This year's six attracted an audience of more than 26,000. In 1949 upwards of 180,000 heard the fifteen concerts which make up the two series. And this is very, very big business.

* * *

THERE is perhaps no musical undertaking anywhere that is so thoroughly a memorial to one man as is Tanglewood. Koussevitzky dreamed about it, planned for it, labored on it, and pressured it into a kind of rock ribbed permanence. Had Koussevitzky been only a conductor his name would probably be consigned in due time to the musty and unsought annals of men who played or sung and men who conducted orchestras. But, in the case of Tanglewood at least, he was also an architect and a builder. And the monument which he left behind him is not one that will easily be lost sight of.

But Koussevitzky is dead. Tanglewood is alive. And it is not alive simply in schools and concerts. There are buildings and grounds. There are, I suppose, a good hundred appendages of this music business that must be staffed and directed. And all these matters, so far as I know, constitute the vacation which George Judd takes every summer.

Mr. Judd is no longer a man young in years. It was in 1914 that he became secretary to Henry Lee Higginson, the founder of the Boston Orchestra. He assumed the post of assistant manager of the orchestra in 1918. And he has been, as I have previously noted, its manager since 1936.

* * *

MR. JUDD is a slight man of rather patrician aspect. He is unfailingly kind, faultlessly courteous. There is a certain reserve about him that does not repel but rather commands respect. Most people discover that he is one of a breed that is slowly reaching extinction. He is a gentleman. He never deals in personalities. He speaks economically and with authority. And, as much as I am able to judge, he makes no promises that he cannot fulfill.

Yet with all these qualities he does not impress one as the kind of person who could face directly all the slings and arrows that are levelled at managers of orchestras and, as we might put it, never bat an eye. But here is the Boston Orchestra. I suppose it gives more concerts every year and plays to a larger total audience and covers more territory than any other orchestra in the world. And invariably it operates smoothly and effortlessly. That is Mr. Judd's work.

When I was at Tanglewood we were talking about a conductor who functions every year on a murderous schedule but who remains unfailingly interested in new ventures. Said Mr. Judd, "In all the years that I have worked with them I never have really understood the conductor's mind. I have seen so many of them who, even when they have been carrying loads that would flatten out the normal man and drive him to despair, are constantly searching for new and wider fields." I did not reply to Mr. Judd, but I might have, "Have you too, Mr. Judd, something of the conductor in you?"

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1953

Universal Symbols Depicted In Stone Carvings by Rood

By Dorothy Adlow

Tanglewood, Mass.

Sculptures are exhibited under ideal conditions at Tanglewood during the weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival. Set up in the formal gardens are five large stone pieces by John Rood of Minneapolis.

The versatile and prolific Mr. Rood has produced a large repertoire of carvings in wood. They were notably decorative and fanciful in character. More recently they have become religious in subject.

Mr. Rood's talents have range, for he has also engaged in the printing and publishing trades, and has taught and written. He has published a book on the subject of his sculptures.

These pieces in Tanglewood show a departure in Mr. Rood's customary procedure. They indicate a new approach for him. On the north shore of Lake Superior he found piles of boulders, water-worn rocks which seemed to change after each storm. In the woods he came upon trees, weather - worn, twisted, rotted. He was inspired by the shapes of rock and wood, molded by forces of nature. He was also attracted to the shapes of bones.

He made drawings of rocks, wood, bones. Gradually he worked their curious and fascinating contours into his sculptures. He tried to introduce something of the character of fortuitous effect, of weirdness and oddity encountered in the forest debris. He conforms with fundamentals of design requisite in a carving, no matter how far he wanders from factual indentities.

* * *

The carvings reveal Mr. Rood's audacious attack upon materials; his boldness in wrangling with large concepts. In the bare surroundings of an art gallery the pieces would seem threatening and possibly depressing. Outdoors they are tamed by the atmosphere, subdued by the grandeur of graceful trees and magnificent shrubbery.

The connotation of these odd-

Cir. (D 196,884)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN

MAR 28 1953

Auditions for Berkshire

Auditions for players of orchestral instruments applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center will be held on Friday, April 10, at Symphony Hall, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Auditions will be held for all orchestral instruments and piano. Tuition scholarships are awarded to advanced students who qualify for admission.

The Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival Concerts. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, is also director of the school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director.

The Department of Instrumental Music will again be headed by Leonard Bernstein, who conduct the student orchestra in each of its weekly concerts.

Those who intend to be present at these auditions should, if possible, notify the school office in advance . . . Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

[79]

New Revue for

A new revue, entitled "John Murray ... son's Almanac," is ... to play Boston for ... a half weeks beginning ... or 29, according to ... York Times. The cast ... clude Hermione Gingold, ... de Wolfe, and possibly ... Maxwell. Choreography ... be by Donald Saddler ... the same job for "... Town." Stanley Gilkey ... Rigby, and Michael Gr... the sponsors.

"Brandenburg" Concertos 1, 2, 3, 5 (with Lukas Foss), and 6; Suites 2 and 3, and a cantata. Works by Mozart will be played in the second pair; Divertimento, K. 136; Violin Concerto in G (Isaac Stern), Serenade For 13 Wind Instruments, K. 361; "Prague" Symphony. Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," Sinfonia Concertante For Violin and Viola (Stern and de Pasquale), "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and the "Jupiter" Symphony.

Scheduled for the final pair of Theater concerts are Divertimento, Op. 86, Strauss; "Creation du monde," Milhaud; "Le tombeau de Couperin," Ravel;; Cantata, "A Parable of Death," Foss; "St. Theresa Mass" and Symphonies 93 and 100, Haydn.

The Shed Series

The three Shed series will be held Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, beginning July 31. The first program cycle includes Bethoven's "Leonore No. 3" Overture, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, Zinno Francescatti, soloist; Copland's "Appalachian Spring," Ravel's "Bolero," an all-Tschaikowski concert ("Hamlet" Overture, "Mozartiana" Suite, "Romeo and Juliet" Overture, Symphony No. 5), the "Manfred" Overture, Schumann; Piano Concerto, Foss,

...rts in the Shed (Aug. 14-16) ... "Anacreon" Overture, Cheru... Schubert's "Unfinished" ...mphony; Ravel's Piano Concer... for the Left Hand, Seymour ...pkin soloist; Wagner's Prelude ...nd Love-Death from "Tristan ...nd Isolde," "A Siegfried Idyll" ...cerpts from Act III of "Die ...Singer"; Concerto for ... Strings and Brass, Hindemith's ... Requiem" and Second ...Symphony, and "Sinfonia India,"

...re of School Session

... special feature of the ...session. Carlos Chavez ... from Mexico to ... ...s teacher of composi... ...e chamber music de... ...ill be enlarged under ...ship of Richard Bur... William Kroll ... as... ...rgor Piatigorsky will ... ...structor for Fort of ...

... a special co...se in ... last four qu...tets. ... will give ... ...s in ...ano sonata ... ...era... ...mber mus... ...ulty ...embers o... Bos... ... Orches... ...d re... ...s, Jep... ...letti, ...d G... ...oboe; ...ant. flu... ... Wil... ...r, horn ...

...and M... ...y will ...ductina ...orches... ...ents. ...ed by ...kin an... ...as Foss. ...ill be ... ...e choral ... ...sky the ... ...ormation ... ...the Mu... ...ined from ...

...ISTER

...Mephistopheles, too, is ...ster figure. Here he ...more the spirit of un... ...ef to be found in the ...ryone's head, the al... ...rate capacity of the ...make himself miser... ...fully aware of the ...of his misery. Only ...to hell does Berlioz ...h the theatricality of ...ntion and touch on ...ut by then the com... ...the profound beauty ...ality is known to ...d long before ther... ...g musical genius ...s immense work is ...one as well. ...nce of the soloists ...tion, which will ...ter preserved on ...irable in the ex... ...ways have first... ...these occasions. ...ri, Martial Sin... ...co and Donald ...oloists capable ...cal and inter... ..., Mr. Poleri ...nally bordered ... sang with a ...as it was clear ..., and he rose ...ts during his ...rgarita. Mar... ...rfully secure ...n his role as ...Symphon...

The Boston ... Charles Munch ... 18th concert o... ...phony Hall y... program was ... "Damnation o... were Suzanne ... Poleri, tenor; ... and Donald ... were the Radc... the Harvard ... Woodworth, co...

By RU...

THIS PER...

...lioz' "Damna... as the supre... achievement ... even the sup... his career.

From begi... was never a ... was here spe... the heart an... of a man wh... any other l... flects the a... the integrity ... even the ex... of the comp... not merely ... mood in ev... touches off ... inspiration in... certainly not ... command of ... solute. It is ... but the pe... composer as ... acter in the ... central signi... Faust legend ... the outset, ... demonstrati... choral maste... province of ... petent cond... re-creation ... tion as info... the work it...

INFORMED...

To say th... Faust" is in... ridiculously ... much more ... of the one ... tive, spont... tivity in t... creativity ... dence, of c... the exquisi... forth in a... the wildly ... ages proje... tional pa... scene, as ... transition ... ern scene ... of the fir... garita to ... The instru... varied an... binations ... emphases, ... obligato ... Scene XV... of Berlioz' ...

But th... here: fo... found wh... contact ... all. And ... that. H... Faust le... grasp o... humanit... mediocri... recognize ... the del... way out ... kind. ...

The ... this wh... never ... even ex... lioz, ho... come to ... problem ... He is s... to be ... Berlioz-... horizon ... rejected ... drunke...

TIGHT BINDING

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIKE
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 48,274)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
JAN 21 1954

Early Harbingers

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE spring and summer music festivals may soon be ... unique position of concluding one festival with an ann... ment of the next, though that one is a full year in the ... The announcements come earlier and earlier year afte...

So this year the holiday season was barely behind u... there came the first peeps about the Boston Orchestra's Berkshire Festival. The Boston news is a departure in Berkshire history and, it seems to me, highly satisfactory development.

* * *

OF LATE years one might hear, if he could bear up through the whole season, nine concerts by the full Boston Orchestra during the last three weeks of the Festival. Previous to these nine concerts he would have heard six chamber orchestra concerts and a variety of other concerts by both Boston Orchestra players and by students at the Berkshire Music Center.

This year there will be almost continuous public music making throughout the six weeks from July 5 to Aug. 15. And each week, as the announcement says, will provide music on the following basic scheme: Tuesday night an operatic concert; Wednesday night a chamber music concert; Thursday evening a student orchestra concert; Friday night the Bach-Mozart concerts which are played every year by a chamber orchestra of players from the big Boston Orchestra; Saturday night the concert by the full Boston Orchestra; Sunday morning a student chamber music concert; and Sunday afternoon another concert by the full Boston Orchestra. Monday presumably is a day for the audience which will rest, assess what it has already heard, and perhaps get a running start on what is still to come.

* * *

IN ANY event this is a big series. The total audience last summer was 118,000. The total audience in the summer to come will undoubtedly be considerably larger since there will be more orchestral concerts and they will be spaced so that it will be possible for the short term visitor to hear more of them. Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., is the address should anyone desire to plan a musical vacation this early.

BOSTON MASS
HERALD
FEB 20 1954

MUSIC

Symphony Concert

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, gave the 18th concert of the 73d season in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon. The program was given over to Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." The soloists were Suzanne Danco, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. Assisting were the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club. G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor.

By RUDOLPH ELIE

THIS PERFORMANCE of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" stands as the supreme of Charles Munch achievement in Boston, perhaps even the supreme achievement of his career.

From beginning to end there was never a doubt that Berlioz was here speaking to us through the heart and mind and passion of a man who perhaps more than any other living conductor reflects the ardor, the humanity, the integrity, the yearning and even the expressive compulsion of the composer himself. It is not merely that he captures the mood in every bar, or that he touches off the chain reaction of inspiration in every performer, or certainly not that his technical command of every instant is absolute. It is rather that he is all but the personification of the composer as well as every character in the narrative and the central significance of the very Faust legend itself. Thus, from the outset, here is no glittering demonstration of orchestral and choral mastery lying within the province of any technically competent conductor, but an act of re-creation on a plane of inspiration as informed with genius as the work itself.

INFORMED WITH GENIUS

To say that "The Damnation of Faust" is informed with genius is ridiculously simple, but there is much more than the pure genius of the one endowed with instinctive, spontaneous musical creativity in this. The spontaneous creativity is everywhere in evidence, of course, whether it be in the exquisite melodies that pour forth in astounding profusion in the wildly exciting pictorial images projected, or in the transitional passages from scene to scene, as in the incomparable transition from the brawling tavern scene to the glowing radiance of the first disclosure of Margarita to the dreaming Faust. The instrumental colors, the ever varied and ever evocative combinations of tonal expression and emphases, as in the English horn obligato or the Romance of Scene XV; all these are the genius of Berlioz, too.

But there is more than genius here; for genius can ofter be found where there is no real contact with the human heart at all. And if anything, Berlioz had that. His whole approach to the Faust legend is one of infinite grasp of the questing spirit of a humanity bogged down in the mediocrities of living, unable to recognize happiness, foolish in the delusion that there is any way out save in service to mankind.

The Faust of Goethe learns this while the Faust of Gounod never recognizes the problem even exists. The Faust of Berlioz, however, though he doesn't come to grips with Goethe's final problem, suggests that he could. He is shown here as the lover, to be sure, but not until—like Berlioz—he has explored the horizon of his melancholy, and has rejected peasant gayety and drunken brawling as well.

LESS SINISTER

Berlioz' Mephistopheles, too, is a less sinister figure. Here he represents more the spirit of unruly mischief to be found in the back of everyone's head, the almost deliberate capacity of the human to make himself miserable though fully aware of the inevitability of his misery. Only in the ride to hell does Berlioz get caught in the theatricality of his own invention and touch on the satanic, but by then the compassion and the profound beauty of his personality is known to everyone. And long before the staggering musical genius reflected in this immense work is known to everyone as well.

The performance of the soloists in this production, which will fortunately be later preserved on records, was admirable in the extreme. We not always have first-level artists on these occasions but in David Poleri, Martial Singher, Suzanne Danco and Donald Gramm we had soloists capable of remarkable vocal and interpretative qualities. Mr. Poleri, whose style occasionally borderer on the Italianate, sang with a tenor as expressive as it was clear and silvery in color, and he rose to impressive heights during his love scene with Margarita. Mr. Singher, wonderfully secure and authoritative in his role as Mephistopheles, made the part joy—and sometimes a terror—to hear throughout, traversing th Serenade as well as we can ever expect to hear it. Miss Danco, though occasionally covered by the orchestra, sang Margarita with great purity of expression and appealing emotional overtones, while Mr. Gramm, in a brief role, made Brander a memorably rollicking figure.

Sharing in every way in the superlatives were the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. Every time I hear them I say they were better than they were the last time. which by now lifts them to a point quite out of sight, but they were absolutely superb in this singing with a precision, a tonal capacity, a response and an enunciation rather hard to believe possible. It goes without saying the orchestra outdid itself, bu the men of the hour were Berlioz (there ought to be the four B's, really) and the finest interpreter he ever had: Charles Munch.

Music Hath Charm

"Eagle" Jan 16, 1954 By A. G. Rud

LENOX—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's decision to extend the Berkshire Festival season is considered one of the biggest things that's happened to the tourist trade since Henry Hadley led his charges through Beethoven's Fifth in Dan Hanna's riding ring back in 1934.

The plan is hailed as the key to a bang-up summer in which more people will visit the Berkshires, a greater gross vacation business will be recorded, more music will be enjoyed—and overcrowding will be held to a minimum. Remarkable, but the addition of just three major concerts and a little shuffling of the schedule may accomplish exactly that.

* * *

WITH THE full orchestra playing in the big Shed six weekends instead of only three, there will be a more even distribution of visitors through the summer. For the past several years the schedule has called for three weekends of small concerts by the chamber-sized BSO in the theater-concert hall, followed by three weekends of full BSO concerts in the Shed.

The original idea was to offer to small audiences some lesser known music by early masters like Bach and Mozart, without bringing in the full orchestra from Boston until the last half of the season. This worked out splendidly—so splendidly, in fact, that the theater-concert hall was packed for each performance and as many as 4,000 were seated and sprawled on the lawn. What to do with all these music-lovers? The Bach-Mozart concerts couldn't be moved into the big Shed without losing the intimate atmosphere the music was intended for.

The new plan presumably will solve that problem. Now, during the July 4-Aug. 15 season, there will be Bach-Mozart concerts Friday evenings and Shed concerts Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Thus each weekend will have something for every concertgoer, the Bach aficionado as well as the guy who just goes to stamp his feet during Ravel's "Bolero."

* * *

ONE OF THE conveniences of the new plan is that it will facilitate figuring out what is going on at Tanglewood any particular night. The pattern has been so irregular in the past that a detailed, well-asterisked program has been basic equipment for anyone wishing to keep posted on the 50-odd events presented during the season. Now at least the main patterns will be the same for every one of the six weeks: Opera Tuesday, chamber music Wednesday, student orchestra Thursday, Bach-Mozart Friday, BSO Saturday, student chamber music Sunday morning and BSO Sunday afternoon. That is a good deal easier to keep in mind than a schedule that changes every day.

Even without including the other events presented throughout the season, it is obvious that there is almost a full week of music there, with Monday for catching your breath. Local entrepreneurs hope it will be sufficiently attractive to induce visitors to come here for a week at a time, rather than a night or two.

Of course, to hear anything at Tanglewood besides the BSO, one must join the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center by making a donation, modest or otherwise. This policy will be continued but it is expected that the "Friends Concerts" will be more heavily promoted than in former years, so that the public will become fully aware of the week-long attractions as well as the big weekend jobs. The Berkshire Hills Conference is already working on plans to put this idea across.

* * *

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
FEB 20 1954

BOSTON MASS.
GLOBE
FEB 28 1954

Complete Programs Announced for Larger Berkshire Festival

The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August have been decided under the supervision of Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The increased season has been planned by Mr. Munch to meet the constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox in the Berkshire Hills last Summer. Twenty-four concerts are announced for the six weeks from July 7 to Aug. 15, including six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings and six Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts, Charles Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel, and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

Following is the complete lineup of concerts.

Shed Programs

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second Week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday evening (Pierre Monteux); French program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third Week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday evening (Jean Morel)—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations." Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

4th week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday afternoon (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

5th week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

6th week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Bach-Mozart Series

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100; Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6, Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella"; a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder"; Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319; and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

The series of concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4, Zino Francescatti; the sixth on Aug. 11, the Kroll Quartet.

Music

BSO Gives Preview of Concert To Be Played at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra's concert yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall in Boston is the exact one with which they plan to open the coming Tanglewood season on July 7. Because this is the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz, Charles Munch, the orchestra's director, and always one of Berlioz's staunchest champions, is celebrating the occasion by performing all the major works in their unabridged form this season during the orchestra's regular season.

* * *

YESTERDAY afternoon in a performance that built up to awesome tension he played the "Damnation of Faust" with the aid of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club, and a quartet of eminent soloists of which Suzanne Danco was the Marguerite, David Poleri the Faust, Martial Singher, Mephistopheles and Donald Gramm, Braden. Both choirs plan to reassemble at Tanglewood after the close of school for the performance here as well as the soloists.

There were moments of grandeur when Munch realized some of the magnificent effects Berlioz contrived, by simplicity mainly, rather than by intricate or involved means, some by suspense and understatement, others by excitement and a bit of majestic extravagance.

* * *

MUNCH DOMINATED and controlled his forces easily and confidently. The work, which Berlioz called a dramatic legend, was fashioned by Berlioz himself after Goethe's Faust and has been mounted as an opera with scenery and costumes and ballet on many occasions and still holds the stage in the Paris opera repertory. It has been prepared with extra care for this concert as it is to be recorded Monday by the Victor forces.

The choruses were prepared by G. Wallace Woodworth and they sang with rifle-sharp response and alertness. Their French diction was masterful. The work abounds in special opportunities for soloists among the orchestral sections and they were executed with conspicuous beauty. Munch disciplined and restrained the orchestra admirably for his vocal soloists. He gave them free rein and the utmost liberty while he suported them faithfully. It is divided into four sections but it was the shortest two hours we can remember passing in a concert hall, so absorbing is the music and this particular interpretation.

* * *

ANYONE who has not subscribed to the entire Tanglewood season this coming summer will do well at least to plan to attend the opening concert at which this Berlioz will be played. There is no involved and intricate absorption necessary to enjoy this. It is an easy and great musical treat. Mr. Munch whose enthusiasm for Berlioz, persuaded him to accept the post of president of the newly organized Berlioz Society, was given an ovation even though the Friday afternoon audience was in its usual evident hurry to be out of the hall and to their conveyances.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1954.

Pianist and Be... Plan 6-Week Schedule Listed

The 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will consist of four concerts a week for six weeks. The new pattern, established by Charles Munch, will comprise chamber music concerts Wednesday nights, little orchestra concerts Friday nights and concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons.

Claudio Arrau and the el Arte String Trio will open the festival on Wednesday, July 7. The first little orchestra concert on July 9 will offer five of Bach's Brandenburg's Concertos led by Mr. Munch.

The first full orchestral concert on July 10 will present the first of the many Berlioz works that will be interspersed through the festival to mark the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. It will be "The Damnation of Faust" with Mr. Munch conducting and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society providing the chorus.

An all-Beethoven program on July 11, conducted by Pierre Monteux, with Mr. Arrau as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto will complete the first week.

A summary of the remaining five weeks is as follows:

July 14, Albeneri Trio; July 16, Bach's Cantata No. 39 and Orchestra Suites 1 and 4, led by Mr. Munch; July 17, all-Cesar Franck program led by Mr. Monteaux; July 18, Debussy's "Iberia," Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto and Berlioz "Fantastique," led by Mr. Munch.

July 21, Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 23, Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 4 and Haydn's "Military Symphony, led by Mr. Munch. and Haydn's "Nelson" Mass led by Hugh Ross; July 24, Weber's "Freischuetz" Overture, Prokofieff's "Sixth Symphony, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma Variations," led by Jean Morel; July 25, Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" and Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, led by Mr. Munch.

July 28, Griller String Quartet; July 30, Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute oCncerto. Mozart's Serenade (K. 388) and "Paris" Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; July 31, Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," led by Mr. Munch: Aug. 1, Prokofieff's "Chout," Dvorak's Violin Concerto and Sibelius' Second Symphony, led by Richard Burgin.

Aug. 4, Boston Woodwind Quintet; Aug. 6, Stravinsky's "Pulcinella," a Mozart Piano Concerto played by Seuymour Lipkin and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," led by Paul Lukas Foss; Aug. 7, Gluck's "Alceste" Overture, Betthoven Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, Brahms' Second Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 8, Berlioz' "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" sung by Eleanor Steber and the "Te Deum,' led by Mr. Munch.

Aug. 11, Kroll Quartet; Aug. 12, Rossini's "Silk Ladder" Overture. Mozart's Symphony (K. 319), Strauss' "Der Buerger als Edelmann," led by Mr. Morel; Aug. 14, Wagner's "Lohengrin" Prelude, Piston's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's Piano Concerto, Saint-Saëns' Organ Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 15, Berlioz' "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

[80]

TIGHT BINDING

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIKE
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 48,274)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
JAN 21 1954

Early Harbingers

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE spring and summer music festivals may soon be in the unique position of concluding one festival with an announcement of the next, though that one is a full year in the future. The announcements come earlier and earlier year after year.

So this year the holiday season was barely behind us when there came the first peeps about the Boston Orchestra's Berkshire Festival. The Boston news is a departure in Berkshire history and, it seems to me, highly satisfactory development.

* * *

OF LATE years one might hear, if he could bear up through the whole season, nine concerts by the full Boston Orchestra during the last three weeks of the Festival. Previous to these nine concerts he would have heard six chamber orchestra concerts and a variety of other concerts by both Boston Orchestra players and by students at the Berkshire Music Center.

This year there will be almost continuous public music making throughout the six weeks from July 5 to Aug. 15. And each week, as the announcement says, will provide music on the following basic scheme: Tuesday night an operatic concert; Wednesday night a chamber music concert; Thursday evening a student orchestra concert; Friday night the Bach-Mozart concerts which are played every year by a chamber orchestra of players from the big Boston Orchestra; Saturday night the concert by the full Boston Orchestra; Sunday morning a student chamber music concert; and Sunday afternoon another concert by the full Boston Orchestra. Monday presumably is a day for the audience which will rest, assess what it has already heard, and perhaps get a running start on what is still to come.

* * *

IN ANY event this is a big series. The total audience last summer was 118,000. The total audience in the summer to come will undoubtedly be considerably larger since there will be more orchestral concerts and they will be spaced so that it will be possible for the short term visitor to hear more of them. Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., is the address should anyone desire to plan a musical vacation this early.

BOSTON MASS.
HERALD
FEB 20 1954

MUSIC

Symphony Concert

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, gave the 18th concert of the 73d season in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon. The program was given over to Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." The soloists were Suzanne Danco, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. Assisting were the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor.

By RUDOLPH ELIE

THIS PERFORMANCE of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" stands as the supreme of Charles Munch achievement in Boston, perhaps even the supreme achievement of his career.

From beginning to end there was never a doubt that Berlioz was here speaking to us through the heart and mind and passion of a man who perhaps more than any other living conductor reflects the ardor, the humanity, the integrity, the yearning and even the expressive compulsion of the composer himself. It is not merely that he captures the mood in every bar, or that he touches off the chain reaction of inspiration in every performer, or certainly not that his technical command of every instant is absolute. It is rather that he is all but the personification of the composer as well as every character in the narrative and the central significance of the very Faust legend itself. Thus, from the outset, here is no glittering demonstration of orchestral and choral mastery lying within the province of any technically competent conductor, but an act of re-creation on a plane of inspiration as informed with genius as the work itself.

INFORMED WITH GENIUS

To say that "The Damnation of Faust" is informed with genius is ridiculously simple, but there is much more than the pure genius of the one endowed with instinctive, spontaneous musical creativity in this. The spontaneous creativity is everywhere in evidence, of course, whether it be in the exquisite melodies that pour forth in astounding profusion or the wildly exciting pictorial images projected, or in the transitional passages from scene to scene, as in the incomparable transition from the brawling tavern scene to the glowing radiance of the first disclosure of Margarita to the dreaming Faust. The instrumental colors, the ever varied and ever evocative combinations of tonal expression and emphases, as in the English horn obligato or the Romance of Scene XV; all these are the genius of Berlioz, too.

But there is more than genius here; for genius can often be found where there is no real contact with the human heart at all. And if anything, Berlioz had that. His whole approach to the Faust legend is one of infinite grasp of the questing spirit of a humanity bogged down in the mediocrities of living, unable to recognize happiness, foolish in the delusion that there is any way out save in service to mankind.

The Faust of Goethe learns this while the Faust of Gounod never recognizes the problem even exists. The Faust of Berlioz, however, though he doesn't come to grips with Goethe's final problem, suggests that he could. He is shown here as the lover, to be sure, but not until—like Berlioz—he has explored the horizon of his melancholy, and has rejected peasant gayety and drunken brawling as well.

Music Hath Charm

"Eagle" Jan 16, 1954 By A. G. Rud

LENOX—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's decision to extend the Berkshire Festival season is considered one of the biggest things that's happened to the tourist trade since Henry Hadley led his charges through Beethoven's Fifth in Dan Hanna's riding ring back in 1934.

The plan is hailed as the key to a bang-up summer in which more people will visit the Berkshires, a greater gross vacation business will be recorded, more music will be enjoyed—and overcrowding will be held to a minimum. Remarkable, but the addition of just three major concerts and a little shuffling of the schedule may accomplish exactly that.

* * *

WITH THE full orchestra playing in the big Shed six weekends instead of only three, there will be a more even distribution of visitors through the summer. For the past several years the schedule has called for three weekends of small concerts by the chamber-sized BSO in the theater-concert hall, followed by three weekends of full BSO concerts in the Shed.

The original idea was to offer to small audiences some lesser known music by early masters like Bach and Mozart, without bringing in the full orchestra from Boston until the last half of the season. This worked out splendidly—so splendidly, in fact, that the theater-concert hall was packed for each performance and as many as 4,000 were seated and sprawled on the lawn. What to do with all these music-lovers? The Bach-Mozart concerts couldn't be moved into the big Shed without losing the intimate atmosphere the music was intended for.

The new plan presumably will solve that problem. Now, during the July 4-Aug. 15 season, there will be Bach-Mozart concerts Friday evenings and Shed concerts Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Thus each weekend will have something for every concertgoer, the Bach aficionado as well as the guy who just goes to stamp his feet during Ravel's "Bolero."

* * *

ONE OF THE conveniences of the new plan is that it will facilitate figuring out what is going on at Tanglewood any particular night. The pattern has been so irregular in the past that a detailed, well-asterisked program has been basic equipment for anyone wishing to keep posted on the 50-odd events presented during the season. Now at least the main patterns will be the same for every one of the six weeks: Opera Tuesday, chamber music Wednesday, student orchestra Thursday, Bach-Mozart Friday, BSO Saturday, student chamber music Sunday morning and BSO Sunday afternoon. That is a good deal easier to keep in mind than a schedule that changes every day.

Even without including the other events presented throughout the season, it is obvious that there is almost a full week of music there, with Monday for catching your breath. Local enterpreneurs hope it will be sufficiently attractive to induce visitors to come here for a week at a time, rather than a night or two.

Of course, to hear anything at Tanglewood besides the BSO, one must join the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center by making a donation, modest or otherwise. This policy will be continued but it is expected that the "Friends Concerts" will be more heavily promoted than in former years, so that the public will become fully aware of the week-long attractions as well as the big weekend jobs. The Berkshire Hills Conference is already working on plans to put this idea across.

* * *

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
FEB 20 1954

BOSTON MASS.
GLOBE
FEB 28 1954

Complete Programs Announced for Larger Berkshire Festival

The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August have been decided under the supervision of Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The increased season has been planned by Mr. Munch to meet the constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox in the Berkshire Hills last Summer. Twenty-four concerts are announced for the six weeks from July 7 to Aug. 15, including six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings and six Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts, Charles Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel, and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

Following is the complete lineup of concerts,

Shed Programs

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second Week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday evening (Pierre Monteux): Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor. Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third Week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday evening (Jean Morel)—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations." Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

4th week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday afternoon (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff, "Chout;" Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

5th week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2. Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz Program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

6th week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Bach-Mozart Series

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100; Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6, Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella"; a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder"; Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319; and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

The series of concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Grifler String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4, Zino Francescatti; the sixth on Aug. 11, the Kroll Quartet.

Music

BSO Gives Preview of Concert To Be Played at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra's concert yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall in Boston is the exact one with which they plan to open the coming Tanglewood season on July 7. Because this is the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz, Charles Munch, the orchestra's director, and always one of Berlioz's staunchest champions, is celebrating the occasion by performing all the major works in their unabridged form this season during the orchestra's regular season.

* * *

YESTERDAY afternoon in a performance that built up to awesome tension he played the "Damnation of Faust" with the aid of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club, and a quartet of eminent soloists of which Suzanne Danco was the Marguerite, David Poleri the Faust, Martial Singher, Mephistopheles and Donald Gramm, Braden. Both choirs plan to reassemble at Tanglewood after the close of school for the performance here as well as the soloists.

There were moments of grandeur when Munch realized some of the magnificent effects Berlioz contrived, by simplicity mainly, rather than by intricate or involved means, some by suspense and understatement, others by excitement and a bit of majestic extravagance.

* * *

MUNCH DOMINATED and controlled his forces easily and confidently. The work, which Berlioz called a dramatic legend, was fashioned by Berlioz himself after Goethe's Faust and has been mounted as an opera with scenery and costumes and ballet on many occasions and still holds the stage in the Paris opera repertory. It has been prepared with extra care for this concert as it is to be recorded Monday by the Victor forces.

The choruses were prepared by G. Wallace Woodworth and they sang with rifle-sharp response and alertness. Their French diction was masterful. The work abounds in special opportunities for soloists among the orchestral sections and they were executed with conspicuous beauty. Munch disciplined and restrained the orchestra admirably for his vocal soloists. He gave them free rein and the utmost liberty while he suported them faithfully. It is divided into four sections but it was the shortest two hours we can remember passing in a concert hall, so absorbing is the music and this particular interpretation.

* * *

ANYONE who has not subscribed to the entire Tanglewood season this coming summer will do well at least to plan to attend the opening concert at which this Berlioz will be played. There is no involved and intricate absorption necessary to enjoy this. It is an easy and great musical treat. Mr. Munch whose enthusiasm for Berlioz, persuaded him to accept the post of president of the newly organized Berlioz Society, was given an ovation even though the Friday afternoon audience was in its usual evident hurry to be out of the hall and to their conveyances.

ARRAU WILL OPEN BERKSHIRE FETE

July 7 Program to Feature Pianist and Bel Arte Trio—6-Week Schedule Listed

The 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will consist of four concerts a week for six weeks. The new pattern, established by Charles Munch, will comprise chamber music concerts Wednesday nights, little orchestra concerts Friday nights and concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons.

Claudio Arrau and the el Arte String Trio will open the festival on Wednesday, July 7. The first little orchestra concert on July 9 will offer five of Bach's Brandenburg's Concertos led by Mr. Munch.

The first full orchestral concert on July 10 will present the first of the many Berlioz works that will be interspersed through the festival to mark the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. It will be "The Damnation of Faust" with Mr. Munch conducting and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society providing the chorus.

An all-Beethoven program on July 11, conducted by Pierre Monteux, with Mr. Arrau as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto will complete the first week.

A summary of the remaining five weeks is as follows:

July 14, Albeneri Trio; July 16, Bach's Cantata No. 39 and Orchestra Suites 1 and 4, led by Mr. Munch; July 17, all-Cesar Franck program led by Mr. Monteaux; July 18, Debussy's "Iberia," Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto and Berlioz "Fantastique," led by Mr. Munch.

July 21, Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 23, Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 4 and Haydn's "Military Symphony, led by Mr. Munch, and Haydn's "Nelson" Mass led by Hugh Ross; July 24, Weber's "Freischuetz" Overture, Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma Variations," led by Jean Morel; July 25, Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" and Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, led by Mr. Munch.

July 28, Griller String Quartet; July 30, Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute oCncerto. Mozart's Serenade (K. 388) and "Paris" Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; July 31, Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 1, Prokofieff's "Chout," Dvorak's Violin Concerto and Sibelius' Second Symphony, led by Richard Burgin.

Aug. 4, Boston Woodwind Quintet; Aug. 6, Stravinsky's "Pulcinella," a Mozart Piano Concerto played by Seuymour Lipkin and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," led by Paul Lukas Foss; Aug. 7, Gluck's "Alceste" Overture, Betthoven Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, Brahms' Second Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 8, Berlioz' "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" sung by Eleanor Steber and the "Te Deum,' led by Mr. Munch.

Aug. 11, Kroll Quartet; Aug. 12, Rossini's "Silk Ladder" Overture. Mozart's Symphony (K. 319), Strauss' "Der Buerger als Edelmann," led by Mr. Morel; Aug. 14, Wagner's "Lohengrin" Prelude, Piston's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's Piano Concerto, Saint-Saëns' Organ Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 15, Berlioz' "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

TIGHT BINDING

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIKE
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 48,274)
This Clipping From TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
JAN 21 1954

Early Harbingers

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

THE spring and summer music festivals may soon be unique position of concluding one festival with an ann ment of the next, though that one is a full year in the The announcements come earlier and earlier year afte

So this year the holiday season was barely behind there came the first peeps about the Boston Orchestra's Berkshire Festival. The Boston news is a departure in Berkshire history and, it seems to me, highly satisfactory development.

* * *

OF LATE years one might hear, if he could bear up through the whole season, nine concerts by the full Boston Orchestra during the last three weeks of the Festival. Previous to these nine concerts he would have heard six chamber orchestra concerts and a variety of other concerts by both Boston Orchestra players and by students at the Berkshire Music Center.

This year there will be almost continuous public music making throughout the six weeks from July 5 to Aug. 15. And each week, as the announcement says, will provide music on the following basic scheme: Tuesday night an operatic concert; Wednesday night a chamber music concert; Thursday evening a student orchestra concert; Friday night the Bach-Mozart concerts which are played every year by a chamber orchestra of players from the big Boston Orchestra; Saturday night the concert by the full Boston Orchestra; Sunday morning a student chamber music concert; and Sunday afternoon another concert by the full Boston Orchestra. Monday presumably is a day for the audience which will rest, assess what it has already heard, and perhaps get a running start on what is still to come.

* * *

IN ANY event this is a big series. The total audience last summer was 118,000. The total audience in the summer to come will undoubtedly be considerably larger since there will be more orchestral concerts and they will be spaced so that it will be possible for the short term visitor to hear more of them. Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., is the address should anyone desire to plan a musical vacation this early.

BOSTON MASS
HERALD
FEB 20 1954

MUSIC

Symphony Concert

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, gave the 18th concert of the 73d season in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon. The program was given over to Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." The soloists were Suzanne Danco, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. Assisting were the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club. G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor.

By RUDOLPH ELIE

THIS PERFORMANCE of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" stands as the supreme of Charles Munch achievement in Boston, perhaps even the supreme achievement of his career.

From beginning to end there was never a doubt that Berlioz was here speaking to us through the heart and mind and passion of a man who perhaps more than any other living conductor reflects the ardor, the humanity, the integrity, the yearning and even the expressive compulsion of the composer himself. It is not merely that he captures the mood in every bar, or that he touches off the chain reaction of inspiration in every performer, or certainly not that his technical command of every instant is absolute. It is rather that he is all but the personification of the composer as well as every character in the narrative and the central significance of the very Faust legend itself. Thus, from the outset, here is no glittering demonstration of orchestral and choral mastery lying within the province of any technically competent conductor, but an act of re-creation on a plane of inspiration as informed with genius as the work itself.

INFORMED WITH GENIUS

To say that "The Damnation of Faust" is informed with genius is ridiculously simple, but there is much more than the pure genius of the one endowed with instinctive, spontaneous musical creativity in this. The spontaneous creativity is everywhere in evidence, of course, whether it be in the exquisite melodies that pour forth in astounding profusion in the wildly exciting pictorial images projected, or in the transitional passages from scene to scene, as in the incomparable transition from the brawling tavern scene to the glowing radiance of the first disclosure of Margarita to the dreaming Faust. The instrumental colors, the ever varied and ever evocative combinations of tonal expression and emphases, as in the English horn obligato or the Romance of Scene XV; all these are the genius of Berlioz, too.

But there is more than genius here: for genius can ofter be found where there is no real contact with the human heart at all. And if anything, Berlioz had that. His whole approach to the Faust legend is one of infinite grasp of the questing spirit of a humanity bogged down in the mediocrities of living, unable to recognize happiness, foolish in the delusion that there is any way out save in service to mankind.

The Faust of Goethe learns this while the Faust of Gounod never recognizes the problem even exists. The Faust of Berlioz, however, though he doesn't come to grips with Goethe's final problem, suggests that he could. He is shown here as the lover, to be sure, but not until—like Berlioz—he has explored the horizon of his melancholy, and has rejected peasant gayety and drunken brawling as well.

Mephistopheles, made the part joy—and sometimes a terror—hear throughout, traversing th Serenade as well as we can ever expect to hear it. Miss Danco, though occasionally covered by the orchestra, sang Margarita with great purity of expression and appealing emotional overtones, while Mr. Gramm, in a brief role, made Brander a memorably rollicking figure.

Sharing in every way in the superlatives were the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. Every time I hear them I say they were better than they were the last time. which by now lifts them to a point quite out of sight, but they were absolutely superb in this singing with a precision, a tonal capacity, a response and an enunciation rather hard to believe possible. It goes without saying the orchestra outdid itself, but the men of the hour were Berlioz (there ought to be the four B's, really) and the finest interpreter he ever had: Charles Munch.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
FEB 20 1954

Music Hath Charm

"Eagle" Jan 16, 1954 By A. G. Rud

LENOX—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's decision to extend the Berkshire Festival season is considered one of the biggest things that's happened to the tourist trade since Henry Hadley led his charges through Beethoven's Fifth in Dan Hanna's riding ring back in 1934.

The plan is hailed as the key to a bang-up summer in which more people will visit the Berkshires, a greater gross vacation business will be recorded, more music will be enjoyed—and overcrowding will be held to a minimum. Remarkable, but the addition of just three major concerts and a little shuffling of the schedule may accomplish exactly that.

* * *

WITH THE full orchestra playing in the big Shed six weekends instead of only three, there will be a more even distribution of visitors through the summer. For the past several years the schedule has called for three weekends of small concerts by the chamber-sized BSO in the theater-concert hall, followed by three weekends of full BSO concerts in the Shed.

The original idea was to offer to small audiences some lesser known music by early masters like Bach and Mozart, without bringing in the full orchestra from Boston until the last half of the season. This worked out splendidly—so splendidly, in fact, that the theater-concert hall was packed for each performance and as many as 4,000 were seated and sprawled on the lawn. What to do with all these music-lovers? The Bach-Mozart concerts couldn't be moved into the big Shed without losing the intimate atmosphere the music was intended for.

The new plan presumably will solve that problem. Now, during the July 4-Aug. 15 season, there will be Bach-Mozart concerts Friday evenings and Shed concerts Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Thus each weekend will have something for every concertgoer, the Bach aficionado as well as the guy who just goes to stamp his feet during Ravel's "Bolero."

* * *

ONE OF THE conveniences of the new plan is that it will facilitate figuring out what is going on at Tanglewood any particular night. The pattern has been so irregular in the past that a detailed, well-asterisked program has been basic equipment for anyone wishing to keep posted on the 50-odd events presented during the season. Now at least the main patterns will be the same for every one of the six weeks: Opera Tuesday, chamber music Wednesday, student orchestra Thursday, Bach-Mozart Friday, BSO Saturday, student chamber music Sunday morning and BSO Sunday afternoon. That is a good deal easier to keep in mind than a schedule that changes every day.

Even without including the other events presented throughout the season, it is obvious that there is almost a full week of music there, with Monday for catching your breath. Local enterpreneurs hope it will be sufficiently attractive to induce visitors to come here for a week at a time, rather than a night or two.

Of course, to hear anything at Tanglewood besides the BSO, one must join the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center by making a donation, modest or otherwise. This policy will be continued but it is expected that the "Friends Concerts" will be more heavily promoted than in former years, so that the public will become fully aware of the week-long attractions as well as the big weekend jobs. The Berkshire Hills Conference is already working on plans to put this idea across.

* * *

BOSTON MASS.
GLOBE
FEB 28 1954

Complete Programs Announced for Larger Berkshire Festival

The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August have been decided under the supervision of Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The increased season has been planned by Mr. Munch to meet the constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox in the Berkshire Hills last Summer. Twenty-four concerts are announced for the six weeks from July 7 to Aug. 15, including six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings and six Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts, Charles Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel, and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

Following is the complete lineup of concerts.

Shed Programs

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second Week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday evening (Pierre Monteux); Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third Week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday evening (Jean Morel)—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations." Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

4th week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday afternoon (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

5th week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

6th week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston, Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Bach-Mozart Series

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100; Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6, Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella"; a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder"; Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319; and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

The series of concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4, Zino Francescatti; the sixth on Aug. 11, the Kroll Quartet.

Music

BSO Gives Preview of Concert To Be Played at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra's concert yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall in Boston is the exact one with which they plan to open the coming Tanglewood season on July 7. Because this is the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz, Charles Munch, the orchestra's director, and always one of Berlioz's staunchest champions, is celebrating the occasion by performing all the major works in their unabridged form this season during the orchestra's regular season.

* * *

YESTERDAY afternoon in a performance that built up to awesome tension he played the "Damnation of Faust" with the aid of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club, and a quartet of eminent soloists of which Suzanne Danco was the Marguerite, David Poleri the Faust, Martial Singher, Mephistopheles and Donald Gramm, Braden. Both choirs plan to reassemble at Tanglewood after the close of school for the performance here as well as the soloists.

There were moments of grandeur when Munch realized some of the magnificent effects Berlioz contrived, by simplicity mainly, rather than by intricate or involved means, some by suspense and understatement, others by excitement and a bit of majestic extravagance.

* * *

MUNCH DOMINATED and controlled his forces easily and confidently. The work, which Berlioz called a dramatic legend, was fashioned by Berlioz himself after Goethe's Faust and has been mounted as an opera with scenery and costumes and ballet on many occasions and still holds the stage in the Paris opera repertory. It has been prepared with extra care for this concert as it is to be recorded Monday by the Victor forces.

The choruses were prepared by G. Wallace Woodworth and they sang with rifle-sharp response and alertness. Their French diction was masterful. The work abounds in special opportunities for soloists among the orchestral sections and they were executed with conspicuous beauty. Munch disciplined and restrained the orchestra admirably for his vocal soloists. He gave them free rein and the utmost liberty while he suported them faithfully. It is divided into four sections but it was the shortest two hours we can remember passing in a concert hall, so absorbing is the music and this particular interpretation.

* * *

ANYONE who has not subscribed to the entire Tanglewood season this coming summer will do well at least to plan to attend the opening concert at which this Berlioz will be played. There is no involved and intricate absorption necessary to enjoy this. It is an easy and great musical treat. Mr. Munch whose enthusiasm for Berlioz, persuaded him to accept the post of president of the newly organized Berlioz Society, was given an ovation even though the Friday afternoon audience was in its usual evident hurry to be out of the hall and to their conveyances.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1954.

Pianist and Be... Arte ... —
6-Week Schedule Listed

The 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will consist of four concerts a week for six weeks. The new pattern, established by Charles Munch, will comprise chamber music concerts Wednesday nights, little orchestra concerts Friday nights and concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons.

Claudio Arrau and the el Arte String Trio will open the festival on Wednesday, July 7. The first little orchestra concert on July 9 will offer five of Bach's Brandenburg's Concertos led by Mr. Munch.

The first full orchestral concert on July 10 will present the first of the many Berlioz works that will be interspersed through the festival to mark the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. It will be "The Damnation of Faust" with Mr. Munch conducting and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society providing the chorus.

An all-Beethoven program on July 11, conducted by Pierre Monteux, with Mr. Arrau as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto will complete the first week.

A summary of the remaining five weeks is as follows:

July 14, Albeneri Trio; July 16, Bach's Cantata No. 39 and Orchestra Suites 1 and 4, led by Mr. Munch; July 17, all-Cesar Franck program led by Mr. Monteaux; July 18, Debussy's "Iberia," Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto and Berlioz "Fantastique," led by Mr. Munch.

July 21, Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 23, Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 4 and Haydn's "Military Symphony, led by Mr. Munch. and Haydn's "Nelson" Mass led by Hugh Ross; July 24, Weber's "Freischuetz" Overture, Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma Variations," led by Jean Morel; July 25, Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" and Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, led by Mr. Munch.

July 28, Griller String Quartet; July 30, Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute oCncerto. Mozart's Serenade (K. 388) and "Paris" Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; July 31, Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 1, Prokofieff's "Chout," Dvorak's Violin Concerto and Sibelius' Second Symphony, led by Richard Burgin.

Aug. 4, Boston Woodwind Quintet; Aug. 6, Stravinsky's "Pulcinella," a Mozart Piano Concerto played by Seuymour Lipkin and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," led by Paul Lukas Foss; Aug. 7, Gluck's "Alceste" Overture, Betthoven Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, Brahms' Second Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 8, Berlioz' "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" sung by Eleanor Steber and the "Te Deum," led by Mr. Munch.

Aug. 11, Kroll Quartet; Aug. 12, Rossini's "Silk Ladder" Overture. Mozart's Symphony (K. 319), Strauss' "Der Buerger als Edelmann," led by Mr. Morel; Aug. 14, Wagner's "Lohengrin" Prelude, Piston's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's Piano Concerto, Saint-Saëns' Organ Symphony, led by Mr. Munch; Aug. 15, Berlioz' "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

[80]

Mindenekelőtt megemlitem, hogy idén több kedves uri familia barátságával lettünk gazdagabbak, akik közül néhányan kocsival rendelkeztek és igy számos szép kirándulást tettünk. Igy vált lehetővé, hogy háromszor is elmehettünk TANGLEWOOD-ra, ahol a világhirü MUSIC CENTER van. Ahogy Európának Salzburg a zenei központja, ugy nekünk amerikaiaknak Tanglewood, mely a BERKSHIRE hegyek 3000 láb magas csodálatosan szép platóján terül el.

A BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA Amerika legelső és legjobb zenekara itt tart minden nyáron nagyszabásu MUSIC FESTIVAL ünnepségeket, melyben rendszerint 10—12000 ember szokott egy-egy vasárnap délután gyönyörködni. BEETHOVEN, BACH MOZART, HAYDN vagy WAGNER alkotásait végig élvezni talán tulmegy a gyönyörüség határain is...

* * *

New York Times
F. 1-10-54

THE

TORTELIER OFFERS HAYDN CONCERTO

French 'Cellist Is Heard With Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch—Organist Plays

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA. Charles Munch, conductor. Paul Tortelier, 'cellist. Edouard Nies-Berger, organist. At Carnegie Hall.

Chorale Prelude and Chorale.....Bach-Munch
Variations on a Theme of Haydn.....Brahms
Concerto for 'Cello in D major.....Haydn
Symphony No. 3 in C minor with organ. Saint-Saens

Paul Tortelier, French 'cellist who was heard here nine days ago in recital, was the soloist yesterday afternoon with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. He played the Haydn 'Cello Concerto in D major and earned a big hand, with the members of the orchestra applauding as heartily as any.

One could understand his fellow musicians' praise. His tone is not as velvety as that of some other 'cellists, but in the clearness with which he articulates each note, even the very fast ones that come close together in a trill, he is an exceptional performer.

Then, too, he plays with the sort of authority that has a two-fold effect. It enables him to be a sufficiently dominant figure to balance a full orchestra, and it fixes the listener's attention. Thus his performance was an engrossing experience, even though on other occasions the work has been played with greater warmth and a more spontaneous lyricism.

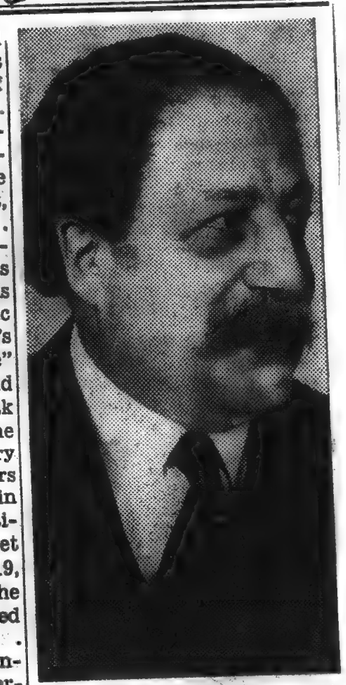
The program was conducted by Charles Munch and, although it contained largely familiar works, it was exceptionally well constructed. This fact became especially apparent at the end, when the chorale-like finale of the Saint-Saëns Symphony in C minor with Organ recalled the Bach chorale that had opened the program.

The Bach work, "The Old Year Is Past," transcribed by Mr. Munch, was quiet and contemplative; it provided a restrained and reverent basis on which Mr. Munch was constantly able to build. Thus he could move to Brahms' Variations on a Theme of Haydn (played with great variety of effect from variation to variation), to the Haydn Concerto and finally to the rather orotund Saint-Saëns, where one was ready for the impact of all the resources of the huge orchestra, the kettle drums, the trumpets, etc., all joining with the organ in the big finale.

The orchestra played beautifully all afternoon and the audience listened with the deepest sort of appreciation. R. P.

Music's Man of the Week

Herald Tribune Nov 15-53



PIERRE MONTEUX, who will conduct the NBC Symphony this afternoon and the opening of the Met tomorrow night . . . born in Paris in 1875 . . . graduated from the Paris Conservatory . . . he then joined the Colonne Orchestra as violinist, later the Opera Comique . . . in 1911 became one of the principal conductors of Diaghileff's Ballet Russe . . . during this period conducted many historic premieres, including Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" . . . at the outbreak of World War I he joined the thirty-fifth Territorial Infantry and saw action for two years . . . first visited America in 1915 . . . invited by Gatti-Casazza to conduct at the Met . . . remained there until 1919, when he took charge of the Boston Symphony . . . stayed in Boston for five years . . . became conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam in 1924, a position he held for ten years . . . returning to America, he guest conducted various orchestras and was made permanent director of the San Francisco Symphony in 1936 . . . the following year he led the first concerts of the NBC Symphony . . . since he resigned his post in San Francisco two years ago he has been more active than ever . . . now makes appearances throughout the world and spends his summers teaching young conducting aspirants in Hancock, Me.

BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CARNEGIE HALL • 68th SEASON IN NEW YORK
5 WED. EVES.—DEC. 2, JAN. 13, FEB. 10, MAR. 10, APR. 7
SAT. AFTS.—DEC. 5, JAN. 16, FEB. 13, MAR. 13, APR. 10
TICKETS AT CARENGIE HALL BOX OFFICE

BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CARNEGIE HALL • 68th SEASON IN NEW YORK
5 WED. EVES.—DEC. 2, JAN. 13, FEB. 10, MAR. 10, APR. 7
SAT. AFTS.—DEC. 5, JAN. 16, FEB. 13, MAR. 13, APR. 10
Address inquiries to GEORGE E. JUDD, Manager, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

New York Times Nov 1 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

MUSIC ON STAGE

The fact that most of the national music events, as well as many such international happenings are funneled into the New York area; that practically no audience is more alert to the wide range of music and musicianship than New York and its environs, has urged this corner to take more than casual note in print. The Summer festivals, chief of which is the Tanglewood Music Festival, are a Summer topic of discussion among the apartment cliff dwellers as well as those of us who make up Westchester's house and garden set. The Sadlers Wells ballets, the opera and symphonic world ensembles are part and parcel of the living world of entertainment. Consequently our spotlight may wander at times from the world of theatre to embrace significant occurrences in the related field of music and its brethren arts.

* * *

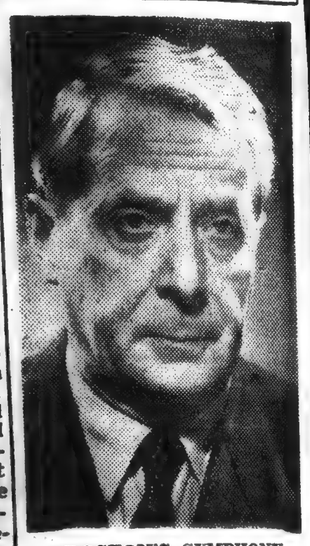
We hereby pass on the information that the world renowned 104-man aggregation known as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will leave its headquarters in Boston to tour the Eastern seaboard, and again under its master musician Charles Munch. Mr. Munch, now in his fifth year as conductor will baton the 73rd year of the Boston Symphony concerts through a series of five Wednesday evening concerts and five Saturday afternoon concerts. The evening dates are December 2, January 13, February 10, March 10 and April 7. The Saturday concerts will occur on the afternoons of Dec. 5th, January 16, February 13, and April 10.

* * *

There are still available a number of balcony locations for each of the series at $7.50 the five. The popularity of these concerts are such that there are no orchestra seats left. The subscription Department of the organization addressed to Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts will attend to your request.

* * *

Add musical annotations: Richard Dyer-Bennet brings his guitar and fine tenor voice onto the stage of Town Hall tomorrow, Saturday, for a group of songs which will include some French and German in their native language. The American section will feature among others "My Good Old Man," "The Lonesome Valley," "Mary Had a Baby" and the Childrens' play-party song "I Went Out One Morning in May." . . . Elaine Malbin, soprano of the New York City Opera Company, flew in from London after guesting on some B.B.C. telecasts of opera . . . before his departure on a round-the-world tour, violinist Isaac Stern was issued a $250,000 insurance policy protecting him against injury to his hands and against concert cancellations. This is the first such contract issued in this country and marks a fine rapport between art and big business.



BOSTON'S SYMPHONY
CHARLES MUNCH

Hub Symph Makes 250G Fund Plea

Variety Dec 16-53

Boston, Dec. 15.

In an unprecedented move here last week, trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra sent out an SOS for funds to meet obligations for the current season via half-page ads in two Hub dailies. Ads stated frankly that the BSO is in critical financial condition, pointing out the dire need to raise $250,000 for this season, and urging broader community support. In addition to the public appeal, several committees have been organized to solicit individuals and business houses for contributions with the feelings in some quarters that if this method fails, the only alternative is to cut down personnel or drop the orchestra entirely. However, regarding the latter course, trustee Michael Kelleher optimistically believes no such drastic move will be necessary and that the citizens will dig up the coin to underwrite the orchestra.

The annual budget for the organization, which includes 104 musicians, is $1,500,000, but only $1,000,000 of that amount is raised by concerts. The balance is dependent on record royalties, earnings on endowments, rental of Symphony Hall, which this year has been exempted from taxes, and contributions of "friends of the orchestra".

Boston Symphony
Herald Tribune Nov 8-53

When the Boston Symphony Orchestra comes to Carnegie Hall for the first time this season, Wednesday night, Dec. 2, Charles Munch will introduce to New York Dimitri Kabalevsky's Cello Concerto and Ernest Bloch's second Concerto Grosso, for strings. Samuel Mayes, the Bostonians' first cellist, will be soloist in the Kabalevsky work, which he played in its first American performance Oct. 27 by the Hartford Symphony under Fritz Mahler Oct. 28 and its Boston hearings Oct. 30 and 31. Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Brahms' Fourth Symphony complete the program.

On Saturday afternoon, Dec. 5, Mr. Munch will offer Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto (also known as the Jazz Concerto) and Debussy's "Iberia." Leo Smit, who will play the Copland work, was also the soloist in its last performances here by the Bostonians in 1927 and at the Lewisohn Stadium in 1930. Ferenc Friscsay, conductor of the RIAS Orchestra (Radio Orchestra in the American Sector of Berlin) will make his North American debut as conductor of the Boston Symphony's home concerts next Friday.

CARNEGIE HALL • NEW YORK
5 Wednesday Evening Concerts at 8:45
5 Saturday Afternoon Concerts at 2:30
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
DEC. 2&5 • JAN. 13&16 • FEB. 10&13 • MAR. 10&13 • APR. 7&10
A few balcony seats are still available for each series: $7.50 for five concerts. Address mail orders to New York Subcription Department, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

8-15-53 White Plains Reporter Dispatch

CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
5 WEDNESDAY EVENING CONCERTS AT 8:
5 SATURDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS AT 2:
by the
Boston Symphony Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, MUSIC DIRECTOR
December 2, 5 — January 13, 16 — February 10, 13
March 10, 13 — April 7, 10
A few balcony seats are still available for each series: $7.50 for five concerts. Address mail orders to the box office of
CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK 19

[81]

Mindenekelőtt megemlitem, hogy idén több kedves uri familia barátságával lettünk gazdagabbak, akik közül néhányan kocsival rendelkeztek és igy számos szép kirándulást tettünk. Igy vált lehetővé, hogy háromszor is elmehettünk TANGLEWOOD-ra, ahol a világhirü MUSIC CENTER van. Ahogy Európának Salzburg a zenei központja, ugy nekünk amerikaiaknak Tanglewood, mely a BERKSHIRE hegyek 3000 láb magas csodálatosan szép platóján terül el.

A BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA Amerika legelső és legjobb zenekara itt tart minden nyáron nagyszabásu MUSIC FESTIVAL ünnepségeket, melyben rendszerint 10—12000 ember szokott egy-egy vasárnap délután gyönyörködni. BEETHOVEN, BACH MOZART, HAYDN vagy WAGNER alkotásait végig élvezni talán tulmegy a gyönyörüség határain is...

* * *

New York Times
F. 15-17-54

THE

TORTELIER OFFERS HAYDN CONCERTO

French 'Cellist Is Heard With Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch—Organist Plays

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA. Charles Munch, conductor. Paul Tortelier, 'cellist. Edouard Nies-Berger, organist. At Carnegie Hall.

Chorale Prelude and Chorale.....Bach-Munch
Variations on a Theme of Haydn....Brahms
Concerto for 'Cello in D major.....Haydn
Symphony No. 3 in C minor with organ.
Saint-Saens

Paul Tortelier, French 'cellist who was heard here nine days ago in recital, was the soloist yesterday afternoon with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. He played the Haydn 'Cello Concerto in D major and earned a big hand, with the members of the orchestra applauding as heartily as any.

One could understand his fellow musicians' praise. His tone is not as velvety as that of some other 'cellists; but in the clearness with which he articulates each note, even the very fast ones that come close together in a trill, he is an exceptional performer.

Then, too, he plays with the sort of authority that has a two-fold effect. It enables him to be a sufficiently dominant figure to balance a full orchestra, and it fixes the listener's attention. Thus his performance was an engrossing experience, even though on other occasions the work has been played with greater warmth and a more spontaneous lyricism.

The program was conducted by Charles Munch and, although it contained largely familiar works, it was exceptionally well constructed. This fact became especially apparent at the end, when the chorale-like finale of the Saint-Saëns Symphony in C minor with Organ recalled the Bach chorale that had opened the program.

The Bach work, "The Old Year Is Past," transcribed by Mr. Munch, was quiet and contemplative; it provided a restrained and reverent basis on which Mr. Munch was constantly able to build. Thus he could move to Brahms Variations on a Theme of Haydn (played with great variety of effect from variation to variation), to the Haydn Concerto and finally to the rather orotund Saint-Saëns, where one was ready for the impact of all the resources of the huge orchestra, the kettle drums, the trumpets, etc., all joining with the organ in the big finale.

The orchestra played beautifully all afternoon and the audience listened with the deepest sort of appreciation.

R. P.

Music's Man of the Week

Herald Tribune Nov 15-53

PIERRE MONTEUX, who will conduct the NBC Symphony this afternoon and the opening of the Met tomorrow night . . . born in Paris in 1875 . . . graduated from the Paris Conservatory . . . he then joined the Colonne Orchestra as violinist, later the Opera Comique . . . in 1911 became one of the principal conductors of Diaghileff's Ballet Russe . . . during this period conducted many historic premieres, including Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and "Le Sacre" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" . . . at the outbreak of World War I he joined the thirty-fifth Territorial Infantry and saw action for two years . . . first visited America in 1915 . . . invited by Gatti-Casazza to conduct at the Met . . . remained there until 1919, when he took charge of the Boston Symphony . . . stayed in Boston for five years . . . became conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam in 1924, a position he held for ten years . . . returning to America, he guest conducted various orchestras and was made permanent director of the San Francisco Symphony in 1936 . . . the following year he led the first concerts of the NBC Symphony . . . since he resigned his post in San Francisco two years ago he has been more active than ever . . . now makes appearances throughout the world and spends his summers teaching young conducting aspirants in Hancock, Me.

BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CARNEGIE HALL • 68th SEASON IN NEW YORK
5 WED. EVES.—DEC. 2, JAN. 13, FEB. 10, MAR. 10, APR. 7
SAT. AFTS.—DEC. 5, JAN. 16, FEB. 13, MAR. 13, APR. 10
TICKETS AT CARENGIE HALL BOX OFFICE

BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
CARNEGIE HALL • 68th SEASON IN NEW YORK
5 WED. EVES.—DEC. 2, JAN. 13, FEB. 10, MAR. 10, APR. 7
SAT. AFTS.—DEC. 5, JAN. 16, FEB. 13, MAR. 13, APR. 10
Address inquiries to GEORGE E. JUDD, Manager, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

New York Times Nov 1 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

MUSIC ON STAGE

The fact that most of the national music events, as well as many such international happenings are funneled into the New York area; that practically no audience is more alert to the wide range of music and musicianship than New York and its environs, has urged this corner to take more than casual note in print. The Summer festivals, chief of which is the Tanglewood Music Festival, are a Summer topic of discussion among the apartment cliff dwellers as well as those of us who make up Westchester's house and garden set. The Sadlers Wells ballets, the opera and symphonic world ensembles are part and parcel of the living world of entertainment. Consequently our spotlight may wander at times from the world of theatre to embrace significant occurrences in the related field of music and its brethren arts.

* * *

We hereby pass on the information that the world renowned 104-man aggregation known as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will leave its headquarters in Boston to tour the Eastern seaboard, and again under its master musician Charles Munch. Mr. Munch, now in his fifth year as conductor will baton the 73rd year of the Boston Symphony concerts through a series of five Wednesday evening concerts and five Saturday afternoon concerts. The evening dates are December 2, January 13, February 10, March 10 and April 7. The Saturday concerts will occur on the afternoons of Dec. 5th, January 16, February 13, and April 10.

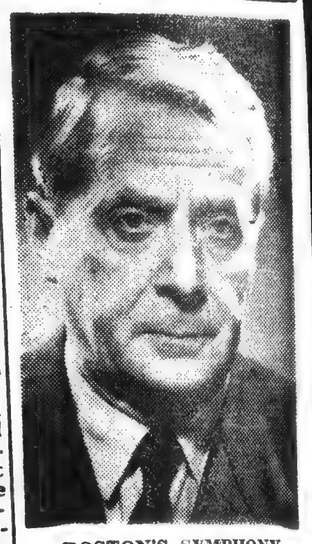
* * *

There are still available a number of balcony locations for each of the series at $7.50 the five. The popularity of these concerts are such that there are no orchestra seats left. The subscription Department of the organization addressed to Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts will attend to your request.

* * *

Add musical annotations: Richard Dyer-Bennet brings his guitar and fine tenor voice onto the stage of Town Hall tomorrow, Saturday, for a group of songs which will include some French and German in their native language. The American section will feature among others "My Good Old Man," "The Lonesome Valley," "Mary Had a Baby" and the Childrens' play-party song "I Went Out One Morning in May."

. . . Elaine Malbin, soprano of the New York City Opera Company, flew in from London after guesting on some B.B.C. telecasts of opera . . . before his departure on a round-the-world tour, violinist Isaac Stern was issued a $250,000 insurance policy protecting him against injury to his hands and against concert cancellations. This is the first such contract issued in this country and marks a fine rapport between art and big business.



BOSTON'S SYMPHONY
CHARLES MUNCH

Hub Symph Makes 250G Fund Plea

Variety Dec 16-53

Boston, Dec. 15.

In an unprecedented move here last week, trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra sent out an SOS for funds to meet obligations for the current season via half-page ads in two Hub dailies. Ads stated frankly that the BSO is in critical financial condition, pointing out the dire need to raise $250,000 for this season, and urging broader community support. In addition to the public appeal, several committees have been organized to solicit individuals and business houses for contributions with the feelings in some quarters that if this method fails, the only alternative is to cut down personnel or drop the orchestra entirely. However, regarding the latter course, trustee Michael Kelleher optimistically believes no such drastic move will be necessary and that the citizens will dig up the coin to underwrite the orchestra.

The annual budget for the organization, which includes 104 musicians, is $1,500,000, but only $1,000,000 of that amount is raised by concerts. The balance is dependent on record royalties, earnings on endowments, rental of Symphony Hall, which this year has been exempted from taxes, and contributions of "friends of the orchestra".

Boston Symphony Herald Tribune Nov 8-53

When the Boston Symphony Orchestra comes to Carnegie Hall for the first time this season, Wednesday night, Dec. 2, Charles Munch will introduce to New York Dimitri Kabalevsky's Cello Concerto and Ernest Bloch's second Concerto Grosso, for strings. Samuel Mayes, the Bostonians' first cellist, will be soloist in the Kabalevsky work, which he played in its first American performance Oct. 27 by the Hartford Symphony under Fritz Mahler Oct. 28 and its Boston hearings Oct. 30 and 31. Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Brahms' Fourth Symphony complete the program.

On Saturday afternoon, Dec. 5, Mr. Munch will offer Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto (also known as the Jazz Concerto) and Debussy's "Iberia." Leo Smit, who will play the Copland work, was also the soloist in its last performances here by the Bostonians in 1927 and at the Lewisohn Stadium in 1930. Ferenc Friscsay, conductor of the RIAS Orchestra (Radio Orchestra in the American Sector of Berlin) will make his North American debut as conductor of the Boston Symphony's home concerts next Friday.

CARNEGIE HALL • NEW YORK
5 Wednesday Evening Concerts at 8:45
5 Saturday Afternoon Concerts at 2:30
by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Dispatch White Plains 8-15-53

DEC.	JAN.	FEB.	MAR.	APR.
2&5	13&16	10&13	10&13	7&10

A few balcony seats are still available for each series: $7.50 for five concerts. Address mail orders to New York Subcription Department, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

the Reporter

CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
5 WEDNESDAY EVENING CONCERTS AT 8:45
5 SATURDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS AT 2:30
by the
Boston Symphony Orchestra
CHARLES MUNCH, MUSIC DIRECTOR
December 2, 5 — January 13, 16 — February 10, 13
March 10, 13 — April 7, 10
A few balcony seats are still available for each series: $7.50 for five concerts. Address mail orders to the box office at
CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK 19

[81]

New York Times 12-13-53

PICKING UP AGAIN

Musical Excellence of 'Pelleas'; Munch's And Morel's Conducting Impressive

By OLIN DOWNES

THE last performance that this writer reviewed, prior to the cessation of the publication of The New York Times for the eleven days, was the Metropolitan Opera Association's revival of "Pelléas et Mélisande," on Friday evening, Nov. 27. Since that review appeared only in the late edition that The Times printed on the 28th, its main points may be summarized here.

The parts were taken principally by young American singers, most of whom appeared for the first time in a work which presents exceptional problems to fully matured interpreters. The result was surprisingly good. Young artists, young voices, personable figures on the stage, displayed high intelligence and fresh enthusiasm for their task. Be it remembered that they were guided by Pierre Monteux at the baton, a master musician deeply versed in the score, and a controlling hand at the helm of the performance. The dramatic direction of Dino Yannopoulos was, on the whole, well timed in accordance with the inner pulse of Debussy's music. Horace Armistead's scenery was more Norman than "romantic," simple, yet atmospheric, with a single objectionable feature. But why on earth has he a corpse dangling from the ceiling in the scene of the vaults underneath the castle?

Hayes Anniversary

On Sunday night, Nov. 29, Roland Hayes gave a recital which celebrated the 30th anniversary of his first appearance in Carnegie Hall. Mr. Hayes sang, in his 66th year, not of course with the resonance and quality of the days when his voice was at its best and strongest, but with an interpretive insight and power of communication which made the evening one of enlightenment and pleasure. This accomplishment was the sum of a life work of uncompromising devotion to his art in the face of peculiarly difficult circumstances. In the result Roland Hayes may well feel satisfaction, reward in the highest sense of the term, and lasting happiness.

On the evening of Dec. 2 the Juilliard Orchestra conducted by Jean Morel gave the first concert of five "evenings" of the "Festival of British Music" held in observance of the year of the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II. This concert was more conspicuous for the remarkable playing of the Juilliard orchestra, under the direction of Jean Morel, than for the revelation of unsuspected masterpieces by any new composers of the British school.

For the Fifth Symphony of Edmund Rubbra, dated 1948, is tiresomely prolix, heavy-handed in its orchestration, and of a length and pretentiousness wholly out of proportion to the worth of its ideas. Far more contemporaneous in outlook, and skillfully written, is the "Symphonic Suite" for strings, of 1951 by Maurice Jacobson, heard for the first time in the United States.

In the second part of the program, Martha Flowers, with a beautiful voice and a striking personality, sang Benjamin Britten's settings of poems of Arthur Rimbaud, "Les Illuminations," composed in 1939, to the vast satisfaction of the audience.

Elgar Exciting

But the height of the accomplishment of the evening, one which makes the event stand out in the memory, was Morel's performance of nothing more nor less than the "Enigma Variations" of Edward Elgar. One would say of this work [illegible] too much of a thing [illegible] particularly interesting [illegible] concert-goer. The fact is that the exciting performance made us more fully aware of certain qualities of the music than we had been at any previous experience of it!

Was this the pontifical Elgar, composer-laureate and V. I. P. of his art in Victorian England? Elgar was now addressing us in terms of unrammelled and unconcealed animation, and with a degree of tone-color and dramatic accent that were transformative. If one took into consideration only the exterior characteristics of this performance — the contrasts of mood and style and dynamics, and the blazing climaxes—it could be called another virtuoso display. But it was no such thing. It was great music making, in the highest aspects that this activity can assume when it is creative.

The "Enigma Variations" are of German and Brahmsian descent—indeed too German in the elaborate and rather superfluous coda that the conductor, Hans Richter, induced Elgar to add to the score in its original form. But the German technic, which so often becomes over-weighted and thick, was clarified with beautiful balances and voice-leading, and made the vehicle of feeling and imagination by a conductor of the first rank, who should be more widely known to the American public than he is at the present time.

Brahms Program

On Thursday evening, George Szell was guest conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony, with an all-Brahms program. He was assisted by Eugene Istomin, as soloist, in the performance of the B-flat Piano Concerto. The lovely Symphony No. 2, with the great concerto, made a full evening's program. But the evening was a none too happy one for the interpreters—or Brahms either! The symphony moved stiffly and dryly. Mr. Istomin, whose youthful fire and enthusiasm are immediately manifest, pounded and forced tone most of the time.

The week of orchestral concerts ended for this writer with a final thrill: Charles Munch's reading of the "Eroica" Symphony. This was on Saturday afternoon, December 5, in Carnegie Hall, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The first movement, in particular, was memorable, and, in the same sense as the interpretation of the Elgar piece, a fresh experience. We had not heard, in a long time, in such momentous accents, the true voice of Beethoven. Indeed, in certain aspects and inflections, the reading was heroic in utterance, Promethean in spirit, yet wonderfully plastic and tender.

Mr. Munch played the Funeral March as the epical lament that it is, yet he also made it intensely human and poignant. The height of it all was the finale, with the mysterious summons of the reiterated B-flats, and the variants that are cosmic.

One could speak almost as highly of the performance of Debussy's "Iberia" that followed. It was rarely full-blooded, spontaneous, direct and virile. In this score Debussy holds out both hands to life, and such was the nature of the performance.

Copland Concerto

Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto, with Leo Smit as soloist, brought this concert to an end. The concerto, played very efficiently and understandingly by Mr. Smit, is boldly experimental, here and there, with motives fashioned from the stuff of our "blues" and "jazz." This is Copland in a formative stage. The concerto dates from 1927. It is not well put together, or continuous in its thinking. Mr. Copland has written much better music.

The first concert of the season's series by the Musicians' Guild was given on Monday, Dec. 7, in Town Hall. The participants were the Kroll Quartet, with Leonard Rose 'cellist, Joseph and Lillian Fuchs, violinist and violist, and Beveridge Webster, the pianist, in the performance of a Leclair sonata and the Franck Piano Quintet. The first half offered the delightful early Beethoven Serenade for violin, viola and 'cello, and the Second String Quartet by Andrew Imbrie. The second half included the pleasant if not very important old-style Sonata in A for violin, viola and piano, of Leclair, with Mr. and Miss Fuchs for the string parts and Mr. Beveridge for the pianist. It was very well done and much appreciated by the audience. The performance of the Franck Quintet was not, to our mind, one that did entire justice to the passionate and mystical music.

1-17-54

Herald Tribune NEW YORK

CONCERT AND RECITAL

Boston Orchestra

Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its second matinee concert at Carnegie Hall Saturday afternoon, presenting a program that included the Haydn-Brahms Variations, Haydn's D major Cello Concerto and Saint-Saens' C minor Symphony No. 3.

Paul Tortelier was soloist in the Haydn concerto and he gave a most authoritative performance. His opening and closing allegro movements had a certain thin, shallow tone and some of the scratchiness that seems inevitable in a cello performance at high speeds, where the instrument's slow-geared vibrations don't have time to level out and sing. The slow adagio section was quite lovely, dark and rich of tone, full of beautifully turned phrases and subtlety of detail and nuance.

Mr. Munch gives a fine reading of the Brahms Haydn Variations, emphasizing the austerity of expression rather that the peculiarly Brahmsian purity and sweetness that dwells in the heart of this work. But every architectural feature was in place and highly illumined, as in a perfect draughtsman's rendering.

The Saint-Saens Third Symphony with organ played by E. Nies-Berger was quite splendidly given, and certainly the particular blend and austerity of tone that the Boston Orchestra brings—not to mention the disciplined esthetic viewpoint of Munch himself—does much to counterbalance the rather cloying esthetic of this work. Yet it seems a work far removed from today's taste and the increasingly classic trend of that taste toward seventeenth, eighteenth and twentieth century music, where selectivity and restriction are part of style and structure rather than these "sky's-the-limit" orchestrations where esthetics disappear altogether.

P. G.-H.

Little Orchestra

The Little Orchestra Society, for its fourth young peoples' concert of the season Saturday morning at Hunter College, presented several special features, among them the first performance anywhere of "Chuggy and the Blue Caboose", a musical and literary adaptation of a children's picture book made by Harriett Johnson, music critic for "The New York Post." William Warfield, baritone, was an ingratiating soloist and narrator for the new work, which was accompanied by Thomas Scherman and the orchestra. Other events included the solo piano performance of sixteen-year-old Lynn Kleinberger, an exceedingly loud "audience participation" version of one movement from Haydn's "Toy" Symphony, and parts of Symphony No. 93 and of the Farewell Symphony by the same composer. Max Leavitt once more presided as general narrator for the concert.

Whether or not it is a valid educational device to construct an entire concert program from separate symphonic movements is perhaps a moot point. In the opinion of this reviewer, there are reasons to doubt that it is, for it would seem to convince small children of things that are not at all true about the nature of symphonies. To choose movements by the same composer was, under the circumstances, a logical idea, but even this did not avoid the cumulative feeling of disjointedness and fragmentation.

Miss Johnson's "Chuggy" is a modest, knowledgeable piece, nicely orchestrated in rather fulsome manner. Its story pleased youthful members of the audience, although for the older ones the text may have been a bit over-rhymed.

L. T.

Adolphe Frezin

Town Hall listeners were treated to some unusually fine cello playing when Adolphe Frezin, long with the famous Paganini quartet, gave his second New York recital there yesterday afternoon. Mr. Frezin is a true soloist, but not of the hair-raising kind—he is to devoted to music to be that. He brings the best elements of chamber music to the solo stage, a sense of co-operation rather than competition between the notes and himself and a just balance between his own part and the composer's, so that both have a chance to be heard. Not that Mr. Frezin effaces himself; he rides a piece from beginning to end. Although his interpretative decisions are sometimes distinctive, they reflect not only his own glory, but the music's, too.

Style and conduct are constant guides to the cellist, and he changes his own style and technique to meet each new situation. Bach's Suite No. 2 (unaccompanied) was treated freely, with broad changes in tempo, almost like improvising. The artist's warm tone and relaxed fingerwork added richness to its extended lines. In Schumann's Adagio and Allegro, Op. 70, and in the Locatelli D major sonata, his tone was more pointed and intense and his attack more immediate. Unchanged from the Bach was the easy manner in which the cellist shaped and turned each phrase until satisfied with its musical fit.

Both Mr. Frezin and his accompanist, Fritz Kramer, did their best with Poulenc's cello and piano sonata, and a diverting, nostalgic piece it is. But the composer did not make it easy, in his scoring, for the two instruments to work together; they either obscure each other or fight for attention much of the way. The effort of listening to two musical worlds at once envelops both in a dream, neither seems real, nor can one help the other up and down the music's high spots. Perhaps less pedal than the amount used by Mr. Kramer would help, or a more outside tone than Mr. Frezin's, though the cellist's is more than adequate for most purposes.

The program also offered Henry Eccles' sonata in G minor, arranged by J. Salmon. T. M. S.

Herald Tribune 1-10-54

Music: Tanglewood Change; Gluck Premiere on Friday

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Charles Munch has prepared a new schedule for the 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 through Aug. 15. The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give twelve concerts, three more than in previous summers, in the Music Shed; these will be held on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons throughout the six weeks. The small orchestra concerts, to be devoted mainly to Bach and Mozart, will be held on the six Friday evenings (July 9 through Aug. 13), in the Theater-Concert Hall. Formerly the full orchestra's concerts were grouped in the last three week ends of the festival, and the small orchestra concerts in the first three.

As already announced, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Berlioz's birth will be honored in the twelve Shed programs. There will also be chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday nights. Subscriptions will be sold for pairs of Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons; subscribers retaining their present locations will be entitled to reduced rates for the Wednesday and Friday concerts.

Berkshire Music Center students will provide opera scenes on Tuesday nights, orchestral concerts Thursday nights and chamber music on Sunday mornings. These will be open to contributing friends of the Center In all, the new schedule provides public activities every day, except Mondays. One can also expect one or more full-scale productions by the Center's opera department, presumably of unfamiliar works.

Gluck Premiere

Gluck's opera "Paride ed Elena" will have its first American hearing Friday night in the first of three concerts to be given by the enterprising American Chamber Opera Society in Town Hall. According to notes supplied by the company's director, Allen Sven Oxenburg, the work was first performed in Vienna on Dec. 30, 1770, and was well received; it has been seldom heard since owing to the lack of a performable score. Both the originally published full score and the piano and vocal score published by Peters in 1867 are full of errors; the new edition used by the company was made possible through the generosity of Mrs. W. Murray Crane.

Hans von Buelow conducted the Berlin premiere on Nov. 28, 1863; Cosima (then Buelow's wife) and Richard Wagner were in the audience. In "Mein Leben," Wagner describes this day as the one in which he and Cosima "mutely declared to each other their love." The action, based on the familiar classic legend, takes place in or near Sparta.

On the Radio

Arturo Toscanini will present Verdi's opera "Un Ballo in Maschera" in two parts in the NBC Symphony's program for the next two Sundays, from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m., Jan. 17, and 6 to 7:30 Jan. 24. A recent attack of bronchitis, from which he has recovered, did not interrupt the Maestro's rehearsals for this production. Guido Cantelli conducts Beethoven's First Symphony, Casella's "Paganiniana" and dances from Falla's "Three Cornered Hat" in today's NBC Symphony broadcast.

[82]

New York Times 1-31-54

BERLIOZ ESTIMATE

Objective Study of Composer Is Needed Rather Than Indiscriminate Praise

By OLIN DOWNES

AMONG letters received upon the subject of Berlioz, to which this commentator devoted two articles of recent date in these columns, the following is to be noted:

It was only today that I had the opportunity to read your essay entitled "Fiery Frenchman" in The New York Times of Jan. 3. I found it puzzling because your enthusiasm for the music of Berlioz was so neatly balanced by your sense of its imperfections. You seemed to be building him up and tearing him down at the same time. After mulling over your article I finally decided that it was more significant in what it revealed about you than about the music of Berlioz. I could be very wrong but I believe that perhaps Berlioz isn't really your meat.

You say that Berlioz "remains immune to inclusion in any classified list of creative artists." I find it hard to imagine what such a "classified" list would be like. Composers like Monteverdi and Mussorgsky would certainly be hard to classify. In fact the more I think about such a list the more improbable it becomes. Where would one put Beethoven, Rameau, Debussy? All great composers are so distinctly themselves that I should think any one of them might resist classification. In any case I fail to see what value such a list could have.

By fits and starts your article sounds like a sincere tribute to a frequently misunderstood composer and at other times like a thinly disguised indictment of him. You can't have it both ways. Good criticism is based on honest partisanship, on a distinct feeling of pro and con. For me your real feelings about Berlioz are left in doubt.

In my own opinion, Berlioz' music is probably about as good as that of any other composer. It wears well—and that for me is the acid test. I like its freshness, the way it sings, its rhythmical force. I have been tremendously impressed by works like "The Trojans," "The Childhood of Christ," "The Requiem," "The Damnation of Faust," etc., which I have heard only within the past few years and mainly on records. Had I been walking in the country and suddenly looked up to see unexpectedly a whole mountain range in front of me, massive and splendid in the sunlight, I could not have been more surprised or delighted.

FRANKLIN L. BALCH.

Baltimore, Md.

More Harm Than Good

This is a line of reasoning that we cannot follow; reasoning, we consider, which is the antithesis of what any open-minded critical examination of an artistic problem should be. Mr. Balch seems to claim that a keen interest in and admiration of a composer, which we feel toward Berlioz, is only logical and consistent if it includes a practically unconditional acceptance of his product. We are not of such reasoners, and wouldn't be for the world. That is the kind of approbation which does infinitely more harm than good to the cause it represents. Berlioz, as the writer sees him today, is the most astonishing and unevenly equipped of all the composers who have fought their way to the ranks of the immortals. Any estimate of him which does not recognize the facts of his exceptional weaknesses, by the side of his exceptional powers, is an argument without sound premise or logical development.

An attempt to evaluate an artist should proceed from the intention to comprehend him as God made him, and not as his propagandists and idolaters would have us believe. Nothing is more misleading, we think, where Berlioz is concerned than the loquacious pretensions of some of the self-appointed high priests of the cult in claiming that Berlioz' most inept and disjointed writing is due not to technical insufficiency, but to an originality of statement so deep, wide and great that even today, in the year after his sesquicentennial, the critics, amateur and professional, have not caught up with him. This on the clear evidence of the case is absurd. It is not by blinking at the fact that Berlioz wrote a large amount of inferior music that we shall conceal his faults or reveal his greatness. We must strive to discover and understand all his qualities for what they are, and from that point to comprehend his towering stature.

That is why this commentator wrote articles taking to task conductors and musical organizations which had so scantily observed the Berlioz sesquicentennial and in so doing failed to afford us an adequate perspective of his present position as a creative artist. It is for the same reason that we have joined the Berlioz Society, newly formed with the intentions of making scores, records and the music itself and the literary legacy of his writings and the immense amount of literature that there is about him widely accessible.

Pros and Cons

What are his unique endowments and his incidental failings as a creative artist? How does he appear to the mid-twentieth century, a hundred and fifty years from the time when he was born, and a round century after he produced his last important music? Why has he proved indestructible, at the same time that after all the immense publicity which Berlioz received almost from the start of his career, from his own highly articulate self and his hosts of admirers and detractors, we live artistically on less than a dozen of his major orchestral and choral works?

Why are only these works known to us? It is remarked that they are waxing today in popularity and public attention. But there was a time, approximately at the beginning of this century, when Berlioz appears to have been much more important in the public esteem than now, or yesterday. Is this merely the case of the pendulum of public taste swinging back and forth, as it perpetually does, even with great composers? Or is it because great music has been allowed to languish unknown upon the shelves?

And yet, on the programs of the Berlioz festival that Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and president of the Berlioz Society, will hold next summer at Tanglewood, there is no new work of Berlioz to be heard. Does an important one still unknown to the public exist?

What of the smaller scores, both for instruments and voices, of which the Berlioz investigator reads but does not hear? Have they been tried and found wanting? America has yet to hear a staging of the complete "Les Troyens," recently produced in Paris. Will this opera, the apple of the aging Berlioz' eye, which has not yet reached an indubitable success, cross the water and eventually enter the repertory here? These are questions to which the Berlioz Society and other agencies, including the music critics, will have occasion to devote themselves in a more intensive way in the months to come than ever before.

All this should lead to a fresh perspective and a new contemporary evaluation of the music of that unique and incommensurable genius, Hector Berlioz.

Tanglewood Lists Complete Programs

Herald Tribune 2-28-54

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Charles Munch will conduct eight of the twelve concerts which the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give in the 1954 Berkshire Festival on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons in Tanglewood's Music Shed at Lenox, Mass. Pierre Monteux will conduct two concerts, and one each will be directed by Richard Burgin, the orchestra's concertmaster, and by Jean Morel, conductor of the Juilliard School's Orchestra, who makes his Tanglewood debut Saturday, July 24. Mr. Munch will also conduct four of the six chamber orchestra concerts, to be held on five Friday evenings and the closing Thursday evening of the festival in the Tanglewood Theater-Concert Hall; Mr. Morel and Lukas Foss will conduct one each. The Shed programs, as announced yesterday, are as follows:

Saturday, July 10, Munch: Berlioz, "Damnation of Faust" (Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society). Sunday, July 11, Monteaux: Beethoven, "Leonore" Overture No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 (Claudio Arrau); Symphony No. 5.

Saturday, July 17, Monteux: Franck, Le Chasseur Maudit, Les Eolides, Les Djinns (Vera Franceschi, pianist); Symphony. Sunday, July 18, Munch: Debussy, Iberia; Copland, Piano Concerto (Leo Smit); Berlioz, Fantastic Symphony.

Saturday, July 24, Morel: Weber, "Der Freischuetz" (Overture; Prokofiev, Symphony No. 6; Straus, Don Juan; Elgar, Enigma Variations. Sunday, July 25, Munch: Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture; Harold in Italy (William Primrose, violist); Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Saturday, July 31, Munch: Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," with Festival Chorus and soloists. Sunday, Aug. 1, Burgin: Prokofiev, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Saturday, Aug. 7, Munch: Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony Noo. 2. Sunday, Aug. 8, Munch: Berlioz, "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans"; Summer Nights (Eleanor Steber, soprano); Te Deum.

Saturday, Aug. 14, Munch: Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston, Symphony No. 4; Ravel, Piano Concerto (Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Symphony No. 3. Sunday, Aug. 15, Munch: Berlioz, Requiem, with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

• • •

Tanglewood Chamber Concerts

Mr. Munch will devote the first two chamber orchestra concerts to Bach, offering five Brandenburg Concertos July 9 and the 93d Cantata and Suites Nos. 1 and 4 July 16. On July 23, he will conduct a Handel Concerto Grosso and Haydn's "Military" Symphony (No. 100) and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute Concerto, with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Wind Serenade in C minor (K. 388) and "Paris" Symphony (K. 297) are in his program for July 30. Lukas Foss will conduct the program for Aug. 6, including Stravinsky's ballet "Pulcinella," a Mozart piano concerto with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. Mr. Morel closes the series Thursday, Aug. 12, with Rossini's Overture to "La Scala di Seta," Mozart's Symphony in B flat (K. 319) and Strauss's music for "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

The dates and artists for the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the Theater-Concert Hall are July 7, Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, Albeneri Trio; July 21, Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, Griller Quartet; Aug. 4, Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist; Aug. 11, Kroll Quartet. Information about tickets and lists of programs may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Berlioz Slated At Carnegie

In honor of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz' birth, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present his "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony in full under Charles Munch's direction in both of its next Carnegie Hall concerts, Wednesday night, March 10, and Saturday afternoon, March 13.

Music: Tanglewood Change; Gluck Premiere on Friday

Herald Tribune 1-10-54

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Charles Munch has prepared a new schedule for the 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 through Aug. 15. The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give twelve concerts, three more than in previous summers, in the Music Shed; these will be held on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons throughout the six weeks. The small orchestra concerts, to be devoted mainly to Bach and Mozart, will be held on the six Friday evenings (July 9 through Aug. 13), in the Theater-Concert Hall. Formerly the full orchestra's concerts were grouped in the last three week ends of the festival, and the small orchestra concerts in the first three.

As already announced, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Berlioz's birth will be honored in the twelve Shed programs. There will also be chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday nights. Subscriptions will be sold for pairs of Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons; subscribers retaining their present locations will be entitled to reduced rates for the Wednesday and Friday concerts.

Berkshire Music Center students will provide opera scenes on Tuesday nights, orchestral concerts Thursday nights and chamber music on Sunday mornings. These will be open to contributing friends of the Center In all, the new schedule provides public activities every day, except Mondays. One can also expect one or more full-scale productions by the Center's opera department, presumably of unfamiliar works.

Gluck Premiere

Gluck's opera "Paride ed Elena" will have its first American hearing Friday night in the first of three concerts to be given by the enterprising American Chamber Opera Society in Town Hall. According to notes supplied by the company's director, Allen Sven Oxenburg, the work was first performed in Vienna on Dec. 30, 1770, and was well received; it has been seldom heard since owing to the lack of a performable score. Both the originally published full score and the piano and vocal score published by Peters in 1867 are full of errors; the new edition used by the company was made possible through the generosity of Mrs. W. Murray Crane.

Hans von Buelow conducted the Berlin premiere on Nov. 28, 1863; Cosima (then Buelow's wife) and Richard Wagner were in the audience. In "Mein Leben," Wagner describes this day as the one in which he and Cosima "mutely declared to each other their love." The action, based on the familiar classic legend, takes place in or near Sparta.

On the Radio

Arturo Toscanini will present Verdi's opera "Un Ballo in Maschera" in two parts in the NBC Symphony's program for the next two Sundays, from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m., Jan. 17, and 6 to 7:30 Jan. 24. A recent attack of bronchitis, from which he has recovered, did not interrupt the Maestro's [illegible] productions [illegible] ducts B[illegible] phony, [illegible] and dan[illegible] Cornere[illegible] Sympho[illegible]

BOSTON CONDUCTOR

Clement Kalischer

Charles Munch leads his ensemble in season's first visit Wednesday.

New York Time Nov 29-53

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JAN 4 1954

Berkshire Festival Enlarged

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass.—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has increased this year's Berkshire Festival concerts to twenty-four.

The six-week season from July 7 to Aug. 15 will include six concerts by chamber groups, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony members and twelve events by the full orchestra in the Shed. In the course of the Shed concerts, Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting his principal works in their complete form.

Guest conductors during this series will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two programs; Jean Morel and Richard Burgin, each in charge of one. Soloists will include Claudio Arrau, Vera Franceschi, Leo Smit and Nicole Henriot, pianists; Ruth Posselt and Zino Francescatti, violinists; William Primrose, violist, and Eleanor Steber, soprano.

CHAMBER MUSIC groups to appear in the series at the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday evenings include the Bel Arte String Trio, with Mr. Arrau; the Albeneri Trio, the Zimbler Sinfonietta, the Griller String Quartet, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and the Kroll Quartet.

[83]

New York Times 1-31-54

BERLIOZ ESTIMATE

Objective Study of Composer Is Needed Rather Than Indiscriminate Praise

By OLIN DOWNES

AMONG letters received upon the subject of Berlioz, to which this commentator devoted two articles of recent date in these columns, the following is to be noted:

It was only today that I had the opportunity to read your essay entitled "Fiery Frenchman" in The New York Times of Jan. 3. I found it puzzling because your enthusiasm for the music of Berlioz was so neatly balanced by your sense of its imperfections. You seemed to be building him up and tearing him down at the same time. After mulling over your article I finally decided that it was more significant in what it revealed about you than about the music of Berlioz. I could be very wrong but I believe that perhaps Berlioz isn't really your meat.

You say that Berlioz "remains immune to inclusion in any classified list of creative artists." I find it hard to imagine what such a "classified" list would be like. Composers like Monteverdi and Mussorgsky would certainly be hard to classify. In fact the more I think about such a list the more improbable it becomes. Where would one put Beethoven, Rameau, Debussy? All great composers are so distinctly themselves that I should think any one of them might resist classification. In any case I fail to see what value such a list could have.

By fits and starts your article sounds like a sincere tribute to a frequently misunderstood composer and at other times like a thinly disguised indictment of him. You can't have it both ways. Good criticism is based on honest partisanship, on a distinct feeling of pro and con. For me your real feelings about Berlioz are left in doubt.

In my own opinion, Berlioz' music is probably about as good as that of any other composer. It wears well—and that for me is the acid test. I like its freshness, the way it sings, its rhythmical force. I have been tremendously impressed by works like "The Trojans," "The Childhood of Christ," "The Requiem," "The Damnation of Faust," etc., which I have heard only within the past few years and mainly on records. Had I been walking in the country and suddenly looked up to see unexpectedly a whole mountain range in front of me, massive and splendid in the sunlight, I could not have been more surprised or delighted.

FRANKLIN L. BALCH.

Baltimore, Md.

More Harm Than Good

This is a line of reasoning that we cannot follow; reasoning, we consider, which is the antithesis of what any open-minded critical examination of an artistic problem should be. Mr. Balch seems to claim that a keen interest in and admiration of a composer, which we feel toward Berlioz, is only logical and consistent if it includes a practically unconditional acceptance of his product. We are not of such reasoners, and wouldn't be for the world. That is the kind of approbation which does infinitely more harm than good to the cause it represents. Berlioz, as the writer sees him today, is the most astonishing and unevenly equipped of all the composers who have fought their way to the ranks of the immortals. Any estimate of him which does not recognize the facts of his exceptional weaknesses, by the side of his exceptional powers, is an argument without sound premise or logical development.

An attempt to evaluate an artist should proceed from the intention to comprehend him as God made him, and not as his propagandists and idolaters would have us believe. Nothing is more misleading, we think, where Berlioz is concerned than the loquacious pretensions of some of the self-appointed high priests of the cult in claiming that Berlioz' most inept and disjointed writing is due not to technical insufficiency, but to an originality of statement so deep, wide and great that even today, in the year after his sesquicentennial, the critics, amateur and professional, have not caught up with him. This on the clear evidence of the case is absurd. It is not by blinking at the fact that Berlioz wrote a large amount of inferior music that we shall conceal his faults or reveal his greatness. We must strive to discover and understand all his qualities for what they are, and from that point to comprehend his towering stature.

That is why this commentator wrote articles taking to task conductors and musical organizations which had so scantily observed the Berlioz sesquicentennial and in so doing failed to afford us an adequate perspective of his present position as a creative artist. It is for the same reason that we have joined the Berlioz Society, newly formed with the intentions of making scores, records and the music itself and the literary legacy of his writings and the immense amount of literature that there is about him widely accessible.

Pros and Cons

What are his unique endowments and his incidental failings as a creative artist? How does he appear to the mid-twentieth century, a hundred and fifty years from the time when he was born, and a round century after he produced his last important music? Why has he proved indestructible, at the same time that after all the immense publicity which Berlioz received almost from the start of his career, from his own highly articulate self and his hosts of admirers and detractors, we live artistically on less than a dozen of his major orchestral and choral works?

Why are only these works known to us? It is remarked that they are waxing today in popularity and public attention. But there was a time, approximately at the beginning of this century, when Berlioz appears to have been much more important in the public esteem than now, or yesterday. Is this merely the case of the pendulum of public taste swinging back and forth, as it perpetually does, even with great composers? Or is it because great music has been allowed to languish unknown upon the shelves?

And yet, on the programs of the Berlioz festival that Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and president of the Berlioz Society, will hold next summer at Tanglewood, there is no new work of Berlioz to be heard. Does an important one still unknown to the public exist?

What of the smaller scores, both for instruments and voices, of which the Berlioz investigator reads but does not hear? Have they been tried and found wanting? America has yet to hear a staging of the complete "Les Troyens," recently produced in Paris. Will this opera, the apple of the aging Berlioz' eye, which has not yet reached an indubitable success, cross the water and eventually enter the repertory here? These are questions to which the Berlioz Society and other agencies, including the music critics, will have occasion to devote themselves in a more intensive way in the months to come than ever before.

All this should lead to a fresh perspective and a new contemporary evaluation of the music of that unique and incommensurable genius, Hector Berlioz.

Tanglewood Lists Complete Programs

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Charles Munch will conduct eight of the twelve concerts which the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give in the 1954 Berkshire Festival on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons in Tanglewood's Music Shed at Lenox, Mass. Pierre Monteux will conduct two concerts, and one each will be directed by Richard Burgin, the orchestra's concertmaster, and by Jean Morel, conductor of the Juilliard School's Orchestra, who makes his Tanglewood debut Saturday, July 24. Mr. Munch will also conduct four of the six chamber orchestra concerts, to be held on five Friday evenings and the closing Thursday evening of the festival in the Tanglewood Theater-Concert Hall; Mr. Morel and Lukas Foss will conduct one each. The Shed programs, as announced yesterday, are as follows:

Saturday, July 10, Munch: Berlioz, "Damnation of Faust" (Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society). Sunday, July 11, Monteaux: Beethoven, "Leonore" Overture No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 (Claudio Arrau); Symphony No. 5.

Saturday, July 17, Monteux: Franck, Le Chasseur Maudit, Les Eolides, Les Djinns (Vera Francheschi, pianist), Symphony. Sunday, July 18, Munch: Debussy, Iberia; Copland, Piano Concerto (Leo Smit); Berlioz, Fantastic Symphony.

Saturday, July 24, Morel: Weber, "Der Freischuetz" (Overture; Prokofiev, Symphony No. 6; Straus, Don Juan; Elgar, Enigma Variations. Sunday, July 25, Munch: Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture; Harold in Italy (William Primrose, violist); Toch, Symphony No. 3.

Saturday, July 31, Munch: Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet," with Festival Chorus and soloists. Sunday, Aug. 1, Burgin: Prokofiev, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Saturday, Aug. 7, Munch: Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony Noo. 2. Sunday, Aug. 8, Munch: Berlioz, "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans"; Summer Nights (Eleanor Steber, soprano); Te Deum.

Saturday, Aug. 14, Munch: Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston, Symphony No. 4; Ravel, Piano Concerto (Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Symphony No. 3. Sunday, Aug. 15, Munch: Berlioz, Requiem, with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

• • •

Tanglewood Chamber Concerts

Mr. Munch will devote the first two chamber orchestra concerts to Bach, offering five Brandenburg Concertos July 9 and the 93d Cantata and Suites Nos. 1 and 4 July 16. On July 23, he will conduct a Handel Concerto Grosso and Haydn's "Military" Symphony (No. 100) and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute Concerto, with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Wind Serenade in C minor (K. 388) and "Paris" Symphony (K. 297) are in his program for July 30. Lukas Foss will conduct the program for Aug. 6, including Stravinsky's ballet "Pulcinella," a Mozart piano concerto with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. Mr. Morel closes the series Thursday, Aug. 12, with Rossini's Overture to "La Scala di Seta," Mozart's Symphony in B flat (K. 319) and Strauss's music for "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

The dates and artists for the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the Theater-Concert Hall are July 7, Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, Albeneri Trio; July 21, Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, Griller Quartet; Aug. 4, Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist; Aug. 11, Kroll Quartet. Information about tickets and lists of programs may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Herald Tribune 2-28-54

Berlioz Slated At Carnegie

In honor of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz' birth, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present his "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony in full under Charles Munch's direction in both of its next Carnegie Hall concerts, Wednesday night, March 10, and Saturday afternoon, March 13.

Music: Tanglewood Change; Gluck Premiere on Friday

Herald Tribune 1-10-54

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Charles Munch has prepared a new schedule for the 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 through Aug. 15. The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra will give twelve concerts, three more than in previous summers, in the Music Shed; these will be held on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons throughout the six weeks. The small orchestra concerts, to be devoted mainly to Bach and Mozart, will be held on the six Friday evenings (July 9 through Aug. 13), in the Theater-Concert Hall. Formerly the full orchestra's concerts were grouped in the last three week ends of the festival, and the small orchestra concerts in the first three.

As already announced, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Berlioz's birth will be honored in the twelve Shed programs. There will also be chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday nights. Subscriptions will be sold for pairs of Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons; subscribers retaining their present locations will be entitled to reduced rates for the Wednesday and Friday concerts.

Berkshire Music Center students will provide opera scenes on Tuesday nights, orchestral concerts Thursday nights and chamber music on Sunday mornings. These will be open to contributing friends of the Center In all, the new schedule provides public activities every day, except Mondays. One can also expect one or more full-scale productions by the Center's opera department, presumably of unfamiliar works.

Gluck Premiere

Gluck's opera "Paride ed Elena" will have its first American hearing Friday night in the first of three concerts to be given by the enterprising American Chamber Opera Society in Town Hall. According to notes supplied by the company's director, Allen Sven Oxenburg, the work was first performed in Vienna on Dec. 30, 1770, and was well received; it has been seldom heard since owing to the lack of a performable score. Both the originally published full score and the piano and vocal score published by Peters in 1867 are full of errors; the new edition used by the company was made possible through the generosity of Mrs. W. Murray Crane.

Hans von Buelow conducted the Berlin premiere on Nov. 28, 1863; Cosima (then Buelow's wife) and Richard Wagner were in the audience. In "Mein Leben," Wagner describes this day as the one in which he and Cosima "mutely declared to each other their love." The action, based on the familiar classic legend, takes place in or near Sparta.

On the Radio

Arturo Toscanini will present Verdi's opera "Un Ballo in Maschera" in two parts in the NBC Symphony's program for the next two Sundays, from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m., Jan. 17, and 6 to 7:30 Jan. 24. A recent attack of bronchitis, from which he has recovered, did not interrupt the Maestro's rehearsals for this production. Guido Cantelli conducts Beethoven's First Symphony, Casella's "Paganiniana" and dances from Falla's "Three Cornered Hat" in today's NBC Symphony broadcast.

BOSTON CONDUCTOR

Clement Kalischer

Charles Munch leads his ensemble in season's first visit Wednesday.

New York Times Nov 29-53

...o Aug. 15 will include six con-certs by chamber groups, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony members and twelve events by the full orchestra in the Shed. In the course of the Shed concerts, Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting his principal works in their complete form.

Guest conductors during this series will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two programs; Jean Morel and Richard Burgin, each in charge of one. Soloists will include Claudio Arrau, Vera Franceschi, Leo Smit and Nicole Henriot, pianists; Ruth Posselt and Zino Francescatti, violinists; William Primrose, violist, and Eleanor Steber, soprano.

CHAMBER MUSIC groups to appear in the series at the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday evenings include the Bel Arte String Trio, with Mr. Arrau; the Albeneri Trio, the Zimbler Sinfonietta, the Griller String Quartet, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and the Kroll Quartet.

[83]

TIGHT BINDING

THE WORLD OF MUSIC: LINING UP THE FESTIVALS

New York Times 1-10-54

By ROSS PARMENTER

CHRISTMAS being out of the way, many persons' holiday thoughts are now reaching tentatively forward to summer vacations. Counting on this, the organizers of musical festivals are beginning to dangle their programs before exploratory eyes. As will be seen by the paragraphs below, the basic plans for most of the festivals of Western Europe have been made. Meanwhile, there is news of a major reorganization of one of the chief United States festivals.

The Berkshire Festival pattern at Tanglewood in the post-war years has consisted of a three-week "little" festival in the Theatre-Concert Hall, followed by three whopping week-ends of concerts by the full Boston Symphony in the Shed. The new scheme that Charles Munch has evolved will merge the "little" and the "big" festivals into a scheme that should result in six whopping week-ends. Under the Munch plan the full orchestra will give concerts in the Shed on each of the week-ends of the festival period, which this year will run from July 5 to Aug. 15.

The full orchestra concerts, though, will be limited to two each week-end. They will be given on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Friday evenings will be reserved for the Bach-Mozart program in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and these little orchestra concerts, instead of being bunched into the first three weeks, will be spread out through the whole festival. And a new series of programs is being added to the festival—chamber music concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of the period.

Berkshire Fete Expanded and Enlarged —Plans Made for European Events

Gounod's "Mireille" will be the operas at Aix-en-Provence.

To Succeed Toscanini

The choice of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the National Broadcasting Company's Saturday night concerts is something of which every resident of this area should be very proud.

For decades, this orchestra has given Boston great distinction at home and abroad; last year the Voice of America carried one of its concerts to the whole world.

That the National Broadcasting Company should have chosen the Boston orchestra to take over its broadcasts, upon the retirement of Arturo Toscanini, constitutes new and greater recognition of its excellence, and of its director Charles Munch.

Once weekly, beginning next October, Boston will be presented to the whole country in a most favorable light. When the regular season is finished, the nation will have a chance to learn why people of this area flock to "Pops" and Esplanade concerts.

Here is a development on which all Bostonians can justly congratulate themselves.

Boston Daily Globe 4-15-54

Berlioz to Get a Better Hearing

Herald Tribune 1-10-54

By JAMES LYONS
Assistant Editor of "Musical America"

If memory serves—the eleventh edition of Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" does not—it was Ambrose Bierce who defined some one's immortality as "a thousand critics shouting that he's unknown." Quantitatively, at least, the same dubious fame has overtaken Hector Berlioz. Tomorrow morning we will round out the first month of the Berlioz Year; he was born 150 years ago last Dec. 11. By now most of the essayists have had their sesquicentennial say, and the consensus is that he was an audaciously unique creator indeed. Also, that it is high time we got around to the corpus of his music beyond the handful of masterpieces now in the repertory.

Dissemination

So the anniversary panegyrics will pass, and there will be a scattered number of revivals, and perhaps a few worthy recordings. But the truth of the matter is that whatever ensues for the greater dissemination of Berlioz' works will proceed henceforth from the efforts of a dedicated little band of just plain music lovers who collectively decided, a fortnight ago, to do more about their favorite composer than to lament his low estate in the public domain. This is The Berlioz Society, presently to be incorporated, and the heretofore untold story of its spontaneous combustion makes for one of the season's most encouraging grass-roots sagas.

Credit W. E. Gillespie, of the classics faculty at Phillips Exeter Academy, with the organizational spade work. The idea took shape, appropriately, at an all-Berlioz concert. It was a Friday afternoon in Boston, several months ago. On the steps of Symphony Hall Gillespie struck up a conversation with a New York plastics designer, John Squadra. Each had come a couple of hundred miles to pay their common fealty; and soon addresses were exchanged, and ideas shortly were flowing between New Hampshire and New York.

As the Berlioz Year approached it was thought wise to enlist the counsel of a few logical persons such as Jacques Barzun, whose study of the composer is the standard biography in English, and Henry L. Gage, whose Westminster Recording Co. released the microgroove album of "Les Troyens à Carthage." The word got around, inevitably, and before long Gillespie was receiving inquiries from a most unlikely cross-section of fellow devotees.

On the Manhattan end the moving spirit has been Duncan S. Robinson, an estate planner, whose consuming passion is music generally and the music of Berlioz in particular. Robinson had heard of the embryonic society through Barzun, and immediately threw himself into its development.

The Final Impetus

A final impetus appeared in the December issue of "The American Record Guide," the authoritative journal for phonophiles edited by Peter Hugh Reed, another Berlioz fan. Gillespie had submitted to him a piece on the flourishing movement. Its frank title was "The Case for a Berlioz Society," and it was so persuasive that Gillespie's mailman has had an extra load almost daily ever since.

The whole enterprise really got under way Dec. 21 last in New York, when the hard core of what was to become The Berlioz Society gathered for the first time to draft a prospectus, settle on a fiscal policy, and complete plans for laying siege to recording impresarios, music and book publishers, the critical press and conductors.

A nucleus of nineteen founding members—including a librarian, a salesman and assorted students and executives from points as distant as North Carolina and California—approved in principle the following program:

1) To promote the recording of those works that are unknown to the American public. 2) To encourage new recordings of those works that are available only in poorly performed, poorly engineered versions. 3) To facilitate the publication in miniature score of those works not now accessible, and subsequently to sponsor an authentic complete edition. 4) To restore and translate the considerable Berlioz literary legacy, and 5) To provide a headquarters for the collation and dissemination of information about Berlioz and his works.

The Market Exists

Over all, in other words, to demonstrate to the proper parties, without high pressure or fanaticism, that a substantial Berlioz market exists. The members are to be kept up to date through a periodic newsletter, which will be covered by the minimal $2 annual dues ($1 for students). Volume 1, Number 1, is scheduled for mimeographing this month.

Implicit in all this, needless to add, is a realistic awareness of the staggering expense involved in any undertaking of the less familiar Berlioz scores. Nearly all of them are massive products; the delightfully frothy "Beatrice and Benedict" is an exception, and there is some small hope of getting it produced hereabouts.

But what of the "Te Deum," and the longer operas? "Benvenuto Cellini" and the two-part "Les Troyens" have not even been published; their autographs are in a Paris basement. And yet The Berlioz Society hopes to see them mounted at the Metropolitan, no less, either through assured subscription or cordial coercion, or both.

100th 'Lucia' For Lily Pons

When Lily Pons makes her first appearance of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House Wednesday night, it will be her 100th performance of the title role of "Lucia di Lammermoor," in which she made her memorable American debut in January, 1931. This week's performance falls on Jan. 13, and the soprano has said that thirteen is her lucky number. Moreover, Jan Peerce, who will sing Edgardo, is the thirteenth tenor who has appeared with her in "Lucia."

Musical Courier Jan 1/54

SCHOOL NEWS

Musical Courier 3-1-54

The Kroll String Quartet was recently appointed quartet-in-residence at the Peabody Conservatory of Music. (From left: William Kroll, Louis Graeler, Nathan Gordon, and Avron Twerdowsky.) The quartet is scheduled for two concerts at the Baltimore school this season, March 9 and April 6.

Berkshire Auditions

Herald Tribune 4-7-54

Auditions for instrumentalists wishing to join the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here today from 2 to 5 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. Percussionists and harpists will be heard at 4 today in Carnegie Hall. Singers applying for the Center's Opera Department will be heard Saturday from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be provided. The center's twelfth session runs July 5 to Aug. 15.

Worcester Telegram Observer April 64

The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August 1954 are under the supervision of Charles Munch, the Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Some twenty four concerts are to be presented in the new concert Tanglewood scheme. Music teachers and students interested in more information may write Boston Symphony Orchestra to Mr. Munch, Symphony Hall, Boston for listings and recitals to be held in the Shed as the Massachusetts Music Center. The 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz is to be held.

Accent on Berlioz

Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary fell on Dec. 11, 1953, figures prominently in the news of coming musical activities. Charles Munch, president of the recently organized Berlioz Society, is devoting both of the Boston Symphony's next Carnegie Hall concerts, this Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon, to complete performances of the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony.

On the air Herman Neuman will give a Berlioz program in [illegible] Leaders in other categories were Aaron Copland among contemporary composers; Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps" among contemporary works; Vladimir Horowitz and Arthur Rubinstein in a tie among pianists; Jascha Heifetz among violinists; Pablo Casals among cellists; the Boston Symphony and Philharmonic-Symphony among orchestras, and Arturo Toscanini among conductors.

Herald Tribune 3-7-54

E, SUNDAY, MARCH 14, 1954

Going On in Music— Festivals Getting Busy

Herald Tribune

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Two members of the Juilliard School's faculty will be department heads at the Berkshire Center for this summer's session at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 to Aug. 15. Jean Morel, conductor of the Juilliard Orchestra, will direct the conducting and orchestra departments, and Frederic Cohen, who heads Juilliard's opera department, will direct the center's operatic activities, replacing Boris Goldovsky, who is on leave of absence. Ernst Toch will be guest teacher of composition; his colleagues will be Aaron Copland and Lukas Foss, who will also be head of the Tanglewood Study Group.

As already announced, Mr. Morel will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one concert each of the regular and the chamber orchestra series (July 24 and Aug. 12), and Mr. Foss will conduct in the latter series Aug. 6. Charles Munch continues as director of the center and Mr. Copland as assistant director; the faculty includes twenty-four Boston Symphony musicians. Detailed information can be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15. As usual, the center's concerts and operas will be open to contributing members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

semble this afternoon at the New York Historical Society, Central Park West and 77th St. . . . Two piano works will have first performances here this week at Town Hall—Boris Koutzen's "Eidolons," based on a Whitman quotation, by Helen Brainard Wednesday night, and Frank Amey's Sonatina, by the composer Thursday evening. . . . In its last concert of the season at the Y. M.-Y. W. H. A. tonight, the Philharmonic Chamber Ensemble will introduce Richard Donovan's Woodwind Quartet. It will hold another series of three concerts next season. The Society for Second Performances of American Music, which gives its second concert Saturday night at the New School for Social Research, is also preparing 1954-'55 plans.

TIGHT BINDING

THE WORLD OF MUSIC: LINING UP THE FESTIVALS

By ROSS PARMENTER

CHRISTMAS being out of the way, many persons' holiday thoughts are now reaching tentatively forward to summer vacations. Counting on this, the organizers of musical festivals are beginning to dangle their programs before exploratory eyes. As will be seen by the paragraphs below, the basic plans for most of the festivals of Western Europe have been made. Meanwhile, there is news of a major reorganization of one of the chief United States festivals.

The Berkshire Festival pattern at Tanglewood in the post-war years has consisted of a three-week "little" festival in the Theatre-Concert Hall, followed by three whopping week-ends of concerts by the full Boston Symphony in the Shed. The new scheme that Charles Munch has evolved will merge the "little" and the "big" festivals into a scheme that should result in six whopping week-ends. Under the Munch plan the full orchestra will give concerts in the Shed on each of the week-ends of the festival period, which this year will run from July 5 to Aug. 15.

The full orchestra concerts, though, will be limited to two each week-end. They will be given on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Friday evenings will be reserved for the Bach-Mozart program in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and these little orchestra concerts, instead of being bunched into the first three weeks, will be spread out through the whole festival. And a new series of programs is being added to the festival—chamber music concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of the period.

Berkshire Fete Expanded and Enlarged —Plans Made for European Events

New York Times 1-10-54

Gounod's "Mireille" will be the operas at Aix-en-Provence.

To Succeed Toscanini

The choice of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the National Broadcasting Company's Saturday night concerts is something of which every resident of this area should be very proud.

For decades, this orchestra has given Boston great distinction at home and abroad; last year the Voice of America carried one of its concerts to the whole world.

That the National Broadcasting Company should have chosen the Boston orchestra to take over its broadcasts, upon the retirement of Arturo Toscanini, constitutes new and greater recognition of its excellence, and of its director Charles Munch.

Once weekly, beginning next October, Boston will be presented to the whole country in a most favorable light. When the regular season is finished, the nation will have a chance to learn why people of this area flock to "Pops" and Esplanade concerts.

Here is a development on which all Bostonians can justly congratulate themselves.

Boston Daily Globe 4-15-54

Berlioz to Get a Better Hearing

Herald Tribune 1-10-54

By JAMES LYONS
Assistant Editor of "Musical America"

If memory serves—the eleventh edition of Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" does not—it was Ambrose Bierce who defined some one's immortality as "a thousand critics shouting that he's unknown." Quantitatively, at least, the same dubious fame has overtaken Hector Berlioz. Tomorrow morning we will round out the first month of the Berlioz Year; he was born 150 years ago last Dec. 11. By now most of the essayists have had their sesquicentennial say, and the consensus is that he was an audaciously unique creator indeed. Also, that it is high time we got around to the corpus of his music beyond the handful of masterpieces now in the repertory.

Dissemination

So the anniversary panegyrics will pass, and there will be a scattered number of revivals, and perhaps a few worthy recordings. But the truth of the matter is that whatever ensues for the greater dissemination of Berlioz' works will proceed henceforth from the efforts of a dedicated little band of just plain music lovers who collectively decided, a fortnight ago, to do more about their favorite composer than to lament his low estate in the public domain. This is The Berlioz Society, presently to be incorporated, and the heretofore untold story of its spontaneous combustion makes for one of the season's most encouraging grass-roots sagas.

Credit W. E. Gillespie, of the classics faculty at Phillips Exeter Academy, with the organizational spade work. The idea took shape, appropriately, at an all-Berlioz concert. It was a Friday afternoon in Boston, several months ago. On the steps of Symphony Hall, Gillespie struck up a conversation with a New York plastics designer, John Squadra. Each had come a couple of hundred miles to pay their common fealty; and soon addresses were exchanged, and ideas shortly were flowing between New Hampshire and New York.

As the Berlioz Year approached it was thought wise to enlist the counsel of a few logical persons such as Jacques Barzun, whose study of the composer is the standard biography in English, and Henry L. Gage, whose Westminster Recording Co. released the microgroove album of "Les Troyens à Carthage." The word got around, inevitably, and before long Gillespie was receiving inquiries from a most unlikely cross-section of fellow devotees.

On the Manhattan end the moving spirit has been Duncan S. Robinson, an estate planner, whose consuming passion is music generally and the music of Berlioz in particular. Robinson had heard of the embryonic society through Barzun, and immediately threw himself into its development.

The Final Impetus

A final impetus appeared in the December issue of "The American Record Guide," the authoritative journal for phonophiles edited by Peter Hugh Reed, another Berlioz fan. Gillespie had submitted to him a piece on the flourishing movement. Its frank title was "The Case for a Berlioz Society," and it was so persuasive that Gillespie's mailman has had an extra load almost daily ever since.

The whole enterprise really got under way Dec. 21 last in New York, when the hard core of what was to become The Berlioz Society gathered for the first time to draft a prospectus, settle on a fiscal policy, and complete plans for laying siege to recording impresarios, music and book publishers, the critical press and conductors.

A nucleus of nineteen founding members—including a librarian, a salesman and assorted students and executives from points as distant as North Carolina and California—approved in principle the following program:

1) To promote the recording of those works that are unknown to the American public. 2) To encourage new recordings of those works that are available only in poorly performed, poorly engineered versions. 3) To facilitate the publication in miniature score of those works not now accessible, and subsequently to sponsor an authentic complete edition. 4) To restore and translate the considerable Berlioz literary legacy, and 5) To provide a headquarters for the collation and dissemination of information about Berlioz and his works.

The Market Exists

Over all, in other words, to demonstrate to the proper parties, without high pressure or fanatacism, that a substantial Berlioz market exists. The members are to be kept up to date through a periodic newsletter, which will be covered by the minimal $2 annual dues ($1 for students). Volume 1, Number 1, is scheduled for mimeographing this month.

Implicit in all this, needless to add, is a realistic awareness of the staggering expense involved in any undertaking of the less familiar Berlioz scores. Nearly all of them are massive products; the delightfully frothy "Beatrice and Benedict" is an exception and there is some small hope of getting it produced hereabouts.

But what of the "Te Deum," and the longer operas? "Benvenuto Cellini" and the two-part "Les Troyens" have not even been published; their autographs are in a Paris basement. And yet The Berlioz Society hopes to see them mounted at the Metropolitan, no less, either through assured subscription or cordial coercion, or both.

100th 'Lucia' For Lily Pons

When Lily Pons makes her first appearance of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House Wednesday night, it will be her 100th performance of the title role of "Lucia di Lammermoor," in which she made her memorable American debut in January, 1931. This week's performance falls on Jan. 13, and the soprano has said that thirteen is her lucky number. Moreover, Jan Peerce, who will sing Edgardo, is the thirteenth tenor who has appeared with her in "Lucia."

Musical Courier Jan 1/54

SCHOOL NEWS

The Kroll String Quartet was recently appointed quartet-in-residence at the Peabody Conservatory of Music. (From left: William Kroll, Louis Graeler, Nathan Gordon, and Avron Twerdowsky.) The quartet is scheduled for two concerts at the Baltimore school this season, March 9 and April 6.

Berkshire Auditions

Herald Tribune 4-7-54

Auditions for instrumentalists wishing to join the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here today from 2 to 5 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. Percussionists and harpists will be heard at 7 tonight in Carnegie Hall. Singers applying for the Center's Opera Department will be heard Saturday from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be provided. The center's twelfth session runs July 5 to Aug. 15.

Interfaith Observer April 54

The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August 1954 are under the supervision of Charles Munch, the Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Some twenty four concerts are to be presented in the new concert Tanglewood scheme. Music teachers and students interested in more information may write Boston Symphony Orchestra to Mr. Munch, Symphony Hall, Boston for listings and recitals to be held in the Shed as the Massachusetts Music Center. The 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz is to be held.

Accent on Berlioz

Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary fell on Dec. 11, 1953, figures prominently in the news of coming musical activities. Charles Munch, president of the recently organized Berlioz Society, is devoting both of the Boston Symphony's next Carnegie Hall concerts, this Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon, to complete performances of the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony.

On the air Herman Neuman will give a Berlioz program in Leaders in other categories were Aaron Copland among contemporary composers; Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps" among contemporary works; Vladimir Horowitz and Arthur Rubinstein in a tie among pianists; Jascha Heifetz among violinists; Pablo Casals among cellists; the Boston Symphony and Philharmonic-Symphony among orchestras, and Arturo Toscanini among conductors.

Herald Tribune 3-7-54

E, SUNDAY, MARCH 14, 1954

Going On in Music— Festivals Getting Busy

Herald Tribune

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Two members of the Juilliard School's faculty will be department heads at the Berkshire Center for this summer's session at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 to Aug. 15. Jean Morel, conductor of the Juilliard Orchestra, will direct the conducting and orchestra departments, and Frederic Cohen, who heads Juilliard's opera department, will direct the center's operatic activities, replacing Boris Goldovsky, who is on leave of absence. Ernst Toch will be guest teacher of composition; his colleagues will be Aaron Copland and Lukas Foss, who will also be head of the Tanglewood Study Group.

As already announced, Mr. Morel will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one concert each of the regular and the chamber orchestra series (July 24 and Aug. 12), and Mr. Foss will conduct in the latter series Aug. 6. Charles Munch continues as director of the center and Mr. Copland as assistant director; the faculty includes twenty-four Boston Symphony musicians. Detailed information can be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15. As usual, the center's concerts and operas will be open to contributing members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

semble this afternoon at the New York Historical Society, Central Park West and 77th St. . . . Two piano works will have first performances here this week at Town Hall—Boris Koutzen's "Eidolons," based on a Whitman quotation, by Helen Brainard Wednesday night, and Frank Amey's Sonatina, by the composer Thursday evening. . . . In its last concert of the season at the Y. M.-Y. W. H. A. tonight, the Philharmonic Chamber Ensemble will introduce Richard Donovan's Woodwind Quartet. It will hold another series of three concerts next season. The Society for Second Performances of American Music, which gives its second concert Saturday night at the New School for Social Research, is also preparing 1954-'55 plans.

[84]

TIGHT BINDING

The New Yorker 4-10-54

MUSICAL EVENTS

A New Opera

AARON COPLAND's opera "The Tender Land," which was given its première by the New York City Opera Company on Thursday night of last week, is about a young girl on an isolated Midwestern farm who falls in love with a rather serious and likable hobo. Her family disapproves; the hobo himself, after some soul-searching, decides to move on; and the girl, having had her first glimpse of broader horizons, leaves home to try her luck in the big, wide world. This little plot, which, except for its setting, is not entirely unlike that of Charpentier's "Louise," is obviously suitable for opera. But, for a number of reasons, "The Tender Land" does not quite come off. Chief among these, in my opinion, is the fact that Mr. Copland's musical style—a deft fusion of ingredients assembled from Debussy and Satie, and of desiccated elements of American folk music—seems incapable of suggesting the passionate and poetic feelings of his characters. Nowhere is this weakness more evident than in the opera's love scenes, which, had they contained less self-conscious workmanship and more spontaneous melody, might have been extremely effective. As it was, I found myself wishing that Mr. Copland would for once let himself go, forget about his technique, and give his singers something romantic to sing—for the situation the opera describes is a romantic one. But Mr. Copland, like many a composer of his generation, is such an embattled anti-romanticist that the very idiom in which he writes lacks the machinery for communicating this sort of emotion.

The production given the opera was in every way resourceful and pleasing. Oliver Smith's scenery, evidently inspired by certain features of Grant Wood's paintings, caught the lonely, austere atmosphere of the Great Plains admirably. Among the singers, Norman Treigle, who sang the role of the girl's rather crusty grandfather, turned in a particularly arresting characterization and showed that he has a voice of very promising quality. The most remarkable thing about the performance for me, however, was the conducting of the young American maestro Thomas Schippers, who had presided excellently

Or write Oomphi

Write for your copy of →

Here's an exciting preview of a wonderful Bermuda holiday pictured in 16 pages of handsome full-colour photographs . . . everything to make your holiday the happiest imaginable...sports, sightseeing, shopping, comfortable living.

OVER

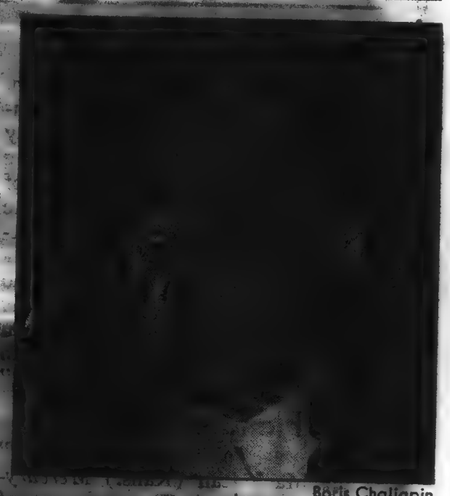
After Toscanini

Arturo Toscanini had a birthday last week, and as usual refused to take the slightest formal notice of the event. On his 87th birthday, when he was scheduled to rehearse his NBC orchestra, he stayed home and let a visitor take his place—and newspapers suggested that it was, among other things, the Maestro's way of avoiding congratulations from his musicians.

But the visiting conductor, who led the NBC Symphony in its broadcast this week, was the brilliant conductor of the Boston Symphony, Alsace-born Charles Munch (TIME, Dec. 19, 1949). And Munch's visit to Manhattan was something more than the Maestro's way of ducking congratulations.

It has been 17 years now since NBC coaxed Toscanini back to the U.S. from Milan and assembled a symphony orchestra for him. This spring, as usual, the Maestro is expected to go to Italy for a long vacation. This spring, more acutely than ever, NBC foresees the day when the Maestro will choose to stay in Italy. Although full details have not been arranged, Conductor Munch and his Boston Symphony are the planned replacements for Toscanini and the NBC Symphony when the Maestro decides to retire for good.

Such an arrangement would be ideal for the Boston; the broadcast fees would help balance its budget. Without even an extra rehearsal, Munch and his musicians could broadcast any one of their four weekly concerts. The NBC Symphony would disappear, though under union contracts most of its members would be kept on for other studio assignments.



Boris Chaliapin
CONDUCTOR MUNCH
A 200-station introduction.

This week's broadcast by Munch was his introduction to NBC's 200-station audience. Next week's NBC broadcast will be Arturo Toscanini's farewell, at least for the 1953-54 season.

New York Times 3-11-54

MUNCH CONDUCTS AT CARNEGIE HALL

Leads Boston Symphony in Berlioz' 'Romeo et Juliette' —2 College Groups Sing

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, Charles Munch conducting; Mary Davenport, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Yi Kwei-Sze, bass; Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society. At Carnegie Hall.
Romeo et Juliette ..... Berlioz

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Charles Munch provided further proof at Carnegie Hall last night of his special affinity and affection for Berlioz. He conducted a performance of "Romeo et Juliette" that was not only complete but that also made vivid how truly the composer was entitled to call the piece a dramatic symphony.

Mr. Munch marshaled his forces—the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society and the three soloists, Mary Davenport, John McCollum and Yi-Kwei Sze—with an authority that was not obtrusive. Its purpose was to convey Berlioz' music in all its intensity, mystery and compassion.

Of all the efforts of composers across the centuries to deal in music from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," this score is the one that seems to come nearest the mark. Shakespeare's soaring poetry is bound to defeat the composer who seeks to add music to it. Berlioz struck out on his own, and emerged with a symphony that has the tension and excitement and poetry of lyric drama.

The wonderful imaginative quality of Berlioz' genius is best realized in the orchestra. The narration he gives the soloists and chorus is not too evocative, and the voices are merged into the musical pattern only with recurrent success. The composer's dramatic gifts are most liberated when, like Wagner, he lets the orchestra sing his visions and conflicts.

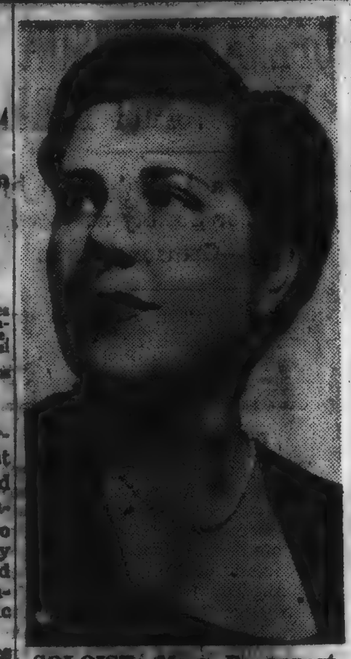
Piece to Be Heard Again

Mr. Munch, who will conduct the piece again tomorrow at the Brooklyn Academy and on Saturday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, stressed the drama inherent in the work through the medium of the orchestra. The players of the Boston Symphony gave him every nuance he wanted, as well as the striding tumult of the grand pages.

One cannot list all the felicities of the evening. But one must commend the spell woven out of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo, with the shimmering colors brought out in an iridescent and shifting glow. One must make mention of the tenderness of the love scene. And one must certainly recall the agonizing violence and despair cried out by the orchestra as Romeo is depicted in the tomb of the Capulets.

The young singers from Harvard and Radcliffe, trained by G. W. Woodworth, gave a performance that had the airiness and delicacy required in the early pages of the score, and the brilliance and sonority needed at the end.

Miss Davenport, who has a rich contralto that is especially effective in its lower range, sang with spacious feeling. The male soloists did their share in the spirit of the occasion. This was something to remember.



SOLOIST: Mary Davenport, contralto, who sang at Carnegie Hall last evening with the Boston Symphony under direction of Charles Munch.

THE ORIGINAL ROMEI PRESS CLIPPI
220 W. 19th St., NEW YO Tel. CHelsea 3-
Cir. (600,070)
This Clipping F GLAMOUR GREENWICH, CO MAR
six young music caree

Doriot Anthony, flutist, is the principal player to join the ... brated Boston Symphony Orche... an Eastman School graduate. ... seasons with the Washington ... Orchestras and the Hollywood ...

Berlioz Fills Carnegie Hall With Romeo and Juli

New York World-Telegram & Sun March

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

That vast and variegated love song that is Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" symphony sprawled out full length at the Boston Symphony concert in Carnegie Hall last night.

I don't like to use the word "sprawl" about a symphony that has such magnificent things in it and is one of the great claims to fame of a composer whose 150th anniversary is being celebrated everywhere.

But it is much too long a symphony, taking up a good two-hour program (intermission included). There are arid passages that go on drearily, and some of the choiring is a good deal less than heavenly.

At least it seemed so to me last night, despite the splendid reading accorded the hybrid score by Charles Munch and as stalwart a body of vocal and symphonic talent as could be mustered today for the taxing assignment.

Fatal Temptation.

There are places all over the score that would have yielded to Berlioz's blue pencil without harm to the general plan. Then, he tried to cram too much Shakespeare into it. That is always a fatal temptation.

He must have expected this sort of response. The opening words of his preface to the score read:

"There is no doubt that the special character of this work will be misunderstood." I hereby plead guilty.

I don't think anybody need be bothered by the fact that although the symphony has soloists and a chorus, it is rather an opera in concert form and ... tata. A composer of Berlioz's genius has the privilege of writing a symphony any ... he wants.

Great Moments.

But it is his duty to justify the time he takes up and the means he employs. This, Berlioz does always do in his "Romeo and Juliet." But what great moments there are in it!

The love scene of the third movement went like a dream, and the "Queen Mab" scherzo was as close to symphonic enchantment as anybody has come this season. The "Festival" music was a frenzied carnival of sound.

The soloists did stirring work—Mary Davenport, who sports one of the richest contralto voices along the concert circuit; John McCollum, a tenor of sensitive style, and the phenomenal basso, Yi-Kwei Sze.

The combined Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society handled the choral music with sumptuous tone and unfailing finesse.

The performance was an act of deep reverence to France's greatest composer. It was also a reminder that, at least as regards this symphony, Berlioz is best confined to the orchestral excerpts.

[85]

TIGHT BINDING

APRIL 10, 1954

over several previous opera productions at the City Center and who whipped this one into efficient shape indeed. Mr. Schippers seems to combine taste and energy with the rare faculty of conveying musical ideas by means of gesture that is the indispensable talent of the born conductor.

"The Tender Land" was followed by Gian-Carlo Menotti's little Christmas opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors," which has been performed before but which I had never heard. I did not like it as well as some of his earlier operas—notably "The Medium." I thought it a shade arch and sentimental, and it was somewhat difficult for me to reconcile the three wise kings' buffoonery with the seriousness of their sacred mission in bearing gifts to the infant Jesus. It is, however, an unpretentious work with a few charming moments, and it shows throughout the facility for musical theatre that distinguishes Menotti's operatic output. Its music is sometimes rather trivial, but the opera is far better written for voices than Copland's, and far more compelling from a dramatic standpoint. I might add that Mr. Menotti, who writes his own librettos, is a much more skilled craftsman in fitting words to music than the librettist of "The Tender Land." "Amahl" does not face up to any such emotional challenges as are involved in the Copland work, but such small challenges as it does face up to are met, on the whole, with grace and fluency.

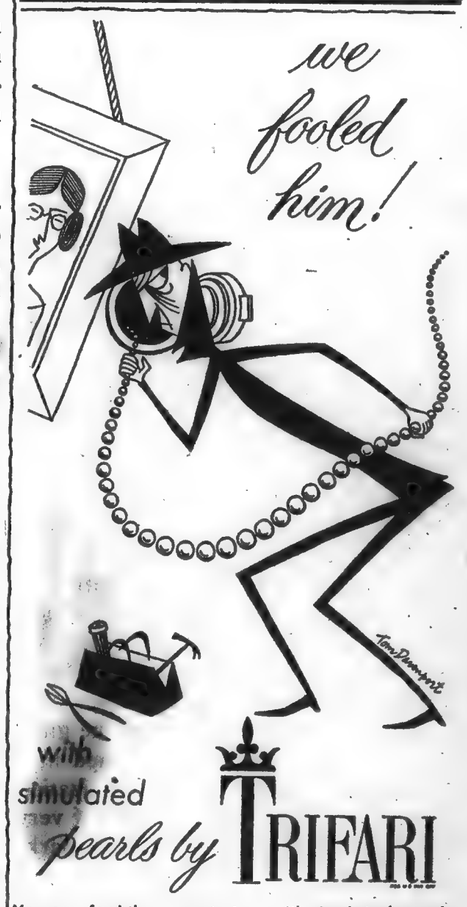
FOR me, the most memorable performance of the week was the piano recital given on Tuesday evening in Carnegie Hall by the seventy-year-old German pianist Wilhelm Backhaus, who had not appeared in New York for twenty-eight years. Like many people who follow musical happenings here and abroad, I had been aware of Mr. Backhaus's towering European reputation and had heard a number of fine recordings of his that have been available locally. But I was not prepared for the unique artistry he exhibited in this program, which consisted of five Beethoven sonatas. In fact, I left the hall convinced that I had never in my life heard Beethoven's music so magnificently, sensitively, and authoritatively performed. Mr. Backhaus is technically such a master that he overcomes the knottiest mechanical problems with no effort at all, and in such a manner as to leave his audience almost unconscious of his tremendous feats of virtuosity. But all his technique is merely a means dedicated to the conveyance of deep and subtle

To Every Business Man Who Has NOT Stopped At The New Sherman In The Past Year:

On your next trip to Chicago, we invite you to stop at the New Sherman.

We just finished spending $2,000,000 for complete top-to-bottom modernization. We modernized our 1501 rooms. We air conditioned throughout. Our dining rooms, our function rooms, everything is new. Same location — just a few steps from everything. And if you're driving, you drive right into the hotel. Our famous College Inn Porterhouse gives steaks a bigger and better meaning, and our Well-of-the-Sea gives your favorite seafood dishes exclusive original treatment. You're coming to Chicago? Make your reservation now.

THE New HOTEL
SHERMAN
CHICAGO'S MOST CONVENIENT HOTEL
Randolph, Clark and La Salle Streets
Telephone: Franklin 2-2100
Teletype: CG 1387



You can fool the experts, too, with simulated pearls by Trifari . . . the finest quality you can buy!
© 1954 Trifari, Krussman & Fishel, Inc., N.Y.C.

New York Times 3-11-54

MUNCH CONDUCTS AT CARNEGIE HALL

Leads Boston Symphony In Berlioz' 'Romeo et Juliette' —2 College Groups Sing

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, Charles Munch conducting; Mary Davenport, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Yi Kwei-Sze, bass; Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society. At Carnegie Hall.
Romeo et Juliette ..... Berlioz

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Charles Munch provided further proof at Carnegie Hall last night of his special affinity and affection for Berlioz. He conducted a performance of "Romeo et Juliette" that was not only complete but that also made vivid how truly the composer was entitled to call the piece a dramatic symphony.

Mr. Munch marshaled his forces—the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society and the three soloists, Mary Davenport, John McCollum and Yi-Kwei Sze—with an authority that was not obtrusive. Its purpose was to convey Berlioz' music in all its intensity, mystery and compassion.

Of all the efforts of composers across the centuries to deal in music from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," this score is the one that seems to come nearest the mark. Shakespeare's soaring poetry is bound to defeat the composer who seeks to add music to it. Berlioz struck out on his own, and emerged with a symphony that has the tension and excitement and poetry of lyric drama.

The wonderful imaginative quality of Berlioz' genius is best realized in the orchestra. The narration he gives the soloists and chorus is not too evocative, and the voices are merged into the musical pattern only with recurrent success. The composer's dramatic gifts are most liberated when, like Wagner, he lets the orchestra sing his visions and conflicts.

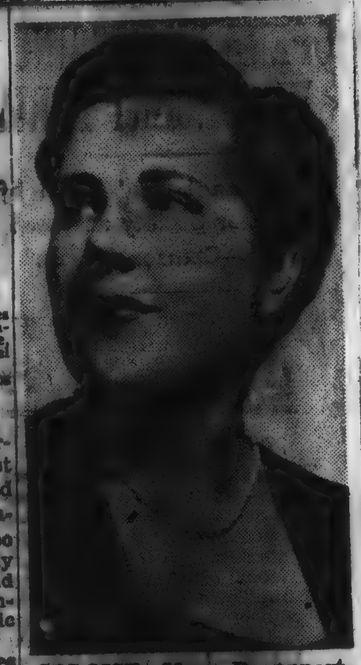
Piece to Be Heard Again

Mr. Munch, who will conduct the piece again tomorrow at the Brooklyn Academy and on Saturday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, stressed the drama inherent in the work through the medium of the orchestra. The players of the Boston Symphony gave him every nuance he wanted, as well as the striding tumult of the grand pages.

One cannot list all the felicities of the evening. But one must commend the spell woven out of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo, with the shimmering colors brought out in an iridescent and shifting glow. One must make mention of the tenderness of the love scene. And one must certainly recall the agonizing violence and despair cried out by the orchestra as Romeo is depicted in the tomb of the Capulets.

The young singers from Harvard and Radcliffe, trained by G. W. Woodworth, gave a performance that had the airiness and delicacy required in the early pages of the score, and the brilliance and sonority needed at the end.

Miss Davenport, who has a rich contralto that is especially effective in its lower range, sang with spacious feeling. The male soloists did their share in the spirit of the occasion. This was something to remember.



SOLOIST: Mary Davenport, contralto, who sang at Carnegie Hall last evening with the Boston Symphony under direction of Charles Munch.

THE ORIGINA
ROMEI
PRESS CLIPPI
220 W. 19th St., NEW YO
Tel. CHelsea 3-
Cir. (600,07
This Clipping F
GLAMOUR
GREENWICH, CO
MAR - six young music caree

Doriot Anthony, flutist, is the principal player to join the ... brated Boston Symphony Orch... an Eastman School graduate. ... seasons with the Washington ... Orchestras and the Hollywood ...

Time 4-5-54 MUSIC

After Toscanini

Arturo Toscanini had a birthday last week, and as usual refused to take the slightest formal notice of the event. On his 87th birthday, when he was scheduled to rehearse his NBC orchestra, he stayed home and let a visitor take his place, and newspapers suggested that it was, among other things, the Maestro's way of avoiding congratulations from his musicians.

But the visiting conductor, who led the NBC Symphony in its broadcast this week, was the brilliant conductor of the Boston Symphony, Alsace-born Charles Munch (TIME, Dec. 19, 1949). And Munch's visit to Manhattan was something more than the Maestro's way of ducking congratulations.

It has been 17 years now since NBC coaxed Toscanini back to the U.S. from Milan and assembled a symphony orchestra for him. This spring, as usual, the Maestro is expected to go to Italy for a long vacation. This spring, more acutely than ever, NBC foresees the day when the Maestro will choose to stay in Italy. Although full details have not been arranged, Conductor Munch and his Boston Symphony are the planned replacements for Toscanini and the NBC Symphony when the Maestro decides to retire for good.

Such an arrangement would be ideal for the Boston; the broadcast fees would help balance its budget. Without even an extra rehearsal, Munch and his musicians could broadcast any one of their four weekly concerts. The NBC Symphony would disappear, though under union contracts most of its members would be kept on for other studio assignments.

This week's broadcast by Munch was his introduction to NBC's 200-station audience. Next week's NBC broadcast will be Arturo Toscanini's farewell, at least for the 1953-54 season.

Boris Chaliapin
CONDUCTOR MUNCH

Berlioz Fills Carnegie Hall With Romeo and Juliet

New York World-Telegram & Sun March 1954

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

That vast and variegated love song that is Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" symphony sprawled out full length at the Boston Symphony concert in Carnegie Hall last night.

I don't like to use the word "sprawl" about a symphony that has such magnificent things in it and is one of the great claims to fame of a composer whose 150th anniversary is being celebrated everywhere.

But it is much too long a symphony, taking up a good two-hour program (intermission included). There are arid passages that go on drearily, and some of the choiring is a good deal less than heavenly.

At least it seemed so to me last night, despite the splendid reading accorded the hybrid score by Charles Munch and as stalwart a body of vocal and symphonic talent as could be mustered today for the taxing assignment.

Fatal Temptation

There are places all over the score that would have yielded to Berlioz's blue pencil without harm to the general plan. Then, he tried to cram too much Shakespeare into it. That is always a fatal temptation.

He must have expected this sort of response. The opening words of his preface to the score read:

"There is no doubt that the special character of this work will be misunderstood." I hereby plead guilty.

I don't think anybody need be bothered by the fact that although the symphony is also ... ists and a chorus, it is ... opera in concert form ... tata. A composer of ... genius has the privilege of writing a symphony any ... wants.

Great Moments

But it is his duty to ... time he takes up and ... he employs. This, Berlioz ... always do in his "Romeo and Juliet." But what great ... there are in it!

The love scene of the third movement went like ... and the "Queen Mab" scherzo was as close to ... enchantment as anybody ... this season. The "Festival ... was a frenzied carnival ... The soloists did ... —Mary Davenport, ... one of the richest ... along the concert ... McCollum, a tenor ... style, and the ... Yi-Kwei Sze.

The combined ... Club and Radcliffe ... ciety handled the ... with sumptuous ... ing finesse.

The performance was ... deep reverence to ... est composer. It was also a reminder that, at least as regards this symphony, Berlioz is best confined to the ... cerpts.

TIGHT BINDING

The Times ubert 4-10-54

MUSICAL EVENTS

A New Opera

AARON COPLAND's opera "The Tender Land," which was given its première by the New York City Opera Company on Thursday night of last week, is about a young girl on an isolated Midwestern farm who falls in love with a rather serious and likable hobo. Her family disapproves; the hobo himself, after some soul-searching, decides to move on; and the girl, having had her first glimpse of broader horizons, leaves home to try her luck in the big, wide world. This little plot, which, except for its setting, is not entirely unlike that of Charpentier's "Louise," is obviously suitable for opera. But, for a number of reasons, "The Tender Land" does not quite come off. Chief among these, in my opinion, is the fact that Mr. Copland's musical style—a deft fusion of ingredients assembled from Debussy and Satie, and of desiccated elements of American folk music—seems incapable of suggesting the passionate and poetic feelings of his characters. Nowhere is this weakness more evident than in the opera's love scenes, which, had they contained less self-conscious workmanship and more spontaneous melody, might have been extremely effective. As it was, I found myself wishing that Mr. Copland would for once let himself go, forget about his technique, and give his singers something romantic to sing—for the situation the opera describes is a romantic one. But Mr. Copland, like many a composer of his generation, is such an embattled anti-romanticist that the very idiom in which he writes lacks the machinery for communicating this sort of emotion.

The production given the opera was in every way resourceful and pleasing. Oliver Smith's scenery, evidently inspired by certain features of Grant Wood's paintings, caught the lonely, austere atmosphere of the Great Plains admirably. Among the singers, Norman Treigle, who sang the role of the girl's rather crusty grandfather, turned in a particularly arresting characterization and showed that he has a voice of very promising quality. The most remarkable thing about the performance for me, however, was the conducting of the young American maestro Thomas Schippers, who had presided excellently •Higher in the West.

Or write Oomphi

Write for your copy of

Here's an exciting preview of a wonderful Bermuda holiday pictured in 16 pages of handsome full-colour photographs . . . everything to make your holiday the happiest imaginable...sports, sightseeing, shopping, comfortable living.

New York Times 3-11-54

MUNCH CONDUCTS AT CARNEGIE HALL

Leads Boston Symphony in Berlioz' 'Romeo et Juliette' —2 College Groups Sing

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, Charles Munch conducting; Mary Davenport, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Yi Kwei-Sze, bass; Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society. At Carnegie Hall.
Romeo et Juliette ..... Berlioz

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Charles Munch provided further proof at Carnegie Hall last night of his special affinity and affection for Berlioz. He conducted a performance of "Romeo et Juliette" that was not only complete but that also made vivid how truly the composer was entitled to call the piece a dramatic symphony.

Mr. Munch marshaled his forces—the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society and the three soloists, Mary Davenport, John McCollum and Yi-Kwei Sze—with an authority that was not obtrusive. Its purpose was to convey Berlioz' music in all its intensity, mystery and compassion.

Of all the efforts of composers across the centuries to deal in music from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," this score is the one that seems to come nearest the mark. Shakespeare's soaring poetry is bound to defeat the composer who seeks to add music to it. Berlioz struck out on his own, and emerged with a symphony that has the tension and excitement and poetry of lyric drama.

The wonderful imaginative quality of Berlioz' genius is best realized in the orchestra. The narration he gives the soloists and chorus is not too evocative, and the voices are merged into the musical pattern only with recurrent success. The composer's dramatic gifts are most liberated when, like Wagner, he lets the orchestra sing his visions and conflicts.

Piece to Be Heard Again

Mr. Munch, who will conduct the piece again tomorrow at the Brooklyn Academy and on Saturday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, stressed the drama inherent in the work through the medium of the orchestra. The players of the Boston Symphony gave him every nuance he wanted, as well as the striding tumult of the grand pages.

One cannot list all the felicities of the evening. But one must commend the spell woven out of the "Queen Mab" Scherzo, with the shimmering colors brought out in an iridescent and shifting glow. One must make mention of the tenderness of the love scene. And one must certainly recall the agonizing violence and despair cried out by the orchestra as Romeo is depicted in the tomb of the Capulets.

The young singers from Harvard and Radcliffe, trained by G. W. Woodworth, gave a performance that had the airiness and delicacy required in the early pages of the score, and the brilliance and sonority needed at the end.

Miss Davenport, who has a rich contralto that is especially effective in its lower range, sang with spacious feeling. The male soloists did their share in the spirit of the occasion. This was something to remember.

SOLOIST: Mary Davenport, contralto, who sang at Carnegie Hall last evening with the Boston Symphony under direction of Charles Munch.

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIK
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK
Tel. CHelsea 3-8800
Cir. (600,078)
This Clipping From
GLAMOUR
GREENWICH, CONN.
...x young music career
Doriot Anthony, flutist, is the principal player to join the ma brated Boston Symphony Orches an Eastman School graduate. She seasons with the Washington
Orchestras and the Hollywood

Berlioz Fills Carnegie Hall With Romeo and Juliet

New York World-Telegram & Sun March 1954

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

That vast and variegated love song that is Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" symphony sprawled out full length at the Boston Symphony concert in Carnegie Hall last night.

I don't like to use the word "sprawl" about a symphony that has such magnificent things in it and is one of the great claims to fame of a composer whose 150th anniversary is being celebrated everywhere.

But it is much too long a symphony, taking up a good two-hour program (intermission included). There are arid passages that go on drearily, and some of the choiring is a good deal less than heavenly.

At least it seemed so to me last night, despite the splendid reading accorded the hybrid score by Charles Munch and as stalwart a body of vocal and symphonic talent as could be mustered today for the taxing assignment.

Fatal Temptation.

There are places all over the score that would have yielded to Berlioz's blue pencil without harm to the general plan. Then, he tried to cram too much Shakespeare into it. That is always a fatal temptation.

He must have expected this sort of response. The opening words of his preface to the score read:

"There is no doubt that the special character of this work will be misunderstood." I hereby plead guilty.

I don't think anybody need be bothered by the fact that although the symphony ... ists and a chorus, it is ... opera in concert form ... tata. A composer of ... genius has the privilege ... ing a symphony any ... wants.

Great Moments.

But it is his duty to ... time he takes up and ... he employs. This, Berlioz ... always do in his "Romeo and Juliet." But what great ... there are in it!

The love scene ... movement went like ... and the "Queen Mab" ... was as close to ... chantment as anybody ... this season. The "Fete ... was a frenzied carnival ...

The soloists did ... —Mary Davenport, ... one of the richest ... along the concert ... McCollum, a tenor ... style, and the phenomenal ... Yi-Kwei Sze.

The combined ... Club and Radcliffe ... ciety handled the ... with sumptuous ... ing finesse.

The performance ... deep reverence to ... est composer. It ... minder that, at ... this symphony. ... confined to the ...

Time 4-5-54

MUSIC

After Toscanini

Arturo Toscanini had a birthday last week, and as usual refused to take the slightest formal notice of the event. On his 87th birthday, when he was scheduled to rehearse his NBC orchestra, he stayed home and let a visitor take his place—and newspapers suggested that it was, among other things, the Maestro's way of avoiding congratulations from his musicians.

But the visiting conductor, who led the NBC Symphony in its broadcast this week, was the brilliant conductor of the Boston Symphony, Alsace-born Charles Munch (TIME, Dec. 19, 1949). And Munch's visit to Manhattan was something more than the Maestro's way of ducking congratulations.

It has been 17 years now since NBC coaxed Toscanini back to the U.S. from Milan and assembled a symphony orchestra for him. This spring, as usual, the Maestro is expected to go to Italy for a long vacation. This spring, more acutely than ever, NBC foresees the day when the Maestro will choose to stay in Italy. Although full details have not been arranged, Conductor Munch and his Boston Symphony are the planned replacements for Toscanini and the NBC Symphony when the Maestro decides to retire for good.

Such an arrangement would be ideal for the Boston; the broadcast fees would help balance its budget. Without even an extra rehearsal, Munch and his musicians could broadcast any one of their four weekly concerts. The NBC Symphony would disappear, though under union contracts most of its members would be kept on for other studio assignments.

Boris Chaliapin

CONDUCTOR MUNCH
A 200-station introduction.

This week's broadcast by Munch was his introduction to NBC's 200-station audience. Next week's NBC broadcast will be Arturo Toscanini's farewell, at least for the 1953-54 season.

[85]

NY Times Apr 8/54

MUNCH CONDUCTS WORKS OF BERLIOZ

De Pasquale, Violist, Is Heard as Soloist With the Boston Symphony at Carnegie Hall

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, Charles Munch conducting. Joseph de Pasquale, violist. At Carnegie Hall.

Three excerpts from The Damnation of Faust ..... Berlioz
Symphony No. 1 ..... Honegger
Harold in Italy ..... Berlioz

By OLIN DOWNES

The program offered by Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night in Carnegie Hall was devoted mainly, in this year of the Berlioz sesquicentennial, to that composer's works.

Originally Mr. Munch had announced as the opening number the "Faust Overture" of Richard Wagner. He changed this at the last moment to the three orchestral excerpts from Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," and the concert ended with the Harold in Italy Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, violist of the orchestra, taking the solo viola part, with Arthur Honneger's First Symphony between.

Possibly there had been little time for rehearsal of the Faust excerpts. Whether or not this was the fact, candor compels the admission that they were given a strangely excited and rather incoherent reading, with the exception of the "Waltz of the Sylphs," which is orchestrated with such marvelous delicacy. The 'Minuet of the Will-o'-the-Wisps" had poor balances in the woodwind, and unclean edges, and the presto in which the serenade of Mephistofeles is mocked by the spirits, which certainly should go fast, was so fast last night that it was a scramble for the winds to play it at all. "The Rakocsy March" was also fast, and excessively noisy, with something of the effect of a 33 1/3 disk played with a 78 needle.

Departure from Norm

These excursions on Mr. Munch's part are of interest only for the reason that they represent such a singular departure from his norm where Berlioz is concerned. For we know of no conductor who enters with such instinctive understanding and temperamental sympathy into the music of that master. The proof of this was the memorable performance of the "Harold" symphony—so beautiful, so perfectly paced, nuanced and integrated in a manner peculiarly native to Berlioz' style and spirit.

What a score it is! Of what poetical musings and tender landscapes, and ever and anon Berlioz' frenzy — which again seems Mr. Munch's especial province.

He saw to it that Mr. de Pasquale's excellently played viola part was properly coordinated with the score as a whole, so that, for example, we were not irritated by the see-sawing of the arpeggios in the scene of the Pilgrim's March, and that movement itself, which usually drags, was an unforgettable tone-picture and an absorbing experience. This was a masterly achievement, reflecting glory upon the conductor, the orchestra, and, supremely, Berlioz' music.

The Honegger symphony is clearly and powerfully made. Whether it would endear itself to this writer on more than the slight acquaintance he has with it now, cannot be established here. It is no doubt true that the real connoisseur of atonalism gains his most voluptuous pleasure by listening to each one of the discordantly juxtaposed voices as a single independent and presumably fascinating strand of tone in itself.

But our western musical esthetic is fundamental harmonic, however strong and independent the contrapuntal writing within some frame of harmonic reference may be. When the rather inevitable reckoning on the basis of harmony of one sort or another does not seem to obtain, we are not allured.

The performance was a triumph so far as could be judged from a standpoint unsympathetic to the music, was one of extraordinary certainty and élan. The orchestra owed much, no doubt, to Mr. Munch's authority, and it was called upon to rise and acknowledge, with him, the applause.

MISS DE LOS ANGELES ... IN 'BARBER'

NY WTHS Apr 8/54

NEW Y

Music

Carnegie Honors Birth Of Berlioz

By ROBERT BAGAR.

For the 150th anniversary season of Hector Berlioz's birth Charles Munch had assigned two-thirds of last night's program by the Boston Symphony to him. All this in Carnegie Hall, where a capacity audience, expecting Wagner to open the evening, in its place found—and not to its dismay—the three well-known excerpts from "The Damnation of Faust."

The way that Mr. Munch and his musicians play Berlioz should become a must study for all budding conductors. Sometimes, though, even Mr. Munch leans heavily on this composer's music, as he did in the "Damnation" fragments. And when that happens Berlioz seems just a trifle further away.

Fine Execution.

But one could scarcely hope for better execution from a hundred men than was exhibited in this piece, or in the concluding one—"Harold in Italy"—or in the middle work, Honneger's Symphony No. 1.

"Harold in Italy" represents Berlioz vis-a-vis Byron. The work is no musical aping of "Childe Harold," to be sure, but rather reflects the composer's own moods and feelings evoked by the poet's lines.

The soloist in this piece was Joseph De Pasquale, who heads the orchestra's viola section. And, probably because Mr. De Pasquale and the other musicians are long-time companions, the teamwork, the tonal and technical perfections were especially fine, to say the least.

Supreme Performance.

For expression, quality, warmth and human nearness this "Harold in Italy" got the night's supreme performance. And wildly did the audience applaud at its conclusion.

Honegger's Symphony, his first, was written around 1930. It is a tour-de-force in dissonance and atonality. There are sounds here that Honegger hasn't made since—and, remember, he's written, altogether, five symphonies.

It all seems so futile, too, and so terribly dated. Nobody cares for dissonance per se anymore. If it can say something, make an effect on the intellect and the emotions at the same time, well and good. But to what avail such extraordinary devices, tricks, spatterings of brass, whooping it up for the sake of a monument to orchestral legerdemain?

This piece hasn't been done too often hereabouts. My curiosity impels me to hear it again—when and if. And I wonder, then, if I'll get over the idea that the Symphony is a clever, perfectly tailored mass of noise.

TODAY thru Sat. 1-11 P.M.

NY Trib-Am Apr 8/54

Boston Symphony:

More of Berlioz

By MILES KASTENDIECK

CHARLES MUNCH continued to expouse Berlioz in the program the Boston Symphony offered in Carnegie Hall last night. On the last visit it was his "Romeo and Juliet" symphony. This time it was the "Harold in Italy" symphony with the familiar excerpts from the "Damnation of Faust" as an unusual opening number.

Separating the Berlioz items was Honegger's unfamiliar First symphony. Composed for the Bostonians' 50th anniversary, the music is now almost a quarter century old.

Honegger has mellowed a great deal in that time; so has the music public. What it would have dismissed before, it can comprehend to some degree now.

The rhythmic urge, the machine-like sounds, and the locomotive style characteristic of the earlier Honegger reflect the environment from which they came. Yet within this work may be found the seeds of the notable symphonies that the emotions of a world war nurtured. These terms lurk in the melodic materials of the second movement and the moving coda of the last. This first symphony is therefore quite revealing; it is more interesting than compelling.

A beautifully fashioned performance of "Harold in Italy" became the memorable moment of this concert. Munch imparted a strong feeling for this music. He treated it with respect, whereas he had treated the Faust excerpts with sheer theatricalism.

The performance was enhanced by Joseph de Pasquale's superb reading of the viola solo. Though the first-desk violist of the orchestra, he established himself as a soloist in his own right.

He played with just the right touch of melancholy, of romanticism, and of tonal beauty. His performance blended perfectly with the orchestra. The capacity audience was thoroughly charmed.

CONCERT AN

Herald Tribune Apr 8/54

The Bostonians

By Francis D. Perkins

Hector Berlioz, whose music had occupied both of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's March concerts in Carnegie Hall, was also well represented there last night, when Charles Munch began it with the three familiar excerpts from "The Damnation of Faust" (the Minuet of the Will o' the Wisps, Ballet of the Sylphs and Rakoczy March) and closed it with the "Harold in Italy" Symphony. The other work in the Bostonians' last evening Manhattan concert of the season was Arthur Honegger's Symphony No. 1. Composed for this orchestra's fiftieth anniversary, it was first played here in March, 1931, and waited until yesterday for a second local hearing.

The first movement is constantly energetic and driving, with relentless rhythmic insistence; it is effective in its way, but its incessant activity begins to tire before it has completed its eight-minute span. The adagio is meditative and ingratiatingly lyric and rises to an eloquent climax, but in the following epilogic measures Honegger waits a little too long before moving on to a light and lively finale. It is an uneven work, but it was interesting to hear it again, and a policy of reviving major works by contemporary composers which have not been played for some time is a constructive one. Mr. Munch and his musicians entirely realized the symphony's differing expressive veins.

Joseph de Pasquale, head of his section in the orchestra, played the viola solo in "Harold in Italy." Mr. Munch, one of our chief devotees of Berlioz' music, directed a performance which was admirable in balance, tone and impeccable lucidity. The work is officially styled a symphony with viola solo, not a viola concerto, and the viola is not always in the foreground. Mr. de Pasquale seemed conscious of this fact, perhaps too much so; there were times when a more positive projection of his share in the music might have been profitable. But it was artistic playing, interpretatively sympathetic; laudably coordinated in its relation to the orchestral music and always lyric and appealing in tone. The performances of the first two "Damnation of Faust" excerpts were of routine merit, but the Rakoczy March had imposing brilliance and momentum.

Regina Price, Soprano

NY Post Apr 8/54

Munch Conducts Berlioz Program

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

When Charles Munch conducts Berlioz he is at his best. More than any other conductor of my experience, he communicates greater excitement and consistent interest from the French composer. In commemoration of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz's birth, currently being celebrated, Munch is featuring considerable Berlioz both on his New York programs and in Tanglewood, Mass., this summer at the Berkshire festival.

His program with the Boston Symphony last night in Carnegie Hall opened with three excerpts from the composer's dramatic oratorio, "The Damnation of Faust;" continued with Honegger's First Symphony and concluded with the Berlioz "Harold in Italy," symphony with viola solo, Op. 16, with Joseph De Pasquale as soloist.

The three "Faust" excerpts were short and successively, fanciful, poetic and vigorous, moods which were suffused with appropriate atmosphere by Munch and the Bostonians.

Though the somewhat langorous, wandering "Harold" has its dull moments, it does pertinently fulfill its purpose. That is it does suggest and delineate, through musical means, a dreamy young man's wanderings in poetic frame of mind, through the Abruzzi provinces. Munch, aided in highly sensitive and artistic manner by violist Pasquale, gave an imaginative and dynamic account of the music.

The most provocative and rewarding musical experience, per se, of the evening, however, was the dramatic rendition Munch inspired of the Honegger Symphony. This is a fascinating three-movement composition, unabashedly dissonant in the first, contemplative and serious in the second and frenzied in the third. It all says something too, which is more than you can say for most dissertations, musical or verbal.

APR 26 1954

MAMARONECK, N. Y. TIMES

Kohloff To Tanglewood

Roland Kohloff, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kohloff of 122 Osborn Avenue, Mamaroneck, has been accepted in the Boston Symphony student orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., this summer. The orchestra is composed of students from all over the United States.

He will be under the supervision of Roman Szulc, tympanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, by whom he was chosen from among applicants auditioned at Carnegie Hall earlier in the month. He will be under the baton this Summer of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, Leonard Bernstein and Jean Morel for whom he now plays in the Juilliard Orchestra.

"The Sad Time Has Come"

As they gathered in Carnegie Hall's orchestra room before the Sunday evening broadcast, members of the NBC Symphony seemed to sense what was coming. When the door opened, one of the men hissed for quiet and another called "Silenzio!" The musicians watched tensely as their 87-year-old conductor passed through the silence, leaning heavily on the arm of his son. Out in the hall, many of the audience who had come to witness the season's last Toscanini concert also guessed that it might be Arturo Toscanini's last stand with the NBC—and perhaps with any orchestra.

The evening's concert proved to be unlike any Toscanini had ever conducted before. Until two weeks ago, the Maestro's performances held the fire, vigor and precision for which he is famous. But at the final rehearsal he was upset, and walked out on the orchestra. At the concert—excerpts from his beloved Wagner operas—Toscanini's mind seemed to be far away. There were passages when his beat was robust as of old. There were other times when he almost stopped conducting, seeming to stand aside, listening to the music. Then the incredible happened: during the Bacchanal from Tannhäuser, the superb orchestra actually became confused. Alert NBC engineers cut the broadcast off the air with an announcement about "operational difficulties." Incongruously, a few bars of Brahms' First Symphony drifted over the air, as a fill-in recording was played in the studio.

Strict Secret. But on the stage, the Maestro seemed to take hold of himself. He stepped to the edge of the podium, and, with careful gestures, gradually pulled the music together again. At the end of his final selection—the Prelude to Die Meistersinger—he left the podium before the final notes had sounded, and let the baton fall from his hand.

The audience clapped for five minutes. But Toscanini barricaded himself in his dressing room, did not return for his bows.

That night the papers carried the news which for a week had been kept a strict secret even from his own musicians: Arturo Toscanini, the greatest performing musician alive today, had retired. For almost a fortnight, his letter of resignation to RCA Board Chairman David Sarnoff had rested, unsigned, on his desk. Abruptly, on his 87th birthday, Toscanini made his decision, ran upstairs and signed it. Excerpt: "And now the sad time has come when I must reluctantly lay aside my baton and say goodbye to my orchestra . . . I shall carry with me rich memories of these years of music making . . ."

Flaming Spirit. The NBC Symphony, formed especially for Toscanini 17 years ago and built by him into one of the world's great orchestras, will continue under guest conductors for at least the next eight weeks. Its probable replacement over NBC: the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch (TIME, April 5).

Sy Friedman—NBC

TOSCANINI AT LAST NBC CONCERT
The baton fell.

Arturo Toscanini himself is expected to go to Italy for the summer. Whether he will return to the U.S.—or whether he will ever conduct again—nobody knows. But his 68 years on the podium are already a legend. Wrote New York Times Critic Olin Downes: "Should this have been his permanent farewell . . . his name will remain supreme and his achievement immortally revered. There has never been a more gallant and intrepid champion of great music, or a spirit that flamed higher, or a nobler defender of the faith."

Martha Holmes

BACKHAUS IN MANHATTAN
Young with Beethoven.

Triumphal Return

For 40 years, German Pianist Wilhelm Backhaus has been known as one of the world's musical giants. When he made his U.S. debut in 1912, his soulful mien and his remarkable performances created high excitement. But in the '20s he decided "to give America a rest." Last week, just turned 70, he made a triumphal return for a single recital in Manhattan's jampacked Carnegie Hall, his first in 28 years.

Pianist Backhaus, square-jawed and bulky, played five sonatas by Beethoven with the virility and technique of a man half his age. He began with the tried & true Pathétique, swirled through the Tempest, rippled through Les Adieux, produced a playful Opus 79 and summed everything up with a lofty performance of Opus 111. "One of the greatest evenings . . . of Beethoven's piano music [in a quarter century]," raved the New York Times's Olin Downes. "Mr. Backhaus was young with Beethoven."

Backhaus' reason for staying away from the U.S. so long: a vague "things political." He is now a Swiss citizen (he left his native Germany in 1931), and although he played in Germany during the war, bears no taint of Naziism. But he had private doubts: "I did not want to come here and run the risk of getting a reception some other Germans had. Why should I run the risk?"

Wilhelm Backhaus was delighted with his success, but he was not sure about coming back for an extended tour. "I am too old. After all, one must face the fact." On the other hand, he has just completed a heavily booked tour of Europe. Reminded of this, he admitted: "At the piano I feel young enough."

Shy Venture

Secure in his top rank among contemporary U.S. composers of symphonic music, Aaron Copland last week took the plunge into opera. Shy about his venture. Veteran (53) Composer Copland first thought of launching The Tender Land (a story of the rural Midwest) far from the calloused ears of Manhattan critics ("I thought maybe Canada"). Then came an irresistible offer to open it at the New York City Opera, and Copland gave in.

Clean-Scrubbed Kansas. His opening curtain rose on a prairie-farmyard scene. His characters were plain, salt-of-the-earth folk: a grandfather (Basso Norman Treigle), a mother (Contralto Jean Handzlik), daughter Laurie (Soprano Rosemary Carlos) and a pair of drifting farmhands. The plot, such as it was, moved from Laurie's high-school pre-graduation party through a brief, unrealistic courtship ("I'd like to have a wife for a while," sang one of the drifters), and ended on a symbolic note by sending the girl off in search of her future.

Composer Copland turned in a compact (95 minutes), clean-scrubbed score. The opera's melodic high point was an eight-minute love duet. Elsewhere, Copland managed to give a fairly musical

OVER 65

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIKE
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUN 12 1954

25 Student Concerts at Berkshire Center

About 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The Berkshire Music Center is directed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, according to the plan and in the spirit of its creator, Serge Koussevitzky. Now preparing for its 12th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all over the world Sunday, July 4, the Berkshire Music Center has Aaron Copland as assistant director, and such eminent musicians as Jean Morel, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Ernst Toch, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as teachers.

Young musicians of high skill—players, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, at Tanglewood have the valuable experience of group performance. As in the past, their concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity.

Five forums wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood argue their own and fellow students' works, are to be held Sunday evenings at 8:30 July 11 to Aug. 15.

Three evenings of opera will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, which require reserved seat tickets. Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso" and Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" are the attraction on Tuesday, July 27; Copland's full-length opera, "The Tender Land," new to New England, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

, THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1954 Herald Tribune 23

CONCERT AND RECITAL

By Francis D. Perkins

"La Gazza Ladra"

All New York opera goers know Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," many have recently become acquainted with his "La Ceberentola," but his "La Gazza Ladra," which the American Chamber Opera Society performed last night as the second production of its Town Hall series, has long been known to us only by its overture. It was first heard here in 1833, and performances at the old Academy of Music seventy seasons ago may have been its last on a local stage; it is safe to say that it has gone unheard here since the turn of the century.

Last night's revival under Arnold U. Gamson's expert direction was in concert form, but with a good deal of stage action. The singers, headed by Laurel Hurley as Ninetta, Charles Anthony as Gianetto, Paul Ukena as Fernando and Salvatore Baccaloni as the scheming but thwarted Mayor, used Giovanni Gherardini's original Italian text; the music, it was said, was given nearly in full, but with a few cuts near the close.

"La Gazza Ladra" was first staged in Italy in 1817, a year after "Il Barbiere," and there is much in its score, in melodies, style and scoring, that recalls the earlier work. But, designated as an "opera semi-seria"; its comedy alternates with more serious situations; Ninetta is threatened with execution, escaping only when the thefts of the magpie of the title are discovered; her father, similarly threatened, is also reprieved just before the jubilant close. Thus we have Rossini in a serious as well as a buffa vein. The story is not particularly complicated, although it might have been hard to follow without the aid of the program notes' summary. There is plenty of emotional variety in the music as well as the story and the characters, while operatic types of their period, are not without individuality.

The music, expectedly, is typical of Rossini in this stage of his career, with his remarkable melodic inventiveness and impressive craftsmanship; in its comic measures, it has a convincing vivacity, and there is also dramatic persuasiveness and momentum elsewhere. There are fewer immediately memorable tunes than "Il Barbiere" provides, but many of marked appeal; two in the second act proved to be old friends from their use in the overture. Occasionally, in the more serious episodes, there were what would now seem sentimental touches; some of the musical ideas seemed more durable than others. But, in general, the opera showed ample vitality, most of the concerted passages, in particular, proved absorbing as well as expertly wrought, and the Society, directed by Allen Sven Oxenburg, deserves thanks for bringing it again to light.

The performance was vocally well balanced, on the part of the soloists and the choristers trained by Margaret Hillis; the orchestra, in good form and sharing the prevailing devotion and spirit, was a little overbearing at times. Miss Hurley conveyed Ninetta's emotions in well styled singing with a voice that was prevalently very appealing in texture, while occasionally slightly uneven in clarity. Mr. Anthony sang fervently, with some whiteness in upper notes and hints of forcing in an otherwise commendable tone. Mr. Baccaloni, with a proclamative, weighty voice, found the Mayor's role entirely to his liking in a vividly effective characterization. Paul Ukena was in good voice as Fernando; persuasive characterizations and generally commendable vocal standards were provided by Lee Cass as Fabrizio, Ruth Kobart as Lucia, Lawrence Avery as Isacco, Jean Schneck as Pippo and Thomas LoMonaco as Giorgio.

The Bostonians

Last night at Carnegie Hall, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, devoted an entire program to Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo et Juliette," providing one of the most startling evidences of the composer's genius to come forth in this anniversary year. Soloists were Mary Davenport, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Yi-Kwei Sze, bass; choral sections were sung by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, which are directed by G. W. Woodworth.

If Berlioz anticipated misunderstanding of this score in 1839, due to its "special character" as "neither an opera in concert form nor a cantata, but a symphony with chorus," he may have had reasons, for the fluid techniques of the movie film were not, of course, in existence, and these, in one manner or another, are very close to the processes he was employing. The symphony's program reads like a scenario—"Combats—Tumult—Intervention of the Prince"; and then, "Romeo alone—Melancholy—Concert and Ball—Festical at the Capulets." But this is only a part of the story. More subtly, a few stanzas are given by a solo voice, delineating not exact Shakespearean details, but philosophising poetically on the situation that exists and which is to come. An entire movement is given over to the orchestra, and then, after a brief, tonal painting of a "Calm Night" (which Hollywood might pilfer to advantage), comes an airy bit of choral sound. The whole is as delicately complex and intuitive in its nattative effect as a successful "art" film, with subtle elaborate interweaving of symbols, motifs, plot, narrative, and visual depiction. And the quality of music is incredibly high. The "Love Scene" is perhaps one of the most touching bits of expression in the romantic literature.

Performancewise, the orchestra, under Mr. Munch's hand, brought forth all the transparent loveliness of the score, rising to climaxes without crushing them or making them tubby, and losing not one iota of energy. Now and then in the prestissimo Queen Mab Scherzo, the strings lacked something in ensemble precision. But overexactitude would have been ruinous, and one did certainly hear Queen Mab "in her microscopic car, attended by the buzzing insects of a summer's night".—L.T.

[87]

"The Sad Time Has Come"

As they gathered in Carnegie Hall's orchestra room before the Sunday evening broadcast, members of the NBC Symphony seemed to sense what was coming. When the door opened, one of the men hissed for quiet and another called "Silenzio!" The musicians watched tensely as their 87-year-old conductor passed through the silence, leaning heavily on the arm of his son. Out in the hall, many of the audience who had come to witness the season's last Toscanini concert also guessed that it might be Arturo Toscanini's last stand with the NBC—and perhaps with any orchestra.

The evening's concert proved to be unlike any Toscanini had ever conducted before. Until two weeks ago, the Maestro's performances held the fire, vigor and precision for which he is famous. But at the final rehearsal he was upset, and walked out on the orchestra. At the concert—excerpts from his beloved Wagner operas—Toscanini's mind seemed to be far away. There were passages when his beat was robust as of old. There were other times when he almost stopped conducting, seeming to stand aside, listening to the music. Then the incredible happened: during the Bacchanal from Tannhäuser, the superb orchestra actually became confused. Alert NBC engineers cut the broadcast off the air with an announcement about "operational difficulties." Incongruously, a few bars of Brahms' First Symphony drifted over the air, as a fill-in recording was played in the studio.

Strict Secret. But on the stage, the Maestro seemed to take hold of himself. He stepped to the edge of the podium, and, with careful gestures, gradually pulled the music together again. At the end of his final selection—the Prelude to Die Meistersinger—he left the podium before the final notes had sounded, and let the baton fall from his hand.

The audience clapped for five minutes. But Toscanini barricaded himself in his dressing room, did not return for his bows.

That night the papers carried the news which for a week had been kept a strict secret even from his own musicians: Arturo Toscanini, the greatest performing musician alive today, had retired. For almost a fortnight, his letter of resignation to RCA Board Chairman David Sarnoff had rested, unsigned, on his desk. Abruptly, on his 87th birthday, Toscanini made his decision, ran upstairs and signed it. Excerpt: "And now the sad time has come when I must reluctantly lay aside my baton and say goodbye to my orchestra . . . I shall carry with me rich memories of these years of music making . . ."

Flaming Spirit. The NBC Symphony, formed especially for Toscanini 17 years ago and built by him into one of the world's great orchestras, will continue under guest conductors for at least the next eight weeks. Its probable replacement over NBC: the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch (TIME, April 5).

Sy Friedman—NBC

TOSCANINI AT LAST NBC CONCERT
The baton fell.

Arturo Toscanini himself is expected to go to Italy for the summer. Whether he will return to the U.S.—or whether he will ever conduct again—nobody knows. But his 68 years on the podium are already a legend. Wrote New York Times Critic Olin Downes: "Should this have been his permanent farewell . . . his name will remain supreme and his achievement immortally revered. There has never been a more gallant and intrepid champion of great music, or a spirit that flamed higher, or a nobler defender of the faith."

Martha Holmes

BACKHAUS IN MANHATTAN
Young with Beethoven.

Triumphal Return

For 40 years, German Pianist Wilhelm Backhaus has been known as one of the world's musical giants. When he made his U.S. debut in 1912, his soulful mien and his remarkable performances created high excitement. But in the '20s he decided "to give America a rest." Last week, just turned 70, he made a triumphal return for a single recital in Manhattan's jampacked Carnegie Hall, his first in 28 years.

Pianist Backhaus, square-jawed and bulky, played five sonatas by Beethoven with the virility and technique of a man half his age. He began with the tried & true Pathétique, swirled through the Tempest, rippled through Les Adieux, produced a playful Opus 79 and summed everything up with a lofty performance of Opus 111. "One of the greatest evenings . . . of Beethoven's piano music [in a quarter century]," raved the New York Times's Olin Downes. "Mr. Backhaus was young with Beethoven."

Backhaus' reason for staying away from the U.S. so long: a vague "things political." He is now a Swiss citizen (he left his native Germany in 1931), and although he played in Germany during the war, bears no taint of Naziism. But he had private doubts: "I did not want to come here and run the risk of getting a reception some other Germans had. Why should I run the risk?"

Wilhelm Backhaus was delighted with his success, but he was not sure about coming back for an extended tour. "I am too old. After all, one must face the fact." On the other hand, he has just completed a heavily booked tour of Europe. Reminded of this, he admitted: "At the piano I feel young enough."

Shy Venture

Secure in his top rank among contemporary U.S. composers of symphonic music, Aaron Copland last week took the plunge into opera. Shy about his ver[sion] Veteran (53) Composer Copland [had] thought of launching The Tender L[and] (a story of the rural Midwest) far fr[om] the calloused ears of Manhattan cri[tics] ("I thought maybe Canada"). Then came an irresistible offer to open it at the New York City Opera, and Copland gave in.

Clean-Scrubbed Kansas. His opening curtain rose on a prairie-farmyard scene. His characters were plain, salt-of-the-earth folk: a grandfather (Basso Norman Treigle), a mother (Contralto Jean Handzlik), daughter Laurie (Soprano Rosemary Carlos) and a pair of drifting farmhands. The plot, such as it was, moved from Laurie's high-school pre-graduation party through a brief, unrealistic courtship ("I'd like to have a wife for a while," sang one of the drifters), and ended on a symbolic note by sending the girl off in search of her future.

Composer Copland turned in a compact (95 minutes), clean-scrubbed score. The opera's melodic high point was an eight-minute love duet. Elsewhere, Copland managed to give a fairly musical

OVER

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIKE
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUN 1[illegible]

25 Student Concerts at Berkshire Center

About 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The Berkshire Music Center is directed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, according to the plan and in the spirit of its creator, Serge Koussevitzky. Now preparing for its 12th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all over the world Sunday, July 4, the Berkshire Music Center has Aaron Copland as assistant director, and such eminent musicians as Jean Morel, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Ernst Toch, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as teachers.

Young musicians of high skill—players, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, at Tanglewood have the valuable experience of group performance. As in the past, their concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity.

Five forums wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood argue their own and fellow students' works, are to be held Sunday evenings at 8:30 July 11 to Aug. 15.

Three evenings of opera will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, which require reserved seat tickets. Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso" and Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" are the attraction on Tuesday, July 27; Copland's full-length opera, "The Tender Land," new to New England, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

, THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1954 Herald Tribune 23

CONCERT AND RECITAL

By Francis D. Perkins

"La Gazza Ladra"

All New York opera goers know Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," many have recently become acquainted with his "La Ceberentola," but his "La Gazza Ladra," which the American Chamber Opera Society performed last night as the second production of its Town Hall series, has long been known to us only by its overture. It was first heard here in 1833, and performances at the old Academy of Music seventy seasons ago may have been its last on a local stage; it is safe to say that it has gone unheard here since the turn of the century.

Last night's revival under Arnold U. Gamson's expert direction was in concert form, but with a good deal of stage action. The singers, headed by Laurel Hurley as Ninetta, Charles Anthony as Gianetto, Paul Ukena as Fernando and Salvatore Baccaloni as the scheming but thwarted Mayor, used Giovanni Gherardini's original Italian text; the music, it was said, was given nearly in full, but with a few cuts near the close.

"La Gazza Ladra" was first staged in Italy in 1817, a year after "Il Barbiere," and there is much in its score, in melodies, style and scoring, that recalls the earlier work. But, designated as an "opera semi-seria"; its comedy alternates with more serious situations; Ninetta is threatened with execution, escaping only when the thefts of the magpie of the title are discovered; her father, similarly threatened, is also reprieved just before the jubilant close. Thus we have Rossini in a serious as well as a buffa vein. The story is not particularly complicated, although it might have been hard to follow without the aid of the program notes' summary. There is plenty of emotional variety in the music as well as the story and the characters, while operatic types of their period, are not without individuality.

The music, expectedly, is typical of Rossini in this stage of his career, with his remarkable melodic inventiveness and impressive craftsmanship; in its comic measures, it has a convincing vivacity, and there is also dramatic persuasiveness and momentum elsewhere. There are fewer immediately memorable tunes than "Il Barbiere" provides, but many of marked appeal; two in the second act proved to be old friends from their use in the overture. Occasionally, in the more serious episodes, there were what would now seem sentimental touches; some of the musical ideas seemed more durable than others. But, in general, the opera showed ample vitality, most of the concerted passages, in particular, proved absorbing as well as expertly wrought, and the Society, directed by Allen Sven Oxenburg, deserves thanks for bringing it again to light.

The performance was vocally well balanced, on the part of the soloists and the choristers trained by Margaret Hillis; the orchestra, in good form and sharing the prevailing devotion and spirit, was a little overbearing at times. Miss Hurley conveyed Ninetta's emotions in well styled singing with a voice that was prevalently very appealing in texture, while occasionally slightly uneven in clarity. Mr. Anthony sang fervently, with some whiteness in upper notes and hints of forcing in an otherwise commendable tone. Mr. Baccaloni, with a proclamative, weighty voice, found the Mayor's role entirely to his liking in a vividly effective characterization. Paul Ukena was in good voice as Fernando; persuasive characterizations and generally commendable vocal standards were provided by Lee Cass as Fabrizio, Ruth Kobart as Lucia, Lawrence Avery as Isacco, Jean Schneck as Pippo and Thomas LoMonaco as Giorgio.

The Bostonians

Last night at Carnegie Hall, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, devoted an entire program to Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo et Juliette," providing one of the most startling evidences of the composer's genius to come forth in this anniversary year. Soloists were Mary Davenport, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Yi-Kwei Sze, bass; choral sections were sung by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, which are directed by G. W. Woodworth.

If Berlioz anticipated misunderstanding of this score in 1839, due to its "special character" as "neither an opera in concert form nor a cantata, but a symphony with chorus," he may have had reasons, for the fluid techniques of the movie film were not, of course, in existence, and these, in one manner or another, are very close to the processes he was employing. The symphony's program reads like a scenario—"Combats—Tumult—Intervention of the Prince"; and then, "Romeo alone—Melancholy—Concert and Ball—Festical at the Capulets." But this is only a part of the story. More subtly, a few stanzas are given by a solo voice, delineating not exact Shakespearean details, but philosophising poetically on the situation that exists and which is to come. An entire movement is given over to the orchestra, and then, after a brief, tonal painting of a "Calm Night" (which Hollywood might pilfer to advantage), comes an airy bit of choral sound. The whole is as delicately complex and intuitive in its nattative effect as a successful "art" film, with subtle elaborate interweaving of symbols, motifs, plot, narrative, and visual depiction. And the quality of music is incredibly high. The "Love Scene" is perhaps one of the most touching bits of expression in the romantic literature.

Performancewise, the orchestra, under Mr. Munch's hand, brought forth all the transparent loveliness of the score, rising to climaxes without crushing them or making them tubby, and losing not one iota of energy. Now and then in the prestissimo Queen Mab Scherzo, the strings lacked something in ensemble precision. But overexactitude would have been ruinous, and one did certainly hear Queen Mab "in her microscopic car, attended by the buzzing insects of a summer's night".—L.T.

[87]

"Make friends with MARTELL Cognac"

The World's Most Cherished Liqueur Cognac

MARTELL

"Cordon Bleu"

The magnificent bouquet, smoothness and taste of Martell "Cordon Bleu" have long made it the connoisseurs' choice. Here is definitely the de luxe after-dinner liqueur Cognac.

Since 1715

Imported by PARK & TILFORD DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK • 80 PROOF

lift to such prosy lines as "Not for me, Mrs. Moss. I've already had three helpings." By the supporting fullness of his orchestra, he also made the singers' voices sound warmer than they do in most contemporary opera. But his music slid too easily from one cool harmony to another, and on the whole, held as little punch as the libretto. When it was over, the audience gave a long round of applause that was more polite than enthusiastic.

Sere-Faced Farmers. Brooklyn-born Aaron Copland has no rural roots of his own (although his mother was raised in Peoria), but always knew he wanted to write an "American" opera. A dozen years ago, he read Let Us Now Praise Famous Men, a prose poem about the hard-scrabble South by James Agee, with photographs by Walker Evans. Copland found it inspiring, afterward showed it to his librettist, Poet Horace Everett,* who was struck by the photographs of sere-faced farmers and their families. Everett transferred the setting from the South to Kansas and finished the libretto two years ago.

Martha Holmes

COMPOSER COPLAND
For calloused ears, too relaxed.

As opening night drew near, Copland's shy doubts returned. The Tender Land, as he conceived it, was really only a step along the road to a full-evening opera to come; perhaps he was wrong to show it in Manhattan at all. He also worried about the human element: "When I write a symphony," he says, "I know the orchestra and just how it will play my music." Singers are comparatively unpredictable. But more important to Stylist Copland was the fact that he had foregone "the absolute originality of every measure," turned in an uncharacteristically relaxed score. "This is not," he smiled, "the opera the critics were waiting for me to write—if they were waiting."

* Also a painter under the name Eric Johns.

"Make friends with MARTELL Cognac"

The World's Renowned "All Purpose" Cognac Brandy

MARTELL

"Three Star"

Martell "Three Star" is a versatile and congenial Cognac, superb in a highball, cocktail, or for after dinner. The choice of generation after generation throughout the world.

A Great Symbol of FRANCE

Imported by PARK & TILFORD DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK • 84 PROOF

THE ORIGINAL ROMEIKE PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)
This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUN 12 1954

25 Student Concerts at Berkshire Center

About 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The Berkshire Music Center is directed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, according to the plan and in the spirit of its creator, Serge Koussevitzky. Now preparing for its 12th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all over the world Sunday, July 4, the Berkshire Music Center has Aaron Copland as assistant director, and such eminent musicians as Jean Morel, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Ernst Toch, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as teachers.

Young musicians of high skill—players, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, at Tanglewood have the valuable experience of group performance. As in the past, their concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity.

Five forums wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood argue their own and fellow students' works, are to be held Sunday evenings at 8:30 July 11 to Aug. 15.

Three evenings of opera will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, which require reserved seat tickets. Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso" and Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" are the attraction on Tuesday, July 27; Copland's full-length opera, "The Tender Land," new to New England, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

, THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1954 Herald Tribune 23

CONCERT AND RECITAL

By Francis D. Perkins

"La Gazza Ladra"

All New York opera goers know Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," many have recently become acquainted with his "La Ceberentola," but his "La Gazza Ladra," which the American Chamber Opera Society performed last night as the second production of its Town Hall series, has long been known to us only by its overture. It was first heard here in 1833, and performances at the old Academy of Music seventy seasons ago may have been its last on a local stage; it is safe to say that it has gone unheard here since the turn of the century.

Last night's revival under Arnold U. Gamson's expert direction was in concert form, but with a good deal of stage action. The singers, headed by Laurel Hurley as Ninetta, Charles Anthony as Gianetto, Paul Ukena as Fernando and Salvatore Baccaloni as the scheming but thwarted Mayor, used Giovanni Gherardini's original Italian text; the music, it was said, was given nearly in full, but with a few cuts near the close.

"La Gazza Ladra" was first staged in Italy in 1817, a year after "Il Barbiere," and there is much in its score, in melodies, style and setting, that recalls the earlier work. But, designated as an "opera semi-seria"; its comedy alternates with more serious situations; Ninetta is threatened with execution, escaping only when the thefts of the magpie of the title are discovered; her father, similarly threatened, is also reprieved just before the jubilant close. Thus we have Rossini in a serious as well as a buffa vein. The story is not particularly complicated, although it might have been hard to follow without the aid of the program notes' summary. There is plenty of emotional variety in the music as well as the story and the characters, while operatic types of their period, are not without individuality.

The music, expectedly, is typical of Rossini in this stage of his career, with his remarkable melodic inventiveness and impressive craftsmanship; in its comic measures, it has a convincing vivacity, and there is also dramatic persuasiveness and momentum elsewhere. There are fewer immediately memorable tunes than "Il Barbiere" provides, but many of marked appeal; two in the second act proved to be old friends from their use in the overture. Occasionally, in the more serious episodes, there were what would now seem sentimental touches; some of the musical ideas seemed more durable than others. But, in general, the opera showed ample vitality, most of the concerted passages, in particular, proved absorbing as well as expertly wrought, and the Society, directed by Allen Sven Oxenburg, deserves thanks for bringing it again to light.

The performance was vocally well balanced, on the part of the soloists and the choristers trained by Margaret Hillis; the orchestra, in good form and sharing the prevailing devotion and spirit, was a little overbearing at times. Miss Hurley conveyed Ninetta's emotions in well styled singing with a voice that was prevalently very appealing in texture, while occasionally slightly uneven in clarity. Mr. Anthony sang fervently, with some whiteness in upper notes and hints of forcing in an otherwise commendable tone. Mr. Baccaloni, with a proclamative, weighty voice, found the Mayor's role entirely to his liking in a vividly effective characterization. Paul Ukena was in good voice as Fernando; persuasive characterizations and generally commendable vocal standards were provided by Lee Cass as Fabrizio, Ruth Kobart as Lucia, Lawrence Avery as Isacco, Jean Schneck as Pippo and Thomas LoMonaco as Giorgio.

The Bostonians

Last night at Carnegie Hall, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, devoted an entire program to Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo et Juliette," providing one of the most startling evidences of the composer's genius to come forth in this anniversary year. Soloists were Mary Davenport, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Yi-Kwei Sze, bass; choral sections were sung by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, which are directed by G. W. Woodworth.

If Berlioz anticipated misunderstanding of this score in 1839, due to its "special character" as "neither an opera in concert form nor a cantata, but a symphony with chorus," he may have had reasons, for the fluid techniques of the movie film were not, of course, in existence, and these, in one manner or another, are very close to the processes he was employing. The symphony's program reads like a scenario—"Combats—Tumult—Intervention of the Prince"; and then, "Romeo alone—Melancholy—Concert and Ball—Festical at the Capulets." But this is only a part of the story. More subtly, a few stanzas are given by a solo voice, delineating not exact Shakespearean details, but philosophising poetically on the situation that exists and which is to come. An entire movement is given over to the orchestra, and then, after a brief, tonal painting of a "Calm Night" (which Hollywood might pilfer to advantage), comes an airy bit of choral sound. The whole is as delicately complex and intuitive in its nattative effect as a successful "art" film, with subtle elaborate interweaving of symbols, motifs, plot, narrative, and visual depiction. And the quality of music is incredibly high. The "Love Scene" is perhaps one of the most touching bits of expression in the romantic literature.

Performancewise, the orchestra, under Mr. Munch's hand, brought forth all the transparent loveliness of the score, rising to climaxes without crushing them or making them tubby, and losing not one iota of energy. Now and then in the prestissimo Queen Mab Scherzo, the strings lacked something in ensemble precision. But overexactitude would have been ruinous, and one did certainly hear Queen Mab "in her microscopic car, attended by the buzzing insects of a summer's night".—L.T.

[87]

A BIT OF NOSTALGIA

From our priceless files we offer this reminiscence of Peter Ilyitch Tchaikowsky's first American appearance on the occasion of the opening of Carnegie Hall in New York City, as reviewed in our issue of May 15, 1891. (The Musical Courier was only eleven years old at the time.)

THE MUSICAL COURIER.

The Music of the Festival.

A DAZZLING array of color, light, and a buzz of conversation filled the new Music Hall Tuesday evening, May 5, as Walter Damrosch stepped on the stage, baton in hand, to open the exercises of the new hall. The boxes were crowded with distinguished people, such as the Hon. J. G. Blaine and Andrew Carnegie, J. D. Rockefeller, Bishop Henry C. Potter, Abraham S. Hewitt and his family, Seth Low, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, C. N. Bliss, Dr. F. S. Dennis and Mrs. Dennis, E. Francis Hyde, J. J. Kennedy, D. Bacon, Miss Mary Howe, Edmund Coffin, E. Penfold, G. T. Hodgman, Joseph Beckel and daughter, J. E. Searles, Jr., William S. Hawk, J. J. McComb, William J. Sheane, Isaac N. Seligman, Henry Seligman, Morris Reno, Fred. W. Holls, C. M. Hyde, James Stokes, W. B. Putney, Thomas Hitchcock and many others.

PETER TSCHAIKOWSKY

The auditorium was packed and Bishop Potter must have faced one of the largest audiences of his life when he advanced, after the singing of the "Old Hundred," to deliver his oration and formally dedicate the hall.

The program of the evening was as follows:

"Old Hundred".....
Oration, "Dedication of the Hall".....
By the Right Reverend Henry C. Potter, D. D.
National hymn, "America".....Beethoven
Overture, "Leonore," No. 3.....Tschaikowsky
"Marche Solennelle".....
Conducted by the composer.
"Te Deum".....Berlioz
(First time in New York.) For tenor solo, triple chorus and orchestra.
Soloist, Italo Campanini.

The Beethoven overture received a very loose, ragged reading. Everybody, including Mr. Damrosch, was evidently too much excited to play smoothly, but when Mr. Peter Tschaikowsky took the band in hand all was changed. The great Russian's beat is firm, forcible, even a little harsh, but as to its effectiveness there can be no doubt, for the orchestra followed him implicitly and not he the orchestra.

Comparisons could never be more odious than between Walter Damrosch and Tschaikowsky, but that they were made that night goes without saying. All the personal magnetism and virility the younger conductor lacks were gratifyingly present in the conducting of the great composer, and though his "Marche Solennelle" in D is a bit of musical claptrap, redolent of Meyerbeer and Wagner, and not a good imitation of either, still the audience fairly shouted at its composer, and he had to bow his acknowledgments four or five times. In point of strict fact, from the time that Tschaikowsky made his initial bend of the back until he, with Adele Aus der Ohe, smiled his farewell at a New York audience, the festival was emphatically a Tschaikowsky one.

Without his presence it languished and it would have been a wise thing if the management had allowed him to conduct some of his larger works, such as the fourth or fifth symphony or any of the overture fantasies. It was palpably unjust, even absurd, to bring a man 4,000 miles to conduct a march, a suite, four choruses and a piano concerto.

If the May festival had been downright and honest in its intentions it would have resolved itself into a Tschaikowsky celebration instead of digging up a lot of old musical bones for the greater edification of Mr. Damrosch and the Oratorio Society.

And what could have been more appropriate?

That Tschaikowsky is one of the greatest composers alive will not be gainsaid and his presence in our midst was an honor and a delight not often vouchsafed us.

The evening closed with Berlioz's colossal "Te Deum," the eccentric Frenchman's op. 22, given for the first time in New York. The work was planned as if with the hand of a musical Michael Angelo, is for a triple chorus, with orchestra and organ, and its score suggests one of those mighty frescoes in which half veiled beings move to and fro in a shadowy and gigantic manner. But its grandeur was missing; it became, in fact, tiresome from its overwhelming resonance and the loose manner in which it was handled by the conductor. Even the tremendous "Judex Crederis" failed to make an effect, the chorus, orchestra and organ being often at variance.

The Lively Arts -

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy planning plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

*

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum," and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

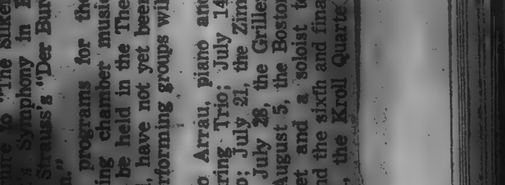
Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Overture to "Léonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist; Copland: "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Possell, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans) "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz. Munch



Saturday evening, conducting, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting, Prelude, "Wagner; Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ symphony, Saint-Saens.

Sunday evening, July 26, Munch conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist; Copland: "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Possell, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans) "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz. Munch

Saturday evening, Pre- conduct- ing, "Lohen- grin," Wagner; Fourth Sympho- ny, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ sym- phony, Saint-Saens. Sunday after- noon, Munch con- duct- ing, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall.

During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 33, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same compo- s "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on t 7, Lukas Foss will take the p rough the complete Stravinsky "Pulcinella," a pi- ano conce art with Seymour Lipkin as d excerpts from "Jeunesse" art, with chorus and soloists.

At the final c which will be Thursday, August 1 ther than Fri- day, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Bur- ger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet

[88]

Musical Courier May/54.

First of a Series on the Great Orchestras of America

ONE HUNDRED MEN AND TWO GIRLS

The Boston Symphony

By JULES WOLFFERS

A TRADITIONALISM that holds fast to achievements of the past, a practical realization of present-day needs, and a questioning spirit that looks far into the future—these are the elements that give the Boston Symphony Orchestra its unique position.

So firmly imbedded is the Orchestra in New England's musical and cultural fabric that it is difficult to realize the Orchestra was founded only 73 years ago. There are still some symphony subscribers alive who have heard the Orchestra under all of its conductors from George Henschel to Charles Munch. One member of the original Orchestra, Daniel Kunze, is still alive, hale and hearty enough to attend the Orchestra's concerts and reminisce about the good old days.

Past and Present join hands—Monteux, Koussevitzy, Munch.

Founded in 1881 by Henry Lee Higginson—would-be musician turned banker—and supported almost single-handedly by the doughty Colonel, the Orchestra has sometimes been accused of being a club for Beacon Hill Brahmins. If so, it is a club that has always opened its doors wide for anyone to enter. From the very beginning provisions were made for public rehearsals at nominal admission charges. To this day "rush" seats are available at 60 cents for the Friday afternoon concerts and a return to the old tradition of public rehearsals has been established with a series of Thursday evening rehearsals at popular prices. These really are working sessions with the conductor stopping the Orchestra, where needed, to give the audience a fascinating glimpse into the preparation of a concert.

Another proof of the non-exclusiveness of this club is the number of series ticket holders. Ten thousand persons are subscribers in Boston alone, which establishes a record not matched by any other city. This does not include the series in Cambridge, Providence, and New York, nor its frequent tours.

It is a matter of record that almost from its inception the Orchestra has brought music to the masses. Its Pops season has an inimitable atmosphere that has been the despair of those seeking to duplicate its success elsewhere. Like the Australian Koala bear which can thrive only in one locale, the Boston Pops cannot be successfully transplanted out of sight of the State House's gilded dome.

Yes, this "exclusive" club scatters its largesse with almost unparalleled generosity. Pops is a money-maker with sold-out houses the rule, especially since the advent of Arthur Fiedler. But the Esplanade season of free outdoor concerts on the banks of the Charles attracts its audiences by the tens of thousands. In spite of the deficit such a

The Lively Arts—

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz; and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum" and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Francaschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Teria," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist, Copland; "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, Overture, Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," [illegible], August 14, Munch conducting, "Prelude, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall. During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Boch Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 33, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on August 7, Lukas Foss will take the piano through the complete Stravinsky "Pulcinella," a piano concert with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet," with chorus and soloists.

At the final [illegible] which will be Thursday, August 11, rather than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet

[88]

INFORMATION OBSCURED

...ge-scale operation entails, the Orchestra recently announced an extension of the Esplanade season.

The stereotype of the hard-fisted and penny-pinching New Englander becomes an amusing fiction when one analyzes the trustees' policies. Prudent and careful the management certainly is, but this prudence and care husbands the Orchestra's resources for uses which show an unmatched sense of responsibility to the public of today and the music of tomorrow.

What shall we say of this penny-pincher which actually pays to have its concerts broadcast so that any person with an FM set within FM range can hear the Orchestra twice weekly at the flick of a wrist. The Orchestra is a member of the Lowell Broadcasting Educational Association, which includes educational institutions which contribute yearly for educational and cultural broadcasts.

Then there is Tanglewood in the rolling Massachusetts Berkshires, which would show a handsome profit were it not for the large deficit entailed by the operation of the famed Berkshire Music Center. This summer music school was a dream realized by Serge Koussevitzky, and the trustees have carried the project forward as a matter of course.

All these activities give the Orchestra a season which stretches almost the whole year round. No other American symphony orchestra presents so many concerts. Consequently the terms of employment give a secure basis of living for the musicians—which is not always the case elsewhere.

The Orchestra's finances proved no particular problem in the first years—Colonel Higginson simply made up the deficits out of a capacious pocket from which no government hand extracted an income tax. On his passing, the Colonel endowed the Orchestra with a sum the income of which may have been sufficient for the days when you could hire a good musician for twenty dollars a week, but which became a drop in the bucket in terms of present-day expenses. Furthermore, the Colonel did not like labor unions: he stipulated that the bequest would hold only so long as the Orchestra remained non-union.

When Mr. Petrillo and the A.F.M. finally cracked down, the Orchestra found itself in an untenable position. Thus the last orchestra to hold out joined the ranks, and relations between the trustees and Mr. Petrillo seem to have been marked by extreme cordiality on both sides.

This was a wise step. Royalties from recordings amount to some $150,000 to $200,000 yearly. The total annual budget is $1,500,000, of which about $1,000,00 is realized through concert receipts. Endowments and miscellaneous earnings bring in close to another $100,000. Thus a deficit of about a quarter of a million dollars yearly has to be faced by the management. At this writing $150,000 has been raised this season by contributions from the Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and by business firms.

With all unrestricted funds exhausted it might not be incorrect to say that a financial crisis confronts the Orchestra. Although the deficit totals only one-sixth of the expenditures, in itself a remarkable achievement, the money must be found, and found soon if the Orchestra is to function at its present level. But it is difficult to believe that New England will let its great Orchestra down. In the past the management has been almost too gentlemanly in its appeal for funds. The Orchestra has now abandoned some of its former reticence and has taken the public into its confidence through large advertisements in the daily press and through other means. A broader base of support is bound to be the result. So, perhaps the best way to characterize the Orchestra's financial picture might be to say that it is serious but not critical. In any case the trustees are determined to keep present high standards unimpaired.

These standards are a natural corollary to the management's policy of engaging the best possible conductors and musicians. Koussevitzky's twenty-five-year tenure was remarkable not only for the level of performance achieved, but also for the leadership taken by the Orchestra in the encouragement of contemporary music both European and American.

This is Charles Munch's fifth year as conductor in Boston. Like his predecessor, Mr. Munch has been the target of some unfavorable criticism from time to time. Looking back on the Koussevitzky era one remembers the over-all great achievements and forgets those occasions when the Russian conductor fell somewhat short of perfection.

The Boston public is not easily satisfied. The fact that it regards its present conductor with high favor is proof that the Orchestra's level remains in the highest category. Certainly the European tour of last year was a triumph from start to finish, and the Boston season remains steadily sold-out.

The feeling in the Hub regarding the Orchestra may best be summed up by quoting from a letter sent by a business firm in answer to a solicitation for funds:

"All of us in Boston, and for that matter in New England, are very proud of the contribution the Boston Symphony Orchestra has made to the general good. Always of surpassing excellence, with outstanding direction, it has for years been a standard of musical enjoyment and musical perfection."

They also made the Boston Symphony Great

Karl Muck (1906-08, 1912-18)

George Henschel (1881-84)

Arthur Nikisch (1889-93)

Arthur Fiedler (Conductor of the Boston "Pops" Concerts, Founder and Conductor of the Esplanade Concerts)

The Lively Arts—

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

★

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz; and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum," and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras. Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor; Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist; Copland: "Fantastic" Symphony; Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), Berlioz. "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz. Munch

Saturday evening, Aug... conducting, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conduct... ing, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall. During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 53, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, with Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on ... 7, Lukas Foss will take the p... ough the complete "Pulcinella," a pi... ano concer... art with Seymour ... excerpts from ... t, with chorus ... and soloists.

At the final ... which will be ... ther than Friday, August ... guest conduct in Rossini's O... b "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet.

[88]

THE NEW YORK CONCERT AND OPERA BEAT

DR. HENRY W. LEVINGER, Chief Critic and Editor

CARNEGIE HALL

Alexander Brailowsky, Pianist, Feb. 1, E—This brilliant Russian-born pianist thrilled his large responsive audience by a superb demonstration of keyboard mastery in the first of two all-Chopin programs (the second will be on Feb. 9).

Chopin the composer was presented mainly in small dimensions. The exceptions were the A flat Ballade; the ("Funeral March") Sonata in B flat minor, actually a tonal fantasy; and the giant, locally much overplayed B flat minor Scherzo, the latter terminating the scheduled recital midst a pandemonium of cheers resulting in several Chopin encores. H. I. B.

(B flat minor Sonata) . . . played with a passionate sweep and the power of line that the music requires.
O. D., N. Y. TIMES

It was Chopin as Brailowsky hears him. For those to whom the pianist's ears and ideas are a substitute for, or a duplicate of, their own, the recital was a blinding success. For others who picture Chopin as embodying other and different values, the imagination was untouched as the evening went on. J. S. H., N. Y. HERALD-TRIBUNE

Philadelphia Orchestra, Feb. 2, E—Eugene Ormandy returned to the helm of the orchestra after his mid-winter leave, and was cordially greeted when he opened the program with his own transcription for orchestra of Handel's Overture in D minor. It was followed by Brahms' Symphony No. 3. Mr. Ormandy's interpretation stressed the lyric aspects of the work, not to its advantage. The powerful dramatic impact was often lost, and the whole performance, though beguiling in tonal beauty, lacked spine and drive. But the audience applauded the conductor warmly. As guest conductor, Virgil Thomson then took over the podium to lead the orchestra in his own "Three Pictures for Orchestra." Two of them—"The Seine at Night," and "Wheatfield at Noon"—have been heard here before. The third, "Sea Picture With Birds," received its local premiere. These picture postcards in sound have a certain charm, but they seem to lack form and are not, apart from a colorful orchestration, greatly inspired with respect to musical content. Nevertheless, they were greeted with great applause by the audience.

As guest soloist Nathan Milstein played with technical mastery and musical insight Tchaikovsky's perennial Concerto in D for violin and orchestra, Op. 35. His interpretation created a stir with the audience due to its brilliance and abandon. Admirable support by the orchestra added to the spectacular impression. So insistent was the applause, that Mr. Milstein had to play an encore, an unheard of occurrence at a symphonic concert. He chose the first movement from Bach's unaccompanied E major Partita.

H. W. L.

The greater part of this concert was depressingly a bore. The fresh air came with the perennial Tchaikovsky concerto . . . played as masterfully as it was by Mr. Milstein, and accompanied so masterfully by Mr. Ormandy and the orchestra.
O. D., N. Y. TIMES

Mr. Milstein played the Tchaikovsky concerto with delectable tone and consummate technical prowess; notable artistry in phrasing and dynamic shading. F. D. P., N. Y. HERALD-TRIBUNE

Pierre Fournier, Cellist, Feb. 3, E—The eminent French cellist opened his program with a magnificent reading of Boccherini's Adagio and Allegro, followed by a thoughtful performance of Bach's Sixth Suite in D (unaccompanied) which he phrased with such exquisite musicianship and tonal beauty that one even forgot occasional errors in pitch (most likely caused by the prevailing humidity). In Brahms' Sonata in F the artist seemed too reticent, leaving the excellent Artur Balsam at the piano as the dominating partner. Bartok's Rhapsodie, a glorification of folk tunes, was played with temperament. In Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme" (Op. 33) there were a few technical slips, but as a whole, Mr. Fournier played this period piece with great charm and grace. Many encores followed.

H. W. L.

The cellist . . . took on a difficult program . . . and did not always come to grips with it . . . smoothness, urbanity, suave tone . . . a sensitive musician and a perceptive stylist.
H. C. S., N. Y. TIMES

His sound is cool, his phrasing gracious. His playing at its best is both classical and sensitive.
V. T., N. Y. HERALD-TRIBUNE

The Lively Arts—

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

★

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz; and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum," and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist, Copland; "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), Berlioz. "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz.

Saturday evening, [illegible] conducting, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ Symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall.

During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 83, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on [illegible] 7, Lukas Foss will take the p[illegible] through the complete "Pulcinella," a pi[illegible]art with Seymour [illegible] excerpts from [illegible]art, with chorus and soloists.

At the final [illegible] which will be Thursday, August [illegible] ther than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet.

[88]

have grown tighter. The repertory is —believe it or not—running dry. We have so many novelties that there's not enough novelty left for a profitable clean-up. The large companies, too, have followed into the corners of musical Europe. Small-company advantage is far less than it was.

But the small-company service remains musically vital to us. Without it, there is every reason to think that the range of our recorded music might economically find itself receding again —towards those old-fashioned principles of business that state (for big companies): plug a few popular best-sellers, music, and artists; avoid the product of limited appeal. It could happen, and it may, if the small companies are made victims of an industry-wide lowering of record prices.

We have had enough of that sort of thing elsewhere. Radio was an early victim to the mass-appeal economy. Television compounds the principle by its inherently enormous cost. Even the concert world, especially our symphony orchestra series, sticks to the tried-and-true product for economic survival. At present we have a range of music upon records that is absolutely without precedent in the entire history of music listening. We are enormously ahead of the concert world—for on records we tap the concerts of every country, and more often than not we hear far better music from each source than do local concert residents—for, again, there is a wholly different economic impetus. Music that, even in Vienna or Paris, is uneconomical and unperformed in concert is feasible and available for us on records. We actually hear more and better European music-making than the Europeans themselves, and all because of that peculiar economic situation that has increased our record companies from a handful before the war to dozens and dozens at present.

That is why I am definitely uneasy at the prospect of lower prices for records—on any permanent basis. The big companies can make a tiny profit or even sustain a definite loss for as long as strategy may dictate. The small companies cannot possibly stand up to this, and their agony will increase every day that such prices last.

Already, it seems to me, there is an unhealthy tendency among the small concerns to record "popular" repertory, and so keep alive on items of supposedly wider interest. "Scheherezade," the big concertos and repertory symphonies, a quantity of "hi-fi" items —"Pines of Rome," "Pictures at an Exhibition," and the like—these are the small-company products that a tighter economy has made mandatory. And the sound is not good, for few smaller concerns can hope to compete on the home grounds of the big outfits against long-time pros of the concert virtuoso world. The small companies have to be able to stick to small-company repertory. We must pay a price that will allow them to do so.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY
College of Music

ALL BRANCHES OF MUSIC AND MUSIC EDUCATION

Robert A. Choate, Dean

Courses leading to the degrees B. Mus.; M.M.; M.M. Ed. • In conjunction with the Graduate School — M.A.; Ph. D. • In conjunction with the School of Education — M. Ed.; Ed. D.

Year-round Projects and Workshops include:

Workshop in Music Education
Opera Workshop
Pianists Workshop

Eminent Faculty of Artists, Composers, Scholars and Educators

Master Classes under such leaders as

● ARTHUR FIEDLER
● PAUL ULANOWSKY

For information, catalogue, illustrated folder, write

DONALD L. OLIVER
Director of Admissions

BOSTON UNIVERSITY
Room 117 — 705 Commonwealth Ave.
Boston 15, Massachusetts

BARTLETT and ROBERTSON
DUO-PIANISTS
Management: Inter-Allied Artists — 119 W. 57th Street, New York 19, N. Y.

PAULIST CHOIR of CHICAGO
FATHER O'MALLEY, CONDUCTOR
". . . in their particular field, they represent a pinnacle of choral art."
Felix Borowski, Chicago Sun Times.
Now Booking: Gerhard Schleiter, Mgr., 911 So. Wabash, Chicago, Ill.

William* STEVENS, *Pianist

"Extraordinary Technical Ability . . . Unique Creative Approach" Boston Herald
"A Stirring Musical Experience" Boston Post
"Musician Of Stature . . . Clarity . . . Distinction" Boston Globe

NEW YORK—1954 (TOWN HALL)

". . . the pianist excelled . . . each note sparkled . . ." New York Herald Tribune
"Highly promising . . . fleet, accurate, well disciplined fingers . . ." New York Times
"Mr. Stevens has talent . . . utter naturalness at the keyboard . . . precise and clear . . . a distinct pleasure to listen to . . ." New York World-Telegram and Sun

Demeter Zachareff Concert Management
25 Huntington Avenue Boston 16, Mass.

The Lively Arts

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy maturing plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

*

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum" and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor; Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist, Copland, "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak; Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), Berlioz. "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz.

Saturday evening, [illegible] conducting, "Prelude, [illegible] "Lohengrin," "Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ Symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Sunday Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall.

During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 33, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on August 7, Lukas Foss will take the piano through the complete Stravinsky "Pulcinella," a piano concerto with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, excerpts from "Homeric Symphony," with chorus and soloists.

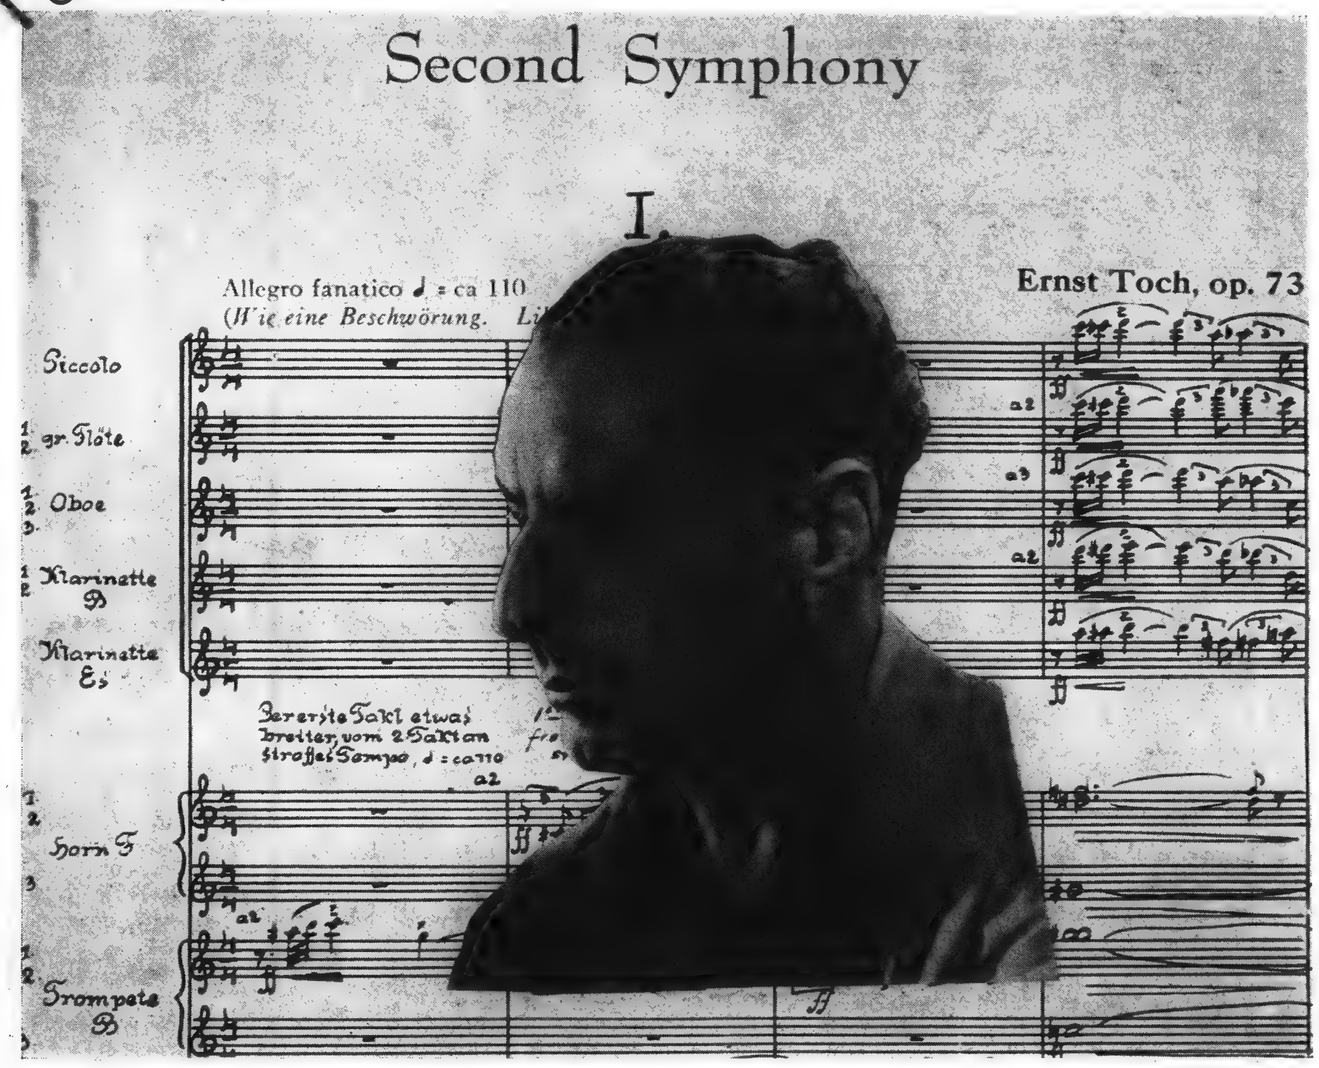
At the final concert, which will be Thursday, August 14, rather than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet.

[88]

Musical Courier Mar 1/54



"THE TEACHING OF MUSIC COMPOSITION IS FUTILE," Says ERNST TOCH

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

WHILE universities, colleges and music schools on every hand are expanding and stressing their "departments of composition," one famous composer and former eminently successful teacher has renounced the teaching of musical composition as a futile business.

He is Ernst Toch, the distinguished Viennese-born composer who was for a time a prominent pedagogue on the local scene and who is currently spending four months at the Huntington Hartford Foundation devoting himself to composition.

Mr. Toch resorts to an analogy to state his case.

"Beethoven as a young man went to Mozart and asked for lessons," he said. "Mozart listened to him improvise and play his compositions and when he had finished Mozart said, 'This man will make the world listen to him!' But Because of the controversial nature of Mr. Toch's views as expressed in this article, the Courier has asked for comments from a number of outstanding composers. Their replies will be reprinted beginning with our March 15 issue.

Albert Goldberg, music critic of the Los Angeles Times, to whom we are indebted for permission to republish this provocative interview, is one of the leading figures in the musical life of the West Coast. Before taking over his present position, he was for four years with the Chicago Tribune. He began his career as music critic under Glenn Dillard Gunn of the old Chicago Herald and Examiner. Mr. Goldberg is also a lecturer at U.C.L.A. and a contributor to several magazines.

Reprint from Toch's Second Symphony: copyright 1953 by Associated Music Publishers, Inc. EDITOR

The Lively Arts—

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

* * *

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum," and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras. Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit" "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist; Copland, "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), Berlioz, "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz, Munch conducting, Prelude, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel; Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, August 15, Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall. During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 33, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on August 7, Lukas Foss will take the piano and conduct Stravinsky's "Pulcinella," a piano concerto part with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, excerpts from "Tamenco," with chorus and soloists.

At the final concert, which will be on Thursday, August 12, rather than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet.

[88]

although Beethoven had money to pay for lessons and Mozart was in desperate straits he refused to take him for a pupil.

"He knew why. He found out sooner than I did. Beethoven then went to Albrechtsberger for lessons. Would anyone remember the name now if he had not taught Beethoven? And would Beethoven not have become Beethoven if he had not studied with Albrechtsberger? No—I cannot believe in teaching composition any more.

"I stopped teaching from despair. He who is destined to be a composer will be one in spite of what he is taught. Bartok never gave a lessen in composition—only piano. I wish I had done that. The only teacher to study composition with, if you have everything else, is life. Of course every musician has to know his language, just as a poet must know grammar. A musician must study elementary theory. But composition is something different. I differentiate between the creation of something worth while and something you turn out for units and credits. You cannot learn to be creative.

One Source of Art

"Once the parents of a student came to me and asked, 'How long will he have to study?' And I replied, 'How do I know how long he will live?'

"When I was in Europe every interview started with the question 'With whom did you study?' Would anyone think to ask with whom a poet studied? But in music they think it means something. I tell them I had the good fortune to study with Mozart. You can't become a poet in any realm of art by studying with this or that man or by joining this school or subscribing to that 'ism.'

"In every time and epoch there is only one source of art—the ever-timeless human soul. Today we are steeped in 'isms' and styles and all kinds of confusion. When my Symphony No. 1 was performed in Vienna last year three 12-tone composers came to me after the concert with tears in their eyes. I had converted them—not by words but by music.

"One 12-tone lady asked me how I had liked a piece of hers I had heard. 'Well—' I hesitated. 'You can test it,' she declared. 'Everything comes out right!'

Let Music Talk

"I am amazed at the confusion today and the shifting of importance to things I cannot think of as important. I am not concerned with fads and styles when I write music. If my music should turn out to be old-fashioned let it be old-fashioned. I try to convey something, to let music talk. Most contemporary music coughs and belches but it does not talk.

"I am convinced that 95% of the composers of today would not have dreamed of writing a note if they had lived a century ago. The musical language of today makes it too easy for them. If we are to be content with mathematics, why should not everyone compose? I know people of 40 and 50 who never composed before but who compose prolifically today. When did they become composers?

Originality Natural

"There are two things that irk me in modern attitudes. One is the subject of originality. For a time I passed on compositions for a publishing firm, and on the forms they submitted to me to fill out the first entry was 'originality.' You can be original if you can't help it, but when you try to be original by volition—what comes out? The unique charm of small children is their unawareness of their being, but when a grownup tries to be childlike he is preposterous. Either you are or you are not original by nature.

"How original was Mozart? If you ask me what innovations he introduced in his works I should say zero, point, zero, zero, zero. He accepted the prevailing forms and rules and filled everything with his inexhaustible and unapproachable cornucopia of ideas. He did not have to strive to be original. For me he is the greatest master of all time. If the miracle of Mozart was possible, then we should eliminate the word impossible from our vocabulary.

Unconscious Effort

"Similar to this obsession with originality is the idea of nationalistic consciousness in art. Nationalism, if unconscious, is one of the most charming ties between peoples. But as soon as it becomes conscious and emphasized it is hateful. I am constantly asked 'Why don't you write Jewish music?' There is only one answer. I don't know what Jewish music is. If my music should be Jewish I am content, but I can't set out to write Jewish music.

"If Bach and Beethoven wrote German music, and Debussy and Ravel wrote French music, it is because they could not help writing it. That is why their music is good. If anyone had urged them to write German or French music they would have been perplexed.

"It is like today's cry 'Be contemporary!' Most of the new music I hear cries 'I am contemporary'—and that is that. I would not advocate that music try and duplicate or copy what has been done before. I don't mean that we should do away with contemporary music but with the overemphasis on schools and isms. We all know that writing in 12 tones reveals as much, or as little, about quality as writing in major or minor modes did in former times.

Low State of Art

"The opinion prevails that music only has a chance to be understood after repeated hearings, and that therefore we must not at once reject something that sounds ugly or beyond our grasp. Mahler once said, 'Art is what displeases.' But that does not mean that what displeases is necessarily art. Puccini had an immediate world-wide appeal and Chopin's music was taken up at once by all pianists. A composer does not have to be misunderstood to be a master. Great music can be understood by everyone who is subject to human feeling. What is good is bound to become better. What is bad becomes worse and worse.

"Great music is not 'liked.' You have to love it so much that you want to live with it and embrace it with your heart. If there is any piece written within the last three or four decades to which this could apply, I cannot think of one. I am sorry to say that I think we are living in a very confused and low state of art."

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

*

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum" and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Francescati, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist, Copland, "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting, Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz.

Saturday evening, August 14, Munch conducting, "Prelude," "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ Symphony; Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall.

During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 33, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Ibert's Flute Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on August 7, Lukas Foss will take the piano through the complete "Pulcinella," a piano concerto with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, Stravinsky excerpts from "Petrouchka," with chorus and soloists.

At the final event, which will be Thursday, August 12, rather than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet.

"Visiting Musician of 1953"
(Walter Hendl, Conductor of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra)

THE NATIONAL SCENE

CHICAGO

■ Is Chicago to have a permanent opera company of its own? This vital question may be answered next fall when The Lyric Theatre of Chicago will have completed its assured three-week season—Nov. 1-21, 1954. Meanwhile, this worthy organization has to its credit two outstanding performances of Mozart's Don Giovanni given in Chicago's Opera House. Both performances, Feb. 5 and 7, were crowded.

To Carol Fox, president, and her Artistic Coordinator, Nicola Rescigno, praise is due for their efforts to re-establish a permanent opera in our city, and for having chosen Mozart's difficult masterpiece and presented it without compromise in splendid fashion. The performance was complete with regulation orchestra of seasoned players; a full quota of musicians on and off stage; chorus; ballet; the entire rococo decor (to which we took such exception when newly made for the 1926 production in the Auditorium) exposed attractively by William Wymetal, Regisseur, and deftly managed by efficient stage hands; and, of primary importance, with an impressive cast of opera stars. "We doffed our hats to Mozart," they said, "and put our hands in our pockets."

Rescigno, young only in years, conducted a distinguished performance. The long opera (shorn only of a few recitatives secco and the final trio) moved along smoothly under his vivacious and efficient baton, so that from beginning to end Rescigno proved himself a sensitive musician and knowing conductor.

The protagonists had been chosen with discriminating care. Nicola Rossi-Lemeni in the title role showed himself an agile, if not noble, Giovanni. Often vocally splendid as in his singing of the "Drinking Song," he was less impressive and lacked finesse in the "Serenade," one of the sure hits of the Opera when Victor Maurel and Antonio Scotti sang the part. John Brownlee did well as Leporello and proved himself more aristocratic in mien than the master he served reluctantly as sentinel and servant. Eleanor Steber, usually heard as Donna Elvira, assumed for the first time the role of Donna Anna. Though her voice is not quite dramatic enough to surmount the heavy demands of the role, she made up for that deficiency with truly beautiful singing of her arias and concertized numbers, and with admirable histrionics. Irene Jordan was successful in her first performance of Donna Elvira. Her voice, noble attitude, and sense of theatre successfully portrayed the ungrateful role of the jilted inamorata of a Don who could claim the conquest of a "thousand and one" women. Leopold Simoneau won tremendous applause after his expert delivery of "Il mio tesoro." As an actor Mr. Simoneau has much to learn, but it is our belief that whenever his stage presence matches his singing, he may very well then be a true successor to the late Bonci. The Musetto of Lorenso Alvary was fine in voice and action. A routined artist, he makes of Musetto not a foolish lover, but a man of vigor who does not intend to be an obliging husband. Luigi Sgarro, with imposing voice and stature, gave added importance to the role of the Commendatore. Bidu Sayao's Zerlima—Bruno Walter-trained—was the essence of graceful Alexander Tcherepnin (left) and Hans Schwieger, conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic, look over the score of the noted composer's Symphony No. 1, which was given its local premiere by Mr. Schwieger in late December.

The Lively Arts—

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum," and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor. Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist, Copland. "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting. Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting, Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting, Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm," (The Trojans), Berlioz; "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz, Munch conducting. Saturday evening, August [illegible], Munch conducting, "Prelude, Wagner; "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ soloist; Symphony; Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.

Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall.

During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, and on the second, the Cantata No. 80, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on [illegible] 7, Lukas Foss will take the piano through the complete "Pulcinella," a ballet with Seymour Lipkin as [illegible] concert with excerpts from [illegible], with chorus and soloists.

At the final [illegible] which will be Thursday, August [illegible] rather than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quartet.

[88]

Musical Courier Mar 1/54

Musical Courier Mar/54.

First of a Series on the Great Orchestras of America

ONE HUNDRED MEN AND TWO GIRLS

The Boston Symphony

By JULES WOLFFERS

A TRADITIONALISM that holds fast to achievements of the past, a practical realization of present-day needs, and a questioning spirit that looks far into the future—these are the elements that give the Boston Symphony Orchestra its unique position.

So firmly imbedded is the Orchestra in New England's musical and cultural fabric that it is difficult to realize the Orchestra was founded only 73 years ago. There are still some symphony subscribers alive who have heard the Orchestra under all of its conductors from George Henschel to Charles Munch. One member of the original Orchestra, Daniel Kunze, is still alive, hale and hearty enough to attend the Orchestra's concerts and reminisce about the good old days.

Past and Present join hands—Monteux, Koussevitzy, Munch.

Founded in 1881 by Henry Lee Higginson—would-be musician turned banker — and supported almost single-handedly by the doughty Colonel, the Orchestra has sometimes been accused of being a club for Beacon Hill Brahmins. If so, it is a club that has always opened its doors wide for anyone to enter. From the very beginning provisions were made for public rehearsals at nominal admission charges. To this day "rush" seats are available at 60 cents for the Friday afternoon concerts and a return to the old tradition of public rehearsals has been established with a series of Thursday evening rehearsals at popular prices. These really are working sessions with the conductor stopping the Orchestra, where needed, to give the audience a fascinating glimpse into the preparation of a concert.

Another proof of the non-exclusiveness of this club is the number of series ticket holders. Ten thousand persons are subscribers in Boston alone, which establishes a record not matched by any other city. This does not include the series in Cambridge, Providence, and New York, nor its frequent tours.

It is a matter of record that almost from its inception the Orchestra has brought music to the masses. Its Pops season has an inimitable atmosphere that has been the despair of those seeking to duplicate its success elsewhere. Like the Australian Koala bear which can thrive only in one locale, the Boston Pops cannot be successfully transplanted out of sight of the State House's gilded dome.

Yes, this "exclusive" club scatters its largesse with almost unparalleled generosity. Pops is a money-maker with sold-out houses the rule, especially since the advent of Arthur Fiedler. But the Esplanade season of free outdoor concerts on the banks of the Charles attracts its audiences by the tens of thousands. In spite of the deficit such a

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

FEB 28 1954

The Lively Arts

Horns of Elfland

By T. H. Parker

Even before the first crocus, long before the swallows return to Capistrano, in fact while snow still lies in the Berkshire uplands, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is busy making plans for the coming summer concerts at Tanglewood.

This year's programs have now been announced, and as might have been guessed, they are outsize, to cover the enlarged Festival. The changes in the set-up are twofold. In the first place, there will be 12 major Shed concerts, instead of the usual nine. They will extend from July 10 to August 15.

But instead of being given on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays as they had been, they will be played Saturdays and Sundays only, and Fridays will be given over to a more protracted series of Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Handel programs.

In addition to this latter series of concerts, there will be six other chamber music events, on Wednesday evenings, presenting a number of internationally known ensembles and soloists.

★

The Shed concerts will take special cognizance of the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz; and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will offer a number of major works by this French composer. These will include the "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; "Fantastic" Symphony; Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict"; "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; "Romeo and Juliet" with the Festival chorus and soloists; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture; "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist; the "Te Deum"; and the "Requiem" with the Festival chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Here are the complete programs for the Shed concerts:

Saturday evening, July 10, Munch conducting, "Damnation of Faust," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux, conductor. Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Emperor" Piano Concerto and Fifth Symphony, Beethoven.

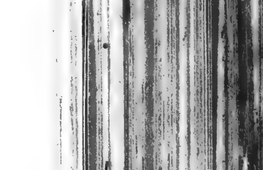
Saturday evening, July 17, Monteux conducting, "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, pianist), Symphony in D Minor, Franck. Sunday afternoon, July 18, Munch conducting, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Leo Smit, soloist, Copland; "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

Saturday evening, July 24, Jean Morel conducting. Overture, "Der Freischuetz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma Variations," Elgar. Sunday afternoon, July 25, Munch conducting. Overture, "Beatrice and Benedict," and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz; Symphony No. 2, Toch.

Saturday evening, July 31, Munch conducting, "Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz. Sunday afternoon, August 1, Richard Burgin conducting, "Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

Saturday evening, August 7, Munch conducting, Overture, "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday afternoon, August 8, Munch conducting. Overture, "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm" (The Trojans), "Summer Nights," "Te Deum," Berlioz.

Saturday evening, August 14, Munch conducting, Prelude, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston; Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ Symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting, "Requiem," Berlioz.



Scattered in among the Friday night programs of early music will be a small number of contemporary compositions. These programs will be played in the Theater-Concert Hall.

During the first two Fridays, July 9 and 16, Munch will conduct music of Bach, including on the first the Bach Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6; and on the second, the Cantata No. 93, and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30, the first contemporary music in the series will be given, when Munch conducts, "Le Festin de l'Araignee," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor (K388) and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony.

Then, on August 7, Lukas Foss will take the players through the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella," a piano concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from "Idomeneo," by Mozart, with chorus and soloists.

★

At the final concert, which will be Thursday, August 12, rather than Friday, Jean Morel will guest conduct in Rossini's Overture to "The Silken Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, (K319) and Strauss's "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The actual programs for the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, also to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, have not yet been listed, but the performing groups will be:

July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14, the Albeneri Trio; July 21, the Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28, the Griller String Quartet; August 5, the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; and the sixth and final event, August 11, the Kroll Quarte.

[88]

"Quiet Please, Stand By!"

How the Music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Is Recorded

By LUCIEN PRICE

Four o'clock on a rainy afternoon in March; scene, the Blue Room, where concert artists listen to the playback of their own performances as recorded. Walled with glass on three sides, one being a mirror, the other two, windows, and all three from floor to ceiling, the place is sound-proof against all noises except the sirens of New York city's fire apparatus which just now roars screeching past 155 East 24th st.

As the curtain rises, four men are discovered sitting on divans facing one another, two-and-two, on opposite sides of a low table where each pair bend over the ponderous tome of an orchestral-and-vocal score of Hector Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

The persons of this scene are Mr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his secretary, Mr. Leonard Burkhart, as parties of the first part, and, as parties of the second, Mr. Richard Mohr, Artists' Representative and director of classical red seal records for R. C. A. Victor, and his assistant, Mr. John Pfeiffer.

FINAL REHEARSAL

From Printed Books to Printed Sound

Out of a box across this Blue Room pours a golden flood of orchestral tone. What these four men are doing, in their postures of complete absorption, is a singular thing: they are proof-reading by ear a volume of sound, that which they hear being confirmed by what they see on the printed page of the score. Thus we have here an equivalent of the Aldine Press at Venice in the year 1500 when printing of the Greek and Latin classics from movable type was new, since what we now have in this 20th century is the printing of musical classics from the past three centuries in books of replayable sound.

These sounds which are now flooding out of that transmitter in such bright torrents were made 200 miles from this spot and three weeks before at Symphony Hall during two days of strenuous recording sessions by the full forces of the orchestra, soloists, Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, with the recording engineers, about 250 persons working Sunday afternoon and evening, and Monday forenoon and afternoon, in all, sixteen hours.

The Phantom Audience of Microphones

Scene-shift: flash-back to Symphony Hall: time, Sunday forenoon, February 21, auditorium dark, stage brilliantly lighted and packed full of musicians, players and singers. Between stage and auditorium hang in voluminous folds from ceiling to floor not one curtain as at ordinary rehearsals, but two, to kill echoes. Those enormous drapes in color a dark maroon are sometimes spoken of as "the Oriental tapestries."

Recording sessions are the reverse of public. The audience at this one, seated at the end of the first balcony where it curves over the stage to the proscenium, must number as high as four persons, one of them being the manager of the orchestra and another the editor of the program notes.

The stage is focus. Under the brilliant highlights it gleams and glows—glows like a flower garden with the colors of the Radcliffe chorus' bright, Springlike frocks, blue, yellow, rose, green—and gleams with the white of the Harvard men's shirts, for they have shed their coats and neckties, gleams too with the rosy varnish of the fiddles and 'cellos, and with the shining horn-bells of the brass instruments.

The recording is in full career. It is start, go, sometimes through a whole scene without a stop; or again, stop, consult, start again, Mr. Munch seated on the podium at his desk and directly in front of him, between his desk and the orchestra, the two men soloists, Mr. David Poleri, tenor, and Mr. Martial Singher, baritone.

Before them are the microphones, a formidable array. Microphones dangle from the ceiling, microphones strain their electrical ears at the tops of gleaming metal stanchions which rise from the floor spindling upward like elongated reflections from lights seen in deep, still water—microphones formidable because they are the audience of the future, invisible but permanent, the audience for which these musicians will still be performing years hence; and this because sound has overtaken sight and phonograph records the Aldine Press. These mikes are the insatiable ears which are also eyes for the imagination, and here and now is that immortality of music on records which demands to be served by the labor of perfectionists.

"Quiet, Please . . . Stand by . . ."

Labor is the word. The Latin phrase is better, "labor immensus." On a bright stanchion before the conductor's stand is a small red electric light bulb.

A voice, Mr. Mohr's, speaks from the recording room:

"Quiet, please. . . . Stand by . . ." (Mr. Munch raises his stick). "E-4 R. C. double zero 33 . . ." The red bulb flashes on.

Mr. Munch's stick makes the down beat, out flows the orchestral tone; it is joined by the tenor's voice, as "Faust."

"La vieil hiver a fait place au printemps . . ."

"The hounds of Spring are on Winter's traces . . ."

It is the opening of Faust's apostrophe to Spring. Swinburne's English is better than the librettist's French, and Goethe's German is better than either:

"Vom Eise befreit sich Strom und Bache

"Durch des Fruhlings holden belebenden Blick . . ."

"Released from ice are brook and river

"By the quickening glance of the gracious Spring . . ."

A gay dance tune sung by peasants, boys and girls, goes swirling past like the newly released streams, then a stride of soldiers across the plain to that Hungarian March which had sounded so stirringly out of the box in the baroque Blue Room over in New York three weeks later, such a performance of that rousing, if slightly battered old tune, as certainly one never heard before.

Clash in Latin: Comic Interlude

On goes the recording, stops, starts, replayings, pauses for consultation. Mr. Burgin, the first violin, rises from his chair to point out a passage on Mr. Munch's orchestral score; the two nod mutual assent; Professor Wallace Woodworth, the Harvard choirmaster, appearing briefly at the stage end of the balcony opposite, speaks to the men's chorus:

"You need not sing louder, but be sure to articulate your words distinctly," (he does so himself). "Iam nox stellata velamina pandit."

On the heels of this treads a comic interlude. The students' song is in Latin, and some of the jokes are a trifle broad. From the engineers' room Mr. Mohr's voice says:

"The soloists are singing 'vichy,' the chorus are singing 'weekee.' We don't care which you sing, but you should all sing the same."

"'Vichy!'" pronounces Mr. Munch positively.

It being a students' chorus, Mr. Woodworth is for "weni, widi, wici."

"'Vichy,'" remarks Mr. Poleri modestly, "is Church Latin."

They have it back and forth to the visible amusement of the men's choir. Finally college Latin wins. Hurray, our side's ahead!

"Weni, widi, wici!" and on goes the recording.

They Polish a Phrase Till You Can See Your Face in It

This is the way to learn a musical work of such monumental dimensions, for they perform a passage, a scene of dramatic dialogue ("The Damnation of Faust" is also performed as a grand opera), a chorus, a solo, an orchestral interlude over and over till it is fixed in the listener's memory, and this is exactly what one possessing the records will be able to do later, following the music intently with the libretto or the score.

These musicians polish a phrase till it shines like the beautifully grained wood on the back of a Cremona fiddle; they polish a page till you can see your face in it; they polish, in fact, until the vocal chords of the singers begin to fatigue.

"I'm getting out of the opera business," says one of the soloists in a comic grumble.

Next thing, his fellow is having difficulty to sustain to its end a long legato passage. It is done three times. Still he cannot satisfy his meticulous sense of style. The boys in the chorus sit forward on the edges of their chairs, as anxious as at a football game. Suddenly the soloist says,

"I will do the whole scene."

Applause from the young men.

He goes through it gallantly, hitting that last phrase in triumph.

Hearty applause from the college men. . . . Touchdown!

Prima Donna on a Pedestal

Now the soprano, Miss Suzanne Danco, comes into it. Marguerite, alone in her chamber, sings that touching ballad.

"There was a King in Thule
"Faithful to the grave
"To whom his loved one dying
"A golden goblet gave . . ."

Berlioz's music is as tender as Goethe's poetry. Desecration though it seems to interrupt, science requires it for the sake of art.

Voice: (from the recording room) "Will Miss Danco move two steps nearer the microphone?" The ballad is sung that way. Better.

Next it is the turn of the two harps. "We are not getting them properly," says the voice. "Can you advance them from the rear of the orchestra up to in front of the microphones?"

'Cellists and violists part like waves of the Red Sea, making an aisle. Harps are moved forward. It is tried that way. "Too close. Move them back about half way." It is tried again. "Just right!"

Presently, in her soliloquy with choral obligato, Miss Danco's voice is wanted still nearer the microphone and at a level with it. A foot-high podium is brought. She mounts it. Not high enough. Mr. Munch steps down from his own podium, takes an orchestra chair, sets it before the mike, and assists her to mount. Prima donna on a pedestal! The chair is cane-seated and her shoes are high-heeled. She has a good nerve. At this, Mr. Boatwright, the bass baritone, steps forward and offers a stalwart shoulder for her right hand while she holds the vocal score in her left. Gratefully accepted. Then someone dashes out from backstage with a good, sturdy, wooden chair. This is substituted. She mounts it, still with one hand on the bass's shoulder, and the scene proceeds.

At intervals comes a rest period, twenty-five minutes. The orchestra men rise and stretch, most of them leave the stage, and so do the chorus women and men, although here and there a few remain to chat, or solitaries submerge in textbooks which, being thrifty husbands of time, they have brought along.

Upstairs in a large room off the first balcony there are playbacks of scenes just recorded. Heard resounding along the corridors, these sound startlingly like the actual performance, only a little reduced in volume.

A signal-bell trills. Players and singers troop back to the stage, and the session resumes. . . .

"Jam Session" in a New Sense

Preparations have been of an accustomed thoroughness. Two complete sets of recording apparatus had been sent over from New York: one monaural, present standard equipment, the other binaural, now emergent from the experimental phase but not yet for immediate release. With them, besides Messrs. Mohr and Pfeiffer, comes Mr. Lou Layton, veteran recording engineer, thirty years with Victor, reputedly the best in the business, and his modesty as pronounced as his skill is evident.

"Jam Session," in a non-vernacular sense, these recordings nonetheless literally are, for on Thursday evening came an Open Rehearsal of the work, the Hall being sold out as at any public performance; next, the Friday afternoon performance, and after that the Saturday evening. Time out to sleep and eat; then Sunday afternoon continuing through to Monday evening, the Washington's Birthday weekend when soloists and chorus were still available, came the sixteen hours before the microphones. Berlioz's, "Damnation of Faust" runs a little over two hours, "Which," as one of the engineers said, "makes it just forty minutes harder" than his "Romeo and Juliet" (recorded by Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Harvard-Radcliffe chorus last year), which takes 85 minutes— besides which, "Romeo and Juliet" is one-half for orchestra alone, but "The Damnation of Faust" is nine-tenths soloists, or chorus, or both, with orchestra, the parts for orchestra alone being only twelve minutes long.

When released next September the work will fill three Long Play discs.

The next day after those four hours of recorded playback in the Blue Room on East 24th Street, comes a dramatic interlude. It is still in New York, on a Saturday afternoon, and this same Orchestra and Chorus, Boston and Harvard, being on tour, first to Washington, then to Brooklyn, are performing Berlioz's "Romeo ond Juliet" in Carnegie Hall.

Boston Faces on the Stage of Carnegie Hall

It is odd, and somewhat startling, to see on the stage of that citadel of New York's musical classicism, the familiar faces and figures of the Boston Symphony men and of the Harvard and Radcliffe singers. More like a theatre or an opera house than our own Hall, Carnegie has two tiers of boxes, four balconies, and an elaborate proscenium arch ornate with gilding on off-ivory. It is sold out from floor to top gallery, and this on a March afternoon of torrential rain with traffic jams for blocks on every side. The mellow autumnal golden brown of the Hall's upholstery and balcony rails, together with its grandiose architectural curves, are antithetical to the cool austerity of our own Hall, but music transcends parochial partisanry. This New York audience bursts in with applause at the ends of scenes and at the close recalls the performers at least five times.

"Faust" as a Transmigrating Soul

The world's masterworks live many lives, re-incarnating century after century, and spilling over from land to land, from epoch to epoch. Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" is a drama in music to a French text translated freely from the German of Goethe's tragedy. Both Goethe's work (which occupied him from his 19th year to his 80th) and the "Doctor Faustus" of Christopher Marlowe (first published in 1604) which survives as one of the towering poetic tragedies of the Elizabethan stage, derive from an elder legend of a Renaissance scholar who was reputed to have sold his soul to the Devil for magical knowledge.

Since this smelt suspiciously of the Middle Ages' distrust of the "new" learning (it was already 2500 years old) which had reopened the mind of European man in the 15th century, Goethe, poetizing from 1767 to 1832, could scarcely see his way to damning Faust; but Berlioz, an impetuous Romanticist of 1845, and reveling in the sheer diablerie of the theme, was restrained by no such scruples of an enlightened humanism. The chance was too good to miss, and his "Ride to the Abyss" of Mephistopheles with the doomed Faust is one of the most exhilarating horseback gallops in the literature of the orchestra, which abounds with such rides. After it, Marguerite's arrival in heaven sounds a bit tepid, for artists, like nearly everybody else, knowing more about hell than they do about heaven, give us heavens which are far less plausible than their hells are exciting.

An Easter Poem to Be Read Each Spring

A study of Berlioz's "Faust" should send one upstream to Goethe's. This is easily accessible in Bayard Taylor's translation, now published in the Modern Library edition for $1.25. But Goethe's drama is no more to be grasped by one reading than is Berlioz's music by one hearing, and it would be still better if Taylor's translation sent one on upstream to the original in German, for Goethe's poetic drama is traveling companion for a lifetime.

An Easter poem, it is to be re-read each Spring. It begins on Easter Eve; the duologues between Faust and Mephistopheles search the meanings of human destiny; Gretchen's tragedy is the grisley might-have-been, even the might-be, of almost anybody; and the great last act of Part Two, Faust's death, contains matter for the regeneration of all souls.

As for Berlioz's music, it is a steady blaze of genius. The joyous shock of the Easter choruses on resurrection morn is followed by music of coarse revelry in Auerbach's cellar at Leipsic, one song in which "love is rat poison," another in which politicians are pestiferous fleas. After these come the ballet of sylphs and the minuet of the will-o'-the-wisps (conjuring tricks by Mephistopheles) famous as bravura pieces of orchestral virtuosity. And when we reach Faust's "Invocation to Nature," solitary at a cavern's mouth in deep forest, it is a question if Berlioz's orchestra has not surpassed Goethe's poetry. Is not music here the more eloquent? But, for the matter of that, Berlioz can lay a spell on the imagination by a single orchestral phrase, like that which precedes and closes the marching song of soldiers and students, music as of brooding melancholy in a moorland solitude, which haunts and haunts. . . .

"'Tis We Musicians Know"

Thus halfway through the 20th century scientific technology by means of phonograph records has released into common life these brimming floods of musical genius. Created by some of the mightiest of human imaginations, this is a spiritual force beyond all predicting, and its release is only just started.

Outside one of those booths at the Boston Public Library where you choose your own records off open shelves and listen to heart's content, a red-headed G.I., arms full of Bach and Beethoven confides:

"When I first got home from Korea, I wondered, 'Where is my next religion coming from?' But now I know. This is it."

[89]

Candid Camera Shots of Boston Symphony Rehearsal

Globe Cameraman Catches World Famed Organization Polishing the Finer Points

By CYRUS DURGIN

A crack orchestra like the Boston Symphony is a large and extremely sensitive human apparatus.

Preparing concerts requires many hours and deep concentration at rehearsals.

Now, thanks to the Open Rehearsals, the Boston public can see and hear how Conductor Charles Munch and his 100-odd players work.

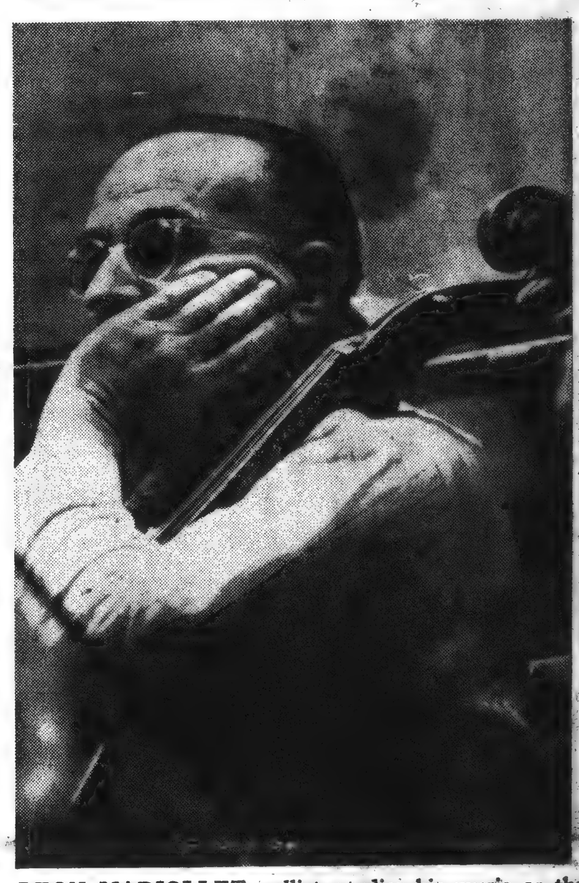
But close views are something else again, and very interesting. Globe photographer Charles McCormick sat in during a morning rehearsal at Symphony Hall the other day and got these shots, using a candid camera and only the usual stage lighting.

Large orchestras are so costly to operate that they usually run deficits. The Boston Symphony is no exception, and is now engaged in a campaign to raise $250,000. They have already passed the halfway mark, it is said, but the balance has still to be contributed, which anyone may do, with thanks.

CONDUCTOR CHARLES MUNCH gives a slow down-beat at start of a quiet phrase for woodwinds and horns.

HARPIST OLIVIA LUETCKE launches into a passage and at the same time watches the baton of Mr. Munch.

STRING BASS PLAYER Henry Portnoi turns page of music while awaiting place for his section to come in again.



LEON MARJOLLET, cellist, studies his music as the conductor explains how he wants passage played.

FIRST TRUMPETER ROGER VOISIN, one of best in the country, reads the notes as he plays.

FIDDLERS THREE—James Nagy, seated, left; Einar Hansen, standing, and Rolland Tapley examine back of violin during rehearsal intermission. A good violinist always has a lynx eye and ear for qualities of his instrument.

OBOISTS Jean Devergie and John Holmes listen attentively to instructions from Conductor Charles Munch.

JUST PRACTISING—Orchestra is not yet assembled for rehearsal, but first oboe Ralph Gomberg, left, warms up his instrument as Doriot Anthony, seated, first flute, marks her part to remind her of an important detail.

LOUIS SPEYER, one of the world's greatest masters of the English horn, examines place in music to see if his part corresponds exactly with notes in conductor's score. Mistakes sometimes happen!

THE STANDARD-STAR, NEW ROCHELLE

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
MAR 8 - 1954

Herald Tribune 3-28-54

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By VIRGIL THOMSON

Going Abroad

TODAY, according to the shipping schedules, your correspondent will be arriving in Barcelona, and next Sunday he will be in Rome. The Barcelona date is for conducting a concert of his own and other American pieces with the Barcelona Philharmonic Orchestra next Thursday. The Roman visit is for attending the International Congress of Composers, Critics and Performers that will run from April 4 through April 16.

After that, he will be traveling constantly for some months, partly as a conductor of American music and partly as an observer of European music. He will report on what he hears in this column, though not necessarily on everything he plays. His path will include musical adventures in Switzerland, Austria, Scandinavia and divers other countries where the art seems still to flourish. His complete itinerary is not known yet, but it promises to be fairly extensive. It may even include a few festivals.

Festivals are not an addiction of this observer. He can take them or let them alone. It has mostly seemed to him that summer festival programs are less distinguished than the regular winter ones and that the execution is less careful too. He has no sentiment of disapproval for these enterprises; on the contrary. They keep musicians at work. They are a boon to local hostesses. And they are the best trick of the tourist trade since drinking mineral waters went out of style.

Festivals

BEFORE the last war, Europe traveled by rail. Consequently, tourists in Europe followed the main railway lines. And anybody's vacation consisted of going to one place and staying there. Now people cover more ground. In their tiny automobiles they run from place to place, admiring scenery and tasting food. And almost every city that enjoys a scenic or historical prestige offers to these motorized wanderers at some point during the summer a week, a week end or a fortnight of music especially imported. One could start in May or June and go from festival to festival without stopping till the end of September. In fact, it would be hard to travel widely in Europe during this time without finding oneself occasionally, if only by accident, where one of these ceremonies is going on.

A single pool of conductors and soloists make all the music. Occasionally the orchestra is local, though not invariably. Programs are as standard as the executant musicians, with Mozart and Bach leading the field. Donau-Eschingen and Venice specialize in contemporary music, the former being a forefront of the experimental schools. The International Society for Contemporary Music convenes this year not in Europe at all but in Tel-Aviv. Most of the festival programs are on the conservative side, however.

Roman Congress

THE Congress in Rome will be devoted, like its predecessor of 1952 in Paris, to the twentieth century. Two American composers will compete there for the cash will be prizes. These are Ben Weber and Lou Harrison. And two American soloists will interpret their works, Joseph Fuchs and Leontyne Price. Other American soloists who will play in Rome as guests of the Congress are Sylvia Marlowe and Bernard Greenhouse. Carlos Surinach will conduct one of the festival concerts. And American composition of a more established character will be represented in person, as well as on the programs, by Aaron Copland, Samuel Barber and myself.

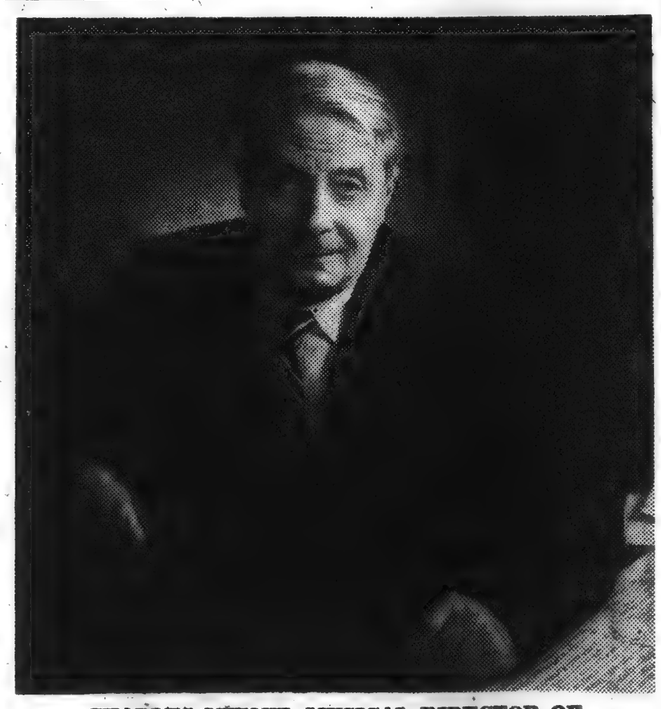
What the meetings in Rome turn out to be like you will hear from this reporter, and no doubt from others. There is no point in guessing ahead the nature of something that has not taken place. The programs look good to me; that is all I can say.

Neither can I predict the success of the concerts I shall conduct in the course of my tour, though I rather like, in advance, the programs of those two. Maybe they will work right, and maybe they won't. I feel like a parachutist about to jump, as the S. S. Roma approaches Barcelona.

---

at the NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman



CHARLES MUNCH, MUSICAL DIRECTOR OF BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

BERKSHIRE PLANS

With the welcome Spring sunshine nudging the small shoots and bulbs into appearance this is as good a time as any to alert true music fans to the program planned by the Berkshire Festival associates for the Summer ahead. And from thte headquarters of Charles Munch, music director of this annual event comes a dispatch enumerating the 24 concerts planned for the New Tanglewood season.

The constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox, Massachusetts last Summer has indicated an increase in the number of musical treats and to that end an enlarged program has been set down on paper which will be realized in the environs of the Berkshire hills for the six weeks from July 7th to August 15th.

* * *

In the course of the Shed concerts, Mr. Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in these concerts at the Shed will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel and Richard Burgin each conducting one.

The breakdown includes six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings and Six Sunday afternoons.

* * *

On July 10th Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will be presented. And on Sunday afternoon, July 11th, Mr. Monteux will present a Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau as soloist. Bach and Mozart also will be featured in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A full complement of soloists will appear through the season.

a Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau as soloist. Bach and Mozart also will be featured in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A full complement of soloists will appear through the season.

For the Boston Symphony's last New York concerts of the season, Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon, April 7 and 10, Charles Munch will conduct two works composed for this orchestra's fiftieth anniversary in 1930-'31—Honegger's First Symphony in the evening and Roussel's Third Symphony in the matinee. The Wednesday program also includes Wagner's "A Faust Overture" and Berlioz' "Harold in Italy"; Ibert's Flute Concerto, with Miss Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Brahms' Second Symphony will be played on Saturday. Herald Tribune

---

32

The Saturday Review June 19/54

SR's World Travel Calendar

USA

MUSIC FESTIVALS (Pacific Coast Festival, Santa Barbara, Cal., July 1-4; "Faust" and "Ariadne auf Naxos," Central City, Colo., July 1-24; Ravinia Park Festival, Chicago, Ill., July 1-August 15; Aspen Institute, featuring concerts, lectures, forums, seminars, Aspen, Colo., July 1-Sept. 5; Seven Arts Festival, Pike, N.H., July 4-19; Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., July 7-Aug. 15; Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass., Fridays, Saturdays, July 9-Aug. 21; Red Rocks Festival, Denver, Colo., July-Aug. 15; Bennington, Vt., Aug. 16-30; Chicagoland Music Festival, Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.)

DUTCH FOLK FESTIVAL (Kutztown, Pa., July 2-5): Regional dishes, arts, crafts, dancing.

"OLD HOMESTEAD" (Swanzey, N.H., July 9-11).

COUNTRY DANCE FESTIVAL (Amherst, Mass., July 16): Some 5,000 dancers take part.

Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 7-Aug. 15. New York Times 6-13-54

Today
Berkshire Eagle June 15-54

Other Hospitals

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd Jr. of New York, a son, George Morton Judd, Wednesday in Doctors Hospital. The child is a grandson of George E. Judd, for many years manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Grant of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Son to Mrs. George Judd Jr.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd Jr. in Doctors Hospital on Wednesday. The child, who has been named George Morton, is a grandson of George E. Judd, for many years manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Grant of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

New York Times 6-15-54

Plans have been completed for the programs of the six chamber music concerts in the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.

THESE CONCERTS are now a part of the enlarged Festival featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting. They will be given on six consecutive Wednesday evenings, July 17-August 11, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Among the outstanding artists to perform in these concerts will be: pianist Claudio Arrau; violinist Zino Francescatti; the Zimbler Sinfonietta and the Kroll and Griller String Quartets. Daily Mirror

---

BERKSHIRE MUSIC SE
N.Y. Times 6-
Beethoven Recital July
Start 6 Chamber Conc

An all-Beethoven recital
6 by Claudio Arrau, pianis the Bel Arte Trio will op series of six chamber events at the Berkshire
Festival, Tanglewood, Mas
The concerts, to be giv successive Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert
Tanglewood, will also pres
Albeneri Trio, the Zimbler fonietta, the Griller and Quartets and a sonata recital
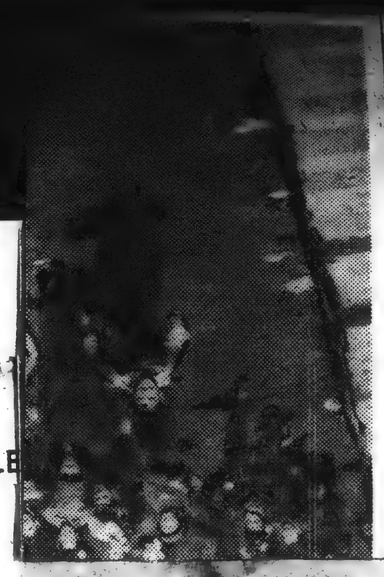
Zino Francescatti, violinist,
Artur Balsam, pianist.

[91]



THE STANDARD-STAR, NEW ROCHELLE

Herald Tribune 3-28-54

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By VIRGIL THOMSON

Going Abroad

TODAY, according to the shipping schedules, your correspondent will be arriving in Barcelona, and next Sunday he will be in Rome. The Barcelona date is for conducting a concert of his own and other American pieces with the Barcelona Philharmonic Orchestra next Thursday. The Roman visit is for attending the International Congress of Composers, Critics and Performers that will run from April 4 through April 16.

After that, he will be traveling constantly for some months, partly as a conductor of American music and partly as an observer of European music. He will report on what he hears in this column, though not necessarily on everything he plays. His path will include musical adventures in Switzerland, Austria, Scandinavia and divers other countries where the art seems still to flourish. His complete itinerary is not known yet, but it promises to be fairly extensive. It may even include a few festivals.

Festivals are not an addiction of this observer. He can take them or let them alone. It has mostly seemed to him that summer festival programs are less distinguished than the regular winter ones and that the execution is less careful too. He has no sentiment of disapproval for these enterprises; on the contrary. They keep musicians at work. They are a boon to local hostesses. And they are the best trick of the tourist trade since drinking mineral waters went out of style.

Festivals

BEFORE the last war, Europe traveled by rail. Consequently, tourists in Europe followed the main railway lines. And anybody's vacation consisted of going to one place and staying there. Now people cover more ground. In their tiny automobiles they run from place to place, admiring scenery and tasting food. And almost every city that enjoys a scenic or historical prestige offers to these motorized wanderers at some point during the summer a week, a week end or a fortnight of music especially imported. One could start in May or June and go from festival to festival without stopping till the end of September. In fact, it would be hard to travel widely in Europe during this time without finding oneself occasionally, if only by accident, where one of these ceremonies is going on.

A single pool of conductors and soloists make all the music. Occasionally the orchestra is local, though not invariably. Programs are as standard as the executant musicians, with Mozart and Bach leading the field. Donau-Eschingen and Venice specialize in contemporary music, the former being a forefront of the experimental schools. The International Society for Contemporary Music convenes this year not in Europe at all but in Tel-Aviv. Most of the festival programs are on the conservative side, however.

Roman Congress

THE Congress in Rome will be devoted, like its predecessor of 1952 in Paris, to the twentieth century. Two American composers will compete there for the cash will be prizes. These are Ben Weber and Lou Harrison. And two American soloists will interpret their works, Joseph Fuchs and Leontyne Price. Other American soloists who will play in Rome as guests of the Congress are Sylvia Marlowe and Bernard Greenhouse. Carlos Surinach will conduct one of the festival concerts. And American composition of a more established character will be represented in person, as well as on the programs, by Aaron Copland, Samuel Barber and myself.

What the meetings in Rome turn out to be like you will hear from this reporter, and no doubt from others. There is no point in guessing ahead the nature of something that has not taken place. The programs look good to me; that is all I can say.

Neither can I predict the success of the concerts I shall conduct in the course of my tour, though I rather like, in advance, the programs of those two. Maybe they will work right, and maybe they won't. I feel like a parachutist about to jump, as the S. S. Roma approaches Barcelona.

NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman

CHARLES MUNCH, MUSICAL DIRECTOR OF BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

BERKSHIRE PLANS

With the welcome Spring sunshine nudging the small shoots and bulbs into appearance this is as good a time as any to alert true music fans to the program planned by the Berkshire Festival associates for the Summer ahead. And from thte headquarters of Charles Munch, music director of this annual event comes a dispatch enumerating the 24 concerts planned for the New Tanglewood season.

The constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox, Massachusetts last Summer has indicated an increase in the number of musical treats and to that end an enlarged program has been set down on paper which will be realized in the environs of the Berkshire hills for the six weeks from July 7th to August 15th.

* * *

In the course of the Shed concerts, Mr. Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in these concerts at the Shed will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel and Richard Burgin each conducting one.

The bresentation includes six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings and Six Sunday afternoons.

* * *

On July 10th Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will be presented. And on Sunday afternoon, July 11th, Mr. Monteux will present a Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau as soloist. Bach and Mozart also will be featured in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A full complement of soloists will appear through the season.

For the Boston Symphony's last New York concerts of the season, Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon, April 7 and 10, Charles Munch will conduct two works composed for this orchestra's fiftieth anniversary in 1930-'31—Honegger's First Symphony in the evening and Roussel's Third Symphony in the matinee. The Wednesday program also includes Wagner's "A Faust Overture" and Berlioz' "Harold in Italy"; Ibert's Flute Concerto, with Miss Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Brahms' Second Symphony will be played on Saturday. Herald Tribune

32 The Saturday Review June 19/54

SR's World Travel Calendar

USA

MUSIC FESTIVALS (Pacific Coast Festival, Santa Barbara, Cal., July 1-4; "Faust" and "Ariadne auf Naxos," Central City, Colo., July 1-24; Ravinia Park Festival, Chicago, Ill., July 1-August 15; Aspen Institute, featuring concerts, lectures, forums, seminars, Aspen, Colo., July 1-Sept. 9; Seven Arts Festival, Pike, N.H., July 4-19; Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., July 7-Aug. 15; Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass., Fridays, Saturdays, July 9-Aug. 21; Red Rocks Festival, Denver, Colo., July-Aug. 15; Bennington, Vt., Aug. 16-30; Chicagoland Music Festival, Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.)

DUTCH FOLK FESTIVAL (Kutztown, Pa., July 2-5): Regional dishes, arts, crafts, dancing.

"OLD HOMESTEAD" (Swanzey, N.H., July 9-11).

COUNTRY DANCE FESTIVAL (Amherst, Mass., July 16): Some 5,000 dancers take part.

Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 7-Aug. 15. New York Times 6-13-54

Berkshire Eagle June 15-54

Other Hospitals

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd Jr. of New York, a son, George Morton Judd, Wednesday in Doctors' Hospital. The child is a grandson of George E. Judd, for many years manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Grant of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Son to Mrs. George Judd Jr.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd Jr. in Doctors Hospital on Wednesday. The child, who has been named George Morton, is a grandson of George E. Judd, for many years manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Grant of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

New York Times 6-15-54

Plans have been completed for the programs of the six chamber music concerts in the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.

THESE CONCERTS are now a part of the enlarged Festival featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting. They will be given on six consecutive Wednesday evenings, July 17-August 11, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Among the outstanding artists to perform in these concerts will be: pianist Claudio Arrau; violinist Zino Francescatti; the Zimbler Sinfonietta and the Kroll and Griller String Quartets. Daily Mirror

BERKSHIRE MUSIC SE... N.Y. Times 6-6-54

Beethoven Recital July ... Start 6 Chamber Concer...

An all-Beethoven recital ... 6 by Claudio Arrau, pianist, ... the Bel Arte Trio will ... series of six chamber ... events at the Berkshire ... Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.

The concerts, to be given ... successive Wednesday ... in the Theatre-Concert Hall ... Tanglewood, will also present ... Albeneri Trio, the Zimbler Sin... fonietta, the Griller and Kro... Quartets and a sonata recital ... Zino Francescatti, violinist, ... Artur Balsam, pianist.

[91]

Tanglewood Is Prepared For New Festival Season

Many Buildings and Broad Acres of Berkshire Music Center Ready for Another Summer Program

Lenox—As Music Festival time approaches, the vast grounds of Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Center, has been undergoing its spring house-cleaning, by Ward Gaston and his crew of maintenance men. The 40 acres of lawns have been groomed, the 40-odd buildings cleaned and repaired and the famous Music Shed, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been given a new coat of paint.

Arches Replaced

The Chamber Music Hall has also received much attention. Here Gaston and his crew accomplished a major performance. The outer arches that supported the roof were found in need of immediate replacement. Working from the inside and using a piled up, step by step, staging without a single nail, the crew installed four 36 feet by 24-inch beams, each weighing a ton.

In preparation for the 17th annual Berkshire Festival, the 15th in which the BSO has participated, the huge fan-shaped Music Shed that seats some 6000 music lovers has been given a new coat of paint for the anticipated record-breaking season that fast approaches. Some 130 gallons of specially mixed paint has been applied. Here Gaston again scored a feat of accomplishment. Being the first time that the Shed has been painted since its erection in 1938, a method of speed operation had to be devised. Thus Gaston devised a portable steel scaffold on wheels which was rolled around the top of the colonnade.

New Trees Planted

The native hemlock hedges, that date back 55 years, and are a masterpiece of perfection in the famous formal gardens, have all been trimmed and re-shaped. In looking toward future years, when the stately pines of Tanglewood will be no more, the crew also cares for the 100 new white pines that have been systematically set out so as to eventually replace the old "guardians" of the gravel paths and driveways on the Tanglewood grounds.

As Festival patrons of long-standing will recall, the Music Shed came into being dramatically, after a violent thunderstorm ruined the final concert of the 1937 season, then held under canvas. The storm commenced as the late Serge Koussevitzky was conducting a Wagner program, and reached a climax with the "Ride of the Valkyries." Koussevitzky declared that thereafter he would have to have something more substantial. The funds were rapidly raised—$20,000 was promised by the audience that night—and the steel Shed was ready for the opening concert the following summer.

Mr. Koussevitzky then got a grant of money from the Rockefeller Foundation and added a theater for opera and a chamber-music hall. Last summer the Theater-Concert Hall roof was completely redone, at a cost estimated at $25,000.

Record Crowds

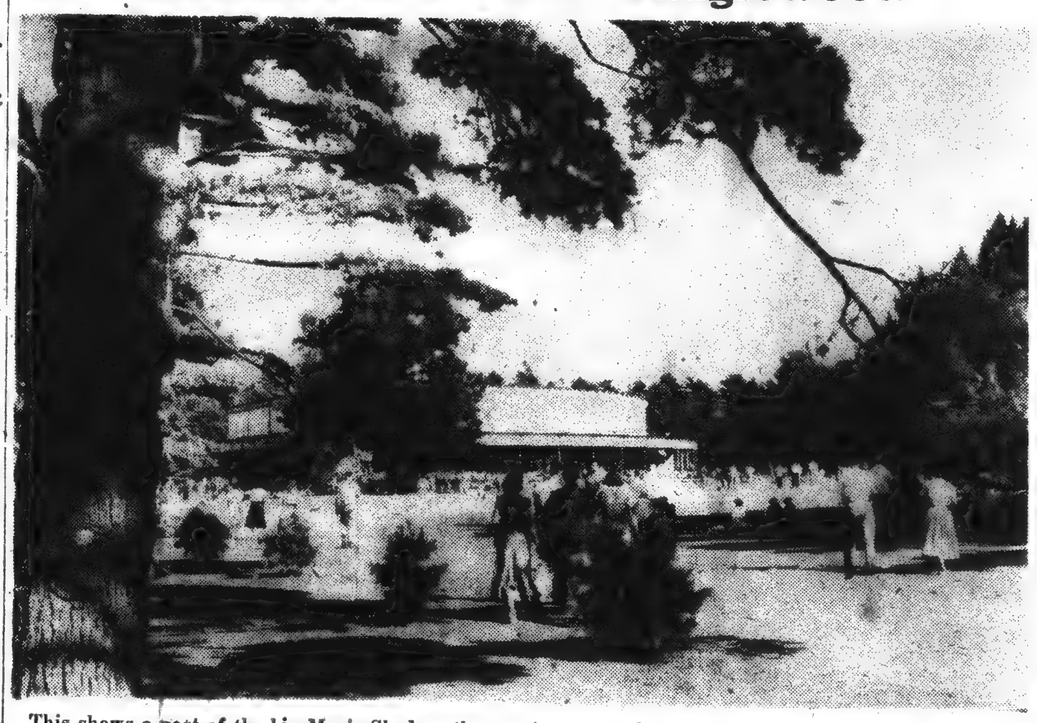
Record crowds attended the Berkshire Festival in 1953, when a total of 117,950 music-lovers converged on Tanglewood, an average of 4360 for the preliminary chamber concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall (which seats 1152) and an average of 10,200 for the concerts in the Shed which has a capacity of 6000. This meant that audiences for the chamber series sat 3000 per performance, outside under the stars on the spacious lawns; and 4000 per performance outside the Shed on Saturday nights or Sunday afternoons.

The 1954 Berkshire Festival opens Wednesday evening July 7, with a concert by Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall, and concludes with a Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15, Shed concert of Berlioz' "Requiem," conducted by Charles Munch, with the participation of the full 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus of students from the opera and choral departments, and soloists, in the Shed. Six Wednesday evening chamber concerts are to be given, six Friday evenings of chamber music by the chamber section of the BSO, and six Saturday evening and six Sunday afternoon Shed concerts by the full orchestra.

ASK TRAVEL TAX END

Although travelers stand to save this year in travel costs as a result of the recent reduction in the federal passenger tax from 15 to

The Music Shed at Tanglewood



This shows a part of the big Music Shed on the spacious grounds of Tanglewood at Lenox, where many thousands go each summer for the splendid concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival. In the picture, many of the concert-goers are seen strolling on the lawns surrounding the Music Shed, enjoying the music and the beautiful scenery at the same time.

Festival Announces 25 Student Concerts

About twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

The Berkshire Music Center is directed by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, according to the plan and in the spirit of its creator, Serge Koussevitzky. Now preparing for its twelfth year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U. S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 4, the Berkshire Music Center has Aaron Copland as assistant director, and such eminent musicians as Jean Morel, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Ernest Toch, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, as teachers.

Young musicians of high skill-players, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers have at Tanglewood the valuable experience of group performance. As in the past, their concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, whose enrollment at the end of the summer of 1953 was 5472, an increase of more than 1500 from the previous year. Thirty-five per cent of the Friends are from Berkshire County, which means that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students.

With the announcement of the concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, events at Tanglewood this summer now total 49, a full calendar for the 42 days of the six-week season.

Head for the Woods— Festivals Are There

New York Herald Tribune
By JAY S. HARRISON May 30 54

(The scene: A large, crowded metropolitan travel agency. A brightly colored sign reading "Information" hangs above the central desk. The characters: A music-loving traveler who knows nothing and a music-loving clerk who knows everything. The time: Noon of any day.)

CLERK: Good afternoon. Can I help you?

TRAVELER: I think you can. Anyway, I hope so.

C: Since you're here I imagine that you're interested in arranging a summer vacation. Are you?

T: Yes, but of a very special kind. You see, I'm an amateur musician. I mean I love it, and I'd like to strike some festivals on my travels. Do you know anything about music festivals in America?

C: Yes, indeedee. Off the record, I'm a great lover of the classics, especially Sousa. But my employer must never know. He's suspicious of the better things. (Rummages through an austere and overbrimming file.) Have you any special preferences—Bach, Beethoven, Debussy, the moderns?

T: No—they're all music; and that's what I'm interested in.

In the Berkshires

C: (Searches some more.) Well, let's see. The big event, of course, is Tanglewood, in the Berkshires. Up in Lenox, Mass., they're running a six-week season this summer, beginning July 7. There will be orchestral concerts every Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, and on other days all kinds of chamber music.

T: Any operas?

C: Yes. On July 27 there's a double bill of Ernest Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" and Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso." Also on Aug. 2 the opera department is presenting Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land." And on Aug. 18 the New York Pro Musica Antiqua will take over in Lenox and begin a six-concert series of terribly old music.

other events on the East Coast. I'm not sure that I'm going to leave it.

More in the East

C: Even if you don't, you've still got a big choice. If you like, there's Chautauqua near the western end of New York State, where symphonies and operas and all kinds of things are presented every year. That begins on July 4. And you can also count on the Bennington, Vt., conference in late August to round out your summer schedule. Then, too, the Tamiment Institute in Tamiment, Pa., features a series of chamber music concerts from June 24 through 27. I understand that a prize-winning quartet, not chosen as yet, will be performed during the three-day period. And this year in Newport there will be a jazz festival on July 17 and 18 and a series of four symphonic concerts beginning on Aug. 20.

T: That's quite a list. But suppose I decide to extend my vacation and go West—will I find anything worth while? You know, I don't hear much music in the winter. What with my job during the day and my television set during the night my time is pretty well taken up. How does the West and Mid West look to you?

C: (Returning to papers.) Smashing, just smashing. On your way out you might stop at the Cincinnati Zoo Opera, which opens on June 26 with "Lucia di Lammermoor." And when you finally hit Denver you'll be right in the middle of a batch of festivals. In Aspen, there are concerts almost every day—and the Institute, opening on June 28, runs until early September. That ought to be enough music to last a lifetime. And Central City, beginning on June 26, will alternate Gounod's "Faust" and Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos" until it closes on July 24. Then there is also Red Rocks Park where the Denver Symphony gives concerts in August under the direction of Saul Caston.

T: Perfect. Plenty to keep me busy.

MAINE

More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the School of Music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 5-Aug. 15 in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood," this summer. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony is the school's director; Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director. Principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all sections of the United States, Canada and abroad is the "Tanglewood" Revolving Scholarship Fund which last year awarded grants for the tuition of 210 students. This fund, established in 1947 by RCA Victor, and since augmented from other sources, is drawn upon each year for students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so, in order that others may benefit in future school years.

TO WORK during the summer school sessions are such eminent faculty members as Jean Morel, head of the orchestra and conducting departments; Ernst Toch, teacher of composition; Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department; Hugh Ross, in the choral department, and Lukas Foss, in the Tanglewood Study Group, a special section available to amateurs. In addition special scholarships are available this summer including those given by violinist Jascha Heifetz, and cellist Gregor Piatigorsky and others famous for their music. Syracuse Herald-American 6-6-54

More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the School of Music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 5-Aug. 15 in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood," this summer. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony is the school's director; Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director. Principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all sections of the United States, Canada and abroad is the "Tanglewood" Revolving Scholarship Fund which last year awarded grants for the tuition of 210 students. This fund, established in 1947 by RCA Victor, and since augmented from other sources, is drawn upon each year for students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so, in order that others may benefit in future school years.

TO WORK during the summer school sessions are such eminent faculty members as Jean Morel, head of the orchestra and conducting departments; Ernst Toch, teacher of composition; Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department; Hugh Ross, in the choral department, and Lukas Foss, in the Tanglewood Study Group, a special section available to amateurs. In addition special scholarships are available this summer including those given by violinist Jascha Heifetz, and cellist Gregor Piatigorsky and others famous for their music. Syracuse Herald-American 6-6-54

Syracuse Herald-American 6-13-54

Tanglewood Season Has 49 Concerts for Festival; Copland's New Opera

This date in music: 1855, world premiere, in Paris, of Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers"; 1911, in Paris, Pierre Monteux conducts the Ballet Russe in the world premiere of Stravinsky's "Petrouchq" with Nijinsky and Karsavina.

By E. V. W.

TWENTY-FIVE CONCERTS will be given by students of Berkshire Music Center during the 1954 Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., during the six weeks starting July 4. In all, 49 music events are announced by Charles Munch, Symphony conductor and director of the Music Center.

NOW PREPARING for its twelfth year, starting with arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States and Canada and foreign countries, Berkshire Music Center is in accord with the plan and the spirit of its creator, the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. Assistant director of the Center is Aaron Copland with such eminent musicians as Jean Morel, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Ernst Toch, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky and First Chair members of the Boston Symphony as teachers.

THE VALUABLE experience of group performance in "Tanglewood," is the lot of young musicians of high skill — players, conductors, singers—many on the threshold of distinguished careers. As in the past, their concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity of the Theater Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Concerts are included in the 24 Berkshire Festival programs, with six Saturday morning rehearsals of the Symphony. For these rehearsals there is a moderate admission fee, proceeds benefiting the Orchestra's Pension Fund. Two organ recitals by E. Power Biggs also are announced.

"THE TENDER LAND," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme will give its second production here and its New England premiere on Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 2-3 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Also scheduled: a single performance on July 27 of a double bill, Ernst Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea" and the 16th century opera "L'Amfiparnaso" by Grazio Vecchi (its first staged presentation in this country).

CONCERTS BY THE Boston Symphony in the Music Shed include those on July 10, 17, 24, Aug. 7, 14, at night and on July 11, 18, 25, Aug. 1, 8, 15, afternoon. The opening night concert will present the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists. For the closing concert of the Festival on Aug. 15, Director Munch has chosen the Berlioz "Requiem" with Festival Concert and Soloist and the orchestra, in memory of Dr. Koussevitzky. In addition to Director Munch, concert conductors in the Shed on occasion will include Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin. Soloists with the orchestra: Vera Franceschi, Nicole Henriot, Claudio Arrau and Leon Smit, pianists; Eleanor Steber, soprano; William Primrose, violist; Ruth Posselt and Zino Francescatti, violinists.

Student Concert Series Planned at Tanglewood

Berkshire Music Center Summer School Schedule Announced; Activities Due to Start July 4; Six Symphony Concerts by Scholarship Students

Boston, June 12 About 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, in Lenox. The Berkshire Music Center is now preparing for its 12th year, which wil commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U. S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 4.

Young musicians of high skill—players, conductors, singers—many on the threshold of distinguished careers, at Tanglewood have the valuable experience of group performance. As in the past, their concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, whose enrollment at the end of the summer of 1953 was 5472, an increase of more than 1500 from the previous year.

Attendance Grows

Contributions from the Society of Friends in 1953 totaled $27,637, and total attendance at the student concerts last summer was 43,825, an increase of nearly 10,00 over the year before. Thirty-five per cent of the Friends are from Berkshire County, which means that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students.

With the announcement of the concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, events at Tanglewood this summer now total 49, a full calendar for the 42 days of the six-week season. Twenty-four are Berkshire Festival concerts, six are Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, admission $1 each, proceeds benefiting the Orchestra's Pension Fund. In addition are two organ recitals by E. Power Biggs, on Saturday aftenoons July 24 and Aug. 7.

The schedule calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be held on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8.30 p. m., commencing July 8, with the exception of the final one, announced for Saturday afternoon, Aug. 14.

Six concerts of chamber music wil be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10 a. m. on Sunday mornings, July 11 through Aug. 15.

Composers' Forums

Five forums wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood argue their own and fellow students' works, also held Sunday evenings at 8.30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, July 11 to Aug. 15.

Three evenings of opera will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall, which require reserved seat tickets procurable in advance. Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso" and Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" are the attraction on Tuesday, July 27; Aaron Copland's full-length opera, "The Tender Land," new to New England, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3. Two evenings devoted to performance of opera scenes and choral works are planned in the Theater-Concert Hall on Tuesdays, July 11 and Aug. 10.

Unscheduled demonstrations by students of the new Dept. 5, organized two years ago for the pure enjoyment of music by amateurs, will be given, as in the past, on Sturday afternoons, in the Barn, and also planned are Monday evening forums, Aaron Copland moderating, in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.

5-13-54

Berkshire Inns Add Facilities

By Richard V. Happel

PITTSFIELD, Mass.

Considerable expansion of tourist housing facilities, miles of improved highways, spruced-up picnic areas and generally increased information services for travelers will greet the summer visitor to the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts during the coming season.

Spurred by the Berkshire Hills Conference at Pittsfield and encouraged by an ever-expanding entertainment program, Berkshire County innkeepers have added several hundred rooms to accommodate visitors. At present there are about 10,000 rooms for tourists to the Berkshires. Several of the newer units are attractive motel type buildings constructed in traditional New England colonial manner.

Now open are new six-lane parkway connections with the New York state parkway system which make the area even more readily accessible to visitors from metropolitan centers. The distance is only 150 miles from New York City and three are frequent train, bus and air services.

Playhouses to Open

Once arrived the summer guest is certain to find something to suit his taste and pocketbook. Two area summer theaters begin their seasons in late June. The Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge opens June 21 for the twenty-third year. Sylvia Sidney and Frank Albertson are to play the Broadway hit "The Four Poster," for a week. The Berkshire Playhouse season will run for eleven weeks and director William Miles is passing along to the customers the savings realized on the reduction of Federal tax on admissions.

Just over the Berkshire-New York state line, the Malden Bridge Playhouse, at Malden Bridge, N. Y., is inaugurating its seventh season on June 22 under the new ownership of Paul Bressoud. Mr. Bressoud has operated the theater for the last two seasons, directed many of the productions and acted several parts. This year he makes his debut as owner, having recently purchased the establishment. He plans a ten-week season.

For music lovers, Berkshire attractions range from solo recitals to ensembles of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berkshire Festival chorus, and soloists, all under the direction of Charles Munch at Tanglewood. The 1954 Berkshire Festival begins Wednesday evening, July 7, with Claudio Arrau and the Bel Arte Trio. For this summer the festival has been divided into six series embracing chamber music, chamber orchestras—opera, and of course, the Boston Symphony concerts.

Copland Opera Premiere

Aaron Copland's new opera, "The Tender Land," will have its New England premiere Aug. 2 at Tanglewood. The only other production of this work, written on commission by the League of Composers from a grant by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, was that of the New York City Center Opera Company during the last winter.

The New York Pro Musica Antiqua plans six concerts at Avaloch in Lenox the latter part of August, after the close of the Tanglewood season. There will be six concerts, some on Sunday afternoons, but all will be scheduled so as not to interfere with the chamber concerts at South Mountain in near-by Pittsfield.

Ted Shawn, director of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, has published his complete program beginning July 2. Alicia Markova and Alexandra Danilova are featured dancers during the summer and the American debut of the Celtic Ballet of Scotland will take place with a three-week run in the barn theater commencing July 28. All programs have additional groups and solo artists such as the Lester Horton Dance Theater from California, Ram Gopal, and the Charles Weidman Theater Dance Company.

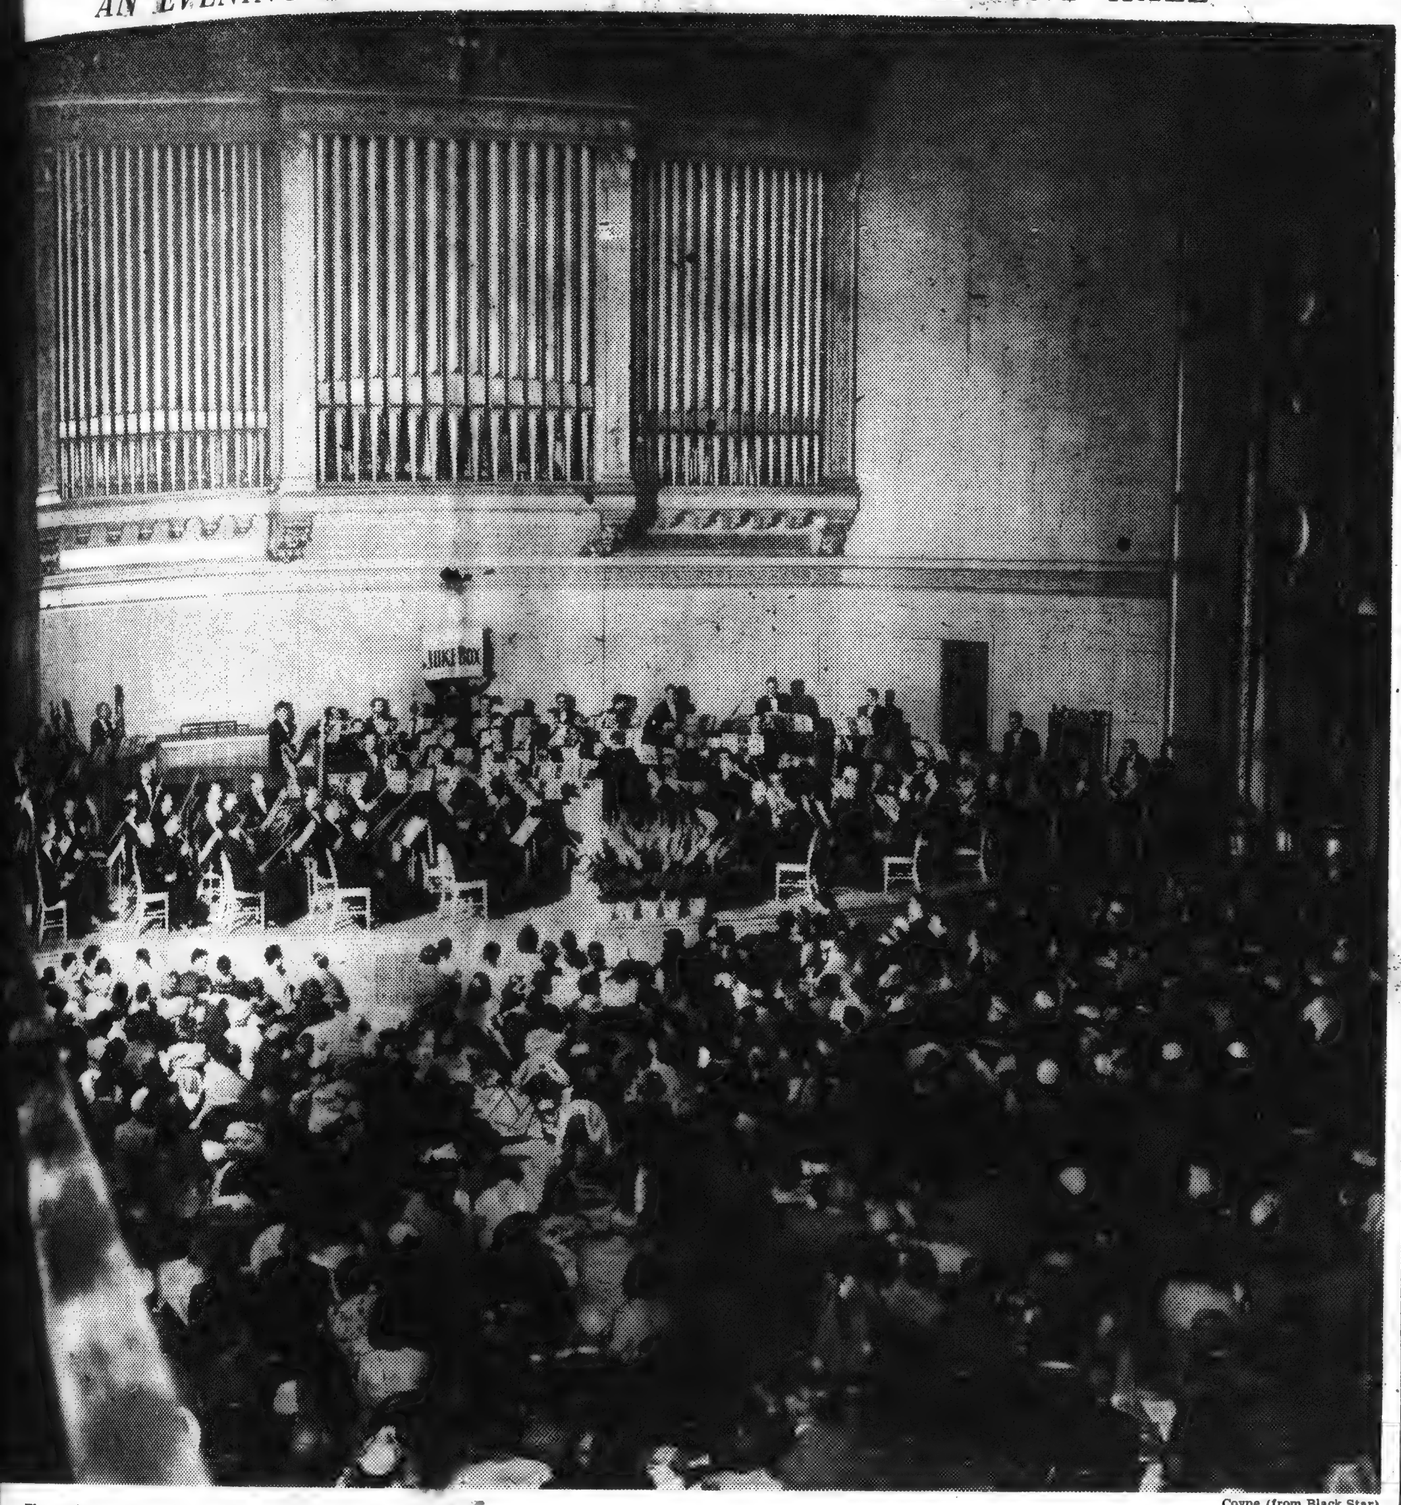
Less sophisticated amusements are provided by antique shop auctions, county fairs, country skill exhibits, square dance competitions and similar activities. The Berkshire Garden Center always attracts many visitors at Stockbridge. In near-by Lenox is the Pleasant Valley Sanctuary with its miles of hiking trails and unusual nature museum. Also at the Sanctuary meals may be obtained in a rustic setting looking out upon the beautiful hill section.

Other Diversions

Complete bathing and boating facilities are available at the many Berkshire lakes all noted for the clarity of their spring-fed waters. Stream fishing is generally uncrowded and rewarding. Golf courses are scattered throughout the county and polo matches are played on Sunday afternoons at Crane Field in Pittsfield. Several art exhibits are scheduled and the outdoor reading room of the library at Lenox will again be utilized for an exhibition of sculpture by Berkshire artists.

TIGHT BINDING

AN EVENING AT THE BOSTON "POPS" IN SYMPHONY HALL



Coyne (from Black Star)

The spring season of music under Arthur Fiedler has reached the half-way point. A recent photograph shows a typical gathering.

25 YEARS WITH 'POPS'

Fiedler's Zest in Boston Job Is Undiminished

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE grandaddy of "Pop" concerts in this country is the series in Boston. It began in 1885, only four years after the Boston Symphony Orchestra itself was founded, and it has become a formidable institution in New England. You can't imagine Boston letting the "Pops" slip away permanently to another city as the Braves migrated to Milwaukee. The "Pops" have been imitated, and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra has toured the country, but Symphony Hall in Boston has learned somehow to keep the choicest flavor.

One of the reasons is the hall itself. When the regular seats on the main floor are removed and replaced by tables, Symphony Hall ceases to resemble a theatre but looks more like a ballroom or a great hall in a center of learning. A second reason is that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is available to become the "Pops" ensemble, which is a guarantee of quality performance. A third reason is Boston itself which remains faithful to relaxed, leisurely music despite the competition of high-pressure amusements like the films and TV.

And then there is Arthur Fiedler, who might be called a fourth reason. He is now in the midst of his twenty-fifth season as conductor of the Boston "Pops," and there is no sign that his relish in the job has diminished. Although he is crowding 60, he looks as dapper and zestful as a boulevardier. He seems to find fresh enthusiasm for each new season, and he conducts each concert not only with professional smoothness but with the gusto of a man who likes what he is doing.

A Lot of Concerts

Mr. Fiedler estimates that he has conducted more than 4,250 "Pop" concerts in Boston alone. There have been performances on the road, and there have been a lot of recordings, some of which are listed by Victor among its all-time best sellers.

Ask Mr. Fiedler how many different pieces he has conducted in all these years and he guesses about 1,000. But being businesslike, he opens a carefully catalogued looseleaf notebook on the desk of his office in Symphony Hall. Every work is listed for each season with a notation for the timing. When they were last added up at the end of the 1952 season, these were the totals:

Marches, 110; overtures, 106; suites, 115; symphonies, 15; musica

o

Berkshire Festival Draws Western New Yorker

Buffalo Evening News 5-29-54

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS

THE Berkshire Music Festival, enlarged [illegible] for the 1954 season [illegible] evening of [illegible] six Friday [illegible] chamber [illegible] and six [illegible] afternoon [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In addition [illegible] will be [illegible] programs by students of the Berkshire Music Center, roughly following this schedule: Tuesday evenings, operas or choral works; Thursday evenings, student orchestra; Sunday mornings, chamber music; Sunday evenings, composers' forums.

Other major events of the festival season on the Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., grounds will be Saturday morning rehearsals of the orchestra; Sunday afternoon organ recital by E. Power Biggs; Saturday afternoon concerts by the Tanglewood Study Groups; a series of one-act operas by Department IV, Tuesday, July 27, a full-length opera by Department V, Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 23, and the annual "Tanglewood Parade" booster [illegible] on Aug. 29.

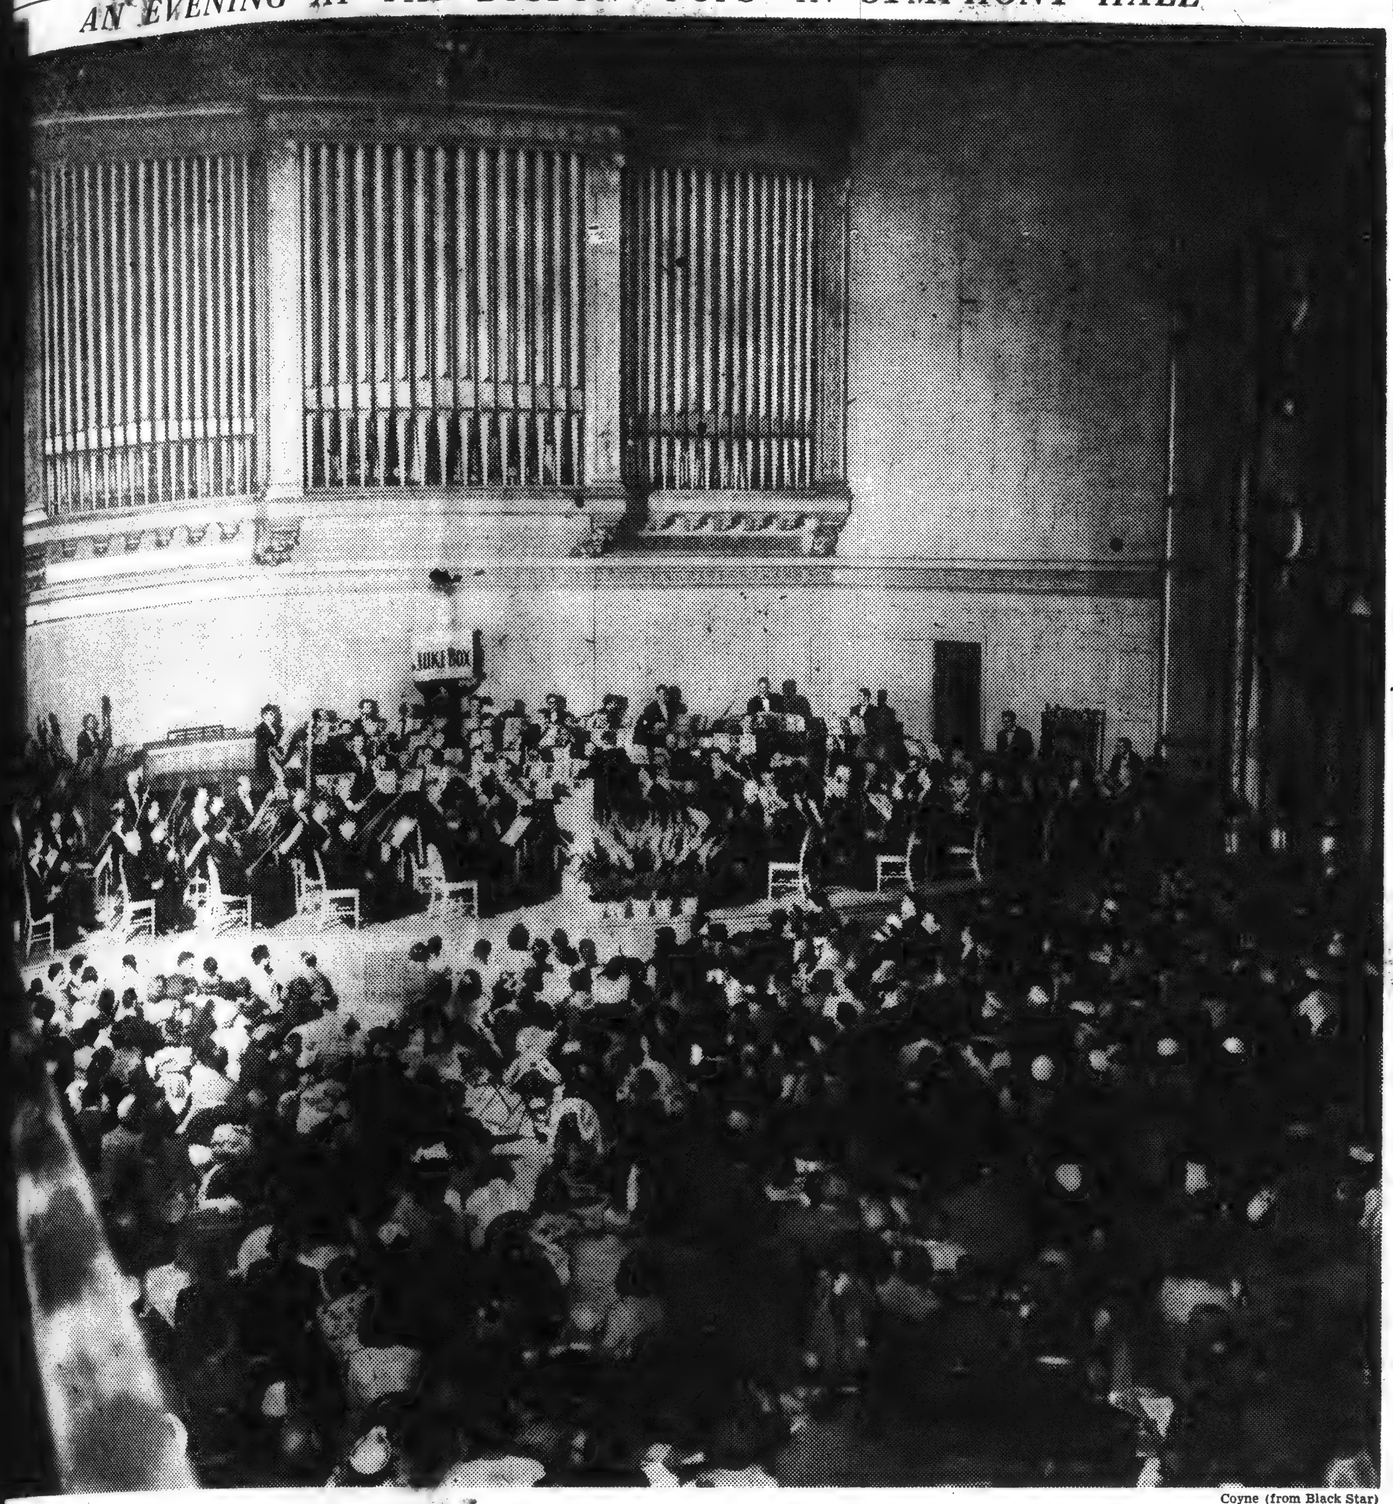
[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

TIGHT BINDING

AN EVENING AT THE BOSTON "POPS" IN SYMPHONY HALL



Coyne (from Black Star)

The spring season of music under Arthur Fiedler has reached the half-way point. A recent photograph shows a typical gathering.

25 YEARS WITH 'POPS'

Fiedler's Zest in Boston Job Is Undiminished

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE grandaddy of "Pop" concerts in this country is the series in Boston. It began in 1885, only four years after the Boston Symphony Orchestra itself was founded, and it has become a formidable institution in New England. You can't imagine Boston letting the "Pops" slip away permanently to another city as the Braves migrated to Milwaukee. The "Pops" have been imitated, and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra has toured the country, but Symphony Hall in Boston has learned somehow to keep the choicest flavor.

One of the reasons is the hall itself. When the regular seats on the main floor are removed and replaced by tables, Symphony Hall ceases to resemble a theatre but looks more like a ballroom or a great hall in a center of learning. A second reason is that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is available to become the "Pops" ensemble, which is a guarantee of quality performance. A third reason is Boston itself which remains faithful to relaxed, leisurely music despite the competition of high-pressure amusements like the films and TV.

And then there is Arthur Fiedler, who might be called a fourth reason. He is now in the midst of his twenty-fifth season as conductor of the Boston "Pops," and there is no sign that his relish in the job has diminished. Although he is crowding 60, he looks as dapper and zestful as a boulevardier. He seems to find fresh enthusiasm for each new season, and he conducts each concert not only with professional smoothness but with the gusto of a man who likes what he is doing.

A Lot of Concerts

Mr. Fiedler estimates that he has conducted more than 4,250 "Pop" concerts in Boston alone. There have been performances on the road, and there have been a lot of recordings, some of which are listed by Victor among its all-time best sellers.

Ask Mr. Fiedler how many different pieces he has conducted in all these years and he guesses about 1,000. But being businesslike, he opens a carefully catalogued looseleaf notebook on the desk of his office in Symphony Hall. Every work is listed for each season with a notation for the timing. When they were last added up at the end of the 1952 season, these were the totals:

Marches, 110; overtures, 106; suites, 115; symphonies, 15; musical comedies, 51; rhapsodies, 18; opera selections, 19; waltzes, 51; special selections, 48; piano concertos, 92; miscellaneous, 694 (for some reason this figure is as of 1948; maybe some one got tired of counting); encores, 436 (also a 1948 tally); arias, 27, and miscellaneous concertos, 47.

It is obvious that the accent is on light music. Mr. Fiedler does not apologize for this. The idea of the series is that it should be different from the programs of a regular symphony set-up, and within its frame of reference it maintains high standards.

"There is bad music and good music in all forms," Mr. Fiedler said the other day, not defensively but with the air of a man stating a simple fact. "What's wrong with the 'William Tell' Overture? It's a fine piece, but how often do you hear it in a winter series? What's wrong with a Strauss waltz? Or a musical comedy score by Rodgers or Porter or Berlin? They are all good in their own right. How many serious symphonic programs bother with a thing like Tchaikovsky's 'Nutcracker' Suite? It's delightful music, and there are a lot of people who like it."

Easy to Take

Mr. Fiedler knows how to make programs that are gay and easy to take, and he does not mind suggestions. All sorts of organizations from schools and colleges to large companies in the New England area take evenings at the "Pops," and they like to have favorite pieces on their programs.

Some of the organizations that send large delegations to the "Pops" have talented individuals whom they suggest for solo appearances. Mr. Fiedler spends a lot of time giving them auditions. The best are selected and given a place on the program.

The result is that an evening at the "Pops" is often like a family affair. The hall is cheerful and the colors of spring and summer dresses add to the lighthearted atmosphere. The sale of soft drinks, beers and wines does nothing to lessen the mood, and it is odd that the clinking of an occasional glass against a bottle does not sound like an intrusion on the music.

The selling of refreshments has become quite a business for the Boston Symphony. The management has set up what amounts to a thriving bar and restaurant in a large room off the auditorium. Here the waitresses glide in to fill their orders and glide out to serve the customers.

As to the audience, it includes quite a few Boston Symphony Orchestra subscribers as well as many people who never go near the winter series, though Mr. Fiedler thinks that the "Pops" make audiences for the more serious programs. Not that he considers himself a missionary. To him music is fun, and he turns it into fun for the "Pops" audiences.

Berkshire Festival Draws Western New Yorker

Buffalo Evening News 5-29-54

By THEODOLINDA C. BORIS

THE Berkshire Music Festival is enlarged in scope for the 1954 season. Into six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, Friday evening concerts, a series of twilight concerts and six Saturday evening and six Sunday afternoon concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In addition, there will be approximately 40 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, with daily lectures, daily recitals, choral works Thursday evenings, student orchestra Sunday afternoons, chamber music Sunday evenings, composers' forums. Other major events of the festival season on the Tanglewood grounds, Lenox, Mass., are a visit by the Stuttgart Opera Company, a series of concerts by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, a concert by Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, a Saturday evening Study Group and a series of concert operas by Dimitri Mitropoulos. Tuesday, July 27, a full-length opera by Dimitri Mitropoulos and Sunday and Tuesday, Aug. 22 and 24, the annual "Tanglewood Parade" [illegible] Music Center.

This year's festival is of special interest to the 150th anniversary of the birth of Berlioz.

The Boston Symphony programs will be as follows:

Saturday, July 10, Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" with the Radcliffe Choral Society, Charles Munch conducting.

Sunday, July 11, Beethoven's Symphony No. 5, Debussy's "Nocturnes" and Ravel's Piano Concerto No. 5 (Claudio Arrau, soloist), Pierre Monteux conducting.

Saturday, July 17, all-Franck program with "Le Chasseur Maudit" and "Les Eolides" and Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, soloist) and Symphony in D minor, Monteux conducting; Sunday, July 18, Debussy's "Iberia," Copland's Piano Concerto (Leo Smit, soloist), Berlioz's Fantastic Symphony, Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 24, Weber's "Der Freischuetz" Overture, Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's Enigma Variations, Jean Morel conducting.

Sunday, July 25, Berlioz's Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict," and his "Harold in Italy" Symphony (William Primrose, viola, soloist), Toch's Second Symphony, Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 31, Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony with festival chorus and soloists, Munch conducting.

Sunday, Aug. 1, Prokofieff's "Chout" ballet, Dvorak's Violin Concerto (Ruth Posselt, soloist), Sibelius' Second Symphony, Richard Burgin conducting.

Saturday, Aug. 7, all-Berlioz program with Overture to "Benevenuto Cellini," "Reveil Hunt and Storm" from "The Troians," "Summer Nights," (Eleanor Steber, soprano, soloist) and "Te Deum" with festival chorus and soloists, Munch conducting.

